THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

ORDER I.

PARTIES TO SUITS.

Who may be joined as plaintiffs

1. All persons may be joined in one suit as plaintiffs in whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions is alleged to exist, whether, jointly, severally or in the alternative, where, if such persons brought separate suits, any common question of law or fact would arise. [S. 26.]

COMMENTARY.

Scope and Object.—This rule corresponds to s. 26 of the old Code with some important alterations. It has been borrowed from English Or. XVI, rule 1. Its language is wider than that of the old section. By the substitution of the words "in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions," for the words "in respect of the same cause of action," the scope of the present rule has been made wider. Section 26 expressly provided that in the case of joinder of the plaintiffs, the relief must be "in respect of the same cause of action." The words "where, if such persons brought separate suits, any common question of law or fact would arise" have been added in order to further enlarge the scope of the present rule. The judgment of WALLIS, J., in Aiyathurai Ravuthan v. Santhu M. Meera, 31 M. 252: 18 M. L. J. 238, clearly explains the meaning of the expressions "in respect of the same cause of action" in s. 26 and "in respect of the same matter" in s. 28 of the C. P. Code of 1882. The expression "any right to relief" used in this rule is wider than the expression "right to any relief" which occurred in the old section. According to the present rule the cause of action need not be one and idential. Now, several persons having separate causes of action can join in one suit, provided (1) the right to relief alleged arises out of the same act or transaction and (2) a common question of law or fact arises.

The words "cause of action" which occurred in the old section have been omitted, because those words gave rise to diversity of judicial opinions owing to different interpretations placed upon these words by the several High Courts. In Sundar Jha v. Bansman Jha, 33 C. 307: 10 C. W. N. 508 (following 22 C. 833), it was held that the qualification implied in the words "in respect of the same cause of action" in s. 26 of the Code of 1882, would be satisfied if the facts which constituted the infringement of the right of the several plaintiffs were the same. In 18 A. 131, 219 and 432, the above expression has been differently interpreted. The Legislature, it seems, in framing this rule has adopted the Calcutta view. The Allahabad cases are no longer good law. The expression "act or transaction" is more comprehensive than the expression "cause of action." For instance, in a suit brought by a presumptive reversioner for a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid, the contingent reversioners may be joined under this rule as plaintiffs in the presumptive reversioner's suit; because, the right to relief on the part of the reversioners exists severally in order of succession and arises out of one and the same transaction impugned as invalid and not binding against them as a body; and the dispute involves a common question of law, viz., the validity or invalidity of the act challenged as done without authority. See Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal, 38 M. 406 P. C.: 28 M. L. J. 535: 21 C. L. J. 515: 19 C. W. N. 641: 17 Bom. L. R. 468: 17 M. L. T. 435: 29 I. C. 298. The above Privy Council case clearly explains the meaning of the rule.

Objection to misjoinder c
nity (Or. I, r. 13); Parties n may be amended (Or. VI, r read with cl. (a) of rule 4 of this Order

Joinder of Plaintiffs in One Suit when Right to Relief Arises out of the Same Act or Transaction.—This rule deals only with joinder of parties and not joinder of causes of action, which is dealt with by Or. II, r. 3. This rule allows a number of plaintiffs, with the same right to relief, to join in one suit instead of bringing separate suits. It is not necessary that all the plaintiffs must have the same cause of action.—Baiju Lal v. Bulak Lal, 24 C. 385. See also Ram Sewak v. Nakched, 4 A. 261; Ebrahimbai v. Fulbai, 26 B. 577 (582), and Lakshmakka v. Negi Reddi, 28 M. 500 (26 M. 647 folld.).

Where certain persons were alleged to have committed a wrongful act by evicting the plaintiffs from certain land in which the first plaintiff claimed to be entitled to the Melvaram, and the other plaintiffs to the Kudivaram.—Held, that the suit brought by the plaintiffs jointly was not bad for misjoinder; Muthuvijaya Raghunadha v. Chokalingam, 19 M. 335.

Where persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of a suit and their interests are identical, and where they do not advance antagonistic claims, of plaintiffs.—Fakirapa v. Rudrapa, 16 B. mappa, 28 B. 94 and in Harimani Dasse hich the meaning of the expression "cause of action" in s. 26 of the old Code, has been explained. See also, Pinapati v. Pinapati, 20 M. 647, and Sundar Jha v. Bansman Jha, 33 C. 367: 10 C. W. N. 508 (22 C. 833 folld.; 18 A. 131 and 219 not folld.).

The C. P. Code does not give sanction to the joinder as plaintiffs, of rival claimants, each of whom denies the right to the relief of the other. It is essential that each co-plaintiff should be in harmony with the other; Ambadas v. Pandu, 57 I. C. C. 784.

All persons who have a common cause of action are entitled to be joined as plaintiffs in one suit.—Kalidas Jivram v. Goparjaram, 15 B. 309.

Where the plaintiffs are landlords in respect of a portion of the house and tenants in respect of the rest, they could sue in their double capacity for damages for a nuisance caused by a third person to the house.—Bai Bhichaji v. Perojshaw, 17 Bom. L. R. 1040.

Where three persons, differently related to a deceased person, claimed maintenance from his estate and brought a single suit for maintenance. Held, that the suit was maintainable as the relief claimed by the three plaintiffs arose out of the same transaction and common questions of fact and law were involved in the suit; Nil Madhab v. Jotindra Nath, 17 C. W. N. 341.

The plaintiff No. 1 had absolutely nothing to do with the claim of the plaintiff No. 2 so far as the possession and partition of the plaintiff No. 2's share was concerned. Similarly, the plaintiff No. 2 had no concern with the relief claimed by the plaintiff No. 1. If the two plaintiffs had brought the suits separately there would not be any question of law or fact which would be common to the suits. The rights to the reliefs claimed by the two plaintiffs did not arise out of the same act or transaction. Held, that the joinder of the two plaintiffs and the causes of action alleged by them was not authorized by any law or principle; Ramjas Agarwalla v. Linton Molesworth & Co., Ltd., 73 I. C. 71: A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 411.

The Old Section and the New Rule.—The corresponding section 26 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows:—" All persons may be joined as plaintiffs in whom the right to any relief claimed is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, in respect of the same cause of action." The decisions under the old section upon the interpretation of the words " cause of action," were not uniform, and different Courts took different views. In some cases " cause of action " was taken to mean right and its infringement, and in others the right only. In the light of the present rule therefore many such cases are no longer law, for there would be no misjoinder of plaintiffs in them now. The following are some of them.—Mahima v. Atul, 24 C. 540, suit by husband (putnidar) and wife who had a subordinate miras interest to recover money paid by each to save the putnis from being sold; Aldrige v. Barrow, 34 C. 662, suit by six members of the Calcutta Police for libel against the " Calcutta Police "; Nusserwanji v. Gordon, 6 B. 266, suit by two plaintiffs as shareholders and by all the plaintiffs as contracting parties for an injunction to restrain the breach of contract between the plaintiffs and the company; Ramanuja v. Devanayaka, 8 M. 361, by six persons asking for a declaration that the proceedings of the Temple Committee removing them from office was illegal; Varajlal v. Ramdat, 26 B. 209, joint suit by father and son for damage for assault by defendants at an interview; Rajjokoer v. Debi Dial, 18 A. 482, joint suit by several creditors to avoid a deed of gift by debtor in favour of his daughter with intent to defeat and defraud; Ali Serang v. Beadon, 11 C. 524, suit by thirteen men for damages for detention after expiry of term of imprisonment inflicted in one trial. For other such cases see, Rahim Baksh v. Amiran, 18 A. 219; Salima v. Muhammad, 18 A. 131; Baijnath v. Chowaro, 26 A. 218; Beharilal v. Koduram, 15 A. 380.

In all the above cases, it was held that the plaintiffs having distinct causes of action, they could not join in one suit and that the proper course for them was to bring separate suits. Under the present rule, the plaintiffs may in such cases all join in one suit. The present rule enables several persons to join as plaintiffs in one suit, though their causes of action may be separate and distinct, provided that (1) the right to relief, alleged to exist in them, arises out of the same act or transaction or series of or transactions and (2) the case is of such a character that, if such persons brought separate suits, any common question of law or fact would arise. The two conditions are not alternative, and both these conditions must exist in order to enable two or more persons to join as plaintiffs in one suit; Stroud v. Lawson, 2 Q. B. (1898), 44, 52, 54.

Or. I, r. 1 and Or. I, R. 3.—The effect of the change of language in Or. I, rr. 1 and 3 of the new C. P. Code is to permit different causes of action to be joined even in respect of several plaintiffs or defendants provided they satisfy the conditions of Or. I, r. 1 and Or. I, r. 3, as the case may be; Allu Ramalingier v. Subramania Pillai, 17 L. W. 25: 32 M. L. T. 46: 69 I. C. 402.

Plaintiffs having Different Interests.—Under the corresponding s. 26 of the old Code, it was held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that where the plaintiffs were entitled to different interests in a property, they could all join in one suit to recover possession of the property from a third party if the ground on which they claimed relief was common to all of them; Sundar Jha v. Bansman, 33 C. 367; Muthuvijaya v. Chockalingam, 19 M. 335. On the other hand, it was held by the High Court of Allahabad that they could not; Salima Bibi v. Sheik Muhammad, 18 A. 131; Rahim Bakhsh v. Amiran Bibi, 18 A. 219. This conflict of decisions has been removed by the present rule which enacts that such persons may be joined in one suit as plaintiffs. If any one of the persons who should join as plaintiffs in a suit refuses to join, he may be joined as a defendant. He should, however, be first asked to join as plaintiff and on his refusal, he may be made a defendant. But if he is joined as a defendant without being first asked to join as plaintiff, the suit should not be dismissed for that reason; Bulli Mal v. Jhabba, 7 Lah. L. J. 280: A. I. R. 1925: Lah. 504; Pyari v. Kedar Nath, 26 C. 409.

May be Joined as Plaintiffs.—This rule simply enables several persons with the same right to relief, to join in one suit, instead of bringing separate suits. It does not say that all such persons must be joined as plaintiffs in one single suit. This view was taken under s. 26 of the old Code in Baiju Lāl v. Bulak Lal, 24 C. 385 (388). See also, Gobind v. Chandar, 9 A. 491. The following will clearly explain the meaning of the rule.

A Hindu died leaving a widow and three reversioners The widow alienated the properties left by her deceased husband without legal necessity. After the death of the widow, all three reversioners can bring one joint suit under [illegible] because they have [illegible] nsaction, (unautho[illegible] would arise in the c[illegible] Hindu Law, (2) whether there is legal necessity for the alienation. It is not necessary that both common question of law and fact should arise, it is sufficient if one of them arises because the word used is " or." The reversioners may also bring three separate suits if they like; the section does not compel them to bring one joint suit.

Persons who are jointly entitled to the same relief in respect of a transaction must all join as plaintiffs in one suit. Thus when two or more persons are joint owners of a property, they must all join as plaintiffs in a suit to recover possession of the property; Kattusheri v. Vallotil, 3 M. 234. Similarly, all the members of a joint family must as a rule join as plaintiffs in a suit for recovery of possession of joint family property; Collector of Monghyr v. Hurdai Narain, 5 C. 425. All the executors who proved the will must join as plaintiffs in a suit to recover the estate of a deceased person; Mohanavelu v. Annamalai, 44 M L. J. 219: A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 387. In a suit to recover trust property, all the trustees must join as plaintiffs; Shanmuga v. Subbaya, 42 M. L. J. 133: 70 I C. 645: A. I. R. 1922 Mad. 317.

" Severally."—Where each of the plaintiffs has a right to sue the defendant for wrong done to him individually, they may join as plaintiffs in one suit, or may bring separate suits; the section does not compel them to bring one joint suit; See, Baiju Lal v Bulak Lal, 24 C. 385.

" In the alternative."—Under this rule, the contingent reversioners may be joined as plaintiffs in the presumptive reversioner's suit to set aside an alleged invalid adoption. The object of the suit is to remove a common apprehended injury to the interests of all the reversioners, presumptive and contingent alike; see, Venkatanarayana v. Subbamal, 38 M. 406 P. C.

The principle as to alternative relief is that a plaintiff has no right to allege two inconsistent states of facts and ask relief in the alternative but that it is quite open to him to state the facts of the case, the documents and deeds and ask the conclusion of the Court on those facts and documents and say the Court may come to one conclusion or another; Nripenda Nath v. Birendra Nath, 21 C. W. N. 939.

The first plaintiff was the widow and the second plaintiff was the adopted son of a deceased creditor. As the factum and the validity of the adoption was disputed by the reversioners, both the plaintiffs brought a joint suit to recover the amount due to the deceased, agreeing that either of them should take it. Held, that as there was no contest as between the plaintiffs, the suit was not bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs; Pinapati v. Pinapati, 26 M. 647 F. B; Lakshmakka v. Nagi Reddi, 28 M. 500; Rukman Devi v. Shib Devi, 34 I. C. 641; Velappa v. Chidambara, 43 M. L. J. 277; A. I. R. 1922 Mad. 174: 70 I. C. 684.

SUITS IN SPECIAL CASES.

A suit is maintainable by one of several joint landlords for recovery of the balance of rent due from a tenant and in the alternative for recovery of a sum which may have been collected by his co-sharers in excess of their legitimate share. The ground for this alternative claim should be specifically set forth in the plaint; Uzir v. Haricharan, 37 I. C. 671.

Where in a suit by two sets of plaintiffs claiming that either of them is entitled to the property and that by agreement they have arranged to divide the property in the event of success of either party, held, that the provisions of Or. I, r. 1, contemplate claims by different plaintiffs in the alternative provided there is common question of law or of fact which would arise if such plaintiffs brought separate suits and that the suit should not have been dismissed on the ground that the plaint contained contradictory allegations and inconsitent claims; Musst. Rukmani Devi v. Musst. Shib Devi, 10 P. R. 1916: 69 P. L. R. 1917: 32 I. C. 526. See also Velappa Nadar v. Chidambara Nadar, 43 M. L. J. 277: (1922) M. W. N. 316.

(a) Suits for Damages for Slander, Defamation, Assault and Nuisance.—A suit for defamation can only be brought by the person actually defamed, and, if the person is not sui juris, then by his guardian or next friend; a relative cannot maintain the suit.—Daya v. Paran Sukh, 11 A. 104; followed in Brahmanna v. Ram Krishnama, 18 M. 250.

A brother cannot sue for a slander on his sister unless the slander upon the sister necessarily involves a slander upon the brother as well —Girwar Singh v. Sirwan Singh, 2 C. L. J 396: 9 C. W. N. 847 32 C 1060.

A husband can maintain a suit for damages for defamation of his wife. Sukan Teli v. Bipal Teli, 34 C. 48. 4 C L. J. 388. See, however, Shoobhagee Koeri v. Bokholi Ram, 4 C. L. J 390.

When two persons have been dammified by the same tortious act, and have therefore a joint cause of action, one is entitled to enforce his claim for damages, so far as he has been injuriously affected by the tort, although the claim of the other is barred by limitation —Harihar Pershad v. Bholi Pershad, 6 C. L. J. 383 (25 C 285 referred to.)

Where the plaintiffs, landlords in respect of a portion of the house are tenants in respect of the rest, they could sue in their double capacity for damages for a nuisance caused by a third person to the house; Bai Bhicaji v. Perojshaw, 40 B. 401. 17 Bom. L. R. 1040.

(b) Suits by Executors, Agents and Managers.—All suits should be brought by the person or persons in whom the legal right of suit is vested, and not by the agents in their own names —Lala Manohur v Kishen Dyal, 3 N. W 175; Ladlee Pershad v. Gunga Pershad, 4 N. W 59; Fyazooddeen v. Pudmee, 4 N. W 68, Nubeen v. Stephenson, 15 W. R 534. But where an agent enters into a contract as such, if he has an interest in the contract, he may sue in his own name; Subrahmania v. Narayanan, 24 M. 130.

Where several executors have been appointed under a will and have entered on the duties as such, it is not open to some of them to sue on behalf of the estate without impleading the others If a defendant is sued by one only of two persons who have a cause of action against him, he has a right to have the action dismissed unless the other is joined (6 C 815 referred to); Mohanavelu Mudaliar v. Annamalai Mudaliar, 17 L. W 241 44 M. L. J. 249.

A gomasta has no right to bring a suit in his own name. He can only sue in the name of his employer, like any other.—Koonjo Behary v. Poorno Chunder, 9 C. 450: 12 C. L. R. 55.

An action to recover the price of goods supplied to a member of a non-proprietary club cannot be brought in the name of the Secretary of the club.—Michael v. Briggs, 14 M. 372.

A Court in which a suit is brought on behalf of one person through the agency of another, is entitled to enquire as to the agent's authority, and on failure to prove the authority the suit must fail.—Ram Narain v. Raghunath, 19 C. 678 (P. C.).

(c) Suit for Property Dedicated to an Idol.—The possession and management of property dedicated to an idol belongs to a shebait, and this carries with it the right to bring whatever suits are necessary for the protection of the property. Every such right of suit is vested in the shebait and not in the idol.—Maharaja Jagadindra Nath v. Rani Hemanto Kumari, 8 C. W. N. 809: 32 C. 129, P. C., followed in 10 C. W. N. 42: 2 C. L. J. 337.

The manager is the proper person to be plaintiff in a suit relating to temple property.—Thakur Raghunathji v. Shah Lal Chand, 19 A. 330. But see, Jodhi v. Basdeo, 33 A. 735.

(d) Suit to Set Aside Alienation of Properties belonging to a Religious Endowment.—In a suit for setting aside an alienation of properties belonging to a religious endowment, a person to whom plaintiff had conveyed a portion of the properties at a time when he had neither title nor cause of action to sue need not be joined as co-plaintiff in the action. Nor is a transferee pendente lite, a necessary party to the suit; Mahant Ramrup v. Lal Chand, 1 Pat. 475: 3 Pat. L. T. 352.

(e) Suit to Enforce Due Performance of Religious or Charitable Trusts.—Any person interested in the proper observance of a religious endowment may sue in his own name to have the trust property administered, and s. 92 is no bar to such a private suit.—Thakersy Devraj v. Hurbhum Narsey, 8 B. 432. See also Panchcowrie Mull v. Chumroolall, 3 C. 563: 2 C. L. R. 121: Kali Churn v. Golabi, 2 C. L. R. 121; Rupnarain v. Junki Bye, 3 C. L. R. 112.

The Samudayi of a temple is not competent to bring a suit on its behalf. The proper parties to sue are the uralers (trustees.—Ramavarar v. Krishnen, 3 M. 270; Kunjunneri Nambiar v. Nilakunden, 2 M. 167: Patinharpat Krishnan v. Chekur Manakkal, 4 M. 141.

In a suit to recover property belonging to an endowment all the trustees of the endowment should be made parties either as plaintiffs, or as defendants.—Bechu Lal v. Oliullah, 11 C. 338; Rajendronath v. Mahomed Lal, 8 C. 42; Parmeswaran v. Shangaran, 14 M. 489 and Kakilasari Dasi v. Mohunt Rudranand, 5 C. A benamidar, as such, is not entitled to maintain a suit for recovery of possession of immoveable property, of which he is a mere benamidar.—Mohendra Nath v. Kali Proshad, 30 C. 265. In Sita Nath v. Nobin Chunder, 5 C. L. R. 102 and in Gopinath v. Bhugwat Pershad, 10 C. 697, it has been held that a suit in the name of a benamidar should not be dismissed, but the beneficial owner should be made a party. The Allahabad High Court has taken a contrary view by holding that a benamidar can sue or appeal in his own name on behalf of the beneficial owner.—Bachcha v. Gajadhar Lal, 28 A. 44 : 2 A. L. J. 702.

The question, whether a benamidar should be allowed to sue or not must depend upon his showing whether the facts of the case are such as to give him some right to sue under the general law. When the legal estate is vested in the benamidar he is in fact a trustee and as such entitled to sue.—Koothaperumal Rajah v. Secretary of State, 30 M. 245 : 17 M. L. J. 174. (s) Suit by Contingent Reversioner during the Lifetime of Presumptive Reversioner.—The right to sue to set aside an adoption or alienation by a Hindu widow is, as a general rule, limited to the nearest reversioner, and if he without sufficient cause refuses to institute proceedings, or if he has precluded himself by his own act and conduct from so doing or has colluded with the widow, or concurred in the alleged wrongful act, the more remote reversioner will be entitled to sue by making the nearer reversioner a party to the suit.—Anund Kunwar v. Court of Wards, 6 C. 764, P. C. Where the nearest reversioner precludes himself or herself from maintaining declaratory action by omitting to sue within the statutory period and thus practically concurs in an alleged improper alienation, the remote reversioner is entitled to maintain the suit.—Abinash Chandra v.

A Person in Constructive Possession can Maintain a Possessory Suit.—A person in constructive possession of land through his tenant, who is dispossessed, is entitled to bring a suit under s. 9 of Act I of 1877, where the tenant in collusion with the dispossessor, refused to bring the suit.—Jagannatha Charry v. Rama Rayer, 28 M. 238; Janoki v. Dinamoni, 13 C. Power of Court to order separate trials.

2. Where it appears to the Court that any joinder of plaintiffs may embarrass or delay the trial of the suit, the Court may put the plaintiffs to their election or order separate trials or make such other order as may be expedient. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and has been borrowed from English Or. XVI, r. 1. It lays down that if it appears to the Court that any misjoinder of the plaintiffs may embarrass or delay the trial, the Court instead of dismissing the suit, may put the plaintiffs to their election, that is, the Court may direct the plaintiffs to elect as to which one of them should proceed with the suit. The procedure laid down in this rule was adopted in Aldridge v. Barrow, 34 C. 662 and in Varaj Lal v. Ramdat, 26 B. See also, 26 A. 18 and 15 A. 380.

A Court has no power under this rule, to dismiss a suit; it may direct the plaintiffs to make election or direct separate trials; Gur Prosad v. Gur Prasad, 19 C. L. J. 316: 25 I. C. 438.

Who may be joined as defendants.

3. All persons may be joined as defendants against whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, where if separate suits were brought against such persons any common question of law or fact would arise. [S. 28.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 28 of the C. P. Code of 1882, with some additions and alterations and is the converse of r. 1. The rule has been amplified by following the wording of English Or. XVI, r. 4.

"The Committee realize that the words 'in respect of the same matter' in rule 3 have given rise to great difficulty, and they think it advisable to follow the wording of the English rule and to omit them."—See the Report of the Special Committee.

By the omission of the words "in respect of the same matter" which occurred in the old s. 28 and by substitution of the words "in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions" the scope of the present rule has been made wider. The words "where if seperate suits were brought against such persons any common question of law or fact would arise" have also been added in order to enlarge its scope. The judgment of Wallis, J., in Aiyathurai Ravuthan v. Santhu Meeru Ravuthan, 31 M. 252: 18 M. L. J. 238, clearly explains the distinction between the words "in respect of the same cause of action" in s. 26, and "in respect of the same matter" in s. 28 of the C. P. Code, 1882. The object of this rule seems to be to avoid multiplicity of suits if it could be done without embarrassment to any of the defendants. The general principle governing the joinder of defendants would seem to be that there must be a cause of action in which all the defendants are more or less interested, although the relief asked against them may vary, and that separate causes of action against separate defendants though quite unconnected but at the same time involving any common question of law or fact, may be joined in one action under the present rule. This rule is to be read with cl. (b), r. 4 and r. 5 of this Order.

Scope of the Rule.—The language of Or. I, r. 3 is extremely wide, and even if there be only one question common to all the cases, that is sufficient to justify a joint trial ; Judan Singh v. Garbha Singh, 25 P. W. R. 1921 : 59 I. C. 522.

Tests for Determining the Applicability of Or. I, r. 3.—Or. I, r. 1 quite as much as Or. I, r. 3 applies to questions of joinder of parties as also causes of action. To determine whether a suit has been constituted in conformity with Or. I, r. 3 two factors have to be considered. (1) could the right to relief against the defendants be said to be in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction? and (2) would any common question of law or fact arise if seperate suits were brought? It is not necessary that all the questions of law or fact which arise should be common to all the parties. For this purpose there is no difference in principle between a claim founded on breach of contract and one founded on tort Ramendra v. Brojendra, 21 C. W N 724· 45 C. 111 . 27 C L. J 158.

The determining factors to the question whether a suit has been constituted in conformity with Or. I, r. 3 are, firstly, could the right to relief against the defendants be said to be in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction? and secondly, would any common question of law or fact arise if separate suits were brought? Krishna Jibon v. Muhammad Masinuddin, 33 C. L. J. 369 . 63 I. C. 244 (45 C 111 refd. to).

Jurisdiction.—The plaintiff had distinct and separate causes of action against the first and second defendants. The cause of action against the first defendant arose within the jurisdiction and that against the second defendant arose outside the jurisdiction of the Court in which the plaintiff sued both the first and second defendants. Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit as against the second defendant and that the joinder of both the defendants in the same suit was not permitted by Or. I, r. 3, C. P. Code. Or. I, r. 3 relates to a joinder of parties and it assumes the existence of a suit in a proper forum, the Court having jurisdiction to try the suit. If the Court has such jurisdiction then

Or. I, r. 3 might come into play; Bengal and North Western Ry. Co. v. Sadaram Bhairodan, 49 C. 895: 27 C. W. N. 82: A. I. R. 1922 Cal. 500.

The Old Section and the New Rule.—The corresponding s. 28 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows : "All persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, in respect of the same matter."

Under the present rule all persons may be joined as defendants against whom any right to relief in respect of the same act or transaction is alleged to exist, where, if separate suits were brought against such persons, any common question of law or fact would arise.

" All persons."—A ship is a " person " within the meaning of this rule; a suit may therefore be instituted against a ship as defendant; Bombay-Persian Steamer Company v. Shepherd, 12 B. 237.

" May be joined as defendants."—Before different sets of defendants can be joined in the same suit on different causes of action united in one suit, two conditions must be fulfilled : first, the right to relief sought in the suit must arise against all the defendants from the same act or transaction, or the same series of acts or transactions; and secondly, some common question, either of fact or law, should arise, if separate suits were brought against such persons, Ahmedbhai Habibbhoy v. Sir Dinshaw Manekji, 13 Bom. L. R. 1061.

The plaintiff may in one action unite several causes of action against several defendants ; provided that all such defendants are "jointly liable in respect of each and all such causes of action" and the condition precedent to the plaintiff being allowed to join several causes of action against several defendants is that such defendants must all have a joint interest in the main question raised by the litigation, and that causes of action joined in one suit against several defendants must be causes of action in which the defendants are all jointly interested. It is not necessary that every defendant should be interested as to all the reliefs claimed in the suit, but it is necessary that there must be a cause of action in which all the defendants are more or less interested, although the relief asked against them may vary; Umabai v. Bhau Balwant, 34 B. 358.

Distinction between This Rule and Or. II, R. 3.—Or. I, rule 3 provides for joinder of parties, and does not provide for joinder of different causes of action. Or. II, r. 3 provides for joinder of causes of action ; Balgobind v. Gaja Laksmi, 21 I. C. 438 and Jankibai v. Srinivas, 38, B. 120 (124). Or. II, r. 3 should be read subject to the provision of this rule; Ramendra v. Brajendra, 45 C. 111: 41 I. C. 944.

" Same act or transaction."—In reading Or. I, r. 3, it seems quite obvious that the word " same," which precedes the words " act or transaction," governs also the words "series of acts or transactions," and must be read before those words also. The first condition to be fulfilled before joining several persons as co-defendants in the same suit is that the right to relief sought in the suit must arise against all the defendants from the same act or transaction or from the same series of acts or transactions. The second condition to be fulfilled under this rule is that some common question either of fact or law should arise against the defendants if separate suits were brought against such persons. Before a plaintiff can join several defendants in the same suit, both the conditions laid down in the rule must be fulfilled, first, the relief sought against the defendants whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, must arise from the same act or transaction or the same series of acts or transactions. And, secondly, there must arise between the plaintiff and all the defendants some common question of law or fact; Umabai v. Bhau Balwant, 34 B. 358.

Under Or. I, r. 3, C. P. Code, the test is not whether the decree awarded to the plaintiff against the defendants is joint, but whether it is alleged in the plaint that there is against the said defendants any right to relief in respect of the same act or transaction; Khemomal v. Firm of Pessumal, 13 S. L. R. 133: 53 I. C. 92.

" Jointly."—The general principle governing the joinder of defendants is that there must be a cause of action, in which all the defendants are more or less interested, although the relief asked against them may vary and that any question of law and fact common to them all may arise in the case.—Mavji Manji v. Kuverji Narronji, 31 B. 516: 9 Bom. L. R. 482.

Where the principal tenants of a village combined to keep their landlord out of possession, and induced others not to pay their rents, etc., the landlord, in a suit for establishment of his proprietary right ,and for a declaration that the defendants are his tenants, can join all of them as defendants. —Lokenath v. Keshab Ram, 13 C. 147.

Where a person having obtained the lease from the landlord took possession, but was subsequently dispossessed by several persons, who took separate leases of different portions of the land from the landlord. Held that the plaintiff may sue all the defendants, including the landlord in one suit for ejectment, and particularly so, when they combine to keep him out of possession. The cause of action of the plaintiff suing in ejectment cannot be affected by the title under which the defendants profess to hold possession, for what concerns the plaintiff is that another is wrongfully in possession of what belongs to him. What the plaintiff is entitled to claim is the recovery of the possession of his land as a whole, and not in fragments and all persons, who oppose him in the enforcement of that right ought to be made parties to the suit in which he seeks to eject them; Nundo Kumar v. Banomali, 29 C. 871 (24 C 831, referred to). Followed in Bandhu Acharja v. Nathni 7 C. L. J. 460 and in Parboti v. Mahmua, 29 A. 267: 4 A. L. J. 121.

Where several persons join in committing a tort, each is responsible for the injury sustained by the common act, and their liability is joint and several at the will of him to whom the wrong is done. He can sue any one or more of them at his election, and those sued, cannot insist on having the others joined as defendants.—Harihar v. Bholi Pershad, 6 C. L. J. 383.

An assault made by parties proceeding together and acting in conjunction as to time, place and assault, is a single act, and the cause of action is common to all parties —Ramessur v Shibharain, 14 W. R. 419.

In a suit in ejectment the person in actual possession need to be joined as parties.—Banubi v. Narsingrao, 31 B. 250.

A suit to recover possession against persons who were alleged to be joint trespassers, was held maintainable, although they set up various and distinct defences.—Omur Ali v. Weylayet Ali, 4 C. L. R. 455.

In a suit for the removal of a trustee of a Hindu temple, all persons interested in the trust must be made parties to the suit. S. 28, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. I, rr. 3, 4), apparently refers to the action of the plaintiff at the time of presentation of the plaint in joining in the same suit as defendants parties against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist —Sailajananda v. Umeshananda, 4 C. W. N. 462.

"Severally."—It is competent to a reversioner suing for possession of immoveable property after the death of a Hindu widow to join as defendants both other reversioners in possession of the property claimed and also transferees of such property from the widow and the suit is not bad for multifariousness. In this case the Hon'ble Judges observed: "We are clearly of opinion that, whatever may have been the correct view of the law as it was prior to the present Code of Civil Procedure, the point is covered by the clear language of Or. I, r. 3"; Balkrishna v. Hira Lal, 36 A. 406: 12 A. L. J. 509 (16 A. 279 declared obsolete). See also, Kubrā Jan v. Ram Bali, 30 A. 560: 5 A. L. J. 647; Ishan Chunder v Rameswar, 24 C. 831; Lala Rup Narain v. Musst. Gopal Debi, 10 C. L. J. 58 P. C.: 13 C. W. N. 920.

The plaintiff, one of the reversionary heirs, sued to recover possession of a moiety of certain lands which were situate at different villages and in possession of different persons who were alienees by sale, mortgage or lease from the widow of the last male owner. Held, that although the lands are situate in several different villages, provided the venue for the trial is the same, the right of the plaintiff to have her claim tried in one suit is the same as if the different holdings were all in the same village. It is never any bar to a suit in ejectment that many persons are in possession The difficulties arising from variety of defences can be cured by the successive trial of the issues separately affecting different defendants; Umabai v. Vithal, 33 B. 293 (24 C. 831 and 29 C. 871 approved). Distinguished in Ramanathan v. Mallaka, 24 I. C. 813. See also, Balgobind v. Gaja Lakshmi, 21 I. C. 438.

Where two persons have combined to attack a third person, there is nothing to prevent him from joining them as defendants in a single suit for damages; Varaj Lal v. Ram Dat, 26 B. 259: 4 Bom. L. R. 878.

Different persons obtained decrees against the same judgment-debtor and attached certain property as belonging to him in execution of their respective decrees. A third person put in a claim to the attached property, which was disallowed. In a suit by the claimant to set aside the attachment of all the decree-holders and to have it declared that the attached property belonged to him, held, that all the attaching creditors are properly joined as defendants, as the right to relief against all the attaching creditors was in respect of the same matter (property) which the plaintiff claimed as his; Raghunath v. Sarosh, 28 B. 266; see also, 10 M. L. J. 234.

A person purchased property by private contract. Subsequent to his purchase the property was purchased by several persons in execution of decrees against his vendor. In a suit by the person to set aside the execution sale, held, that the vendor, the decree-holder, and the purchasers were proper parties —Haranund v. Prosunno Chunder, 9 C. 763: 12 C. L. R. 556; Dorasamy Pillai v. Muthusamy, 27 M. 94.

A suit for account against two different persons from different dates is not bad for misjoinder.—Digambar v. Kallynath, 7 C. 654: 9 C. L. R. 265.

In a suit for partition of joint family property by a minor against his father, vendees and mortgagees from the father and others who had obtained decrees against the father, it being alleged that the decrees were all collusive and fraudulent, are proper parties; Shanmuka v. Arunachelam, 45 M. 194: A. I. R. 1922 Mad. 332: 69 I. C. 961.

Where the owner of two villages sold under a decree obtained upon a mortgage, claims contribution proportionately against the owners of other properties included in the mortgage, and does not claim from them collectively one lump sum as contribution, he may join all the contributors in one suit, and is not bound to bring separate suits for contribution against the separate owners.—Iben Husain v Ramdai, 12 A. 110.

"In the alternative."—In a suit for recovery of money lent to the first defendant by plaintiff's agent (defendant No. 4), the latter was impleaded and relief against him prayed for in the alternative in respect of the sum, as the first defendant denied the loan in toto prior to suit. Held that this section warrants such alternative claims being made.—Meyappa Chetty v. Periannan Chetty, 29 M. 50. 16 M. L. J. 30; Arunabhella v. Venkataswami, 7 M. 123.

In a suit against six different parties, it appeared that the plaintiff was kept out of possession by one only, and another was liable for arrears of rent. Held that the suit was not improperly framed by adding an alternative prayer.—Janokinath v. Ram Runjan, 4 C. 949.

A purchaser of certain lands on demanding rent that accrued due after his purchase, was informed by the tenant that he had paid the whole rent in advance to the former landlord. He thereupon sued the tenant and the former landlord, praying a decree for rent against either Held, that the frame of the suit was unobjectionable —Madan Mohun v. Holloway, 12 C 555; Kumud Nath v Sabitri Debi, 18 C W. N. 180-n (4 C. 350; 6 C. L. J. 190 referred to); Mowji v. Kuveri, 31 B. 516.

The owner of an eight-annas share of an estate brought a suit against the tenants making his co-sharers pro forma defendants, with a prayer to recover his share of the rent from the tenant defendants or in the alternative from the pro forma defendants, in case the latter had realised the share of the rent due to the plaintiff Held, that the prayer for the relief against the pro forma defendants could be joined with the prayer for the recovery of the rent against the principal defendants inasmuch as Or. I. r. 3 of the C. P. Code provides for the joinder of such claims, and it is a well-established practice to join such claims; Iswar Dalin v. Girindra Kumar, 48 I. C. 726.

In a suit to have a mokurari pottah enforced as against one co-sharer granting it, and other co-sharers who repudiate it, and in the alternative to have the salami paid for it returned, held that, under s. 28, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. I, rr. 3, 4), such an alternative claim may be allowed against one or more of the defendants.—Raidhur Chowdhry v. Kali Kristna, 8 C. 963; 11 C. L. R. 330. See also, Serajul Huq v. Abdul Rahaman, 29 C. 257; 6 C. W. N. 300,

A suit by the transferee of a mortgage for sale against the mortgagor, in which is also included a claim for damages against the transferor, the original mortgagee, if it should appear that any portion of the mortgage debt had been discharged by the mortgagor before the transfer and so was not recoverable from the mortgagor, is a suit in respect of the " same matter " and a suit against several defendants, is not barred for misjoinder, if the suit, although in respect of different causes of action against different defendants, is in respect of the same matter; Aiyathuria v. Meera, 31 M. 252: 28 M. Followed in Kovuri v. Tallapragada, 35 M. 39, where it has been held that the test as to whether this rule applies, is not whether the causes of action against the several defendants are the same, but whether the relief sought is in respect of the same matter; in other words, this rule authorizes the joinder in one suit of several defendants, where the relief claimed is sought in the same matter although the causes of action against them may be different.

SPECIAL CASES AS TO JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS.

(a) Necessary Parties in Mortgage Suits.—See the cases noted under Or. XXXIV, r. 1.

A suit for redemption against different mortgagees holding distinct mortgages is bad for multifariousness; Govind Kandu v. Wajid Ali, 37 I. C. 976.

(b) Necessary Parties in Partition Suits.—A suit which is in the nature of a partition suit cannot be properly dealt with unless all who are admittedly shareholders in the joint property are before the Court—Pahaladh Singh v. Luchmunbutty, 12 W. R. 256. Followed in Kali Kanta v. Gouri Prosad, 17 C 906 See also, Mathuni v. Munraj, 2 C 149; Ashidibai v. Abdulla, 31 B. 271 (291)

In a suit for partition after the father's death, between brothers, the sons of different wives, who are alive at the time when such suit is instituted, such wives are necessary parties to such suit, as they are entitled to a share with the sons.—Tarit Bhoosun v. Tara Prosonno, 4 C. 756: 4 C. L. R. 161.

Co-sharers in a joint estate created separate putni tenures in it. Held, that in a suit amongst the putnidars for partition, all the zemindars were necessary parties —Parbati Churn v. Amiuddeen, 7 C. 577: 9 C. L R. 170.

In a suit for partition, persons holding an interest of inferior degree are not necessary parties. A durpuinidar is not a necessary party in a partition suit —Upendra Chandra v. Tafazzal Ahamed, 7 C. L. J. 449: 12 C. W. N. 670.

In a partition suit all persons interested in the property to be divided must be brought before the Court. A purchaser or a mortgagee of a coparcener's share in the joint property is a necessary party to a suit for partition —Sadubin v Rambin, 16 B. 668.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement by the members of 1882, the third defendant, a minor, was properly included as a party to the suit though he was not a party to the arrangement.—Alagappa Mudaliar v. Sivaram Sundara, 19 M. 211.

In a private partition amongst the co-sharers certain specific lands were allotted to a co-sharer who granted a putni lease of his share to third parties who were thenceforth in possession. Subsequently, under a partition by the Collector under Act VIII of 1876 (B. C.), the said lands were allotted to the plaintiffs who brought rent suits against the tenants making the putnidars defendants. Held, that the putnidars were properly made parties to the suit —Hriday Nath v Mohobutnessa Bibee, 20 C. 285.

Ordinarily only such persons should be added as defendants in a partition suit as are owners of the interest to be partitioned; but if it cannot be ascertained with precision whether some of the owners are alive, then both the unascertained owners and their legal representatives should be added as defendants. A Hindu wife whose husband is missing is a necessary party along with her missing husband; Srinath v. Probodh Chandra, 11 C. L. J. 580.

(c) Necessary Parties in Partnership Suits.—In a suit in respect of partnership, the purchaser of the rights and interests of a partner should be joined as a defendant; Harrison v. Delhi & London Bank, 4 A. 437.

In a suit brought upon a contract made by a firm, the plaintiff may elect as defendants those partners of the firm against whom he wishes to proceed allowing his right of suit against those whom he does not make defendants to be barred —Lukmidas Khimji v. Purshotam Haridas, 6 B 700.

To a suit for winding up a partnership, all partners having distinct interest must be parties; and where such a suit, brought against all the partners, is not maintainable against some, the suit must be dismissed; Ramasami v. Veerappa, 33 M. 423.

The plaintiff as a member of undivided joint Hindu family, appointed defendant as a manager of a business of the family, and then sued the defendant for damages for breach of the contract of service. Held, that the suit was not maintainable in the absence of the other partners of the business —Alagappa Chetti v Vellian Chetti, 18 M. 33.

In a suit by surviving partners for the recovery of a partnership debt which became due during the life of a deceased partner, the representatives of such deceased partner are necessary parties.—Ram Narain v Ram Chunder, 18 C. 86. But see Moti Lal v. Ghelabhai, 17 B. 6; Aga Gulam v. Sasoon, 21 B 412, and Debi Das v. Nirpal, 20 A. 365.

A suit was brought for partnership accounts, upon the objection of the defendants it was found that a necessary party defendant had been omitted, and such party was afterwards added as defendant at a time when the suit, as against him, was barred Held, that the whole suit was rightly dismissed —Ram Doyal v Junmejoy, 14 C. 791 (7 B 217, and 6 C 815 followed) Distinguished in Jagdeo Singh v. Padarath Ahir, 25 C 285.

See also cases noted under Or. XXX, r. 4.

(e) Necessary Parties in Rent Suits.—In a suit for rent if the tenant sets up the title of a third party, such third party ought not to be made a party to the suit, so as to convert a simple rent suit into a title suit.—Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass, 8 C. 238, 10 C. L. R 581.

Although a purchaser of portion of a tenure is not personally liable for rent falling due before the date of purchase, a suit for recovery of rent for the whole claim is not bad, if such purchaser is joined as one of the parties, regard being had to the provisions of this rule, Jogemaya Dassi v. Girindra Nath, 4 C. W. N 560

It is competent to a plaintiff landlord to maintain his suit against any number of several joint tenants, Sir Rameswar Singh v. Jaideb Jha, 12. C. L. J. 591 (11 C. W. N 1026 referred), see also 12 C. L. J 642 noted below.

A landlord is not bound to sue all the heirs of a deceased tenant unless the succession is notified to him, he can sue one of the heirs who is in possession of a part of the holding—Khetter Mohan v Pran Kristo, 3 C W. N. 371; see also, Kasi Kinkar v. Satyendra Nath, 12 C L J. 642.

Where the persons liable to pay rent are mutwallis, all the mutwallis must be brought before the Court as defendants, inasmuch as mutwallis stand in the position of trustees—Abdul Rob v. Eggar, 35 C 182.

Section 28, C P Code, 1882 (Or I, rr. 3, 4), does not authorize a tenant to bring a suit, to have it determined which of two defendants, both of whom claimed rent from him, is his landlord—Koylash Chandra v. Goluk Chandra, 2 C W N 61

(f) Effect of Payment of Entire Rent to One Co-Sharer—If Such Co-sharer is a Necessary Party.—Where in a suit for rent the tenants pleaded payment of entire rent to one co-sharer, such payee is not a necessary party where decree is to be given only for the plaintiff's share; Chokalingam v. Peria Karuppa, 28 M L J. 197. 29 I. C. 141

In a suit by one co-sharer for his share of rent, if the tenant proves payment of his rent to other co-sharers, the suit should be dismissed; the remedy of the co-sharer who has not received his share of rent lies against his co-sharer and not against the tenant—Ahmmudeen v Grish Chunder, 4 C 350; referred to in 12 C 555. But see, Azim Sirdar v. Ram Lall, 25 C. 324, and Harihar Pershad v. Bholi Pershad, 6 C. L. J. 383.

(g) Suits in which Government is a Necessary Party.—In a suit to recover chur land on the allegation that the land was an accretion to plaintiff's estate, the defendant claimed the land under a settlement from Government Held that the Government as claiming a proprietary right in the disputed land, was a necessary party—Cannon v. Bissonath, 5 C. L. R. 154.

The Collector of the district is a necessary party to a suit by a purchaser against his vendor to compel mutation of name in the register.—Virasami v. Rama Doss, 15 M. 350.

Where plaintiffs based their claim to the land in dispute on a lease granted by Government and sued to eject the defendants, who also claimed to hold the land under a lease granted by Government subsequently to the plaintiff's lease, held, that the Government was a proper party.—Kashi v. Sadashiv, 21 B. 229.

The Government is, in a suit brought by the landlord for a declaration that the sub-soil of a digwari tenure belongs to him and not to the digwar or his lessee, a necessary party, as the Government has a substantial interest as affecting the profits derivable from the tenure.—Brojonath v. Durga Peshad Singh, 5 C. L. J 583: 31 C. 753.

In a suit by a person claiming certain lands, which had been resumed by the Government and settled with another party, the Government should be made a party.—Mahomed Israile v. Wise, 13 Bom L. R. (F. B.) 118 : 21 W. R 327; Krishno Lall v Bhyrub Chunder, 22 W R. 52. These cases have been considered and explained in Girdharee Sahoo v. Hera Lal, 2 C. L. R. 467.

The Secretary of State is not a necessary party to a suit to set aside a sale for arrears of revenue, but the Government have such interest as would, on their application, entitle them to be made a party.—Bal Mokoond v. Jirijudhum, 9 C. 271 : 11 C. L. R. 466. Referred to in Balkishen Das v Simpson, 25 C 833: 2 C. W. N. 513. Followed in Jahnnovi Chawdhrain v. Secretary of State, 7 C. W N 377, and distinguished in Gobinda Chandra v. Hemanta Kumari, 31 C. 159: 8 C. W. N. 657, where it has been held that in a suit to set aside a sale held under the provisions of the Public Demands Recovery Act, the Secretary of State is a necessary party. This case has been distinguished in Raghuraj v. Moharaj, 11 C. L. J. 385· 14 C W N. 606.

A suit against the Secretary of State is not one against any person or any real body corporate, but is one brought against a nominal defendant, who is put upon the record merely to enable the plaintiff to obtain the remedy—Doya Narain v Secretary of State, 14 C 256

In a suit by a tenant against his landlord, who is a ghatwal for declaration of occupancy rights in a Ghatwali land and for recovery of its possession, the Secretary of State is not a necessary party, though he may be a proper party, and, therefore, the suit cannot be dismissed for the non-joinder of the Secretary of State, Kailash v. Dwarka Nath, 35 I. C. 788.

(h) Suit for Possession by Heir Against Several Alienees from Last Owner.—A suit for possession on the ground of inheritance can proceed against a member of different alienees. The question is purely one of convenience ; Lal Chand v. Manghiri, 64 P W. R 1918: 59 P R. 1918 44 I. C 549

(i) Suit by Reversioner for Possession.—A reversioner after the death of the widow brought a suit for possession impleading the person in possession of the property and other reversioners in possession and also the transferees from the widow. Held, the suit is not bad for multifariousness and the plaintiff is entitled to join all to recover his share of the estate: Bal Krishna v. Hiralal, 36 A. 406.

(d) Suits Against a Firm or Corporation.—See notes under Order XXIX, rule 1.

(e) Necessary Parties in Rent Suits.—In a suit for rent if the tenant sets up the title of a third party, such third party ought not to be made a party to the suit, so as to convert a simple rent suit into a title suit.—Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass, 8 C. 238. 10 C L R 581

Although a purchaser of portion of a tenure is not personally liable for rent falling due before the date of purchase, a suit for recovery of rent for the whole claim is not bad, if such purchaser is joined as one of the parties, regard being had to the provisions of this rule, Jogemaya Dassi v. Girindra Nath, 4 C. W. N 560

It is competent to a plaintiff landlord to maintain his suit against any number of several joint tenants, Sir Rameswar Singh v. Jaideb Jha, 12. C. L. J. 591 (11 C. W N 1026 referred); see also 12 C. L. J. 642 noted below.

A landlord is not bound to sue all the heirs of a deceased tenant unless the succession is notified to him; he can sue one of the heirs who is in possession of a part of the holding —Khetter Mohan v Pran Kristo, 3 C. W. N. 371; see also, Kasi Kinkar v. Satyendra Nath, 12 C L J. 642.

Where the persons liable to pay rent are mutwallis, all the mutwallis must be brought before the Court as defendants, inasmuch as mutwallis stand in the position of trustees.—Abdul Rob v Eggar, 35 C. 182

Section 28, C P Code, 1882 (Or I, rr. 3, 4), does not authorize a tenant to bring a suit, to have it determined which of two defendants, both of whom claimed rent from him, is his landlord —Koylash Chandra v. Goluk Chandra, 2 C W N 61.

(f) Effect of Payment of Entire Rent to One Co-Sharer—If Such Co-sharer is a Necessary Party.—Where in a suit for rent the tenants pleaded payment of entire rent to one co-sharer, such payee is not a necessary party where decree is to be given only for the plaintiff's share, Chokalingam v. Peria Karuppa, 28 M .L J. 197 · 29 I. C. 141.

In a suit by one co-sharer for his share of rent, if the tenant proves payment of his rent to other co-sharers, the suit should be dismissed; the remedy of the co-sharer who has not received his share of rent lies against his co-sharer and not against the tenant.—Ahmmudeen v. Grish Chunder, 4 C. 350; referred to in 12 C. 555 But see, Azim Sirdar v. Ram Lall, 25 C. 324, and Harihar Pershad v. Bholi Pershad, 6 C. L J. 383.

(g) Suits in which Government is a Necessary Party.—In a suit to recover chur land on the allegation that the land was an accretion to plaintiff's estate, the defendant claimed the land under a settlement from Government. Held that the Government as claiming a proprietary right in the disputed land, was a necessary party.—Cannon v. Bissonath, 5 C. L. R. 154.

The Collector of the district is a necessary party to a suit by a purchaser against his vendor to compel mutation of name in the register.—Virasami v. Rama Doss, 15 M. 350.

Or. I, r. 1 provides that two or more persons may be joined as plaintiffs in one suit, in whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction is alleged to exist. It authorizes several persons to bring a joint suit where the conditions mentioned in it are fulfilled, but it does not provide for those cases in which it is found in the course of trial, that out of the several plaintiffs only one or some of them are entitled to the reliefs and others are not. It is to meet such cases that this rule has been framed, by providing that judgment may be given for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief as he or they may be entitled to. The misjoinder of plaintiffs, to some of whom the relief claimed cannot be given, whilst there are others to whom it may be given, is a mere defect of form which is not fatal to the suit. See, Umabai v. Bhau Balwant, 34 B. 358 and other cases noted under rule 1.

Clause (b) of this rule corresponds to para. 2 of s. 28 of the old Code and it provides for those cases in which it is found in the course of trial, that one or some more of the plaintiffs are entitled to relief only against one or more of the defendants and not against all of them In such a case the Court instead of dismissing the suit, will give judgment against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable according to their respective liabilities. For instance, in a suit for possession against several defendants with a claim, in the alternative, for arrears of rent, it was held that the suit was properly framed, and was not bad for misjoinder of defendants, even when it appeared that the claim for possession was sustainable only against some of the defendants, and that a portion of the claim for rent was directed against some defendants: the other portion being directed against all the defendants; Janokinath v. Ram Ranjun, 4 C. 949.

Defendant need not be interested in all the relief claimed.

5. It shall not be necessary that every defendant shall be interested as to all the relief claimed in any suit against him. [NEW.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new. It follows English Order XVI, r. 5 and is to be read with rule 3.

This rule provides that where a suit is brought against several defendants, the mere fact that every defendant is not interested in all the relief claimed in the suit is no ground for objection that the suit is bad for misjoinder of defendants.

Under this rule it is not necessary that every defendant should be interested as to the reliefs claimed in the suit. But it is necessary that there must be a cause of action in which all the defendants are more or less interested although the relief asked against them may vary; Umabai v. Bahu Balwant, 34 B. 358.

Joinder of parties liable on same contract.

6. The plaintiff may, at his option, join as parties to the same suit all or any of the persons severally, or jointly and severally, liable on any one contract, including parties to bills of exchange, hundis and promissory notes. [S. 29.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule exactly corresponds to s 29 of the C P. Code, 1882, and it follows English Or. XVI, r. 6.

"Severally liable."—This rule merely lays down the procedure for joinder of parties in suits based upon contracts, it has no application where there is misjoinder of causes of action; see, Krishnappa v Maung Human, 18 I. C. 181. Liability upon a contract may be, (1) several, (2) joint and several and (3) joint. This rule provides for cases for joinder of parties in cases mentioned in (1) and (2), and does not provide for a case mentioned in (3). For instance, if A and B execute a joint contract in favour of C, each making himself severally liable for its performance, they are separately liable upon the contract, and the obligee at his option, may eihter bring separate suits against A and B separately or he may bring one suit against A and B jointly.

"Jointly and severally liable."—The legal consequences of a joint and several liability and a several liability on a contract are the same. Thus, if A and B execute a bond in favour of C, making themselves jointly and severally liable, then C may, at his option, bring separate suits against A and B, or he may bring a joint suit against both of them for its enforcement.

Although in both the cases mentioned in (1) and (2) liberty is given to the obligee to bring either a joint suit or separate suits, the legal consequences in both the cases would not be the same For if a separate suit is brought against one or against some of the obligors out of several, and a decree is obtained against some of them only, and the decree remains unsatisfied, it may operate as a bar to a second suit against any one of the rest See Hemandra v. Rajendra, 3 C 353, Gurusami v. Samurthi, 5 M. 37; Dick v Dhunji, 25 B 378 · 3 Bom. L. R. 234. But in Muhammad Ashkar v. Radheram, 22 A 307, after reviewing all the English and Indian authorities on the point, it was held that judgment obtained against some only of the joint contractors and remaining unsatisfied is no bar to a second suit against other joint contractors In Ramanjulu Naidu v Aravamudu, 33 M 317, the Madras High Court, after reviewing all the English and Indian authorities, seems to have taken the same view as was taken in the above Allahabad case.

As this rule deals only with the procedure as to joinder of parties in suits upon contracts, this is not the proper place to discuss the legal consequences of bringing joint or separate suits Properly speaking it is a question of res judicata, which has been exhaustively dealt with under s. 11 under the heading "JUDGMENT OBTAINED AGAINST ONE OF SEVERAL JOINT CONTRACTORS, IF BARS A SUBSEQUENT SUIT AGAINST THE OTHERS." The reader should consult the cases noted thereunder and the provisions of s. 43 of the Indian Contract Act, IX of 1872.

This rule, as has been already said, does not deal with the joinder of parties, where the liability of the obligators is joint only; in such a case the plaintiff must bring his suit against all the joint contractors because the liability or obligation of all the joint contractors is single and undivided consequently, the cause of action is not distinct and is therefore indivisible: see Dhunput Singh v. Sham Soonder, 5 C. 291.

Object and Scope.—This rule is intended to provide for those cases where the plaintiff is in doubt as to the person from whom he is entitled to obtain redress; in such cases he may join two or more defendants for determination of the question as to which of the defendants is liable for his claim and to what extent For instance, in a suit for recovery of money stated to have been lent, to a person by plaintiff's agent, where the alleged debtor had, prior to the suit, denied that any loan had been made to him by the agent, and the agent maintained that the loan was in truth made, the plaintiff impleaded the agent as a defendant and prayed for relief against him in the alternative in order to determine whether the debtor or his agent is liable in respect of the sum stated to have been lent See Meyappa Chetty v Periannan Chetty, 29 M 50 · 16 M. L. J. 39 Here the plaintiff being in doubt as to whether the alleged debtor of the agent is liable in respect of his claim, was justified in joining both of them as defendants.

The plaintiffs were three of the co-sharers of a certain estate, a lady being a fourth co-sharer. By means of private arrangement among them, certain lands were assigned to the various co-sharers in severalty, other lands remaining ijmali or joint as before. Some 40 years after, the lady co-sharer let out her share in the estate, in putni, to third parties, who were in possession. There had been separate possession of these lands by virtue of the private partition for the past 70 years Subsequently, the Collector, under Bengal Act VIII of 1876, effected a partition of the whole estate. In the course of the proceedings, the specific lands allotted to the lady co-sharer in the private partition were allotted to the plaintiffs, who thereupon instituted suits for rent against the tenants of the land, making the putnidars defendants. Held, that the putnidars were properly made defendants, and the Courts were justified in trying the question of the right to receive the rent as between the plaintiffs and the putnidars, Hridoy Nath v Mohubutnessa, 20 C. 285. Here the plaintiff being in doubt as to whether the tenants of the land or the putnidar is liable to him for rent, was justified in impleading the putnidar as defendant, for determination of the question as to whether the tenants or the putnidars are liable to him for rent.

One person may sue or defend on behalf of all in same interest.

(1) Where there are numerous persons having the same interest in one suit, one or more of such persons may, with the permission of the Court, sue, or be sued, or may defend, in such suit, on behalf of or for the benefit of all persons so interested. But the Court shall in such case give, at the plaintiff's expense, notice of the institution of the suit to all such persons either by personal service or, where, from the number of persons or any other cause, such service is not reasonably practicable, by public advertisement, as the Court in each case may direct.

(2) Any person on whose behalf or for whose benefit a suit is instituted or defended under sub-rule (1) may apply to the Court to be made a party to such suit. [Ss. 30 & 32, para. 4.]

The alteration seems to have been made on account of a contention raised in 9 C. 604 (606) Sub-rule (2) corresponds to para. 4 of s. 32 of the old Code, with the addition of the words "or for whose benefit."

"We have, on the suggestion of the Advocate-General of Madras, added the words " or for the benefit of " after the words " on behalf of."—See the Report of the Select Committee.

Scope and Object.—It is a general rule that all persons interested ought to be made parties to a suit, however numerous they may be, so that the Court may be enabled to do complete justice by deciding upon and setting the rights of all persons interested and that the orders of the Court may be safely executed by those who are compelled to obey them and future litigations may be prevented This rule, no doubt, yields to the exigencies of particular cases, and there are well-established qualifications of it; one of them is the power of the Court to make a representative order under this rule. See Chudasama v. Parlapsang, 28 B. 209; 5 Bom. L. R. 937. Given a common interest and a common grievance, a representative suit was in order if the relief sought was in its nature beneficial to all whom the plaintiff proposed to represent.—LORD MACNAGHTEN in Duke of Bedford v. Ellis, 1901 A. C. 1. Where there are numerous parties, having the same interest in the suit, who are all before the Court, and are anxious to have the matter in dispute disposed of , but in order to save trouble and expense are desirous that " one or more of such parties " shall sue or defend on behalf of all in the same interest, permission should be granted; Hiralal v. Bhairon, 5 A. 503: 3 A. W. N. 155. When one multitude of persons are interested in a right, and another multitude of persons are interested in denying that right, and the right is a general right, some individual may be selected out of each multitude to represent the rest; per JESSEL, M. R., in Commrs. of Sewers v. Gellatty, 3 Ch. D. 615.

" May be sued or defend."—The above expression in this section also includes the case of numerous defendants having the same interest; in other words, a suit might be brought by plaintiffs, with the permission of the Court, against one or more members of a class, representing the rest; Chuni Lal v. Ram Kishen, 15 C. 460 F. B. (465-466).

Requisite Conditions under this Rule are (1). that there must be numerous persons having the same interest in one suit; (2) that necessary permission is obtained; and (3) that notice of institution is given to all persons interested.

" Numerous persons."—The point has been raised in several cases as to what constitutes " numerous."—In Adamson v. Arumugam, 9 M. 463 (466) it was held that the rule does not allow one or more persons to sue on behalf of the general public. In Sajedur Raja v. Baidya Nath, 20 C 397, the Madras case was referred to, and it was further held that a suit could not be brought on behalf of the Hindu community generally, as it was not capable of ascertainment, and that inasmuch as the section required notice to be served " upon all such parties," the words " numerous parties " meant parties capable of being ascertained. This decision was disapproved, and the point fully considered in Manmatho v Harish, 33 C. 905: 10 C. W. N. 867, and in Prabhat v. Hari, 24 C. W N 206. 54 I. C. 742, where it was held that the section should not in its application be limited to cases where the parties, though numerous, can be definitely ascertained A suit may be instituted under this section on behalf of a defined class of the general public, though that class may be composed of a more or less indefinite number of persons. This was a suit by the plaintiffs who were members of the Satchasi community on behalf of themselves and other members of the community for a declaration to take part in the management of the worship of a goddess and for joint possession with the defendants of the land on which the worship was carried on Suits have been allowed by one or more persons on behalf of a sect (Srinivasachariar v Raghava, 22 M. 28, 30; Dhunput v Paresh, 21 C 180; Maharaj Bahadur v Paresh, 31 C. 839, Raghava v Rajaratnam, 14 M 57; Baldeo v Bir Gir, 22 A 269), of a caste (Ganapati v Savithri, 21 M 10), worshippers at mosque (Jan Ali v. Ramnath, 8 C. 32); fellow-villagers (Haradhone v Ramdayal, 21 C 181; Kalerkabir v Jan Mia, 29 C. 100; Thanakoti v Muniappa, 8 M 496); or class of villagers (Amedbhoy v. Balkrishna, 19 B. 391, Bhundal v. Pandol, 12 B. 221). The Mahomedan community (Jawahra v. Akbar Hossein, 7 A. 182) or the Hindu community (Manmatha v. Harish, 33 C. 905) is not the general public, but only a particular portion, though it is a large one of the general population of this country which consists of numerous races and creeds.

Certain members of the Dhobi community of Naraında, with the leave of the Court under Or. I, r 8, C P Code, sued on behalf of the community for a declaration of its title to an akhra alleged to have been established by the ancestors of the community and for recovery of possession thereof. It was found as a fact that the Dhobi community of Naraında had been owning the akhra and its properties from time immemorial through panchayats. Held, that the Dhobi community of Naraında had the right to hold and manage the property and maintain suits with respect thereto through panchayats and that the present suit which was properly constituted under Or. I, r. 8, C. P. Code, should succeed, Probhat v. Hari, 24 C W. N. 206: 54 I. C. 742. Similarly, property may be owned by a fluctuating body of persons like the inhabitants of a village, and a suit may be brought on their behalf under this rule, Sivaraman v. Muthaya, 12 M. 241. It has also been held that a person may render himself liable to a community like the Vysia community of Mogarala by agreeing to pay a certain sum of money to it, and a suit to recover it may be brought by the community under this rule; Narasimhulu v Noota, 44 M L J 240, 72 I C 95 A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 434

Where numerous members of a caste seek to enforce rights as against strangers or as against certain other members of the caste, Or I, r 8, C. P. Code, applies to the case It is not necessary for the persons asking for leave under Or I, r. 8 to obtain formally beforehand the authority of those whom they seek to represent Nor need they summon a caste meeting before bringing the suit; Sivathal Periyava Nadar v Nana Chund Velmuruga, 30 M L T 47 64 I C. 618

Premises belonging to a community were let out to the defendant. The president of the community who was authorized by a resolution of the community to file suits, sued to eject the defendant on the ground that the demised premises were required for letting to members of the community Held, that the resolution passed by the community did not entitle the plaintiff to sue in his own name, since there having been numerous members of the community with the same interest in the suit, notice of the institution of the suit, to all such persons as well as permission of the Court for filing the suit was necessary under Or I, r 8, Atma Ram v. Narayan, 23 Bom. L. R 972.

"Having the same interest"—Instances.—Where a number of persons in the same interest have occasion to assert and defend their rights, they should resort to the provisions of this rule; Muringa Mangalath v. Valia, 7 M. 87 See, D'Cruz v. D'Silva, 32 M 131

This section applies only to cases in which many persons are jointly interested in obtaining relief, and not to a case in which individual right has been violated.—Jawahra v. Akbar Hussain, 7 A 178 See also, Thakersey Devraj v. Hurbhum, 8 B. 432: D'Cruz v. D'Silva, 32 M. 131, and Mohiuddin v. Sayiduddin alias Nawab Mean, 20 C. 810. See also Srinivasachariar v. Raghava Chariar, 23 M. 28, approved in Sivagurunatha v. Ramaswami, 11 M. L. T. 275: (1912) M. W. N. 105: 15 I. C. 399.

This section authorises some of the ryots of a village to sue the proprietor of it, for themselves and other ryots, for a declaration of their general rights, and for an injunction restraining the proprietor from interfering with those rights.—Ahmedbhoy Habibbhoy v. Bal Krishna 19 B. 361.

Where a person dies leaving numerous creditors, any one of them may sue on behalf of himself and the other creditors; Oriental Bank Corporation v. Govind, 9 C. 604; Ebrahimbhai v. Fulbhai, 26 B. 577. Similarly, a villager may bring a suit on behalf of himself and his fellow villagers for a declaration of a right of way and for an injunction against the defendant for obstructing the way; Harish v. Pran Nath, 26 C. W. N. 587; 69 I. C. 910.

A suit relating to a charity established under a charitable endowment may be instituted by any member of the class intended to be benefited by such charity, for the support and preservation of which the aid of the Court is invoked by means of the suit; Ganapati v. Savitri, 21 M. 10.

Under this section, a suit will lie at the instance of individual taxpayers for an injunction restraining a municipality from misapplying its funds.—Vaman v. Municipality of Sholapur, 22 B. 646.

A person collecting and receiving subscriptions for the purpose of building a temple, in pursuance of a resolution come to at a meeting of the community, holds them as a trustee, and a suit in respect thereof should be filed under this section.—Mahomed Nathubhai v. Husen, 22 B. 729.

In a suit to have certain property declared waqf, alleging that it was dedicated as waqf, and the profits applied to lighting a mosque and shrine, and the expenses of devotion, etc., it appeared that the plaintiff was not alone interested in the subject-matter of the suit Held that she could only sue on behalf of those interested after having obtained leave under this section.—Lutifunnissa v Nazirun Bibi, 11 C. 33. See also, Jian Ali v. Ramnath, 8 C 32 9 C L R 433 But see, Zafaryab Ali v Bakhtawar, 5 A 497, and Jawahra v Akbar Husain, 7 A 178

The disciples of a muth have sufficient interest within the meaning of this rule to maintain a representative suit to declare alienations made by the Mahant invalid; Chidambaranatha v Nullasiva, 41 M 124 · 42 I. C. 366.

It is open to the worshippers of a temple, under this rule, to bring a representative suit for a declaration that a permanent lease of temple property granted to the defendants in possession is invalid; Veeramachaneni v. Soma, 43 M. 410. 38 M L. J. 226 (1920) M W. N 393 (40 M. 212 F. B., and 41 M. 124 followed), or for recovering temple property from a trespasser; Rangaswami v. Krishnaswami, 44 M. L. J 116: 71 I. C. 463: A. I R. 1923 Mad 276

It is competent to a single defendant to raise a defence of a general custom without joining the other persons interested in the custom with himself or getting himself made their representative under this section.—Sitab Rai v. Dubal Nagesia, 6 C. L J. 218.

Under this rule the Court has the power to allow a plaintiff to sue some persons as representing themselves and others having the same interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and the consent of the defendants on the record is not necessary;—Ambalam v. J. M. Barthe, (1912) M. W. N. 152.

Clubs and Other Associations.—A suit in respect of a matter in which a club or other association is interested cannot be instituted by the Secretary alone even if he is authorized by a resolution of the members of the club or association to do so In such a case the suit must be brought either by the Secretary on his own behalf and on behalf of the other members, or by all the members of the association under this rule; Muhammadan Association v Bakhsi, 6 A 284, Michael v Briggs, 14 M. 362. Unless the Secretary of a club has expressly accepted personal liability on a contract, entered into by him on behalf of the club, he cannot be sued personally on the contract, nor can the members be sued collectively through the Secretary, North W. P. Club v Sadullah, 20 A. 497. Similarly, a suit to eject tenants from property belonging to the caste cannot be maintained by the President of the Managing Committee of the caste, even if he is authorized to do so by a resolution passed by the members of the Committee. In such a case, the suit must be brought by him on behalf of all the members of the caste, Atmaram v. Narayan, 46 B. 132 64 I C 555; Prabhat v Hari, 24 C. W N 206.

Suit by a Member of a Community in his Own Right.—The meaning of this section is that with the permission of the Court a suit may be brought by one or more persons on behalf of all interested This section does not forbid them from suing in their own right, it merely says that if they desire to sue on behalf of others, they must obtain the permission of the Court —Baiju Lal v. Bulak Lal, 24 C 385

This is an enabling rule and it does not debar any member of a committee from bringing a suit in his own right, though the act complained of is injurious to the whole community Where Mahomedans belonging to a particular sect are restrained from using a mosque for prayer, any member of the sect who is entitled to use the mosque may bring a suit to enforce the right In such a case, it is not necessary that the suit should be brought by him on behalf of himself and all the members of the sect, Maulvi v Jagat, 2 Pat 391. 74 I C 403; A. I. R 1923 Pat. 475 In the same way, any member of a community may bring a suit to set aside unauthorized alienation of endowed property or formal administration of property belonging to the community; Jawahra v. Akbar Hussain, 7 A 178; Gulfa v Basanta, 32 A 284; Dasondhay v. Mahammad, 33 A. 666; Rama Chandra v Ali, 35 A 197, Zafaryab Ali v. Bakhtawar, 5 A. 497; Mohiuddin v. Sayiduddin, 20 C 810; Shankarlal v. Dakor Temple Committee, 28 Bom L R 300 A I. R. 1926 Bom. 170: 94 I. C. 47.

A beneficiary of a trust in respect of a Mahomedan waqf, interested in the maintenance of a mosque or other charitable institution, may, without having recourse to the provisions of Or. I, r. 8, C. P Code, and without suing in a representative capacity on behalf of the other beneficiaries, sue for recovery of possession of property wrongfully alienated by the trustee and for the incidental declaration that the subject of the trust cannot be alienated; Maulavi Mahomed Fahimul Huq v. Jagat Ballak, 4 Pat. L. T. 675· 2 Pat. 391; Sadiq Husain v. Khan Bahadur Hakim Mirza Nazir Hussain, 9 O. L. J. 111: A. I. R. 1922 Oudh 1 66 I. C. 90; Maulvi v. Jagat, 2 Pat. 391: A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 475.

If the individual rights of the plaintiffs are infringed, they can maintain an action without joining others whose rights are equally infringed by the wrongful act; Andi Moopan v. Muthvirama, 29 M L. J. 91: 17 M. L. T. 543; see also, Ramchandra v. Ali Muhammad, 35 A. 197: 11 A. L. J. 233.

Where injury is threatened to a well constructed for the use of the people of a mohalla, any resident of the mohalla can bring a suit in his own right to restrain the threatened injury. In such a case the leave of the Court under Or. I, r. 8, C. P. Code, is not necessary to prove special damage; Pokhar Das v. Raghu Ram, 62 I. C. 988.

Binding Effect of Decree in Representative Suit.—In a suit where one person is allowed to represent others as defendants in a representative capacity, the general rule is that any decree passed in that suit can bind those others only with respect to the property of those others which he can in law represent and no personal decree can be passed against them, although the party record eo nominee may be made personally liable. This is the principle to be applied to suits brought under this rule. Sahib Thumbi v. Hamid, 36 M. 414: 12 I. C 1006. It has accordingly been held that a decree for injunction being a personal decree is not binding on those who are not actually parties on the record. Sadagopachari v. Krishna Chari; 12 M. 356 Srinivasa v. Arayai, 53 M. 483.

Persons conducting a suit on behalf of themselves and others with the leave of the Court under this rule have authority to enter into a compromise so as to bind those whom they represent; Krishnama Chariar v. Chinnammal, 24 M. L J. 192.

At What Stage of the Suit, Permission should be Obtained.—Permission must be obtained before the institution of the suit, otherwise it would be dismissed. Such leave cannot be granted at the hearing — Oriental Bank, v. Gobind Lal, 9 C. 604: 13 C. L. R. 142 But the Bombay and other High Courts have held that such permission may be granted at the hearing and may relate back to the institution of the suit. Ebrahimbhai v. Fulbai, 26 B 577; Ramayyangar v. Krishnayyangar, 10 M. 185; Fernandez v. Rodrigues, 21 B. 784 (F. B.), (followed in Baldeo Bharthi v. Birgir, 22 A. 269) Where leave has been so given it is immaterial that an application for permission to sue had been previously refused.—Chenu Menon v. Krishna, 25 M 399. See also, Srinivasa v. Raghava, 23 M. 28.

There is no doubt that the proper course is to obtain permission under Or. I, r. 8 before the suit is instituted But there is nothing in the rule to show that if it is not so done it cannot be granted afterwards. The mere fact that the leave of the Court was not obtained before the institution of the suit should not result in the dismissal of the suit. Permission under Or. I, r. 8 can be granted subsequent to the filing of the suit The objection is not one affecting the jurisdiction of the Court; Ahmed Ali v Abdul Majid, 44 C 258· 21 C. W N 1144 (21 B 734, 25 M. 399, 23 M. 28, 22 A. 269 folld.; 8 C 32, 11 C 33 refd to; 9 C. 604 dissented from; 21 C. 180 distd, see also, Nariman v Municipal Corporation of Bombay, 47 B. 809: 25 Bom. L R. 689.

Whether the Permission should be Express.—Or I, r 8 does not require an "express" permission to be recorded by the Court, but, if such permission can be well gathered from the proceedings of the Court in which the suit was instituted, an Appellate Court may infer from such proceedings that permission was really granted —Dhunput Singh v. Paresh Nath, 21 C 180, Kalu Khobir v Jan Meah, 29 C 100, Mukh Lal v. Jagdeo Tewari, 35 C 1021, Krishna v. Atul, 39 C L J 612 84 I. C. 79: A. I. R 1924 C. 998; Ismail v. Niamtkhan, 101 I. C 738· A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 608. But see, Hira Lal v Bhairam, 5 A 602

Notice and Public Advertisement.—The Court in granting permission to sue to two plaintiffs on behalf of all the residents of a locality directed the plaintiffs to advertise and give notice to all the residents of the locality as regards the suit But the notice and advertisement were not issued. Held, that (1) the omission to issue notice was not fatal to the suit and would not result in its dismissal, (2) that the publication of notice was peremptory and must be complied with under Or. I, r 8 and that the case should be remanded to the trial Court for issuing notice and retrial of suit; Shyam Lal v Musst Lalli, 44 A. 231 F. B . 20 A L J 73· 65 I. C. 259; Jadu Singh v. Sant Singh, 8 P L T. 267· A. I R. 1927 Pat. 221.

It is the duty of the Court to cause service of notices or advertisements to be published as required by this section. If a plaintiff omits to move the Court for that purpose, his suit should not be dismissed on account of the failure of the Court to perform the duties imposed upon it by the section Mukh Lal v. Jagdeo Tewari, 35 C 1021; Kartick v Guru Prosad, 13 C W. N 104; Shiam Lal v Mt Lalli, 44 A 231· A. I. R 1922 A 16 65 I C 259.

Object of Notice.—This rule requires that the Court should exercise a judicial discretion in permitting some definite person or persons to sue or be sued on behalf of all the persons interested, and it further requires the Court to give to the persons interested notice of the institution of the suit which must include a notice of the names of the persons who have been permitted to represent others, so that the persons interested may have an opportunity of knowing who have been selected to represent them; Kali Kanta v. Gauri, 17 C. 906; Ismail Munshi v. Niamat, 101 I. C. 738: A. I. R. 1927 C. 608.

Fresh Permission for Appeal is Not Necessary if Permission Validly Granted for Suit.—If a permission has been validly granted for representation of the suit in the Court of first instance, no fresh permission is necessary for the purposes of an appeal if an appeal is preferred from the trial Court's decree. So far as this question is concerned, the proceedings in appeal may very well be regarded as proceedings in continuation of the suit and the result of the appeal would be taken as the result of the suit itself; Ismail v. Niamat Khan, 101 I. C. 738: A. I. R. 1927 C. 608.

Malabar Law.—Every member of a Malabar tarwad is entitled to be made a party, or to have notice in any suit the object of which is to affect the tarwad property.—Kunnathurillah v. Narayanan, 6 M. 121.

If it is sought to make a decree in a suit binding on a Malabar tarwad, the procedure laid down in this section should be followed, if the members are numerous.—Elayachanidathil v. Kenatumkora, 5 M. 201.

In a suit by junior members of a Malabar tarwad, to cancel certain mortgages executed by their karnavan and senior anandravan, on the ground that the debt secured was not binding on the tarwad, held, that all the members of the tarwad should have been joined actually or constructively under this section.—Moidin Kutti v. Krishnan, 10 M. 322.

A decree against the karnavan and senior anandravan is not binding on the junior members. If it is desired to extend its operations to those who were not parties to the suit, the procedure prescribed by this section should be followed —Sridevi v. Kelu Eradi, 10 M. 79. Followed in Komappa v. Ukkaran, 17 M 214.

A decree against a karnavan of a Malabar tarwad, as such, is binding upon the members of that tarwad, though not parties to the suit, in the absence of fraud or collusion. Explanation V of s. 13, C. P. Code, 1882 (s. 11) is not limited to the case of a suit under this section.—Varanakot v. Varanakot, 2 M 328. See also Olayat Gobinda v. Damodaran, 8 I. C. 435.

Competency of Court to Add Parties after Decree.—In a suit by three persons under s 14 of the Religious Endowments Act, a decree for damages was passed in favour of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs neglected to execute the decree whereupon the Court added the trustees of the temple as plaintiffs to enable them to execute the decree. Held, that as the suit was brought by the plaintiffs in a representative capacity, it was competent to the Court under Or. I, r 8, C. P. Code to add parties even after the passing of the decree; Swaminatha v. Kumaraswami, 17 L. W. 422: 44 M. L. J 282 · (1923) M. W. N 239: (24 M L J. 192: 33 M 488: 20 M. L. J 546 · 28 M. 319 followed)

Misjoinder and non-joinder.

9. No suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or non-joinder of parties, and the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it. [S. 31.]

COMMENTARY.

Object and Scope of the Rule.—This rule corresponds to s 31 of the C. P Code, 1882. The words " or non-joinder of parties " have been added, and the second para. of s 31 of the old Code has been omitted It follows the English Or. XVI, r. 11, and the principle laid down in Mahabala Bhotta v. Kunhanna, 21 M. 373, where it was held that the word "misjoinder" in this section comprehends cases of " non-joinder " as well as " misjoinder " This rule must be held to amount to a direction to the Court not to dismiss a suit on the ground of non-joinder. The addition of the word "non-joinder" makes it clear that non-joinder is not fatal. Where it appears to the Court that the name of any party has been improperly joined, either as plaintiff or defendant, the Court may, instead of dismissing the suit, order it to be struck out under sub-section (2), r. 10. Similarly, when there has been non-joinder of parties, either as plaintiffs or defendants, the Court may under r 10 (2), order that such party may be added either as plaintiff or as defendant Section 99 of the present Code also lays down that no decree shall be reversed, etc., on account of any mis-joinder of parties, see 36 C. 780 20 I C 51

The latter part of this rule provides that "the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it"; this part of the rule clearly applies to cases where the rights and interests of the parties actually before the Court can be determined. But it has no application in cases where, under the substantive law, it is not possible to determine the rights of the parties before the Court.

For instance, a mortgage is indivisible one mortgagor cannot claim redemption of his own share alone. Again, the rule under the Mitakshara law is that no co-parcener has a definite share till a partition; in such cases the rule against the dismissal of suits for non-joinder of parties has no application; see Nagarao v Nago, 10 N. L. R. 72, Gendan Lal v Baburam, 9 A. L. J. 86

It follows therefore that this rule will apply where the rights and interests of the parties are determinable. But where the rights and interests are not defined or separable, as in the case of members of a joint Mitakshara family, from the rights and interests of those who are not before the Court, the Court cannot proceed to deal, under this rule, with the matter in controversy, so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties before it.

This rule does not apply when a cause of action arises against a number of persons jointly, because in that case, when one of such persons is eliminated, no cause of action subsists against the rest of them. If it does not subsist against all, it cannot subsist against any one; Sanwal Singh v Ganesh Lal, 35 A 441 11 A. L J 630.

It should be remembered that the provisions of this rule are applicable to misjoinder of parties only. Misjoinder of causes action is not the same as misjoinder of parties, misjoinder of causes of action is dealt with in Or. II, r 3

"No suit shall be defeated."—Though misjoinder, or non-joinder does not merit the dismissal of the suit, still, if a plaintiff after the Court decides that a certain person is a necessary party' refuses to make him a party, the suit should be dismissed; Dewan Shibnath v. The Alliance Bank of India; 3 P. R. 1915: 215 P. L R. 1914. 110 P W. R. 1914· 25 I. C. 480.

Where two parties contract with a third party, a suit by one of them making the other a co-defendant ought not to be dismissed merely because the plaintiff has not proved that the co-defendant has refused to join as a plaintiff. In such a case, if the plaintiff succeeds, the decree should be in favour of himself, and the defendant who should have been joined as co-plaintiff; Kamini Mohan v. Niharan Chandra, 76 I. C. 576 (26 C. 409: 35 C. 331: 10 Bom. L. R. 66 relied on).

In actions upon contracts, if the defendant takes the objection of non-joinder in proper time, and if the plaintiff, notwithstanding the objection, insists upon proceeding with the suit without taking the steps to add the necessary parties, and if the Court finds that the objection is well founded, the suit must be dismissed.—Ramsebuk v. Ram Lall, 6 C. 815: 8 C. L. R. 457.

Under s. 31 of the Code of 1882, which did not contain a saving clause in favour of non-joinder of parties, as Or. I, r. 9 of the Code, 1908, a suit was liable to be dismissed for non-joinder of necessary parties; Sheikh Faizu v. Sheikh Doman, 19 C. L. J. 455.

Under Or. I, r. 9, the Court has no power to direct a suit to be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or non-joinder of the parties; it should take action under Or. II, r. 6; Gur Prosad v. Gur Prosad, 19 C. L. J. 316.

Where the defendant in a case has raised no objection as to the non-joinder of a co-plaintiff, the Court should not dismiss the suit on that ground, without framing an express issue and allowing the plaintiff to meet it; Kedar Nath v Tulshi, 21 I. C 182.

A suit will not fail by reason of non-joinder of parties in mortgage suits; the provisions of Or. XXXIV, r. 1 are subject to the provisions of Or. I, r. 9; Ramcharan v. Md. Rashiduddin, 10 A. L. J. 134.

This section provides that no suit shall be defeated by reason of misjoinder of parties But there is no section of the Code which permits a person to sue various defendants together, in respect of various causes of action. Therefore, where there is misjoinder of parties as well as of causes of action, the suit should be dimissed.—Ram Narain v. Annoda Prosad, 14 C. 681. See also, Durgacharan v Jotindra Mohon, 27 C. 493, in which the suit was dismissed for misjoinder of parties, and Syed Abdul Rab v Eggar, 12 C W. N 160, where the suit was dismissed for defect of parties

Where in a suit for a declaration of a right of way as a village road and for removal of obstruction thereon, an objection was taken that one of the persons in the servient tenement had not been made a party to the suit, which was overruled by the Courts below on the ground that it was taken at a late stage and the Courts below decreed the suit. Held, that the non-joinder of the person in question as a party to the suit was a fatal defect and on that ground the suit was dismissed; Haran Sheikh v. Ramesh Chandra, 25 C. W. N. 249.

The language of this rule is imperative, and no suit is liable to be defeated on the ground of non-joinder, even in the non-joinder is not attributable to any bona fide or any other mistake, Mulji Taj Singh v Ransi Devraj, 34 B 13, pp. 21-23.

Distinction between Necessary and Proper Parties.—There is a distinction between necessary and proper parties to a suit. Two conditions must be fulfilled in order that a defendant may be considered a necessary party, namely, first, there must be a right to some relief against him in respect of the matter involved in the suit, and secondly, his presence is necessary in order to effectually and completely adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit; Sital Prasad v. Asho Singh, (1923) Pat. 326.

There is a distinction between the non-joinder of proper persons but not necessary parties and non-joinder of parties whose presence is essential. In a suit for partition in a joint Hindu family, the grandsons are not necessary parties and are represented by their own father At the same time they may be proper parties and on an appeal the Appellate Court can direct the lower Court to bring them on record and give them separate allotments if they so desire; Digambar Mahton v. Hanraj Mahton, 1 Pat. 361: 3 Pat. L. T. 238.

Misjoinder.—Misjoinder means joinder of a party who ought not to have been joined either as plaintiff or defendant, or joinder of a person as plaintiff who should have been joined as defendant and vice versa. Misjoinder of party occurs when the provisions of Or. 1, r. 1 are not complied with. Misjoinder of parties can do real harm either to the plaintiff or to the defendant; the mistake can be remedied at any time under Or. 1, r. 10, and it cannot prejudicially affect, in particular, the course of defence or attack: see Mulji Taj Singh v Bansi Devraj, 34 B. 13, p. 20.

Non-Joinder.—Occurs when a necessary party is not joined as such. As to the proper time for taking objection as to non-joinder, see r. 13.

The non-joinder of a dormant partner as co-plaintiff in an action on a contract entered into with the firm or one of its members is not fatal to the suit; Guzzu v Venkata, (1915) M W. N. 864.

Defect of non-joinder of parties may be cured under Or 1, r 9; Imperial Pressing Co. v. British Crown Assurance Corporation, 41 C. 581 p. 585.

In a partnership suit the partners must be made parties or the suit will fail If a necessary party is not on the record, the proper course is to apply to have him joined. If he is not brought on the record at all, or if when he is brought on the record, the suit as against him is barred by limitation, the whole suit will be dismissed, Ambica v Tarini, 18 C. W. N. 464; see also Jagat v. Udit, 20 I C. 262, a case of Mitakshara joint family.

One of several heirs (sisters) of a deceased Mahomedan, can sue his widow for her own share of her brother's property, without impleading the other sharers; Md. Afzal Khan v Kariman Bibi, 11 A L. J. 619: 20 I. C. 658.

It is plainly the intention of the legislature that a suit shall not be defeated for non-joinder of parties. So far as the addition by the Court is concerned no question of limitation can arise; but when parties have been added by the Court, section 22 of the Limitation Act comes into play; Nathi Lal v. Lala, 9 A. L. J. 410. 14 I. C. 35.

In determining the question of non-joinder, the Court must confine itself to the claim before it; Hari Chandra v. Humma Vithoba, 24 Bom. L. R. 1318.

Where it appeared that no issue on the point was framed and the plaintiff had no opportunity to adduce evidence on the plea of non-joinder, held, that the suit was not liable to be dismissed on the ground of non-joinder of parties; Umri Mal v. Jaigopal, 217 P. L. R. 1910.

"So far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before the Court."—Or. I, r. 9 does not apply where the rights and interests of the parties actually before the Court cannot be determined. The change made in the new Code does not affect the rule regarding the indivisibility of a mortgage nor the rule under the Mitakshara that no co-parcener has a definite share till partition is made; Nagarao v. Nagao, 10 N. L. R. 72: 24 I. C. 831.

Or. I, r. 9 provides that no suit shall be defeated by reason of non-joinder of parties and the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it; Musst. Maryam Bibi v. Ram Das, A I. R. 1922 All. 404.

Or. I, r. 9 deals only with cases where the Court can deal with the matter in controversy in the suit with regard to the rights and interests of the parties actually before it; Madho Ram v. Jagat Singh, 1 U. P. L. R. 7; 52 I. C. 18.

The Court cannot, by its decree, affect the rights of those who are not parties to suit. If therefore no decree can be passed without affecting the rights of absent parties, the suit cannot proceed in their absence and should be dismissed. If however, the right of the parties actually before it can be determined in the suit having the rights and interests of others unaffected, there is no reason why, even other parties might properly have been added, the Court should not determine the matters in controversy between the parties actually present; Sital Prasad v Asho Singh, (1922) Pat. 326; Haran Sheikh v. Ramesh Chandra, 25 C. W. N. 249

In an action for sale upon a mortgage of joint Hindu family property, when some only of the members of the joint family are made defendants, their rights and interests in the joint family property are neither defined nor separable from the rights and interests of those who are not before the Court. The Court, therefore, cannot proceed to deal, under this rule with the matter in controversy, so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it; Gendan Lal v. Babu Ram, 9 A. L J. 86.

Or. I, r. 9 is subordinate to Or. XXXIV, r. 1. A mortgage is indivisible and if all persons entitled to a share in the mortgage money are not on the record, the whole suit must be dismissed; Girwar v Makbunessa, 1 Pat. L. J. 468: See also 31 I. C. 814.

In a suit for profits of zerait land held by the defendants in excess of their shares, all the co-sharers were not made parties; held, that the suit must be dismissed for non-joinder of necessary parties in whose absence the excess could not be determined; Ramasray v Sheonandan, 1 Pat. L. J. 573.

Necessary Party in Appeal.—Under Or I, r. 9, C P. Code, a person who is a necessary party to the suit is a necessary party to the appeal; Jitendra Nath v. Jhaku Mandar, 3 Pat. L. T 456 ,66 I. C. 780.

10. (1) Where a suit has been instituted in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff or where it is doubtful whether it has been instituted in the name of the right plaintiff, the Court may at any stage of the suit, if satisfied that the suit has been instituted through a bona-fide mistake, and that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute so to do, order any other person to be substituted or added as plaintiff upon such terms as the Court thinks just. [S. 27]

Suit in name of wrong plaintiff.

(2) The Court may at any stage of the proceedings either upon or without the application of either party, and on such terms as may appear to the Court to be just, order that the name of any party improperly joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant be struck out, and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added. [S. 32, paras. 1 & 2.]

(3) No person shall be added as a plaintiff suing without a next friend or as the next friend of a plaintiff under any disability without his consent. [S. 32, para. 3.]

(4) Where a defendant is added, the plaint shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, be amended in such manner as may be necessary, and amended copies of the summons and of the plaint shall be served on the new defendant and, if the Court thinks fit, on the original defendant. [S. 33.]

Where defendant added, plaint to be amended.

(5) Subject to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, section 22, the proceedings as against any person added as defendant shall be deemed to have begun only on the service of the summons [S. 32, para. 5]

COMMENTARY.

Changes Introduced in the Section.—Sub-rule (1) corresponds to section 27 of the old Code. The word "instituted" has been subsituted for the word "commenced," and the words "persons" and "with his or their consent," have been omitted. It has been taken from English Or. XIV, r. 11.

Sub-rule (2) corresponds to paras 1 and 2 of section 32 of the C. P. Code of 1882. Material changes have been introduced in this sub-rule.

Sub-rule (3) corresponds to para 3 of s 32, sub-rule (4) with s. 33, and sub-rule (5) with para. 5 of s. 32 of the C. P. Code of 1882, with modifications.

It is not infrequent to find that a plaintiff after institution of a suit, discovers that he has sued the wrong persons, and cannot get full relief without adding some other person as co-plaintiff, or that some person other than the plaintiff is entitled to the relief prayed for. This rule contemplates such cases, and gives the Court power to add a new party in the former case and to substitute a new party in the latter case.

But the application of this rule is limited only to cases where it is established that the suit has been improperly instituted through a bona fide mistake; such mistake may obviously be one of fact or in law. See Duckett v. Gover (1877), 6 Ch. D. 82, and Huges v. Pump House Hotel Co., (1902) 2 K. B. 485. In the latter case, it was pointed out that where the Court of first instance takes one view of the law, and the Court of appeal takes a contrary view, that in itself is sufficient evidence of bona fides, see Charu Chunder v. Sarat Chunder, 12 C. L. J. 537: 6 I. C. 87, which was a case of construction of a will and in which there was a bona fide mistake of law, on account of different views taken in the decisions of the High Court. The words "bona fide mistake" have also been explained in Ganendra Nath v Surya Kanto, 17 C. W. N. 462. Where a mistake is not made deliberately but honestly, the mistake is bona fide. For instance, where a mother instituted a suit upon a mortgage bond within the period of limitation as administratrix for the benefit of her sons, and after the period of limitation the names of her sons were added as plaintiffs, it was held that the change was one of form only and not of substance, and there was no introduction of new plaintiffs when the sons were brought on the record, and the suit was therefore not barred. Nistarini v Sarat Chandra, 22 C. L J. 270 20 C. W. N. 49. This rule however does not give a Court unlimited power to remodel the pleadings. Turquand v. Fearon, 4 Q. B D. 280.

Scope of the Rule.—An order under Or. I, r. 10 ought not to be made when the plaint discloses no cause of action against the parties sought to be newly added, Beema Rout v. Dasarathi, 40 C 323.

Under the terms of Or I, r. 10 (1) the circumstances under which a person can be added as a plaintiff in a suit are strictly limited. A defendant cannot ask to be made a plaintiff merely on the ground that he would have brought a suit, if he had thought of doing so; Amolak Rao v. Gobind Rao, 15 N L R 21: 49 I. C 34.

Where Suit Instituted in the Name of Wrong Plaintiff, etc.—Where a suit is instituted by a person having no right to institute it, in the bona fide belief that he is entitled to do so, the Court has power under this section to substitute the right person as plaintiff.—Krishna Bai v Collector of Tanjore, 30 M. 419: 2 M. L. T. 447.

A suit might be continued even where the original plaintiff had no right to sue, provided that the defective institution was due to a bona fide mistake, Perincheri v. Unnichennan, 69 I. C. 413. 1923 M 180 (30 M. 419 relied on).

Where a suit is instituted in the name of a wrong person as plaintiff by a bona fide mistake, the Court has power to substitute the names of the right persons as plaintiffs, and this power is not excluded in cases where the person originally had no right to institute the suit. The words of Or.

I, r. 10. "Where a suit has been instituted in the name of a wrong person as plaintiff" are comprehensive enough to include cases where the original plaintiff had no cause of action and their interpretation must not be restricted to cases where the plaintiff has some right to sue; Firm of Gerimal Harrison v. Firm of Raghunath Kalianji, 66 I C. 873, see also, Gundappa v. Manjappa, 2 Mys. L J. 1.

This section applies only to a suit and not an appeal filed in the name of wrong person —Dwarka Nath v. Devendra Nath, 4 C W. N. 58. But the language of s 107 has now been altered. See also, Gopal Das v. Budree Das, 33 C 657. 10 C. W. N 662, referred to in 12 C L. 537.

Where a plaint purports to be filed by a Municipal Board with the addition of the name of the chairman as plaintiff, the error is not one of substance but merely of form, and may be corrected under the provisions of Or. I, r. 10, C. P. Code, if the objection is taken in the trial Court; Shamsuddin Khan v. Agha Siyid Fateh Shah, 75 I C. 937.

This section authorizes substitution at any stage with the consent of the person substituted, provided that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute —Heinger v Droz, 25 B 433, p 464.

Where the plaintiffs sued to recover property belonging to the estate of a testator claiming to be his executors under a will, which contained no express nor implied appointment of executors, the plaint was amended on second appeal by substituting the adopted son as plaintiff, with one of the present plaintiffs as his next friend —Seshamma v Chennappa, 20 M. 467.

An Appellate Court has power to make an order under ss 27, 32 or 53, of the C P. Code, 1882 and in order to give effect to any of those sections, it can remand a case, Habib v. Baldeo, 23 A 167, see also, Meah Uzir v. Savai, 43 C 938

Sub-rule (2). Court's Power to add Parties.—Cases where Addition has been Allowed.—This rule provides for non-joinder or misjoinder of parties; for non-joinder or severance of several causes of action provision is made in Or. II, rr. 3, 6; Khader Saheb v. Chotibibi, 8 B. 616.

Or I, r. 10 (2), C P Code gives the Court power to add either as plaintiff or as defendant any person, whether already a party, as defendant or plaintiff so as to enable it effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, Mahomed Sirajuddin v Shah Ghulam Jailani, 59 I. C. 233.

Or. I, rr 3, 4 refer to the action of a plaintiff at the time of presentation of the plaint; but Or I, r 10 refers to the action of the Court at a stage subsequent to the presentation, in adding a party whose presence before the Court may be necessary to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit; Sailajananda v. Umeshanand, 4 C. W. N. 462.

The second defendant in a suit applied for leave to add a third party as defendant. The plaintiff objected Held, that the power to add a third party is discretionary, but is widely exercised even though the addition may add new issues. If however serious embarrassment or inconvenience be caused to the plaintiff, the addition is not effected; Balmukund Rina v. Bisson Doyal, 46 C. 48: 50 I. C. 51.

Where an application is made under Or. I, r. 10 for the addition of a person, whether as plaintiff or defendant, such person should as a general rule, be added only where there are questions directly arising out of, and incidental to, the original cause of action, in which such person has identity or community of interest with the original plaintiff or defendant.—Naraini v. Durjan, 2 A. 738. See also Mahomed Badsha v. Nicol Fleming, 4 C. 355: 2 C. L R. 330.

In a suit for recovery of arrears of rent instituted against one of the heirs of the original tenant whose name was recorded in the landlord's Sherista, the remaining heirs of the tenant were on their application added as parties to the suit. Held that although the added defendants were not strictly necessary parties to the adjudication of the question arising between the plaintiff and the original defendant, yet they were not improperly added as parties to the suit; Guru Prasanna v. Samiruddin, 44 I. C. 465.

The object of Or. I, r. 10 is to to enable the Court to try and determine, once for all, material questions common to the parties and to third parties, and not merely questions between the parties to the suit.—Vydianadayyan v. Sitaramayyan, 5 M. 52. But persons indirectly interested cannot be made parties; Pundit Rupchand v. Fateh Chand, 6 I. C. 36.

Where the presence of a party is necessary to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, such party should be added; Upendra v. Sheik Sobhan, 15 C. L. J. 6.

A legatee is entitled to sue an executor for a legacy bequeathed to him by a testator. In such a suit the executor may apply for his own protection that other legatees shall be made parties; and it is within the discretion of the Court to decide whether the addition of such parties is necessary under Or. I, r. 10 in order to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit.—Purshottam v. Kala Govindji, 26 B. 301.

In a suit to recover certain sums of money upon a contract entered into between the plaintiff and defendant through their agents, the defendants denied the alleged agency. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to add the agent as a party defendant, praying for relief against any one of them in the alternative —Buddree Doss v. Hoare Miller and Company, 8 C. 170.

In a partition suit all persons interested in the property to be divided must be brought before the Court. A purchaser or mortgagee of a coparcener's share is a necessary party —Sadu Bin v. Ram Bin, 16 B. 608; Kalikanta v. Gouri, 17 C. 906; Amrut v. Mukund 5 N. L. R. 150.

A person who would be represented by a party on the record and bound by the decision against that party is entitled to be impleaded under Or. I, r. 10 (2), C. P. Code to protect his interests; Rajaratnam v. Halasya sundaram, 44 M. L. J. 322: 72 I. C. 156.

Where a plaint purports to be filed by a Municipal Board with the addition of the name of the chairman as plaintiff, the error is not one of substance but merely of form, and may be corrected under the provisions of Or. I, r. 10, C. P Code, if the objection is taken in the trial Court; Shamsuddin Khan v. Agha Siyid Fateh Shah, 75 I. C. 937.

This section authorizes substitution at any stage with the consent of the person substituted, provided that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute.—Heinger v. Droz, 25 B. 433, p. 464.

Where the plaintiffs sued to recover property belonging to the estate of a testator claiming to be his executors under a will, which contained no express nor implied appointment of executors, the plaint was amended on second appeal by substituting the adopted son as plaintiff, with one of the present plaintiffs as his next friend.—Seshamma v. Chennappa, 20 M. 467.

An Appellate Court has power to make an order under ss. 27, 32 or 53, of the C. P. Code, 1882 and in order to give effect to any of those sections, it can remand a case; Habib v. Baldeo, 23 A. 167; see also, Meah Uzir v. Savai, 43 C. 938.

Sub-rule (2). Court's Power to add Parties.—Cases where Addition has been Allowed.—This rule provides for non-joinder or misjoinder of parties; for non-joinder or severance of several causes of action provision is made in Or II, rr. 3, 6; Khader Saheb v. Chotibibi, 8 B. 616.

Or. I, r 10 (2), C P. W. N. 462.

The second defendant in a suit applied for leave to add a third party as defendant. The plaintiff objected. Held, that the power to add a third party is discretionary, but is widely exercised even though the addition may add new issues. If however serious embarrassment or inconvenience be caused to the plaintiff, the addition is not effected; Balmukund Rina v. Bisson Doyal, 46 C. 48: 50 I. C. 51.

Where an application is made under Or. In a suit for recovery of arrears of rent instituted against one of the heirs of the original tenant whose name was recorded in the landlord's Sherista, the remaining heirs of the tenant were on their application added as parties to the suit. Held that although the added defendants were not strictly necessary parties to the adjudication of the question arising between the plaintiff and the original defendant, yet they were not improperly added as parties to the suit; Guru Prasanna v. Samiruddin, 44 I. C. 465.

The object of Or I, r. 10 is to to enable the Court to try and determine, once for all, material questions common to the parties and to third parties, and not merely questions between the parties to the suit.—Vydianadayyan v. Sitaramayyan, 5 M. 52. But persons indirectly interested cannot be made parties; Pundit Rupchand v. Fateh Chand, 6 I. C. 36.

In a suit to recover certain sums of money upon a contract entered into between the plaintiff and defendant through their agents, the defendants denied the alleged agency. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to add the agent as a party defendant, praying for relief against any one of them in the alternative.—Buddree Doss v. Hoare Miller and Company, 8 C. 170.

In a partition suit all persons interested in the property to be divided must be brought before the Court A purchaser or mortgagee of a coparcener's share is a necessary party.—Sadu Bin v. Ram Bin, 16 B. 608; Kalikanta v. Gouri, 17 C. 906; Amrut v. Mukund 5 N. L. R. 150.

The representatives of three out of four Hindus who were joint shebaits sued to have an alienation made by the fourth shebait alone set aside; they did not make the latter a party to the suit. Held, that he was a necessary party.—Rajendro Nath v. Mahomed Lal, 8 C. 42.

In a suit under s. 92, C. P. Code for removal of a hereditary trustee, the son of the defendant is entitled to be added as a party defendant and it is open to a Court under Or. I, r. 10 to add a party as defendant in the suit as in any other suit, Vythialingam v. Ramalingam, (1917) M. W. N. 550. 6 L. W. 9 (36 B. 168 dissented from; 36 M. 264, 21 M. L. As a general rule all co-contractors ought to be joined as plaintiffs, but where there are three co-contractors or three co-sharers, two of them co-plaintiffs and the other a co-defendant, the suit ought not to be dismissed simply because it has not been shown that the co-sharer defendant has refused to join as a co-plaintiff.—Pyari Mohan v. Nobin Chunder, 26 C. 409, F. B.

In a suit upon a bond, of which the obligor was therein described as the manager of a Muth, the defendants were the sons of the obligor (since deceased). Held, that the representatives of the Muth were rightly added as defendans, Thirthasami v. Gopala, 13 M. 32.

Cases where Addition of Parties has Not been Allowed.—Where the plaintiffs refused to add the receiver as a party with the leave of the Court appointing him, although they had notice of such appointment, the Court was not bound to add him as a party of its own motion, Jotindra v. Sarfaraj, 14 C. W. N. 653.

Persons who according to the plaintiff in a partition suit have no interest whatsoever in the suit properties need not be made parties. The words "question involved in the suit" do not mean all claims which may possibly be put forward by anybody. Rr. 9 and 10 of Or. 1 I should be construed together; Sitaramaya v. Ramappaya, 5 L. W. 207.

This rule does not empower a Court on finding that a plaintiff must fail, to import into the case as co-plaintiff, a person who has a different cause of action inconsistent with that of the original plaintiff, and who moreover has not paid court-fees on the new claim. Maung Shew Paw v. Mi Pan Zi, 31 I. C. 332. See also Bhima Rout v. Durga Prosad, 17 C. L. R. 183 p. 186. 40 C. 323 p. 330.

This section does not authorize the Court to introduce into a suit as a defendant, a person who claims the property in the suit by a title quite distinct from that under which any of the parties to the suit claims,—Kalian

Rai v. Ram Ratan, 18 A. 306. See Joygobind v. Gouree Proshad, 7 W. R. 201. But see Saroda Pershad v. Kylash Chunder, 7 W. R. 315.

This section as far as addition of plaintiffs is concerned, only applies to those cases in which the original party who brings the suit has some title to sue. But if a plaintiff at the time he brings his suit has no interest in the subject-matter thereof, the joinder of a person as a co-plaintiff who has an interest cannot alter the plaintiff's position or confer on him any right to sue —Chunder Coomer v. Gocool Chunder, 6 C. 370. See also, Bhanu v. Kasinath, 20 B. 537; and Subbaiyar v. Kristnaiyar, 1 M. 383; Koegler v. Prosunno Coomar, 2 C. 472. See, however, Bahola Pershad v. Ram Lal, 24 C. 34, in which a different view seems to have been taken, and Abdullah v. Abdul, 13 I. C. 350, reversing 11 I. C. 223

A defendant who has assigned all his interests in the subject-matter of the suit, and has no longer any interest in it, has no right to be made a co-plaintiff. A plaintiff who has no right of action when he brings his suit can not remedy the defect and acquire the right by joining with him persons who have the right of action.—Sayad Abdul Hak v. Gulam Jilani, 20 B. 677.

In an ejectment suit by a landlord against his tenant, the Court should not bring on the record the person from whom the plaintiff holds the land, nor persons claiming to hold it from a third party, nor such third party.—Sankaran v. Ananthanarayan, 20 M. 375.

Parties should not be added in a suit for rent so as to change it into a suit for title though questions of title may be incidentally investigated in a suit for arrears of rent, Abdul Gafur v. Ali Miah, 28 C. W. N. 805 82 I. C. 369: A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 26.

In a suit for rent defendant alleged that a third person had a joint interest with the plaintiff in the property in respect of which rent was due Held that it was improper to add him as co-plaintiff, and if added at all it should be as defendant,—Google v. Prem Lall, 7 C. 148.

Where joint tenants are jointly and severally liable to pay the whole rent, the Court has discretionary power to order the other tenants to be added as co-defendants, where some only are sued; but where the whereabouts of other tenants are not known, the Court is right in not making other tenants parties; Livingstone v. Feroz Din, 107 P. R (1914): 203 P. L R. 1915

In a suit for specific performance of a contract, a stranger to the contract cannot be made a party to the suit.—Luckumsey Ookerda v Fazulla, 5 B 177. In Mokund Lall v. Chotay Lall, 10 C. 1061, it has been held that the principle laid down in 5 B. 177, is only applicable where from the plaintiff's case it appears that a third party, not a party, to the contract, has a distinct interest from that of the other parties to the contract, which interest is sought to be declared null and void. See, however, Alagappa Mudaliar v. Sivarama Sundara, 19 M 211.

Where the defendant accepted the pattah from, and executed a muchlaka to plaintiff in respect of his share, the plaintiff need not join his co-sharers as parties in a suit to enforce acceptance of pattah and enforcement of muchlaka.—Purushattama v. Raju, 11 M. 11.

Court's Power of Substitution.—Where the plaintiff prays for substitution of a person as heir of the defendant who has died, the judge should raise an issue as to whether the person is the heir of the deceased.—Kanai Lall v. Sashi Bhusan, 6 C. 777: 8 C. L. R. 117 A person before substitution should satisfy that he is the representative of the deceased; Md. Husain v. Khusal, 9 A. 131.

Or. I. r. 10, of the C. P Code gives very wide powers to a Court in the matter of substituting or adding a plaintiff. The power is, however, only to be exercised if the Court is satisfied that the suit was instituted through a bona fide mistake; Gusaun Lal v. Ram Rakha Mal, 50 I. C. 128.

It is not correct to substitute the assignee of the original plaintiff as the plaintiff on the record, the proper course being to add him as a party-plaintiff if he desires it —Sushee Bhusan v. Muddon Mohun, 2 C. L. R. 297.

A sued his brother for his share of the estate of their deceased father. A having been transported for life, his sons applied to be made plaintiffs on the ground that they had a joint interest with their father. Held that the sons were properly added as plaintiffs —Byreddi v. Chinna, 6 M. 331

Court's Power of Striking off Parties.—An order striking the name of a defendant off the record of a suit cannot be made under this section at a period subsequent to the first hearing of the suit —Abbasi Begum v. Im-Dadijan, 18 A. 53 See also, Singa Reddi v Madava Rau, 20 M. 360, p. 362; and Nanak Chand v Durant, 9 P. R. 1906 19 P. L. R. 1906, where it has been held that the Court has no power, of its own motion without application to strike out the name of one of the plaintiffs after the first hearing. See also, Khader v Chotibibi, 8 B. 616.

An application for striking out the names of certain defendants placed on the record as heirs of a deceased defendant and for substitution of the names of certain others as executors of the said deceased is an application under the section; Syed Hossein Ali v. Abdur Rahim, 7 C. W. N. 529.

Court's Power of Transposition of Parties.—Or. I, r 10 of the C P. Code authorizes the Court to make an order for transfer of a party from the category of the defendant to that of plaintiff, at any stage of the proceedings The power of the Court depends on the question whether the case is sub judice. The Courts have always been reluctant to place a narrow construction upon this provision of the law and to restrict the exercise of this discretionary power; Debendra v. Narendra, 24 C W. N. 110: 30 C. L. J. 417. But the Court should not make an order transferring a defendant to the category of plaintiffs, if the result of so doing would be to change the character of the suit; Jagabandhu v. Haris, 36 C. L. J 92·A. I. R. 1922 C. 459: 76 I. C. 915.

Under Or. 1, r. 10 (2) and s 107 C P. Code, the appellate Court has the power to transpose a respondent to the category of appellants in order to further the ends of justice; Surjya Kanta v. Tarak Nath, 44 C. L. J. 243: A I. R. 1927 C. 37.

A Court can under this section add parties to a suit as well as transpose a party from his position as pro forma defendant, and array him amongst the plaintiffs after amendment of the plaint.—Pitambar v. Toolsee, 7 W. R. 39 Municipal Council of Kumbakonam v. Veeraperumal, 28 M. L. J. 147: (1915) M. W. N. 143.

The Court has jurisdiction in an administration suit (if it be found that the original plaintiff has no right of suit) to make one of the defendants entitled to share, as party plaintiff. It is not necessary to find bona fide mistake for the Court to act under Or. I, r. 10 of the C. P. Code; Bhimangowd v. Eswara Gowd, 9 L. W. 79: (1918) M. W. N. 929: 49 I. C. 189.

Where in a partition suit, the plaintiff withdraws his claim for moveables after a preliminary decree by consent had been passed as regards the immoveable properties, and the Court subsequently allowed the transposition of some of the defendants as plaintiffs and allowed the suit to proceed regarding the moveables. Held, that the procedure adopted was correct and fell within the provisions of Or. I, r. 10; Surampalli Ramamurthi v. Surampalli Reddi, 12 L. W. 563.

It is true that the provision of s 32 of the Code of 1882, that the Court might make a plaintiff a defendant, and a defendant a plaintiff has been omitted from the present Code; but, it was omitted as redundant as the provision of Or. I, r. 10 (2) for striking out or adding parties is sufficient to cover the case of such a transposition, being, in effect, the striking one party off the side of the suit in which he had been placed and re-adding him in the opposite side; such transpositions are frequent in partnership cases; Brojendra Kumar v. Gobinda Mohan, 20 C. W. N. 752 (7 B. 167 and 20 B. 677 referred to).

In a suit for partnership accounts one of the defendants filed his written statement supporting the plaintiffs. He was made a plaintiff by order of the Court —Muthia Chetti v. A. V. Subramaniem, 18 C. 616.

Striking out Name of Party Improperly Joined.—The introducing a party who has no connection with the relief claimed in the plaint is an instance of such impropriety; Rama Rao v. The Raja of Pittapur, 42 M. 219, 49 I. C. 835.

" Who ought to have been joined."—Necessary parties are parties " who ought to have been joined," that is parties in whose absence no decree at all can be passed; Kishen Prasad v. Har Narain, 33 A 272; Shaha Sahib v. Sadasiv, 43 B. 575 Proper parties are those whose presence is necessary to enable the Court to adjudicate upon the matter in dispute more effectually and completely, Shaha Sahib v. Sadasiv, 43 B. 575: 51 I. C. 223; Guruvayya v. Anandt, 28 B. 11, 17, Sri Mahant v. Board of Commissioners of Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras, 51 M. L. J. 148: A. I. R. 1926 M. 927.

" Whose presence before the Court may be necessary."—A person whose presence is necessary for a complete and final decision of the question involved in the suit may be added as a defendant, though no relief may be claimed against him; Khasi v. Sadashiv, 21 B. 229

Misdescription of Defendant.—Where there is a misdescription of a defendant in the cause title of a suit, the Court has complete power to make the necessary correction without any regard to lapse of time; Manni v. Crooke, 2 A 296, Saraspur Manufacturing Co. v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co., 47 B. 785: A. I R. 1923 B. 452 But where in a suit against a Railway Company, the plaint described the defendant as the " Agent " of the Railway Company, and where subsequently the plaintiff sought to amend the plaint by bringing the Company on the record. Held, that it was not a case of misdescription and so no amendment should be allowed after the expiry of the period of limitation for the suit, Agent, B. N. Ry. v. Behari Lal, 52 C. 783. A I R 1925 C 716, East Indian Ry. Co. v. Ram Lakhan, 3 Pat. 230. A. I. R 1925 Pat. 37

"Questions involved in the suit."—The words "questions involved in the suit" in Or. I. r 10 do not mean all claims which may possibly be put forward by anybody to the property. Order I rr. 9 and 10, should be construed together. Where a Court directs the addition of parties under Or. I r. 10, the plaintiff must obey the order of the Court and cannot proceed with the suit as originally constituted Persons who, according to the plaintiff and the defendant, have no interest in the properties ought not to be directed to be made parties by the Court to a partition suit The question is one of jurisdiction and not discretion The High Court will interfere in revision and set aside the order in order to relieve a party from embarrassment; Sitaramayya v. Ramappaya, 5 L. W. 207: 39 I. C. 160.

"Questions involved in the suit" refer to questions as between plaintiffs and defendants, and not to questions which may arise between co-plaintiffs or or co-defendants inter se, Har Narayan v Kharag, 9 A. 447; Vithu v. Bhenia, 15 B 145; Sri Mahant v Board of Commissioners of Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras, 51 M L J 148 A I R 1926 M. 927; Vythilinga v Sadasiva, (1926) M. W N 575 A. I. R. 1926 M. 836.

Application to be Added as Party.—This rule does not contemplate any application to the Court by the person proposed to be added — Mohindra Bhusan v. Shoshee Bhoosan, 5 C. 882

A Court may in the exercise of its discretion under this rule add a party on his own application —Rabbaba v Noorjehan, 13 C 90

Power to Add Parties after Decree.—A suit for partition, even where the report of the Commissioner is confirmed, is a pending litigation until the Court signs the final decree, and an order directing a party to be added under this rule can be made in such a suit before it has actually terminated —Jotindra Mohan v Bejoy Chand, 32 C 483. See Lakhmichand v Gulabchand, 35 B 393

Powers of the addition of parties are exercisable even after a suit has been reinstated on an application under s 103, C P Code, 1882.—Tikam Singh v. Thakur Kishore, 18 A 188

It is not competent to a Court in a mortgage suit, to make a person who was not a party to the preliminary decree, a party to the final decree where such person should have been made a defendant before the previous preliminary decree; Or I, r 10, C. P. Code, refers to a stage of the proceedings not concluded by a decree, Raghu Nath v Sheolal, 13 N. L R. 69; 39 I. C. 849; dissented from in Krishna Iyer v. Subramanya, 46 M. L. J. 368. Beni Madho v Yusuf Hasain Khan, 26 O C. 317: 10 O. L. J. 232: 72 I. C. 1031.

Suit against a Dead Person.—When a suit is instituted against a person who was dead prior to such institution, the plaint cannot be amended by bringing his legal representative on the record, because a suit against a dead man is a nullity from the first; Ram Protap v. Gauri Shankar, 25 Bom. L. R. 7 11: A. I. R. 1924 B. 109; Veerappa v. Tindal, 31 M. 86.

Appellate Court's Power under this Rule.—An Appellate Court has power to make an order under this rule, and in order to give effect to any of the provisions of the above rule it is necessary that it should in certain cases send back the case to the Court of first instance.—Habib Baksh v. Baldeo Prosad, 23 A. 167. An appellate Court has power to add necessary parties.—Mammali v. Pakki, 7 M. 428.

Under section 107 (2) of the C. P. Code, the appellate Court has the same powers as are conferred on Courts of original jurisdiction, including the powers given by this section; see the cases noted under s. 107.

An appellate Court has power to strike out the name of a party or to direct new parties, to be added to the suit, whether as plaintiffs or defendants—Vasudeb Bal Krishna v. Salubai, 10 B 227.

The Court on second appeal is competent to bring on the record persons who had been originally joined in the suit, but not in the lower appellate Court.—Paya Malathil v. Kavamel Amina, 19 M. 151. But see, Chuni v. Lala Ram, 16 A. 6; see also Pachhauri v Ram Khilawan, 37 A. 57.

In a second appeal pending in the High Court, the plaintiffs-appellants applied to transfer defendants Nos 4 and 5 with their consent to the category of plaintiffs for continuing the suit for their benefit as well as defendants 4 and 5 Held, that the application could not be granted, as, if granted, it would be necessary for the added plaintiffs to discard the entire evidence on the record and succeed on a case which was contradictory to the evidence put forward; Jagabandhu v. Harischandra, 36 C. L. J 92.

Where an appellate Court is of opinion that a person not a party to the suit should be a party to the record, its proper course is to remand the case to supply the defect of parties.—Mihun Lal v. Intiaz Ali, 18 A. 332.

Where a person other than the person alleged by the appellant claims to be legal representative of a deceased respondent, the Court should under the rule proceed to make such claimant also a party to the appeal.—Athiappa v. Ayanna, 8 M. 300 But in Vithu v. Bhima, 15 B. 145, following Bhagirthibai v. Baya, 5 B 264, and Hara Narain v. Kharak Singh, 9 A. 557, it has been held that where rival parties claim to be the representatives of a deceased plaintiff, they cannot all be admitted on the record as legal representatives, of the deceased plaintiff. In Muhammad Husain v. Kassalo, 10 A. 223 (F. B.), it has been held that when a plaintiff-respondent dies pending appeal, and a party on his own application is substituted as his legal representative, and subsequently the defendant-appellants apply to substitute another person as his true legal representative, the Court should, either before or at the hearing of the appeal, ascertain and determine for the purposes of the prosecution of the appeal which of such persons is the true legal representative of the deceased appellant See also, Oula v Beepathe, 7 M. 209.

Right of Appeal against an order under this Rule.—Under the present Code no appeal is allowed from orders passed under this rule; but the order passed under this rule may be objected to in an appeal from the final decree that is, any error, defect or irregularity in an order affecting the decision of the case may be set forth as a ground of objection in the memorandum of appeal; see notes and cases under section 105.

Orders passed under Or. I, r. 10 joining a person as plaintiff are in the discretion of the Court and are not appealable; Bibijan Bibi v. Abdul Jabbar, 36 I. C. 919.

Order if subject to Revision.—An order refusing to add a party as a defendant is not subject to revision under s. 115 But the High Court may interfere under s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, if there is a denial of the right of fair trial; Rabbaba v. Noorjehan, 13 C. 90; Kali Rai v. Tulsi Ram, 4 Pat 723: A. I. R 1925 Pat 207· 93 I. C. 932.

Sub-rule (3)—A Person cannot be made a Plaintiff without his Consent.—No person can be added as a plaintiff unless he has previously consented thereto; and, if a person objects to be added as a plaintiff, the proper course is to make him a defendant —Uma Sundari v Ramji Haldar, 7 C. 242; 9 C. L R 13 A person cannot be made a plaintiff against his will —Beharee Lall v Radha Nath, 22 W R 229 But in Tara Chunder v. Ameer Mundul, 22 W. R 394, it has been held that persons might be made co-plaintiffs without their consent

Sub-rule (4)—Where Defendant is added Plaint should be Amended.—This rule does not contemplate that upon the addition of defendants to a suit, a cause of action different from that upon which the suit is founded, which may have accrued to the plaintiff against the added defendants, should be added to the claim All that the section requires is, that when a defendant is added the plaint should be amended in such manner as may be necessary The amendment therein referred to is not such an amendment as would add to or alter the nature of the suit as originally brought —Hingu Lal v Baldeo Ram, 24 A. 553

Amendment of plaint by bringing the proper party as plaintiff cannot relate back to date anterior to application to add party; and if such application was made after the right to sue was barred, such amendment should not be allowed, the mistake should be corrected before the limitation period of the suit expires, Subbaraya v Vaithinatha, 33 M 115; 7 M. L. T. 185

Sub-rule (5)—Addition of Plaintiff—Limitation.—In actions upon contracts, all persons, in whom the right to any relief exists should be joined as plaintiffs, and if the suit is originally brought by some one of them, and others are joined when the suit as regards them is time-barred, the whole suit must be taken as barred —Kalidas Kevaldas v. Nathubhagvan, 7 B. 221. (3 C. 26, dissented from); Ram Sebuk v. Ram Lall, 6 C. 815: 8 C. L. R. 457. (3 C · 26 dissented from) Followed in Ramdayal v. Junmejoy, 14 C. 791; Fatmabhai v. Pirbhai Virji, 21 B. 580, Imamuddin v. Liladhar, 14 A. 524. Referred to in Lutchmanen v. Siva Prokasa, 26 C. 349: 3 C. W. N. 100. But in Shirekuli Timapa v. Ajjibal Narashim, 15 B. 297, it has been held that when necessary parties are added after the expiry of the period of limitation, the suit should not be wholly dismissed where objection for want of parties was not taken by the defendant, nor any issue was framed on the point. See also, Guruvayya

v. Dattatraya, 28 B. 11; followed in Bhola Ray v. Jung Bahadur, 19 C. L. J. 5 (14 C. 400 doubted); Pateshri Narain v. Rudra Narain, 26 A. 528, and Thakurmani Singh v. Dai Rani Koeri, 33 C. 1079. See, Srirangachariar v. Rama Sami, 18 M. 189, in which it has been held that the whole suit is not liable to be dismissed. In Jagdeo Singh v. Padarath Ahir, 25 C. 285, it has been held that the rules laid down in the above cases do not apply to actions upon torts. See also, Harihar Pershad v. Bholi Pershad, 6 C. L. J. 383. In Ram Krishna v. Ramabai, 17 B. 29, it has been held that when application to make co-plaintiffs is made within time, but they are joined after the prescribed period of limitation, the suit is not time-barred, as the delay on the part of the Court in granting the application cannot prejudice the interests of the parties.

In a suit instituted within the prescribed period of limitation, the plaintiff assigned his interests, and the assignees were substituted on the record in the place of the original plaintiff after the said period had expired. Held that the suit was barred by limitation.—Harak Chand v. Deonath, 25 C. 409. (5 C. 720, distinguished). See, however, Ram Nath v. Uma Churan, 3 C. W. N. 756, and Janhabi v. Brojomohini, 7 C. W. N. 817.

Substitution of Plaintiff—Bona fide mistake—Limitation.—The change of parties as plaintiffs in conformity with the provisions of this section, does not give rise to such a question of limitation as arises upon the addition of a new person as a defendant under Or. I, r. 10.—Subodhini Debi v. Ganoda Kanta, 14 C. 400. Followed in Ravji v. Mahadeo, 22 B. 672 and in Nistarini v. Sarat Chandra, 22 C. L. J. 279: 20 C. W. N. 49. Distinguished in Fatamabai v. Pirbhai, 21 B. 580 and doubted in 19 C. L. J. 5 and in 33 M. 115.

Where persons are added as plaintiffs under this rule the period of limitation counts from the date when the suit was originally instituted.—Behari Lal v. Ram Chand, 149 P. R. (1907)

A suit to recover a debt due to a firm was brought in the name of the firm by its manager, but on the objection of the defendants a partner was subsequently joined as co-plaintiff Held that the case was one of misdescription and not of misjoinder, and therefore the provisions of s. 22 of the Limitation Act did not apply, and subsequent addition of a partner's name came within the provisions of this section —Kasturchand v Sagarmal, 17 B. 413. Followed in Vadi Lal v. Sha Khushal, 27 B. 157.

Addition, Substitution or Transposition of Parties—Limitation.—Where a pro forma defendant is subsequently made a plaintiff, s. 22 of the Limitation Act does not apply, as the added plaintiff is not a " new plaintiff "—Nagendrabala v. Tarapada, 8 C. L. J. 286: 13 C. W N. 186: 35 C. 1065. See also Dwarkanath v. Monmohun, 21 C. L J. 611: 19 C. W. N. 1269: 38 C. 342: 18 C. L. J. 3; 34 B. 91. But see, Jibanti Nath v. Gokool Chundra 19 C. 760; Sundrammal v. Rangasami, 18 M. 189, p. 192, and Krishna v. Mekamperuma, 10 M. 44.

Where a party is added on application, the addition must be deemed to have effect from the date of application; South India Industrial Ld. v. Mothy Narasimha, 52 M. L. J. 199: 25 M. L. W. 477: 100 I. C. 680: A. I. R. 1927 M. 468 (17 B. 29 folld; A. I. R. 1925 M. 487 dissented from).

The provisions of section 22 of the Limitation Act, 1877, do not apply to cases of persons who are brought upon the record as pro forma defendants.—Mohamed Ishaq v. Sheikh Akramul Huq, 12 C. W. N. 84.

A Court may, under section 32, C. P. Code 1882 add a party necessary to a suit, although it may be obliged by the Limitation Act to dismiss the whole suit on account of the claim being barred with regard to the party so added.—Imamuddin v. Ladadhar, 14 A. 524 See also, Dari Bhagavanlu v. Tadepatri, 33 M. 246, p. 249

There is no provision in either the C P. Code or the Limitation Act which says that a party cannot be added after his right of suit or liability to be sued (as the case may be) is barred by the provisions of the Limitation Act; Shivubai Rajaram v. Shiddeswar Martand, 45 B. 1009. 23 Bom. L. R. 405.

A suit was brought for partnership accounts Upon the objection of the defendant it was found that a necessary party defendant had been omitted, and he was added at a time when the suit against him was barred. Held, that the whole suit was rightly dismissed.—Ram Dayal v Junmenjoy 14 C. 791. See also Ambica Charan v Taraichandra, 18 C. W N. 464.

Where a relief was originally claimed against a party who had to be represented by some person, the proper representation of that party subsequently made has not the effect of adding a new defendant to the suit.—Peary Mohon v. Norendra Nath, 32 C 582 · 9 C W N 421 affirmed in 37. C 229 P. C See also, Virchand v. Konde, 17 Bom L R 685 · 39 B. 792.

Substitution of executor in place of the legal representative of a deceased testator, against whom the suit was originally brought, is not addition of a new defendant within the meaning of s 22 of the Limitation Act, 1877.—Mohunt Pudmalall v Lukhmi Ram, 12 C W N 8.

Where in a suit a person is added as defendant at the instance of the Court after the prescribed period of limitation, s 22 of the Limitation Act, 1877, bars the plaintiff's remedy as against the added defendant.—Ramkinkar v. Akhil Chandra, 35 C 519, F B. See also, Imam Ali v Baij Nath, 33 C 613, Jagat v. Udit, 20 I C 262 But see, Guruvayya v Dattatraya, 28 B 11 and Pateshri v Rudra, 26 A. 528 and Khadir v. Rama, 17 M. 12.

In a suit to recover the price of work done to the Government, a servant was originally made the defendant, and the Secretary of State was subsequently added as a defendant. Held, that for the purpose of limitation against the Secretary of State, the suit should be considered to have been instituted on the date when he was made a party.—Mandardhar Aitch v. Secretary of State, 6 C. W. N 218.

Held, by the Full Bench that it is competent to a Court sitting under s. 559, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XLI, r. 20), to add a person as respondent in an appeal, although the time within which an appeal might have been preferred as against such person has expired.—Bindeshri Naik v. Ganga Saran, 14 A. 154. See also, Court of Wards v. Gaya Prasad, 2 A 108, and Ranjit Singh v. Sheo Prasad, 2 A. 487.

Other cases.—A Revenue Court has power to add or dismiss parties under this section notwithstanding that the provisions of this section are not made applicable to the procedure of the Revenue Court, by N. W. P. Rent Act XVIII of 1878,—Shib Gopal v. Baldeo Sahai, 2 A. 264.

This section does not apply to the case of substitution, dismissed or addition of parties in divorce proceedings.—Ramsay v. Boyle, 30 C. 489.

11. The Court may give the conduct of the suit to such person as it deems proper. [S. 32, last para.]

Conduct of suit.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to the last para. of s. 32 of the old Code and has been taken from English Or. XVI, r. 39. The word "person" has been substituted for the word "plaintiff." The effect of the substitution is that the Court may now give the conduct of the suit to one of the plaintiffs or it may give the conduct of the defence to one of the defendants.

The general rule is that the conduct of the case should rest with the plaintiff, but the matter is in the discretion of the Court with which the Appellate Court should not interfere except on very strong grounds; Re Swire, 21 Ch. D. 647.

12. (1) Where there are more plaintiffs than one, any one or more of them may be authorized by any other of them to appear, plead or act for such other in any proceeding; and in like manner, where there are more defendants than one, any one or more of them may be authorized by any other of them to appear, plead or act for such other in any proceeding.

Appearance of one of several plaintiffs or defendants for others.

(2) The authority shall be in writing signed by the party giving it and shall be filed in Court. [S. 35.]

This rule exactly corresponds to s 35 of the Code of 1882; "where" has been substituted for "when" in the beginning. Or. III, r. 1, provides for appearance through recognised agents and pleaders.

Where one of several representatives of a deceased joint-creditor applies for the execution of a decree, a general power-of-attorney is not necessary, but it is sufficient if the applicant is authorized to act for the other representatives —Ambaram v Hemat Singh, 2 Bom H. C 103.

13. All objections on the ground of non-joinder or misjoinder of parties shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and, in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement, unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived. [S. 34.]

Objections as to non-joinder or misjoinder.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 34 of the Code of 1882 with some change. The words "unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen" are important and they will be clearly understood when read with Or. VIII, r. 8, which says that any ground of defence which has arisen after the institution of the suit, may be raised by the defendant or plaintiff in his written statement; see, Shyama Charan v. Mokshoda, 15 C. W. N. 703 (704): 13 C. L. J. 481 (484). Misjoinder of causes of action is dealt with in Or. 11, r. 7.

Objections as to Non-Joinder or Misjoinder should be Taken at the Earliest Opportunity.—All objections as to non-joinder of parties must be taken at the very earliest opportunity. Where the defendants took such an objection at a very early stage, and the suit was barred when the parties were added as against them. Held that the suit might proceed as if it was not barred.—Hazari Mal v. Bhawani Ram, 5 A. L. J. 554: 30 A. 538; Kaliyanna Goundan v. Tima Nicken, 41 I. C. 527.

Objection for want of parties should be taken before the first hearing; Raj Narain Bose v. Universal Life Assurance & Co., 7 C. 594 (603); and at the earliest possible opportunity.—Mohini Mohun v. Bungsi Buddan, 17 C. 580 (P. C). See also, Purshottam v. Kala Govindji, 26 B. 301; Sitaramayya v. Ramappaya, 5 L. W. 207: 39 I. C. 160.

An objection as to non-joinder of parties cannot be allowed to be raised after settlement of issues; Kollichina Venkataramayya v. Gudavalli, 25 I. C. 222.

Objections as to Non-joinder or Misjoinder should Not be Allowed to be Taken for the First Time in Appeal.—This section requires that all objections for want of misjoinder or non-joinder of parties should be raised at the earliest possible stage and cannot be raised in appeal; Parmasiva v. Krishna, 14 M. 498 (500); Fakirapa v. Rudrapa, 16 B. 119; Purshottam v. Kala, 26 B. 301; Malaguri Garudiah v. Narayana, 3 M. 359; Tulsha v. Gopal Rai, 6 A. 632, and Hira Lal v. Ram Jas, 6 A. 57; Obhoy Gobind v. Hurry Churn, 8 C. 277; Kannu Kurup v. Sankata Varma Raja, 44 M. 344: 40 M. L. J. 282. But in Ghulam Kadir v. Mustakim Khan, 18 A. 109, objection to non-joinder was allowed to be taken for the first time in appeal.

The objection as to non-joinder of parties is not essential, but merely formal, and weight should not be attached to it when it is first taken on second appeal.—Moidin Kutti v. Krishnan, 10 M. 322; Boydonath v. Girish Chunder, 3 C. 26; see Dursun Singh v. Durbejoy, 9 C. L. J. 623; Bhaja Chowdhury v. Chuni Lal, 5 C. L. J. 59.

An objection as to mis-joinder will not be allowed to be raised in second appeal even though it was raised in the pleadings but the objection was not pressed in either of the Courts below; Kuppuswami v. Narasimha Iyer, 21 M. L. T. 382: (1917) M. W. N. 333: 38 I. C. 715.

Waiver of Objection.—A defendant cannot be deemed to have waived the objection for want of parties by not having taken it before the first hearing. The expression "first hearing" in this section means the earliest opportunity which a defendant may have of raising any question as to want of parties.—Imamuddin v. Liladhar, 14 A. 524, p. 526.

Where the objection was not taken at the earliest opportunity, it must be deemed to have been waived; Paramsiva v. Krishna, 14 M. 498; Purshottam v. Kala, 26 B. 801; Debi Saran v. Mahabir, 7 I. "Unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen."—These words are new but the principle was acted upon previously; for instance, where, after the first hearing and before decree, a co-parcener or remainderman or reversioner is born, or where a woman (who is a party) is married to a man who is not party to the suit, or where adoption takes place after institution of suit; Modhe v. Dongre, 5 B. 609. See also, Dhurm Das v. Shama Sundari, 3 M. ORDER II.

FRAME OF SUIT.

Frame of suit.

1. Every suit shall as far as practicable be framed so as to afford ground for final decision upon the subjects in dispute and to prevent further litigation concerning them. [S. 42.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule exactly corresponds to s. 42 of the Code of 1882.

Object and Scope of the Rule.—This rule enjoins that every suit shall be so framed as to prevent further litigation on the subject-matter in dispute. See, Lala Surja Prosad v. Golab Chand, 27 C. 724 p. 761; it is the intention of the Legislature that all matters in dispute between the parties relating to the same transaction, should be disposed of in the same suit.—Saral Chand v. Mohun Bibi, 25 C. 371: 2 C. W. N. 201. The phrase " subjects in dispute," as has been fully explained in Ramaswami V. Vythinatha, 26 M. 760: 13 M. L. J. 448 signifies the jural relation between the parties to the suit, for the determination of which the suit is brought. The object of the rule is to require the plaintiff to bring forward his whole case as to the matter of litigation on the question of right involved in the suit and not to require him to unite all the causes of action which he may have against the defendant in respect of the corpus or subject-matter of the suit. Or. II, rr. 1 and 2 are not exhaustive of the law of res judicata.

This case has been followed in Masilamania v. Thiruvengadam, 31 M. 385, in which it has been held that where a person whose suit for recovery of property as reversioners on an alleged relationship to a person was dismissed, subsequently brought a suit for the same property as reversioner to the same person under a different kind of relationship, held, that the subsequent suit was barred and that the plaintiff was bound under this rule to frame his suit in which manner as to afford ground for a final decision as to his claim as reversioner and to prevent further litigation concerning it. The object of this rule is to require the plaintiff to bring forward his whole case as to the matter of litigation on the question of right involved in the suit. The expression " subjects in dispute " means the subject of litigation, that is the right which one party claims as against the other and demands the judgment of the Court. A plaintiff should always state in his plaint all grounds of attack on which he can claim the same relief against the same defendants: such grounds, may be cumulative, each entitling him to the relief claimed, or may be urged in the plaint in the alternative. The trial of the claim in the alternative in one suit would tend to avoid a multiplicity of suits; Narendra Nath v. Abhaya Charan, 4 C. L. J. 437: 11 C. W. N. 20: 34 C. 51 F. B.

Where a person claims as heir to a person, the "matter" within the meaning of the rule is heirship, and he is bound to include in one suit all the different grounds on which he bases his heirship, "as far as practicable". It will not be practicable to join in one suit the different grounds only when the evidence in support of one ground will be destructive of the other.

This rule is to be read with Explanation IV to s. 11 of the Code, which says that every ground which could or ought to have been urged in support of the claim actually made in the suit shall be deemed to have been adjudicated upon therein whether it was actually urged or not. Failure to frame the suit in such a manner as to afford ground for a final decision upon the subjects in dispute is punished by Explanation IV to s. 11 or by the next rule of this Order.

Joinder of Causes of Action.—Where a number of persons made defamatory allegation against the plaintiff, a suit against all of them to recover damages for defamation will not lie, unless it is proved that the defendants made those allegations acting together, as each publication of libel or slander is a distinct tort and a separate suit would lie against every person uttering and publishing the slander; Digambar Das v. Bisweswar, 41 I. C. 1 2.

Suit to include the whol claim.

2. (1) Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action; but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court.

Relinquishment of part of claim.

(2) Where a plaintiff omits to sue in respect of, or intentionally relinquishes, any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished.

Omission to sue for one of several reliefs.

(3) A person entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of such reliefs; but if he omits, except with the leave of the Court, to sue for all such reliefs, he shall not afterwards sue for any relief so omitted.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this rule an obligation and a collateral security for its performance and successive claims arising under the same obligation shall be deemed respectively to constitute but one cause of action. [S. 43.]

Illustration.

A lets a house to B at a yearly rent of Rs. 1,200. The rent for the whole of the years 1905, 1906, and 1907 is due and unpaid. A sues B in 1908 only for the rent due for 1906. A shall not afterwards sue B for the rent due for 1905 or 1907.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 43 of the C. P. Code of 1882 The important changes introduced in this rule are the substitution of the word "relief" for the word "remedy" in sub-rule (3) and the omission of the words "obtained before the first hearing" which occurred in the old Code after the words "leave of the Court" in the same clause. The words "and successive claims arising under the same obligation" have been added after the word "performance" in the explanation S. 34 of the Ceylon C. P. Act is very similar to this rule and its object and meaning have been explained in Saminathan v Pana Lana, 18 C. W N 617 P. C. noted below.

Object and Scope of the Rule.—This rule is founded on the principle that a man should not be vexed twice for one and the same cause; Balmakund v. Sangari, 19 A 383, Umed Dholchand v. Pir Saheb, 7 B. 134, 136), and is directed to securing the exhaustion of the relief in respect of a cause of action and not to the inclusion in one and the same action, different causes of action, even though they arise from the same transaction. The first part of the clause makes it incumbent on the plaintiff to include the whole of his claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action, i e, one and the same cause of action. The second portion makes it incumbent on him to ask for the whole of his remedies The explanation is not intended to be an illustration of the foregoing provisions, but a substantive enactment making what otherwise would be independent causes of action, one cause of action for the purposes of the section; Saminathan v Palaniappa, 18 C W. N. 617 P. C : 41 I. A. 142, Parmeshri Das v Fakira, 2 Lah. L. J 466. 1 Lah. 457 · 59 I C 71 This rule is directed to securing the exhaustion of the reliefs in respect of a cause of action and not to the inclusion in one and the same action of different causes of action even though they arise out of the same transaction; Rohini Nandan v Jadu Nandan, 30 C. W. N 873 A I R 1926 Cal. 1022 97 I C. 73

Splitting of Claim.—This and the preceding rule are aimed at preventing multiplicity of suits in respect of the same cause of action. The object of the present rule is to "prevent further litigation" upon the "subjects in dispute." This rule requires that every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the same cause of action He is not entitled to split his cause of action into parts and bring separate suits in respect thereof. If he omits to sue in respect of, or intentionally relinquishes, any portion of his claim arising from the same cause of action, he is precluded by this rule from suing again in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished, though he may state in his plaint that he intends to bring a second suit in respect of the portion so omitted; Maksud V. Nargis, 20 C 322 But he cannot be said to have omitted to sue in respect of a portion of his claim unless he was, at some time before the institution of the suit, aware or informed of the claim or of the facts which would give him a cause of action; Vasudevan v. Arunachala, (1926) M. W N 94 · 93 I. C I., Venkata v. Krishna Swami, 6 M. 344; Amanat v. Imdad Husain, 15 C. 800; Batul V. Munni Lal, 32 A. 625. If he was aware of the claim and omitted to sue, he cannot sue again in respect thereof, even if the omission was accidental or involuntary; Bazlor Rahim v Shamsunnissa, 11 M. I A. 551.

Or. II, r. 2. C. P. Code, expresses the general intention of the legislature that a plaintiff shall not be permitted to split his cause of action in parts and bring separate suits in repect thereof. There is nothing in the above rule which compels a plaintiff to include in one and the same action different causes of action even though they arose from the same transaction. This is the general intention of the legislature and the second paragraph in the rule merely provides the penalty for non-compliance with the first paragraph of the rule; Hardeo Singh v. Bhawani Singh, (1921) Pat. 125: 60 I. C. 496.

An exception to this rule is to be found in Or. XXXIV, r. 14, which permits of a suit being brought for sale upon the mortgage where in a previous suit on the same mortgage, a simple money decree had been asked for and obtained, in spite of the provisions of Or. II, r. 2; Indarpal v. Mewa Lal, 36 A. 264, and the notes to Or. XXXIV, post.

Distinction between this Rule and Explanation IV of S. 11 (Res Judicata).—The maxim of the law upon which this rule as well as the rule of res judicata is based, is that no man ought to be vexed twice for one and the same cause, and the main object of both is to prevent multiplicity of suits. The principle of res judicata is that the matter which has been once decided or deemed to have been decided cannot be raised again; whereas this rule prescribes that the matter which could have been offered for the decision of the Court but was intentionally not offered or kept back and in consequence of the omission the matter could not be decided in the previous suit such matter cannot be separately sued in a subsequent suit. The points of distinction have been fully and exhaustively dealt with under Explanation IV of s 11.

Meaning of "Cause of action."—Test for Determining its Identity.—Cause of action has been already explained in s 20. The term "cause of action" as used in this rule means every fact which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove, if traversed, in order to support his right to the judgment of the Court It does not comprise every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove each fact, but every fact which is necessary to be proved.—Salima Bibi, v Muhammad, 18 A. 131. Followed in Rahim Buksh v. Amiran Bibi, 18 A. 219. See also, Rajjo Kuar v. Debi Dial, 18 A. 432; Narsing Das v. Mongal Dubey, 5 A. 163; Musa Yakub v. Mani, 29 B. 368: Dan Dial v. Munna, 36 A 564: 12 A L. J. 955 A cause of action arises when a legal right is infringed —Ram Prosad v Sachi Dassi, 6 C. W. N. 585 (588). See Bande Ali v Gokul, 34 A. 172 (174).

The "cause of action" is the cause of action which gives occasion for and forms the foundation of the suit, and if that cause enables a man to ask for a larger and wider relief than that to which he limits his claim, he cannot afterwards seek to recover the balance by dependant proceedings; Mahammad Hafeiz v Muhammad Zakariya, 49 I A 9 44 A. 121 A. I. R. 1922 P. C 23: 65 I. C. 79, Pittapur Raja v Suriya Ram, 8 M. 520: 12 I. A. 116.

The words "cause of action" may be statements of the wrong for which the plaintiff seeks redress. In England "cause of action" has been defined as every fact, which if traversed, the plaintiff would have to prove to entitle him to the relief he claims—in other words "cause of action" has been interpreted as meaning a statement of all the facts which give rise to the plaintiff's right to relief.—Sundar Jha v. Bansman Jha, 33 C. 367: 10 C. W. N. 508, and Haramoni v. Harichurn, 22 C. 833.

To determine whether the suit is barred and the cause of action is the same, we have to look to the plaint or the facts relied upon to constitute the cause of action in the first suit; and if on those facts it was open to him to ask for the relief prayed for in the second suit, the latter would be barred. It is only when the cause of action is the same that Or. II, rr. 1 2 & 3 bar the suit; Saliman Saib v. Hassain, 38 M. 247. 25 M. L. J. 125; see also, Naganada v. Krishna Murti, 34 M. 97 p. 107; and Ramaswami v. Vythinatha, 26 M. 760, where it has been held that the real test is whether the cause of action and the transaction on which the two suits are based was the same and not whether the transaction was sought to be established in different modes or by different means.

The "cause of action" upon which the plaintiff may base various claims in one suit under Or. II, r. 2 does not depend upon the character of the relief for which he prays It refers to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour, to every fact which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove in order to support his right to the judgment of the Court. If the evidence required to support two claims is different in any material respect, the causes of action are different, Kashi Nath v Rama Chandra, 38 B. 144: 16 Bom. L R 454 See also, Sonu Khusal v Bahinibai, 40 B. 351: 18 Bom. L R 45.

One test which is valuable in considering whether the causes of action are identical is whether the evidence which would suffice to enable the plaintiff to obtain a decree in both suits is the same; Mahomed Umar Khan v. Amtul Rahim Bibi, 45 A. 376. 21 A L J 267

"In respect of the same cause of action."—A claim "in respect" of a cause of action is a claim founded on that cause of action. The difference between a claim "founded on" cause of action and a claim "arising out of a cause of action" seems to be more a difference of metaphor than a difference in the quality of the claim, Subbaraya v. Rathnavelu, 32 M. 830.

This rule requires that, if all rights arising out of the same cause of action are not sued for together, the portion abandoned cannot be separately sued for afterwards, but it does not enact a similar penalty for all rights under the same or similar titles, the right to sue for which, may require different issues to be tried and may arise under different dates and causes of action, and the defendants as to which may be either only one party or different parties altogether.—Mothoor Mohun v Khemunkurre, 5 W. R. (P. C.) 162: Ramhurry v. Mothoor Mohun, 20 W. R (P. C.) 540 See, Sumeka Dasi v. Baikuntha, 30 I. C 607.

Upon settlement of accounts between plaintiffs and defendants Rs. 3,085-6-9 was found due by the defendants, who gave the plaintiff an order on their agents to pay Rs. 2,500 and promised to pay the balance within a month. Plaintiff filed two suits—one for Rs. 2,500 and other for the balance of the debt. The lower Courts decreed both the claims. Held that the plaintiff had only one cause of action, and that decree in one of the suits must be reversed.—Appasami v. Samasami, 9 M. 279

Where a contract for the sale and purchase of goods is broken by the purchaser, in part by refusal to take delivery, and in part by refufal to pay for goods delivered, both breaches having occurred before any suit is brought, the vendor is debarred by Or. II, r. 2 from bringing two suits against such purchaser, his claim being one arising out of one cause of action and based on one and the same contract. The meaning of the words "cause of action" in this rule discussed and explained.—Duncan Brothers & Co. v. Jeetmul, 19 C. 372 (the view taken by Wilson, J., in 12 C. 339, approved). See also, Murti v. Bholaram, 16 A. 165. See, however, Mandal & Co. v. Fazul Ellahie, 41 C. 825.

Plaintiff sued the defendant for possession of a piece of land on which stood two palm trees, without asking any relief in respect of the trees. The suit was dismissed. He subsequently sued the same defendant for declaration of title to and possession of, the two palm trees. Held that the claim arose, out of the same cause of action as that in the former suit and was, therefore barred; Maksud Ali v. Nargis Dye, 20 C. 322. See also Rangasami v. Krishna, 22 M. 259; Kali Kumar v. Aslam, 20 C. W N. 163.

The plaintiff sued the defendant company for damages for having dismantled a building situate on certain land which was stated to belong to the plaintiff in certain undivided share The plaintiff assessed the damages as for the value of the plaintiff's share in the building but asked for no relief in respect of the possession of the said property. The Munsif gave the plaintiff a decree for damages which was confirmed on appeal. He subsequently sued the defendant company for recovery of separate possession of the land after declaration of his title thereto. Held, that the cause of action in the present suit was the same as in the former suit and that the plaintiff was by Or. II, r 2; C. P. Code, precluded from suing for the relief now claimed;—Khardah Company, Ltd. v. Durga Charan, 46 C. 640; 58 I. C. 636.

A usufructuary mortgagee, who never obtained possession, brought a suit against the mortgagor to recover the unpaid interest up to date of suit, and obtained a decree, which was satisfied by the sale of the judgment-debtor's property. Subsequently he sued for the principal, together with the residue of interest up to date of suit. Held, that as the cause of action to recover the principal accrued at the time when the former suit for interest was brought, the present suit was barred, Hikmutulla v Imam Ali, 12 A. 203. But see Sri Chatlapa v. Balapa, 7 B 446, and Vashvant v. Vithal, 21 B. 267, and Badi Bidi v. Sami Pillai, 18 M. 257.

According to the terms of the lease, the plaintiff sued to eject the defendant for non-payment of rent Held, that the plaintiff's subsequent suit for arrears of rent was barred, as the claim for possession and the claim for rent ought to have been enforced in the previous suit for possession; Kashi Nath v. Nathoo, 38 B 444: 16 Bom. L R. 454.

The plaintiff having obtained a decree against the defendant for the payment to her a monthly sum for her maintenance, subsequently sued to have it constituted a charge on certain land. Held, that the claim in both suits arose out of the same cause of action, and the second suit was barred; Rangamma v. Vohalayya, 11 M. 127, Saminatha v. Rangathammal, 12 M 285.

The plaintiffs sued the defendants for possession of certain land and trees standing upon the land, alleging that the defendants had interfered with their possession by wrongfully taking away the fruits. They subsequently sued for the value of the fruits upon those trees. Held, that as the cause of action, i.e., the taking of such fruit was in both suits identical, the second suit was barred —Debi Dial v. Ajaib Singh, 3 A. 543.

Suits Based upon Non-existent Cause of Action or upon False Cause of Action, Whether Bar to a Suit on the True Cause of Action.—When a former suit is brought either on a non-existent cause of action or upon a false cause of action, that will not bar the institution of a suit on the true cause of action; Dasarathy Naidu v. Palala Kumaramull Raja, 24 M. L. T. 311: (1918) M. W. N. 427: 45 I. C. 969.

Distinct Causes of Action.—This rule does not bar a suit when the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different. It requires that every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising from the same cause of action i.e. the cause of action for which the suit is brought, not that every suit shall include every cause of action or every claim which the plaintiffs have against the defendant Therefore, where there is no identity of causes of action, the plaintiff is not bound to unite them in one suit.—Pittapu Raja v. Suriya Rau, 8 M. 520, P. C.; Mahomed Riasat v. Hosani Banu, 12 C. 157 (P. C.); Ittaphan v. Manavikrama, 21 M. 153; Mullick v. Sheo Pershad, 23 C. 821, 825, Amanat v. Imdad, 15 C. 800, Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 C. 123: 18 I. A. 158; Dampanaboyina v. Addalla, 25 M. 736; Musst. Ketki v. Dinabandhu, 10 C. L. J. 83: Md. Kamil v. Musst. Imtiaz Fatima, 10 C. L. J. 297 P. C.; Lallu Prasad v. Balu Lal, 76 I. C. 218; Musst. Bhag Jogin v. Sakhi Mahton, 1923 Pat. 234.

Under Or. II, r. 2, every suit must include the whole of the claim arising from one and the same cause of action and it is not necessary that every suit shall include every claim or every cause of action which the plaintiff might have against the defendant. The test is, whether the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from the cause of action in the earlier suit. If the answer be in the affirmative, the subsequent suit is not barred, even though it might have been open to the plaintiff to unite the cause of action with the cause of action in the prior suit; Kulada Prasad v. Khudiram, 37 C. L. J. 545: 27 C. W. N. 673: A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 371.

Where the plaintiff brings a suit for possession on basis of a sale-deed in his favour, he is not bound to ask in the alternative for damages or for the return of his purchase-money in case possession could not be given, the cause of action for the two reliefs being distinct. The cause of action for the former relief is the execution of the sale-deed, while for the latter, a breach of its terms. Therefore, a second suit for damages for breach of covenant is not barred by Or. II, r. 2; Pattracharıar v. Alamelumangai, 25 M. L. W. 11: A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 273: 100 I. C 40.

If the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from that in the first suit, the subsequent suit is not barred under Or. II, r. 2, of the C. P. Code. What the rule requires is that every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising from one and the same cause of action and not that every suit shall include every claim or every cause of action which the plaintiff may have against the defendant; Maharajah of Cooch Behar v. Raja Mahendra Ranjan, 34 C. L. J. 465.

The mere fact that the title to the property in dispute in two suits is the same and the property is also the same does not necessarily show that the causes of action in respect of the two suits are the same. It is not necessary that all the causes of action should be joined in the same suit, but the suit should include the whole claim arising out of the same cause of action, that is the cause of action for which the suit is brought; Manmatha Nath v. Jagat Ram, 59 I. C. 517.

The provisions of Or. II, r. 2, of the C. P. Code apply to bar those suits only in which the cause of action and the defendants are the same as in the previous suit. The rule would not apply to the case of two separate properties held under separate titles as the keeping of the plaintiff out of possession of these would give rise to distinct causes of action within the meaning of the rule; Musst. Bindo v. Ramchandra, 41 A. 583: 17 A. L. J. 658.

Where a plaintiff originally sued for a certain sum upon his khatta-books, an objection was taken by the defendant that he ought have sued upon a certain hath-chitta whereupon the plaintiff amended his plaint by suing for the amount admittedly due upon the hath-chitta, in addition to the amount he claimed upon his khatta books. Held, that when the plaintiff amended his plaint by suing upon the hath-chitta, his causes of action, which when the suit was originally framed, was distinct, became united and that there was no relinquishment in the original suit.—Ram Tarrun v. Hossein Buksh, 3 C. 785: 2 C. L. R. 385; (11 M. I. A. 468 folld.).

Plaintiff had paid the defendants a sum of money on contract under which defendants undertook to renew a Kanum, and had previously sued the defendants unsuccessfully for specific performance of that contract. Plaintiff now sued to recover the money. Held, that the suit was not barred by this rule.—Parangodan v. Perumtoduka, 27 M. 380.

Former suit brought by the plaintiff against her deceased husband's brother for non-payment of her dower, does not bar a subsequent suit for declaration of her right to possess for life the estate of her husband in accordance with a proved local custom, the causes of action in the two suits being quite distinct.—Mahomed Riasat v. Hosani Banu, 21 C. 157, P. C.

A plaintiff omitted to claim relief in a suit on an adjusted account which he subsequently claimed in a suit based upon a mortgage. Held, that the causes of action for the two suits being distinct, the omission to claim the relief in the earlier suit did not operate as a bar to the subsequent suit under this rule.—Hanseraj Lakhmidas v. Lalji Anandji, 28 B. 447.

The dismissal of a suit for possession by A, against B, on the ground that B held the property as a mortgagee, is no bar to a subsequent suit by A against B for redemption; Jai Mal v. Ganesh Mal, 4 Lah. 187: A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 143: 75 I. C. 528.

An agriculturist mortgagor can sue for an account upon a mortgage, without at the same time asking for redemption. Such a suit will not

L. T. 311; (1918) M. W. N. 427: 45 I. C. 969.

Distinct Causes of Action.—This rule does not bar a suit when the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different It requires that every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising from the same cause of action i e., the cause of action for which the suit is brought, not that every suit shall include every cause of action or every claim which the plaintiffs have against the defendant Therefore, where there is no identity of causes of action, the plaintiff is not bound to unite them in one suit.—Pittapu Raja v. Suriya Rau, 8 M. 520, P C ; Mahomed Riasat v. Hosani Banu, 12 C. 157 (P. C.); Ittaphan v. Manavikrama, 21 M. 153; Mullick v. Sheo Pershad, 23 C 821, 825, Amanat v Imdad, 15 C 800, Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 C. 123. 18 I. A 158, Dampanaboyina v Addalla, 25 M. 736; Musst. Kethi v Dinabandhu, 10 C. L. J. 83 Md. Kamil v. Musst. Imtiaz Fatima, 10 C. L. J 297 P. C.; Lallu Prasad v Balu Lal, 76 I. C. 218; Musst. Bhag Jogin v. Sakhi Mahton, 1923 Pat 234.

Under Or. II, r. 2, every suit must include the whole of the claim arising from one and the same cause of action and it is not necessary that every suit shall include every claim or every cause of action which the plaintiff might have against the defendant The test is, whether the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from the cause of action in the earlier suit If the answer be in the affirmative, the subsequent suit is not barred, even though it might have been open to the plaintiff to unite the cause of action with the cause of action in the prior suit; Kulada Prasad v. Khudiram, 37 C L J 545 27 C. W N. 673. A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 371.

Where the plaintiff brings a suit for possession on basis of a sale-deed in his favour, he is not bound to ask in the alternative for damages or for the return of his purchase-money in case possession could not be given, the cause of action for the two reliefs being distinct. The cause of action for the former relief is the execution of the sale-deed, while for the latter, a breach of its terms. Therefore, a second suit for damages for breach of covenant is not barred by Or II, r 2, Pattrachariar v. Alamelumangai, 25 M. L. W. 11: A I R. 1927 Mad 273 100 I. C. 40.

If the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from that in the first suit, the subsequent suit is not barred under Or II, r. 2, of the C. P. Code. What the rule requires is that every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising from one and the same cause of action and not that every suit shall include every claim or every cause of action which the advanced and damages for breach of the contract. Held, that Or. II, r. 2 did not bar the second suit; Main Singh v. Allah Ditta, 2 Lah. L. J. 304: 55 I. C. 630.

A filed a suit against B to redeem the land in dispute. The Court dismissed the suit, finding that the alleged mortgage was not proved. A then sued B for ejectment. Held, that the ejectment suit was not barred, the causes of action being essentially different.—Naro Balvant v. Ram Chandra, 13 B. 326. See also Cuppa Nayudu v. Venkata, 20 M. 82.

Plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant for specific performance of contract of sale, in pursuance of which the price was paid and a conveyance executed. Plaintiff then sued for possession, when it was found that the sale did not bind the interest of the defendant's son and on grounds of convenience, plaintiff was awarded the value of defendant's share instead of a decree for partition. He now sued to recover the balance of the price paid. Held, that the suit was not barred by this rule.—Venkatarama v. Venkata Subrahmanian, 24 M. 27.

Where there was no determination at marriage whether the dower would be prompt or deferred, a suit brought during the lifetime of the husband for prompt portion of the dower will not bar a subsequent suit for recovery of the deferred portion; Uma Begum v. Muhammadi Begum, 33 A. 291.

One co-sharer suing another for exclusion from joint property and omitting to include in his claim a portion of the property of which he seeks possession, is not debarred by this rule from suing to have the joint property partitioned, including the portion omitted from the former suit, the causes of action in the two suits being different.—Abdul Nasir v. Rasulan, 20 C. 885

Where a plaintiff has sustained at the same time an injury in respect of his proprietary or permanent interest in an estate, and also an injury in respect of a temporary or leasehold interest in such estate, and files suits for redress in both causes of action, it cannot be said that the two causes of acion are identical.—Upendra Lal v. Secretary of State, 20 C. 716.

The dismissal of a former suit for cancellation of a document for non-payment of Court-fees, does not bar a second suit for declaration that the document was executed for nominal purposes and was not intended to take effect, since the causes of action in the suits are not the same —Nagathal v. Ponnusami, 18 M. 44.

A suit for divorce does not bar a subsequent suit for partition of joint property, as the causes of action of the suits are distinct; Mang Pe v. Ma Lon Ma Gale, 38 C. 629 P. C.: 21 M. L. J. 749: 13 Bom. L. R. 464; see also, Gandia v. Sivanapa, 38 M. 1162: 27 M L. J. 520.

When money is due on two or more bonds at the time of the institution of the suit, and the bonds appear to have been originally passed in respect of one claim, it is not incumbent upon the plaintiff to sue upon both bonds in one action, as each bond was a separate contract, and created a separate and distinct cause of action.—Umed Dholchand v. Pirsaheb, 7 B. 134. See also Sesha Ayyar v. Krishna Ayyangar, 24 M. 96 and Anantanarain v. Savithri, 36 M. 151. 22 M. L. J. 231.

Or. II, r. 2 clearly contemplates a separate suit in respect of each distinct cause of action; the rule, however, is subject to certain modifications, as set out in rr. 3, 4, 5; Mullick Kefait v. Sheo Pershad, 23 C. 821, p. 825.

A suit for possession of property from the execution-purchaser after a suit to set aside the execution sale is not barred, where it is found that at the date of the previous suit the plaintiff was not aware that the execution-purchaser had obtained possession.—Ambu v. Ketlilamma, 14 M. 23.

See cases under heading " Distinct cause of action—Cases where subsequent suit not barred," post.

Different Causes of Action Arising from the Same Transaction.—A number of causes of action may arise out of the same transaction, and this rule does not enjoin that they should all be included in one suit; Payana v. Pana Lana, 18 C. W. N. 617 P. C.: 41 I. A. 142.

Where a person agreed to purchase 10 bales of yarn and took delivery of 7 bales, and refused to accept the other 3 bales, a suit against him to recover damages for non-acceptance of 3 bales is no bar to a subsequent suit to recover the price of the 7 bales delivered. A claim for the price of goods sold is a cause of action of a different nature from a claim for damages for non-acceptance of goods pursuant to a contract, although arising under one and the same contract; per GARTH, C. J., in Anderson v. Kalakarla, 12 C. 39. In this suit WILSON, J., took a different view saying that the claims having arisen under the same contract, the cause of action was one and the subsequent suit was barred. In Duncan Brothers v. Jeetmull, 19 C. 372, the opinion of WILSON, J., was approved. These two cases show that all existing breaches of the same contract must be joined in the same suit; but they have been held not to apply to the case where there are separate contracts, though contained in the same instrument; Yashvant v. Vithal, 21 B. 267: Mandal & Co., v. Fazul 41 C. 825. Where goods are delivered under separate orders, each order and delivery of goods is a separate contract and a separate cause of action, unless it is proved that all the goods were delivered as under a single contract; Ahmed v. Fakir, 1 Rang. 694: A. I. R. 1924 Rang. 145: 79 I. C. 755.

Suit Against one Debtor If a Bar to Suit Against Another Debtor.—Order II, r. 2, C. P. Code, applies only where the defendant in the subsequent suit was also the defendant in the previous suit. The rule does not apply when the subsequent suit is brought against a different defendant; Kashi Bai v. Sheoram Khupchand, 47 I. C., 896.

Omission to Sue or Relinquishment of Part of Claim.—The omission in a previous suit against one of several joint promisors is no bar to a subsequent suit against another joint promisor for the portion so omitted; Ramanjulu v. Aramudu, 33 M. 317.

Order II, r. 2, C. P. Code, is directed against two evils, the splitting of claims and the splitting of remedies. If a man omits from his suit a portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of it; if he omits one of his remedies he cannot afterwards pursue it; Harnam Singh v. Bhola Singh, 2 U. P. L. R. 108: 56 I. C. 966.; Diwan Chand v. Ralla Ram, 8 Lah. L. J. 381: A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 559.

The provisions of Or. II, r. 2, not only apply to the plaintiff in a suit, but also apply to the case of a defendant, who claims a set-off under Or.

VIII, r. 6. A defendant, therefore, who sets up a claim by way of set-off; cannot split it in half, and while enforcing a portion of it also bring a suit to enforce the remainder.—Nawbut Pattak v. Mohesh Narayan, 32 C. 654: 1 C. L. J. 364.

Although a party may be barred under this section from suing again in respect of the same cause of action, it is clear that it is only the remedy of suing which is barred. The right, whatever it might be, to which a party is entitled, still subsists. "To sue" in this section means to make a legal claim or to take legal proceedings against any person; it does not necessarily mean to file a suit by means of a plaint such as is referred to in the Code. Taking any legal proceedings in matters of any kind would be "to sue."—Vajeram Sakerram v. Purshotumdas, 7 Bom. L. R. 138.

Where two suits were instituted simultaneously, and one of such suits had been determined, then, assuming that the claims in such suits arose out of the same cause of action, and should have been included in one suit, this rule is no bar to the entertainment of the second suit; Kaleshar v. Jagan Nath, 1 A. 650. Referred to in Murti v. Bholaram, 16 A. 165.

Plaintiff's former suit to recover damages for the breach of a contract on the part of the defendant for not having made over possession to him of certain lease-hold properties, bars a subsequent suit to recover damages for the profits which had accrued due at the time of the institution of the first suit and for which he had omitted to sue.—Sheo Sunkur v. Hridoy, 9 C. 143 (6 C. 791 followed) Affirmed by the Privy Council, in 12 C. 482.

Held by the Judicial Committee that a subsequent suit brought by the appellants for specific performance of the agreement was barred by Or. II, r. 2. The agreement was the only cause of action in both suits brought by the appellants, and as in the former suit they had made it the basis of a claim for transfer of the estate, which they had in the former suit omitted to do —Rangayya Goundan v Nanjappa Rao, 24 M. 491 P. C.: 6 C. W. N. 17 P. C.

A suit by a reversioner against a transferee from a Hindu widow having a limited estate, to recover two out of three properties alienated to him, is a bar to a subsequent suit against him to recover the third; Darbari v. Gobind, 46 A. 822: A. I. R 1924 All 902: 80 I. C. 31.

A suit for redemption of two out of three plots comprised in one mortgage is a bar to a subsequent suit for redemption of the third plot; Bhau Daji v. Pathlu, 24 Bom. L. R 1157: A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 63: 73 I. C. 862.

A suit to recover money misappropriated by a manager of a joint estate, after a similar suit for other sums misappropriated by him, is barred; whether the omission was by mistake or not, it must be taken to have been relinquished —Ganesh Chandra v. Ram Coomar, 3 B. L. R. 365: 12 W R. 79. See also Manohur Das v. Seetal Pershad, 23 W. R. 418

Relinquishment of a portion of a claim by a guardian precludes a subsequent suit for the portion relinquished, by the minor, on attaining majority.—Gopal Rao v. Narasingha Rao, 22 M. 309.

A claim once abandoned as in excess of the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is filed, may be revived if the case is transferred to a Court having jurisdiction over the entire claim, including the portion abandoned. —Ram Lal v. Bhajahari, 1 C. W. N. 32.

Where properties are situated in two or more districts, the institution of a suit in one district for recovery of property situated herein, bars a subsequent suit for property situated in another district, where the cause action in both the suits is the same The withdrawal of the previous suit without permission does not remove the bar; Miaz Ahmed v. Abdu Hamid, 30 A. 279.

The relinquishment by a plaintiff of a portion of the claim under Or. II, r. 2 (1), C. P. Code, applies primarily to relinquishment before institution of the suit. The rule has no application to any part of a dismissed claim abandoned in appeal. No such abandonment can affect the jurisdiction of the appellate Court; Sheikh Nur Khan v. Shaikh Rahim, 54 I. C. 655.

Order II, r. 2, C. P. Code, does not debar a plaintiff from including in his claim certain additional profits omitted in a previous suit under a misapprehension that the profits were paid annually and not, as was subsequently ascertained to be the fact, half-yearly; Babu Nihal Singh v. Musst. Najuban, 4 U. P. L. R. 16: 65 I. C. 585.

Effect of Relinquishment of Claim.—The statement in a plaint was: " I claim Rs. 1,191 as due to me but I shall be satisfied with a decree for Rs. 700." Held that though his relinquishment of Rs. 491 was based on the supposition that Rs. 1,191 was due to him he ought not to be tied down to such relinquishment when, as a matter of fact, what is found due to him is less than Rs. 1,191, provided he does not get more than Rs. 700; Sinnathambi v. Sellam, 8 M. L. T. 436.

Omission, Accidental or Deliberate.—Omission to include the whole claim in the former suit does not bar a second suit, where the plaintiff was not aware of his right when he brought the first suit.—Amanat Bibi v. Imdad Husain, 15 C. 800 (P. C); Ram Khelawan v. Jaskaran, 21 O. C. 307: 1 U. P. L. R. 19. See also Ambu v. Ketlilamma, 14 M. 23, and Mariathodi v. Appu, 15 M. 296, in which it has been held that the words " omit to sue " must refer to an omission which might have been avoided, not to an omission to claim that which a party could not know he was entitled to. The P. C. case was followed in Batul Kunwar v. Munni Lal, 32 A. 625: 7 A. L. J. 738; and in Gora Chand v. Basanta Kumar, 15 C. L. J. 258. See also Lachman Singh v. Sanwal Singh, 1 A. 543. But where the omission was deliberate, the subsequent suit will be barred; Abdul Hakim v. Karan Singh, 37 A. 646: 13 A. L. J. 929: 30 I. C. 951.

The words " if a plaintiff omits to sue or intentionally relinquishes any portion of his claim, he [illegible] ect of the portion so omitted or relinquished, [illegible] involuntary omission as well as acts of delit [illegible] Ruheem v. Shumsoonnissa Begum, 8 W. [illegible] Followed in Syed Abdulla v. Hurkishen Singh, 2 C. L. J. 490.

Where a person alleging to be the heir of another sues for the recovery of a portion of the estate from another alleged to be in wrongful possession of the same, the omission to sue for the remainder operates as a bar to a subsequent suit for the recovery of the same; Bhadmāl Sheo Lal v. Zumkari, 65 I. C. 338.

Order II, r. 1 of the C. P. Code refers to a case where there has been a suit in which there has been an omission to sue in respect of a portion of the claim and a decree has been made in that suit. In that case a second suit in respect of the portion so omitted is barred; Upendra Narain v. Raja Janaki Nath, 45 C. 305: 22 C. W. N. 611: see also, Kali Kumar v. Aslam, 20 C. W. N. 163: 33 I. C. 139.

As to the effect of omission by mortgagee to ask for both the remedies, viz. sale of hypothecated property and personal decree against the mortgagor, see Gulam Husain v. Muhammadalli, 31 B. 540.

Even an accidental or involuntary omission of a portion of claim is covered by this rule; Janardan v. Sahib Prosad, 43 C. 95: 20 C. W. N. 475.

Exceptions to the Rule Against Splitting of Reliefs.—Sub-rule (3) provides that where a person entitled to more reliefs than one in respect of the same cause of action omits, except with the leave of the Court, to sue for all such reliefs, he cannot afterwards sue for any reliefs so omitted. Or. XXXIV, r. 14 is an exception to this rule, because under Or. XXXIV, r. 14, a suit by a mortgagee to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally does not bar a subsequent suit by him for sale of the mortgaged property; Indar Pal v. Mewa Lal, 36 A. 264: 23 I. C. 429.

Omission to Sue for One of Several Reliefs.—When a person is entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action, he may sue for all the reliefs or he may sue for one or more of them and reserve his right, with the leave of the Court, to sue for the rest; Pestonji v. Abdool, 5 B. 463. But if no such leave is obtained, he will be precluded from suing for any reliefs so omitted, Abdul Hakim v. Karam Singh, 37 A. 646: 30 I. C. 951. His subsequent suit will not, however, be barred if the right to the relief in respect of which it is brought did not exist at the date of the institution of the former suit; Piari v. Khiali Ram, 3 A. 857. Owing to the omission of the words " obtained before the first hearnig, " which occurred after the words " the leave of the Court " in the corresponding s. 43 of the old Code, it is now competent for the plaintiff to ask for and obtain the leave at any stage of the suit.

Where the plaintiff, without the leave of the Court, sued the defendant for recovery of rent only, where it was competent for him under the terms of the lease to sue both for arrears of rent and also for possession on failure to pay the rent every year, it was held that he could not afterwards sue for possession, Subbaraya v. Krishna, 6 M. 139. So, where the plaintiff first sued the defendant for specific performance of a contract to sell immoveable property, and then sued him for possession of the property agreed to be sold, it was held by the Madras High Court that the subsequent suit for possession was barred; Narayana v. Kundasami, 22 M. 24. But in Nathu v. Budhu, 18 B. 537; Krishnaji v. Sangappa, 27 Bom. L. R. 42: A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 181, it was held that the subsequent suit for possession was not barred. Similarly, where X agrees to sell his property to Y, and then enters into a contract to sell it to Z, and Y sues X for a permanent injunction restraining him from selling the property to Z, and the suit is dismissed. It was held that the dismissal of this suit is no bar to a subsequent suit by Y against X for specific performance of the contract; Sardari Mal v. Hirde Nath, 6 Lah. 384.

Explanation.—The history of the Explanation is this: Under Act VIII of 1859, it was decided that arrears of rent of successive years are several and distinct causes of action in respect of which a plaintiff may institute separate suits. See, 2 W. R. (Act X of 1859), 31; this decision was followed in 17 W. R. 380, and 24 W. R 326. Then, in s. 43 of Act X of 1877, the Explanation with the illustration was added, whereby the above decisions were overridden. Subsequently, the Explanation with the illustration was reproduced in s. 43 of Act XIV of 1882 without any alteration in the law.

In Or. II, r. 2, the Explanation has been reproduced, with the addition of the words, "successive claims arising under the same obligation." The added words have only given express recognition to the decision in 6 C. 791, Tarak v. Panchu.

The Explanation is not int [illegible] -sections (1), (2) and (3), but a substantive [illegible] and a collateral security for its performa [illegible] purposes of the rule; otherwise they would be two independent causes of action. See Payana v. Pana Lana, 18 C. W. N. 617 P. C.: 41 I. A. 142. In Kishan Narain v. Pala Mal, 4 Lah. 32, 34: 50 I. A 115: A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 412: 72 I. C. 187, their Lordships of the Privy Council observed: "The explanation shows that a personal claim for the mortgage money under a mortgage and the enforcement of the security for the debt are to be regarded as the one and the same cause of action. That provision is in marked distinction to the law of this country, where a mortgagee is at liberty to appoint a receiver under his deed to sue for the debt and to take proceedings for sale or foreclosure independently and at the same time. It is important, therefore, in considering the effect of the Code, to bear in mind that its obvious intention is to establish a rule of law different from that accepted here."

Successive Claims Arising under the Same Obligation Constitute a Single Cause of Action.—The words "successive claims arising under the same obligation" have been added to the Explanation for the purpose of giving express recognition to the decision in 6 C. 791 (Tarak v. Panchu), where it was held that a claim in respect of all arrears of rent constitutes a single cause of action.

It is true that the scope of the identity of the cause of action has been extended by the addition of the Explanation, but only in so far as it supersedes those cases in which it was held that a suit on a collateral security given for a debt would not bar a suit for the debt itself. The meaning of this rule and the explanation has been fully explained in Mandal & Co. v. Fazul Ellahi, 41 C. 825 pp. 830-835.

Distinct Causes of Action—Cases where Subsequent Suit Not Barred.

First Suit for Possession, Subsequent Suit for Mesne Profits.—Claims for the recovery of possession of immoveable property and for mesne profits are distinct claims, and separate suits will lie in respect of each claim.—Lalessor Babui v. Janki Bibi, 19 C. 615: followed in Ponnammal v. Rama Mirda, 38 M. 829. 28 M. L. J. 127: 17 M. L T. 125: (1915) M. W. N. 180 F. B.; Ram Chandra v. Ladha, 26 Bom. L. R. 288. A. I. R. 1924 Bom. 368: 80 I. C. 259. See also, Tiruppati v. Narasimha, 11 M. 210; followed in Gutta Saramma v. Maganti, 31 M. 405. But see, Lalji Mal v. Hulasi,

8 A. 663; Venkoba v. Subbanna, 11 M. 151; Mewa Kuar v. Baharasi Prosad, 17 A. 533; Debi Dial v. Ajaib Singh, 8 A. 543; Ganesh Ram v. Mohesh Ram, 13 C. W. N. 669; Rukminibai v. Venkatesh, 31, B. 517; Miyan Khan v. Surfaraz Khan, 60 I. C. 65; similarly, a suit for mesne profits is not a bar to a subsequent suit for possession; Monohur Lal v. Gowri Sunkur, 9 C. 283; Tirupati v. Narasinha, 11 M. 210. On the other hand, it has been held by the Allahabad High Court, in Mewa Kuar v. Banarsi Prasad, 17 A. 533, that a suit for possession is a bar to a subsequent suit for mesne profits accrued due prior to the date of the suit; but such a suit is not a bar to a suit for mesne profits accrued due subsequent to the suit for possession; Sheo Kumar v. Naraindas, 24 A. 501.

After recovery of possession in execution of decree under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), plaintiff sued to recover mesne profits for the time during which he was out of possession. Held that the suit was not barred; Sheo Kumar v. Narain, 24 A. 501; Thavasi v. Arumugam, 30 M. L. J. 326.

A prior suit for possession does not bar a suit for mesne profits due for a period subsequent to the institution of the prior suit. The cause of action for such mesne profits is one which has accrued subsequent to the suit for possession; Equitable Coal Company, Ltd. v. Bagala Sundari, 71 I. C. 972

(b) Suits for Arrears of Rents of Successive Years.—A suit for arrears of rent of previous years after a suit for rent of subsequent year is barred.—Taruck v Panchu, 6 C. 791; approved in Adhirani v. Raghu, 12 C. 50. See also, Madho v Murli, 5 A. 405; Balaji v Bhikaji, 8 B 164; Alagu v. Abdoola, 8 M. 147; Shanmugam v. Syed Gulam, 27 M. 116 In Rajan Eswara Dass v. Venkatorover, 21 M. 236, it has been held that this does not preclude him from adopting any other remedy the law gives him to enable him to recover his rent, as for instance, by distraint under the Rent Act. In Sudduruddin Ahmed v. Bani Madhab, 15 C. 145 (F. B.), it has been held, that the dismissal of a suit for rent at an enhanced rate is no bar to subsequent suit for rent at the rate originally fixed (9 C. 919 overruled). In Gunga Prasad v. Dig Bijai Singh, 18 I C 288, it has been held that this rule does not apply where rent was suspended but due at the time of institution of prior suit.

The claim for rent of several successive years constitutes one whole claim in respect of the cause of action even though the claim for one year be taken to have been extinguished by satisfaction and subsequently revived by cancellation of such satisfaction; Sayed Abdulla v. Hurkishen, 2 C. L. J. 490.

A plaintiff who has obtained a decree for an abatement of rent may afterwards sue for refund of excess rent paid, notwithstanding that he might, if he had chosen, have included this claim in his suit for abatement of rent Okhoy Koomar v Mahatap Chunder, 5 C. 24.

Deposit of rent under s 61, B. T Act (VIII of 1885), is equivalent to part payment Notice of deposit under s 63 of the Act does not give a fresh cause of action in respect of the balance then due In a suit for such balance, the landlord is bound to include a claim for all arrears of rent due at the time of the institution.—Atul Krishna v. Nripendro Narain, 1 C. L. J. 114.

Where a landlord has an alternative remedy, either to treat a sum as rent and to recover it as such, or to maintain a suit for damages, the mere fact that he adopted one of these courses in a previous litigation does not debar him from following a different and alternative course in a subsequent litigation; Banku Behary v. Gopal Chunder, 14 C. L. J. 589.

A suit to eject a tenant holding under a lease does not bar a subsequent suit to recover arrears of rent under the terms of the lease. The claim for rent is a distinct cause of action from that for recovery of possession, Subraya v. Rathinavelu, 32 M. 330; Nandan Singh v. Ganga Prosad, 37 A. 512.

In a prior suit the lessor had sued the lessee for rent and obtained a decree. Subsequently the lessees had neglected to pay the cesses due on the land and the lessor was compelled to pay the same. In a subsequent suit by the lessor for recovery of the cesses so paid, held that the subsequent suit was not barred by Or. II, r. 2, C. P. Code, Mahendra Nath v. Abinas Chandra, 27 C. W. N. 521. A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 615.

(c) Declaratory Suits.—Where a previous suit for declaration of title and confirmation of possession has been dismissed for want of prayer for possession, a subsequent suit for declaration of title and for possession is not barred.—Jibunti Nath v. Shib Nath, 8 C. 819: 10 C. L. R. 537, followed in Nonoo Singh v. Anund Singh, 12 C. 291; and in Mohan Lal v. Bilaso, 14 A. 512. See also, Komolay Kaminy v. Lokenath, 8 C. 825-note: 11 C. L. Although in a title suit there may be a claim in the alternative for a right of way, it may also be left to a second suit. Therefore the fact that the right of way was not claimed in a previous title suit would not bar a suit for a declaration of a right of way either by the rules of res judicata or by the provision of Or. II, r. 2, C. P. Code, Kalachand v. Jotindra Nath, 57 I. C. 852.

A suit for possession of property will not be barred under Or. II, r. 2, C. P. Code by reason of the dismissal of a previous suit for declaration and injunction restraining defendants from disturbing plaintiff's possession on account of the failure of the plaintiff to prove possession, Aiyanar Raja v. Alagar Raja, 52 I. C. 434.

A declaratory decree for accounts only, does not bar a subsequent suit for recovery of money and other debt that may be found due by the defendant to plaintiff on an adjustment of accounts.—Kalidhun v. Shiba Nath, 8 C. 483: 11 C. L. R. 57. See also, Gobind Mohun v. Sheriff, 7 C. 169.

A former suit for a mere declaration of title bars a subsequent suit asking for consequential relief (injunction); Sardar Singji v. Ganpat, 14 B. 395.

(d) Suits for Damages.—A decree for damages for wrongful dismissal bars a subsequent suit for wages, for the two months next succeeding the date of the first suit.—Simpson v. Cleghorn, 6 C. L. R. 91.

A person whose property had been wrongly attached sued for a declaration that the property was his and not liable to attachment and obtained a decree. Subsequently, he sued to recover damages for wrongful attachment. Held, that the subsequent suit was not barred by Or. II, r. 2, C. P. Code, as although he could have joined a claim for damages with his suit for a declaration he was not bound to do so; Maika Lal v. Nalir Ahmed, 7 O. L. J. 310: 55 I. A. 657.

A suit for damages for wrongful detention of a cart and bullocks seized in execution of a decree against a third party, is barred after a decree in a former suit for value of the same property; Punju v Oodey, 18 W. R 337.

A suit for damages for wrongfully taking away cattle after suit for value of the same cattle is barred.—Mohubut v. Shoorendro, 4 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 20.

(e) Mortgage Suits.—A mortgagee sued the mortgagor for the principal, interest and also for sale of the mortgaged property in the Court within the jurisdiction of which the defendant resided. That Court dismissed the suit so far as it related to the property and the claim for principal, but awarded the interest claimed against the defendant personally. Subsequently the mortgagor sued in the Court, within the jurisdiction of which the property was situate, for recovery of the principal by sale of the mortgaged property. Held that the second suit was not barred —Narasinga Rau v Venkatanarayana, 16 M 481 See also, Girish Chunder v Ramessuree, 22 W R 32 But see, Bungsee Singh v. Soodist Lall, 7 C. 739 · 10 C L. R 263.

A mortgage for a term of two years executed in 1904 provided for realisation of interest alone by the mortgagee by suit. The interest was in arrears after 1905. The mortgagee instituted a suit in 1908 for the interest then due reserving the right to sue for the principal and future interest The suit was decreed. In 1914 he instituted a suit for the principal and interest still due Held that the suit was barred under Or 11, r 2, C P C., Kishan Narain v Pala Mal, 44 M L J 123 . 27 C W N 802 P C. . 38 C L. After a suit by a mortgagee for declaration of his lien over the mortgaged properties, a second suit by him against certain attaching creditors of his mortgagor for a declaration of his lien over certain surplus revenue sale-proceeds, of some of the mortgaged properties, realized previously to the institution of the first suit, was not barred, Kristo Dass v. Ram Kant, 6 C 142

It is not competent to the holder of two mortgages on the same property from the same person, to maintain a suit on the latter only for sale of the property subject to the prior mortgage —Keshavaram v Ranchhod, 30 B. 156 Ref. to in Dhondo v. Bhikaji, 39 B 138, Hari Narain v Kusum Kumari, 37 C. 589; Gobinda v Lala Harihar, 14 C. Where there has been a suit between an agriculturist mortgagor and his mortgagee for account merely, a subsequent suit for possession on payment of the money declared to be due is barred —Bhau Balaji v Hari Nilkantrav, 7 B. 377. But see, Lalu Chand v. Giriappa, 20 B. 469.

Where a mortgagee obtains a decree for possession on the basis of the mortgage, no further suit for possession could be obtained unless it could be shown that possession had been taken under the decree and the Judgment-creditor has been subsequently dispossessed; Har Chand Singh v. Narain Singh, 67 I. C. 281.

A mortgagee at first sued for foreclosure, but the suit was dismissed on the ground that he was not entitled to such remedy until the expiration of the mortgage term. He subsequently sued to recover his money by enforcement of lien against the mortgaged property Held that the second suit was not barred —Piari v. Khiali Ram, 3 A 857.

A previous unsuccessful suit by a usufructuary mortgagee for recovery of his mortgage money is not a bar to subsequent suit by him for possession of mortgaged property.—Raghava Chariar v. Seshadri Iyengar, 15 M. L. J. 374. See also, Shibu Bera v Chandra Mohun, 3 C. L. J. 81-n.

A mortgagee is not debarred by Or. II, r. 2, C. P Code, from suing for the possession of the mortgaged property on the strength of a stipulation conferring upon him the option to sue for interest or for possession in the event of the mortgagor's failure to pay interest at the stipulated time, because on the occurrence of previous default, the mortgagee sued only for interest and not for possession; Parmeshri Das v Takira, 2 L J. 466: 1 L. 457: 59 I C 71 See also Budha Khan v Suleman, 71 P. W. R. 1917: 41 I. C. 576

The usufructuary mortgagee of certain land gave a lease of it to the mortgagor, the latter hypothecating the land as security for payment of the rent. Arrears of rent accruing, the mortgagee sued the mortgagor for the same in the Revenue Court, and obtained a decree. Subsequently he sued in the Civil Court to recover the amount of such decree by the sale of the land Held, that the second suit was not barred, Banda Hasan v. Abadi Begum, 4 A 180. Followed in Imami Begum v. Gobind Prasad, 4 A. 318 See also, Chuni v Banaspat, 9, A. 23, Pindi v. Lal Chand, 36 I C. 209.

Under a mortgage executed in 1902, the principal sum borrowed was Rs 1,200 and it was payable in instalments of Rs. 100 on default of payment of any one instalment the whole of the balance was to be paid at once. In the years 1903 and 1904, the mortgagors paid Rs 44 only. In 1905, the plaintiffs filed a suit to recover the amount of the first two instalments and obtained a decree In 1917, plaintiffs (mortgagees) filed a suit for recovery of the remaining instalments with interest Held, that the suit was barred by Or II, r. 2, C. P Code; Shrinivasa v. Chambasapa Gowda, 25 Bom. L. R. 203: 72 I. C. 290 (20 Bom L R. 773, 37 A. 400; 43 A. 671 folld.; 39 M. 981 dissented from).

A plaintiff who seeks to redeem a mortgage or specific lease and fails in such a suit, because the mortgage or lease is not proved, is not thereby precluded from seeking to redeem the same property or a portion thereof from another specific mortgage or to eject on the strength of his title, the person in possession.—Ramaswami v. Vythinatha, 26 M 760. Followed in Thrikaikat v. Thiruthil, 29 M. 153 F. A usufructuary mortgagee, who never obtained possession, sued the mortgagor to recover the unpaid interest up to date of suit and obtained a decree which was satisfied by the sale of the judgment-debtor's property. Subsequently he sued for the principal and residue of interest up to date of suit. Held, that the second suit was barred; Hikmutullah v. Iman Ali, 12 A. 203.

In a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor is bound to claim for surplus profits, if any; Ram Din v. Bhup Singh, 30 A. 225.

Two persons each held a mortgage over the same property from the same mortgagor, executed on the same day; each instituted a suit for sale on the same day, without making the other a party, and obtained decrees, and in execution each purchased the mortgaged property under his own decree. The representatives of one of the mortgagees got possession; the representatives of the other mortgagee sued for possession of the moiety of the property, or in the alternative for redemption of the other mortgage. Held that the suit was not barred; Balmokund v. Sangari, 12 A. 370.

A purchaser of the equity of redemption of a share of certain mortgaged property brought a suit against the mortgagee in possession to recover his share on payment of the whole mortgage-debt and obtained decree and possession thereof. He having subsequently purchased the remaining share of the mortgaged property from the mortgagor, sued for possession thereof. The defendant pleaded that the suit was barred by s. 43, C. P. Code, 1882, inasmuch as the plaintiff might have recovered the share in the former suit. Held that the plea was bad —Brahannayaki v. Krishna, 9 M. 92.

Where in a suit for redemption of a portion of the mortgaged property, the plaintiff succeeds and obtains a decree, he is debarred from bringing a fresh suit for recovery of possession of the remaining portion of the mortgaged property; Bhau Daji Khade v. Pathu Malu Sabh, 73 I. C. 862.

(f) Partition Suits.—A suit brought by some members of a family against the other members of the same family for partition of the joint-family property, does not preclude a second suit by the same plaintiffs for partition of other property belonging jointly to their family and strangers.—Purushottam v. Atmaram, 23 B 597, Gulab Shah v. Haveli Shah, 87 P. R. 1915; see Debi Shahi v. Gauri Sankar, 15 O C. 81, Abdur Nasir v. Rasulan, 20 C 385 See, however, Ukha v Daga, 7 B. 182, Anji v. Thatha, 10 M. 347

First suit based on the general right of a co-parcener to claim partition of the joint estate—Refusal of Judge in first suit to allow plaint to be amended so as to include claim to partition based on an award—Second suit based on award not barred —Thakore Becharji v. Thakore Pujaji, 14 B. 31.

A person holding joint family property with another is not precluded by Or. II, r. 2 from suing for a partition of it by reason of such property not having been included in a previous partition suit. The cause of action for partition of joint property is a constantly recurring one; Mansharam v. Ganesh, 17 C. W. N. 521; Ram Harak v Ramlal, 38 A 217.

Plaintiff brought a suit for partition of a house situated in Allahabad and for a declaration that a deed of gift in respect of it was invalid. He had brought a previous suit at Sultanpur for partition of property situated there alleging that he had been dispossessed. Held that Or. II, r. 2 of the C. P. Code did not bar the suit; Ram Harakh v Ram Lal, 38 A. 217: 14 A. L. J. 257.

In a suit for partition, the plaintiff has to include the whole of his claim, that is to say, the whole of the properties which are alleged by him to be properties of the joint family, immoveable properties, moveable properties, and funds which according to him have resulted from joint business carried on by members of the joint family and on behalf of all and such a suit cannot be treated as one for the recovery of possession of both immoveable and moveable property requiring for their joinder, Court's leave under Or. II, r. 4, C. P. Code An order passed in such a suit requiring the plaintiff to elect to proceed either with the claim for the recovery of immoveable properties or with the claim for the recovery of the moveables and funds is erroneous; Beni Madhab v. Gobind Chanda, 22 C. W. N. 669; 46 I. C. 165.

(g) Suit for Specific Performance—Subsequent Suit for Recovery of Earnest Money.—Plaintiff's suit for specific performance of a contract of sale of immoveable property in his favour was dismissed and he subsequently brought a suit for recovery of earnest money from the defendant. Held, that the claim for the recovery of the earnest money was based on a different cause of action from the claim for specific performance and that Or II, r 2, C. P. Code, was no bar to the subsequent suit; Munni Babu v. Koer Kamta Singh, 45 A. 378. 21 A. L J. 265: A. I. R 1923 All. 321.

(h) Suits on Instalment Bonds.—An instalment bond gave the creditor option to enforce full payment on a single default being committed or to waive it. The creditor first sued for some instalments which had fallen due and subsequently for the balance. Held, Or. II, r. 2 did not bar the second suit; Keshav Rao v. Suklia, 19 N L. R. 170.

In a suit to recover money due on an instalment bond, the plaintiff sued to recover the amount of one instalment only, although by that time two instalments had accrued due. Held, that the subsequent suit to recover the second instalment was barred: Narayana v. Nimba Hari, 8 Bom. L. R. 547; Mackintosh v. Gill, 12 Bom L R. 37; 20 W. R. 358.

(i) First Suit for Interest Only—Second Suit for Principal and Interest—If Maintainable.—If a mortgagee to whom a cause of action to realise, the whole mortgage security has accrued, exercises the option given to him by the document and sues for interest alone, he must be deemed to have relinquished his claim for further relief under Or. II, r. 2, C. P. Code.

and a second suit for principal and interest is not maintainable; Muhammad Hafiz v. Mirza Muhammad Zakariya, 44 A. 121: A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 23: 65 I. C. 79: 49 I. A. 9 P. C; Kishan Narain v. Pala Mal, 4 L. A. P. 32: 50 I. A. 115 P. C.: A. I. R. 1922 P. C 412.

A mortgage bond provided among others that interest would be paid to the creditor monthly; if for any reason the interest was not paid for six months, the creditor would be competent to realise by suit without waiting for the expiry of the term either the unpaid interest or the principal and interest with costs from the debtors, the property hypothecated and other properties moveable and immoveable of the debtors It was also stipulated that if the bond was not paid within the period fixed then the whole amount and interest etc, would be realised by the creditor by suit. The interest being in arrears, a suit was filed for the interest only "according to the terms of the bond." It was decreed without contest. The mortgagees then instituted a suit for the amount due under the bond and interest which accrued due afterwards The mortgagors contended that the suit was barred under the provisions of Or. II, r. 2, C P Code Held that the suit was so barred; Mahomed Zakariya v Mahomed Hafiz, 39 A. 506: 15 A. L. J. 557: 41 I. C. 233 The decision in this case was upheld by the Privy Council in 26 C W. N 297: 49 I. A. P. C

Where the time stipulated for payment of the principal is one year after the date of the mortgage but interest is payable monthly, a default in the payment of interest gives rise to a cause of action and a suit for interest alone does not bar a subsequent suit for principal Maung Kyin Pein v. Ma Pwa Me, 4 U. B. R (1921) 62: 64 I. C. 953

When principal and interest are both due under a mortgage bond, there can be only one suit for both. This cannot be overridden by an agreement that separate suit might be brought, Gangaram v Abdul Rahman, 28 P. R. 1907. See also Brij Lal v Ram Khelawan, 268 P W R 1912.

(j) First Suit on Promissory Note—Second Suit for Recovery of the Same Money Based on Accounts.—A suit for recovery of money due under a pro-note was filed in the Munsif's Court but dismissed for default of appearance Another suit was then filed to recover the same mony based on entries in the account books Held that the cause of action was the same and the suit was not maintainable, Mundar Bibi v Baij Nath Prasad, 42 A 1903: 18 A L J. 81 54 I C 424

Effect of Withdrawal of Suits.—The provisions of this rule do not apply to cases where the previous suit has been withdrawn with liberty to bring fresh suit.—Venkata Shetti v Ranga Nayak, 10 M 160 Followed in Behari Lal v Baran Mai, 17 A. 53; in Buta v Bishen Das 37 P L R 1911; 9 I. C 956 See also, Ilahi Baksh v Imam Baksh, 1 A 324, and Mul Chand v. Bhikari Dass, 7 A. 624 But when a plaintiff withdraws without permission, the suit must be regarded as practically dismissed He cannot bring an action for a claim which he ought to have included in a former suit; Hari Nath v. Syed Hossainali, 2 C. L. J. 480 10 C W. N. 8

Applicability of the Rule to Execution Proceedings.—This rule does not apply to proceedings for execution of decree. The C. P. Code, does not prevent a person from making separate and successive applications for execution of a decree giving different reliefs, in respect to each such relief.—

A decree for possession and mesne profits may be executed successively and separately; Lingam v. Mallapragada. (1915) M. W. N. 793: 2 L. W. 688: 30 I. C. 246 (12 C. L. J. 6 not followed; 41 C. 1 referred to). See also, Balasubramania v. Swarnammal, 38 M 199: 25 M. L. J. 367.

The provisions of Or. II, r. 2, C. P. Code, are not applicable to proceedings for restitution which are really proceedings in execution; Soma Sundaram v Chhokalinga, 40 M. 780: 5 L. W. 267, Kripasindu v. Balbhaga Das, 3 Pat. L. J. 367: 47 I. C. 47.

Applicability of Or. II, r. 2 to Proceedings in Revenue Courts.—Or. II, r. 2, C. P. Code, which requires that every suit shall include the whole of the claim which plaintiff is entitled to in respect of the cause of action is applicable to proceedings in Revenue Court for recovery of arrears of rent. It applies not only to cases of deliberate relinquishments but also of accidental or involuntary omission; Pratab Chandra v. Secy. of State, 35 C. L. J. 304: A. I. R. 1922 Cal. 101.

Joinder of causes of action.

3. Save as otherwise provided, a plaintiff may unite in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendant, or the same defendants jointly; and any plaintiffs having causes of action in which they are jointly interested against the same defendant or the same defendants jointly may unite such causes of action in the same suit.

(2) Where causes of action are united, the jurisdiction of the Court as regards the suit shall depend on the amount or value of the aggregate subject-matters at the date of instituting the suit. [S. 45.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 45 of the old Code, and follows English Rule 1 of Or. XVIII.

Principle and Scope.—This rule no doubt authorizes a plaintiff to unite in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendant or defendants jointly, but it does not authorize a plaintiff to unite different causes of action against the same defendant or defedants in which they are not all jointly interested, their interests being but distinct and separate The word "jointly" in this rule means that all the defendants in a suit must be jointly liable in respect of "each and all" of the causes of action which the plaintiff unites against the defendants in the same suit. That this is the correct meaning of the term "jointly" will appear from the judgment of STRAIGHT, J., in Bhagwati Prasad v. Bindeshri, 6 A. 106, where his Lordship observed that joint interest in the main questions raised by the litigation is a condition precedent to the joinder of several causes of action against several defendants. The Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Narsingh Das v. Mangal Dubey, 5 A. 163, also put similar interpretation upon the word "jointly." In Mullick Kefait Hossain v. Sheo Pershad Singh, 23 C. 821 (826), s. 45, which corresponds to the present rule, was similarly interpreted: "There is no provision in the Code allowing distinct causes of action, in which the defendants are not jointly interested, to be united in the same."

In Burstall v. Beyfus, (1884) 26 Ch. D. 35, p. 39, the Lord Chancellor, LORD SELBORNE, says: "To bring into one claim distinct causes of action against different persons, neither of them having anything to do with the other (and only historically connected), is not contemplated by Or. XVIII, r. 1 corresponding to this rule, which authorizes the joinder, not of several actions against distinct persons, but of several causes of action."

The rule has been fully explained by DAVAR, J., in Umabai v. Bhau Balwant, 34 B. 358, where his Lordship observed: "The result of the authorities seems to me to be that the plaintiff may in one action unite several causes of action against several defendants, provided that all such defendants are "jointly liable in respect of each and all of such causes of action," and that the condition precedent to the plaintiff being allowed to join several causes of action against several defendants, is that such defendants must all "have a joint interest in the main question raised by the litigation" and that causes of action joined in one suit against several defendants, must be causes of action in which "the defendants are all jointly interested." It is not necessary that every defendant should be interested as to all the reliefs claimed in the suit, but it is necessary "that there must be a cause of action in which all the defendants are more or less interested although the relief asked against them may vary "

This rule deals with the joinder of several causes of action, while Or. 1, r. 3 deals with the joinder of defendants in one suit. Or. 1, r. 1 deals with joinder of plaintiffs.

Similar statement of the law was also made by PEACOCK, C. J., in the Full Bench case of Raja Ram v. Luchman Pershad, 8 W. R. 15: B L R. Sup. Vol. 731, and in Motee Lal v. Ranee, 8 W. R. 64.

Summary.—It is thus clear that a plaintiff may unite different causes of action in one suit against different defendants, who are jointly liable in respect of each and all of such causes of action, and that the condition precedent to the plaintiff being allowed to join several causes of action against several defendants is that such defendants must all have a joint interest in the main question raised by the litigation

Cause of Action.—The expression " cause of action " has been explained in the notes to s. 20 and Or. II, r 2.

The Plaintiff May Unite.—Under this rule the plaintiff is authorized to join several causes of action against the same defendant or defendants in one suit; but his right to combine several causes of action is subject to the proviso contained in sub-section (2), that is, the aggregate value of the united causes of action comprised in the suit is cognizable by the Court in which the suit is instituted. The right to join in one suit several causes of action against the same defendant or defendants cannot be exercised unless the Court to which the plaint is presented has jurisdiction over the causes of action. See Jivraju v. Purushotam, 7 M. 171. See also Chiragh Din v. Bhagwan Das, 100 P. R. 1913.

"Save as otherwise provided."—The application of this rule is subject to the provisions of sub-section (2) of this rule and also to the provisions of rules 4 and 5, in which certain exceptions are mentioned to the joinder of several causes of actions in one suit. The expression therefore refers to those rules.

Instances where Plaintiff was Allowed to Unite Several Causes of Action Against Same Defendants.—A suit brought against a number of alienees of a deceased member of an undivided family, or for recovery of the family property illegally alienated by him, is not such a suit as ought to be dismissed on the ground of multifariousness.—Vasudeva v. Kuleadi, 7 M. 290. See also Samichetti v. Ammani Achy, 7 M. 260.

In a suit for ejectment against several defendants who set up various titles to different parts of the land claimed, there is only one cause of action, not several distinct and separate causes of action.—Ishna v. Rameswar, 21 C. 831; approved in Nundo v. Bonomali, 29 C. 871. See also Bandhu v. Nathui, 7 C. L. J. 460. But see Ram Prosad v. Sachi Dassi, 6 C. W. N. 585.

Where property is transferred under separate deeds, at different times to different transferees, and the plaintiff brings one suit for possession against all the transferees, held that the suit is not bad for multifariousness.—Parbati v. Mahmood Fatima, 29 A. 287: 4 A. L. J. 121. See also, Kubra Jan v. Ram Bali, 30 A. 560, F. B. and Umabhai v. Vithal, 33 B. 293.

A suit by a purchaser of property for possession against a person who dispossessed him, as also against his vendor for the refund of the purchase-money, is not bad for misjoinder of causes of action.—Serajul Huq v. Abdul, 29 C. 257: 6 C. W. N. 300. Ayathrumi v. Santhu, 31 M. 252.

Certain properties were sold to A by private contract. Subsequently, the properties were attached in execution of a decree against A's vendors and sold in execution to various purchasers. A instituted a suit against his vendors, the decree-holders and the purchasers, to set aside the execution sale. Held that the suit was not defective by reason of the misjoinder of causes of action.—Haranund v. Prosonno 9 C. 763. 12 C. L. R. 556.

A suit to recover possession against joint trespassers who set up various and distinct defences, some alleging one defence, and some another, and so on, is not bad for multifariousness.—Omur Ali v. Wrylayet, 4 C. L. R. 455.

The plaintiffs having obtained a decree for the possession of certain lands, and having received formal possession thereof, brought a suit against eighty-six persons holding distinct and separate tenures in those lands, alleging that they had combined together to keep the plaintiffs out of the enjoyment of the property. Held that there was but one cause of action and the suit was not multifarious.—Loke Nath v. Keshav Ram, 13 C. 147.

The plaintiff claimed from the defendants as joint decree-holders a fourth share of the sale-proceeds of certain houses situate on land subject to a village custom whereby a proprietary due of the above amount was payable to the zemindar of the said land. Held that the claim was not bad for misjoinder.—Nanku v. Board of Revenue, 1 A. 44.

The defendants who have five separate decrees against some of the persons against whom the plaintiffs' decree was obtained, applied to have the sale proceeds rateably distributed, and accordingly the proceeds were distributed in proportion to the amount of the decrees In a suit by the plaintiffs against the defendants on the allegation that they were entitled to the whole of the proceeds, or, in the alternative, for distribution on a different principle. Held that there was no misjoinder by reason of all the defendants being included in one suit. Gouri Prosad v Ram Ratan, 13 C. 159.

A Hindu widow can join her claim for stridhan with a claim for maintenance; Jankibai v. Srinivas, 15 Bom. L. R. 684; 38 B. 120.

A purchaser of certain land, on demanding rent that accrued due after his purchase, was informed by the tenant that he had paid the whole rent in advance to the former landlord. He then sued the tenant and the former landlord praying a decree for rent against either. Held, that the frame of the suit was unobjectionable.—Madan Mohun v. Holloway, 12 C. 555. Followed in Mowji Monje v. Kuverji, 31 B. 516

A suit for both enhancement and arrears of rent at an enhanced rate is maintainable. The causes of action, although separate, may be combined.—Gudar Tewary v. Brijnandan, 5 C. W. N. 880

A suit for enhancement under s. 30, and for increase of rent under s. 52 of the B. T. Act (VIII of 1885), is maintainable The two causes of action may be joined in one suit —Sarada Charan v Iswar Samli, 11 C. W. N 1154.

In a suit instituted against six different parties, the plaintiff prayed for khas possession of a four-anna share in a certain lot, or, in the alternative, for a decree for arrears of rent against such of the defendants as should, on inquiry, appear to be respectively liable It appeared that the plaintiff had been kept out of possession by one only of the six defendants, and that another defendant was liable for a portion only of such arrears Held that the suit was not bad for misjoinder; Janoki v Ramarunjan, 4 C 949.

A plaintiff can sue to establish his own rights only and has no right to obtain an adjudication of the claims of any defendants unless such adjudication be necessary to give him the appropriate relief to which he is entitled.—Woopendra Narain v Aghore Nath, 9 C W N 498

A landlord can institute one suit for rent of several holdings or tenures, but the decree would be a money decree and not rent decree —Rhidayanath v. Krishna, 34 C. 298. 11 C. W. Suits by some of the junior members of a Malabar tarwad against the karnavan and the other members of the tarwad, and certain persons to whom some of the tarwad property had been alienated by the karnavan, for a declaration that the alienations were not binding on the tarwad. Held that the suit was not bad for multifariousness.—Abdul v. Ayaga, 12 M. 234 (7 M. 290 followed). See also, Mahomed v. Krishnan, 11 M. 106.

Where it appeared that the title of defendant No. 2 was derived from defendant No. 1, and was to stand or to fall with the failure or success of the plaintiff's claim against the latter, there were not two causes of action, but one, namely, the infringement of the plaintiff's right by the defendant No 1; Indra Kumar v. Gur Prasad, 11 A. 33.

A suit to recover a mortgage-debt, together with arrears of rent due by the defendant upon a mortgage-deed and a lease, is not bad for misjoinder; Gobinda v. Mana Vikraman, 14 M. 284.

A suit to recover rent of agricultural holding and fishery rents is not bad for misjoinder.—Shib Prasad v. Vokai Pali, 33 C. 601.

Where the owner of two villages sold under a decree obtained upon a mortgage, claims contribution proportionately against the owners of the other properties included in the mortgage, and does not claim from them, all collectively, one lump sum as contribution, he may join all the contributors in one suit. He may also bring a single suit in respect of two sales; Ibn Husain v. Ramdai, 12 A. 110.

The transferee of the interests of a mortgagee by conditional sale, who was prevented from obtaining possession by persons who had purchased separate portions of the mortgaged property from the mortgagor on different dates subsequent to mortgage, brought a suit against these purchases, and also against the mortgagor for foreclosure and possession. Held that the suit was not objectionable on the ground of misjoinder.—Srinath Das v. Khetter Mohun, 16 C. 693 P. C.

Under s. 158, Bengal Tenancy Act, the landlord is authorized to include in one application two or more tenancies held by the same tenant.—Dijendra Nath v. Soylendra Nath, 24 C. 197, p. 292: 1 C. W. N. 266.

The plaintiff sued to enforce an agreement for the execution of a conveyance, and for possession of certain immovable property, making the executant of the agreement, and the subsequent execution-purchasers of the property, defendants in the suit, alleging that such purchasers had purchased in bad faith and with notice of the agreement. Held that there was not necessarily a misjoinder of causes of action.—Gumari v. Ram Charan. 1 A. 555.

Single Suit to Eject Different Tenants Holding Different Parcels of Land.—It is not permissible for a plaintiff to unite in the same litigation several suits against separate defendants. A single suit to eject different tenants holding different parcels of land is bad for misjoinder. Where, however, the plaintiff adopts the procedure, he cannot be heard to object to the use of evidence to which the irregularity of his procedure has given relevance to; Seturatnam Iyer v. Venkatachalla Goundan, 43 M. 567 P. Suit for Contribution—Joinder of Different Causes of Action Against Same Defendants.—There is nothing in law to prevent two causes of action against the same defendants being joined in one suit. The superior landlord of the plaintiff and defendants, who were co-sharers in certain tenures, brought two suits for rent and obtained two decrees jointly against them. The decrees were executed and the tenures were put up to sale. The plaintiff paid the entire decretal amount and sued the defendants for contribution claiming, against each of them, a specific sum according to his share. Held that, though the plaintiffs satisfied two different claims separately and on two different occasions, the causes of action, which were different, could be joined in one suit for contribution; Maharajah Birendra Kishore v. Padma Lochan, 51 I. C. 826.

Instances where Plaintiff was Not Allowed to Unite Several Causes of Action Against Same Defendants.—It is illegal to join different causes of action in the same suit against different parties where each has a distinct and separate interest, e.g., to a joint action for the price of timber against defendants who purchased each one pair of timber from the plaintiff separately from the other.—Baroo Sircar v. Mossim Mundle, 21 W. R. 206.

Under five different pattahs, A granted to B putni leases of different mahals. The rent falling into arrears, the mahals were sold on two different dates and purchased by three different persons. In a suit brought by B against all the three purchasers to set aside the sales, held that the suit was bad for multifariousness.—Imrit v Dhunput, 9 B. L. R 241: 18 W. R. 288.

Two co-parceners of a village sold their shares separately to the same person, upon which a third co-parcener sued them and the vendor jointly to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of the sales. Held, that the suit was bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action.—Bhagwati Prosad v. Bindeshri Gir, 6 A. 106. See also Kalian Singh v. Gur Doyal, 4 A. 163. But see, Hurbans Tewari v. Tota Sahu, 32 A. 14.

The plaintiff, alleging that three causes of action had accrued to him sued four different persons, claiming possession of the land as against them all and mesne profits by way of damages against each defendant for different periods. Held, that the suit was bad for multifariousness.—Narsingh Das v. Mangal Dubey, 5 A. 163 Referred to in Ganeshi Lal v. Khairati, 16 A. 279.

A suit on foreign judgment against all the members of a firm against some of whom only the judgment was obtained was held bad for misjoinder.—Lakshmanan Chetti v Karuppan Chetti, 6 M. 273.

In a suit for partition, it was not disputed that the plaintiffs were entitled to the share they claimed; but they joined as defendants a number of ryots whom they sought to eject. Held, that the ryots were improperly joined as defendants in the suit.—Saminada Pillai v. Subba Reddiar, 1 M. 333.

Where the plaintiff claimed the ownership of the properties in suit through her late husband and alleged that her rights had been infringed at different times and by different sets of defendants, and it was found that they did not act in concert and did not combine together to dispossess the plaintiff. Held, that there were separate causes of action against separate sets of persons and that the trial could not proceed as upon a single cause of action —Ram Prosad v Sachi Dassi, 6 C W. N 585 (14 C. 435 and 681 approved; 7 M 290, 11 M. 106, 21 C 831 dissented from, and 29 C. 257 distinguished.)

The plaintiffs sued for a declaration that the several alienations made by defendant No 1 (a Hindu widow) to the other defendants were void, and that they (plaintiffs) were entitled to the several properties after her death; also for an injunction restraining her from making similar unlawful alienations in the future Held, that the suit was bad for misjoinder of causes of action —Kachar Bhog, v Bai Rathore, 7 B 289. Referred to in Ganesh Lal v. Khairati, 16 A. 279. But see Parbati v. Mahomed, 29 A. 267.

Where it appeared that the titles relied on by the defendants were quite distinct from one another, and that there had been no collusion or combination amongst them to keep the plaintiff out of possession, held, that the suit was bad for misjoinder of causes of action —Sudhendu Mohon v. Durga Dasi, 14 C 435, Ram Narain v Annoda Prosad, 14 C 681.

Misjoinder of Plaintiffs and Causes of Action.—The first part of this rule authorizes a plaintiff to unite in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendant or defendants, the second part of the rule authorizes several plaintiffs having causes of action in which they are jointly interested against the same defendant or defendants jointly, to unite them in one suit the right of several plaintiffs having causes of action against the same defendant or defendants jointly, to unite them in one suit depends upon similar considerations as in the case of defendants, that is, several plaintiffs can jointly bring one suit against the same defendant or defendants when they have joint interest in the main question raised in the litigation, thus the second part of this rule is intended to make it clear that several plaintiffs can only join in suing several defendants in one suit for several causes of action, when the plaintiffs are jointly interested in each or all of such causes of action otherwise their suit will be objectionable on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs The latter part of this rule is to be read with Or 1, r 1 The following cases under the old Code are illustrations of misjoinder of plaintiffs

Where one of two widows of a deceased Hindu and her adopted son sued as co-plaintiffs, claiming in the alternative either to recover the whole family estate for the latter, if the adoption was valid, or if the adoption was invalid, one-half of the estate for the former Held, that the suit was bad for misjoinder —Lingammal v Chinna Venkatammal, 6 M. 239. But see Fakirappa v Rudrapa, 16 B 116, where it has been held that where persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of a suit and their interests are identical, and where they do not advance antagonistic claims, the suit is not bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs This case has been followed in Haramani v Hari Charn, 22 C 833, and in Ningama v. Ramappa, 28 B. 94.

A Hindu widow with her two daughters as co-plaintiffs sued her stepson, alleging that he was in possession of his father's property, for maintenance, and for the marriage expenses of her daughters both of whom were of marriageable age. Held, that the suit was not bad for misjoinder.—Tulsa v. Gopal Rai, 6 A. 632.

In a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption, if it appears that one of the plaintiffs in the suit has no right of pre-emption, the whole suit should be dismissed for misjoinder.—Karan Singh v. Muhammad Ismail, 7 A. 860.

Where a joint suit was brought against the same defendant by five different persons, each of whom had contracted to apply a certain number of maunds of cotton to the defendant, held, that they cannot all join in one suit for damages for breach of the five contracts; Chandulal v. Dagdu, 27 Bom. L R. 72: A. I. R. 1925 B. 342· 87 I C. 435

Procedure to be Adopted in Cases of Misjoinder of Causes of Action.— In cases of misjoinder of causes of action, the parties may be allowed opportunity to amend their pleadings, under Or. VI, r. 17; see the cases noted under that rule.

Where there has been a misjoinder of parties and causes of action, the only course open to the Court is that of returning causes of action, the only course open to the Court is that of returning the plaint for amendment; Alah Buksh v. Sadiq Ali, 38 P. R 1903, Ram Prasad v. Sachi Dasi, 6 C. W. N. 585; Ganesha v Khairati, 16 A. 279; Behari Lal v. Kadu Ram, 15 A 380. It is not proper to dismiss the suit without giving the plaintiff an opportunity of amendment; Behari Lal v. Kodu Ram, 15 A. 380 If the suit was dismissed, and the plaintiff appealed, the Appellate Court might set aside the decree and remand the case to the lower Court with a direction to that Court to return the plaint for amendment; Ramanuja v. Devi ıayaka, 8 M. 361. Misjoinder of causes of action can be cured under s 99, if it does not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court; see s 99 and the cases noted thereunder. The effect of the provisions of s 99 is to preclude the Appellate Court from reversing a decree on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action and remanding the case to the lower Court as was done under the old Code, unless the misjoinder has affected the merits of the case.

Misjoinder of Defendants and Causes of Action.—Where there are two or more defendants and two or more causes of action, the rule says that the plaintiff may unite in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendants jointly Joint interest in the questions raised by the litigation is a condition precedent to the joinder of several causes of action against several defendants, Bhagwati v. Bindeshri, 6 A 106; Harbans v. Tota Sahu, 32 A. 14: 3 I C 735. The plaintiff is not entitled to unite different causes of action in one suit against different defendants, who are not jointly liable in respect of each and all causes of action If the causes of action alleged are separate and the defendants are arrayed in different sets, the suit is bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action technically called multifariousness; Narsingh v Mangal, 5 A. 163, 171. There is no provision in the Code allowing distinct causes of action against distinct sets of defendants—that is to say, causes of action in which the defendants are not all jointly interested—to be united in one suit; Umabai v. Bhau Balwant, 34 B 358; Mullick Kefait v. Sheo Pershad, 23 C. 821. 826. The general rule that the plaintiff cannot unite, in the same suit, causes of action in which the defendants are not jointly interested, is, however, subject to this exception that, whether the right to the relief claimed arises from the same act or transaction, and there is a commc question of law or fact against two or more persons, they may be joined in one suit; Ramendra v. Brajendra, 45 C. 111, 122-123

The following are some of the most important cases of multifariousness.—Where the plaintiff sought to obtain the specific performance of a contract to sell certain estate, against the second defendant, and also asked for a declaration that the third defendant was not entitled to a certain equitable charge claimed by him against the said estate. It was held that there was, a misjoinder of defendants and causes of action, because the two causes of action against the two defendants are entirely distinct. They do not form the same transaction nor would their trial involve any common question of law or fact; Luckumsey v. Faizulla, 5 B 177. It is different, however, when the plaintiff (purchaser) sues in the same suit both A (vendor) and B (vendor's benamidar) and claims a decree for specific performance against A and a declaration that he is a mere benamidar against B; Mokund Lal v. Chotay Lal, 10 C. 1061.

Where a plaintiff brings one suit against several persons as defendants, alleging that each of them had entered into a separate agreement with him for the delivery to him of certain goods to be manufactured by them and that they had failed to make the delivery according to the terms of their agreement, and praying for a decree for the delivery of the goods, the suit is bad for multifariousness, because the breach of each contract gives rise to a distinct cause of action and no one defendant is interested in any of the causes of action arising from the breach of contract with the other defendants; Namasivaya v. Kadir Ammal, 17 M. 168

A, a member of a joint Hindu family consisting of two other members, agrees to sell his share of the property to P. On his failure to execute the deed of conveyance, P brings a suit against A for specific performance and also prays for partition and possession against the other two members The suit is bad for misjoinder; Rangayya v. Subramania, 40 M. 365: 40 I. C. 429 F. B.

Revision.—A decision on the question whether a suit is bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action is subject to revision; Velappa v. Chidambara, 43 M. L. J. 277. A. I. R. 1922 M. 174: Shanmuka v. Arunachellam, 45 M. 199. A. I. R. 1922 M. 332; Arunachellam v. Arunachellam, 43 M. L J. 218: 99 I. C. 966: A. I. R. 1922 M. 436.

Only certain claims to be joined for recovery of immoveable property.

4. No cause of action shall, unless with the leave of the Court, be joined with a suit for the recovery of immoveable property, except—

(a) claims for mesne profits or arrears of rent in respect of the property claimed or any part thereof;

(b) claims for damages for breach of any contract under which the property or any part thereof is held; and

(c) claims in which the relief sought is based on the same cause of action : [S. 44, rule (a).]

Provided that nothing in this rule shall be deemed to prevent any party in a suit for foreclosure or redemption from asking to be put into possession of the mortgaged property. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations Made and their Effect.—This rule corresponds to rule (a) of section 44 of the C P. Code of 1882, with several modifications The words " or to obtain a declaration of title to immoveable property " which occurred in the last sentence of section 44, rule (a), have been omitted. The effect of the omission of these words is to limit its operation to cases, where the suit is for recovery of immoveable property. The words " or any part thereof " have been added to clause (a); clause (c) of section 44 of the old Code has been omitted and a new clause has been substituted in its place. The proviso is new. The language of this rule was taken from Or. XVIII, r. 2 of the English Rules

Joinder of Claims.—This rule provides that in a suit for recovery of immoveable property, the claims specified in the three clauses (a), (b) and (c), may be joined with it without the leave of the Court. But where in a suit for recovery of immoveable property it is sought to join claims other than those mentioned in the three exceptions, leave of the Court must be obtained.

This rule does not forbid the joinder of several causes of action entitling the plaintiff to the recovery of immoveable property, but a joinder with such causes of action of other causes of action of a different character except in the cases therein specified —Chidambara Pillai v Ramasami, 5 M 161. Explained and distinguished in Ambika Dat v. Ramudit, 17 A. 274. See Nisar Husain v Nisar Ali, 3 A. L J. 123 A. W. N. (1906) 54.

This rule forbids the joinder with a suit for the recovery of immoveable property, or to obtain a declaration of title to such property of any claim other than the claims specified in the rule Therefore a plaintiff who sues to recover moveable property cannot add to such a suit a claim for possession of immoveable property.—Hingu Lal v Baldeo Ram, 24 A. 553.

This rule substantially follows Or XVIII, r 2 of the Supreme Court in England and was intended for the protection of the defendant He may by his conduct waive the benefit of that rule; Satischandra v Asruffuddin, 8 C L. J. 196.

The right to join in one suit two or more causes of action against the defendant cannot be exercised unless the Court has jurisdiction over all the causes of action; Khimji Jivrajee v Purushotum, 7 M 171

Suit for Recovery of Immoveable Property.—Suit to establish title to immoveable property not claiming possession is not a suit for the recovery of immoveable property; Gledhill v Hunter, 14 Ch D 492

A suit for recovery of mortgage debt, with an alternative prayer for sale of the mortgaged property, is not a suit for the recovery of immoveable property; Govinda v Mana Vikraman, 14 M 281.

A suit for a share in a mortgage decree with other properties is not one for recovery of immoveable property; Gorachand v. Basanta, 15 C. L. J. 238.

Immoveable property in this rule includes a right of way; Bejoy Chandra v. Banku, 13 C. W. N. 451; 9 C. L. J. 336.

The ordinary rule is that a plaintiff mortgagee cannot be allowed so to frame his suit as to draw into controversy the title of a third party who is in no way connected with the mortgage and who has set up a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee Causes of action of this description cannot be joined in a suit to enforce a mortgage —Joggesurar Dutt v. Bhuban Mohan, 33 C. 425: 3 C L. J 205.

Leave to Join Separate Causes of Action.—Leave required by this rule is necessary, and it cannot be given afterwards See the judgment of TREVELYAN, J., dated 21st May, 1861, in the unreported case of Soshi Bhusan Sreemani v. Kali Kristo Sreemani, referred to by Mr. Hill in the case of Nistarini v Nundo Lal, 26 C 891 (905). 3 C. W. N. 670 (676).

Where claims in respect of moveable and immoveable property are united in one plaint without leave of the Court, the suit is liable to be dismissed.—Venkiti Nayak v Murugappa Chetti, 20 M. 48 (F B.) See also Subbaran Nayudu v. Yagana Pantulu, 19 M. 90

This rule is not applicable to a suit unless it is for the recovery of immoveable property Even in such case, defect of multifariousness is cured if leave of the Court is obtained previous to the bringing of the suit.—Nistarini v Nundo Lal, 30 C 369 7 C. W. N 353 Affirmed in 33 C. 180 P. C

A plaintiff may, with the leave of the Court, join causes of action; but he is nowhere compelled to do so.—Sheo Ratan v Sheosahai, 6 A. 358.

An objection that the plaintiff has joined together causes of action, which by this rule may not be joined together without leave first obtained, cannot be taken for the first time in appeal.—Dhondiba Krishnaji v. Ram Chandra, 5 B 554 Followed in Maula v Gulzari Singh, 16 A 130

Joinder of Claims for Mesne Profits or Arrears of Rent.—A suit for possession and rent of a house were held to be causes of action properly joined in one suit —Jago Mohun Sahu v Mani, 3 B L R. 77: 11 W. R. 542. See also, Kashinath v Nathoo Keshar, 38 B. 444.

A cause of action for the recovery of mesne profits accruing before the date of the institution of the suit arises at the time of the suit, and such a cause of action may or may not be joined with a suit for the recovery of the immoveable property under this rule; Rameswar v. Dilu, 21 C. 550, p. 552.

Claims for the recovery of possession of immoveable property and for mesne profits are distinct claims, and separate suits will lie in respect of each of them. This rule merely permits their joinder in one suit in regard to the same property.—Lalessor v. Janki, 19 C. 615. Followed in Ponnamal v. Ramamirda, 38 M. 829. But see, Mewa Kuar v. Banarsi Prosad, 17 A. 533; Bhirrav v. Sitaram, 19 B. 532.

There is nothing to prevent a claim for damages and a claim for establishment of title being joined with a claim for the relief provided by section 9 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877.—Ram Harakh v. Sheodihal, 15 A. 384.

In a suit for possession of a portion of a property and to set aside deeds relating to another portion, held that the two causes of action were properly joined together.—Amiran v. Asihun, 3 B. L. R. 190: 12 W. R. 11.

Where a person sues for a decree declaratory of his right to a half share in a cultivatory holding, he is also entitled to ask for mesne profits and it is open to the Court in granting a declaratory decree to also decree mesne profits; Gangashai v. Bansi, 17 A. L J. 993. 42 A. 64, 52 I. C. 649.

Joinder of Claims for Damages for Breach of Any Contract.—In a suit for specific performance of a contract, the plaintiff can also sue for recovery of part of purchase-money advanced —Cutts v. Brown, 6 C 328. 5 C. L. R. 487 and 7 C. L. R. 171.

In a suit by a prior lessee for possession, for damages, for refusal to register and to enforce registration against the lessor and subsequent lessee, held, that three distinct causes of action were improperly joined.—Prabhuram Hazra v. Robinson, 3 B. L R 49 11 W. R. 398

Claims in which the Relief Sought is Based on the Same Cause of Action.—This clause should be read with r 2 of this order, which says that " every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the same cause of action;" therefore, a plaintiff may join in a suit for recovery of immoveable property, other claims if the cause of action is the same in respect of all; otherwise those other claims will be barred by the provisions of rule 2.

The new clause (c) has been inserted in order to avoid the possibility of mistake and make it perfectly clear that there is nothing irregular in seeking to recover in one suit immoveable and moveable property, if the cause of action is the same in both; Chhabil Das v. Massu, 243 P L. R. 1913. 4 P R. 1914: 145 P. W R 1913 19 I C. 981 If the cause of action is not the same, a suit for the recovery of both moveable and immoveable property cannot be instituted without the leave of the Court; Hingulal v. Baldeo, 24 A 553

This clause substantially follows the rule laid down in Gledhill v. Hunter, 14 Ch D. 492, p. 495, see Kashinath v Nathoo Keshav, 38 v. 444, in which it has been held that a claim for possession and the claim for rent ought to be enforced in one suit, provided the cause of action is the same and that the suit is not open to objection on the ground of multifariousness.

There is nothing irregular in seeking to recover moveable and immoveable property in the same suit, if the cause of action is the same in respect of both; Giyana v. Kandasami, 10 M. 375; Ganesh Dutt v. Jewach, 31 C. 262, P. C ; Banarsidas v. Municipal Committee, Delhi, 28 P. L. R. 1907 see also Nistarini v. Nundo, 3 C. W. N. 670; Mazhar Ali v. Sajjad Husain, 24 A. 358, and Kathan v. Sadayan, 17 M. L. J. 135, where it has been held that the observation of the Privy Council in 31 C. 262: 8 C. W. N. 146, must be limited to cases where a party sets up the same title to moveable and immoveable property, and it was not intended to apply to a case where a party claims a declaration of title and, in the same suit, sets up a claim for damages for tort.

Clauses (a) and (c) of Or II, r 4 are not exceptions but provisos added with a view to explain that the rule does not forbid the joinder of other claims to claim for immoveable property when they arise out of the same cause of action; Hiromal v Farid Khan, 9 S. L. R. 23: 29 I. C. 939.

Proviso to the Rule.—The proviso is intended to enable any party in a suit for foreclosure or redemption to ask to be put in possession of the mortgaged property. This rule has no application to the case of a plaintiff who, holding two mortgage-deeds over separate properties, joins both in one suit for sale or foreclosure.—Raghbar v Jawala Singh, 25 A. 229 (17 A. 274 referred to); Khub Lal v. Jhapsi, 3 Pat. 244 78 I. C. 88: A. I. R. 1924 Pat 613.

Appeal.—Order rejecting application under this section for leave to join two causes of action, is not appealable, but when the Judge refuses leave, and returns the plaint, with directions to file separate suits, such an order is a decree, and is therefore appealable.—Bandhan Singh v. Solhu, 6 A 191.

Claims by or against executor, administrator or heir

5. No claim by or against an executor, administrator or heir, as such, shall be joined with claims by or against him personally, unless the last-mentioned claims are alleged to arise with reference to the estate in respect of which the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued as executor, administrator or heir, or are such as he was entitled to, or liable for, jointly with the deceased person whom he represents. [S. 44, rule (b).]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds exactly to rule (b) of s 44 of the old Code and is based upon English Or XVIII, r. 5.

Object and Scope of the Rule.—The first part of this rule prohibits a litigant from joining in one suit, a claim by or against an executor, administrator or heir as such, i.e., in his representative character, with claims by or against him personally, in other words, it makes a distinction between a suit brought by a plaintiff to enforce rights on his own account because he is an heir, and a suit in which he sues in a representative capacity alleging that he is an heir and suing as such. His legal capacity in the two cases is absolutely distinct; it is only on reference to his representative capacity that it can be said that a claim has been made by or against an heir as such. The latter part of this rule qualifies the first part by proving that, (1) unless the claims by or against him personally are alleged to arise with reference to the estate represented by him, or (2) unless the claims are such as he was entitled to or liable for jointly with the deceased person whom he represents. In the cases mentioned in (1) and (2) the suit would not be bad for misjoinder of causes of action. The object of the rule is to prevent an executor or administrator from intermingling the assets of the testator with his own money; Tredegar v. Roberts, (1914) 1 K. B. 283, 287.

" Heir, as such."—The words " heir as such " have been the subject of discussion in several cases; there is divergence of judicial opinion with regard to the meaning of the words, between the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts. In Ahmeduddin v. Sikandar Begun, 18 A. 256, it was held by the Allahabad High Court, (dissenting from Ashobai v. Haji Tyeb, 6 B. 390) that the word "heir" referred to in s. 44 (b) of the C. P. Code, 1882 (now rule 5) is an heir, suing or being sued in his representative capacity, who like executor or administrator represents the estate of a deceased and that it is impossible to hold that the rule precludes a person from joining a claim for property acquired by himself, with a claim for property inherited by him from another, when he does not represent persons other than himself Both of such claims are advanced by him in his personal capacity seeing that, in the claim as an heir he claims it in his own right, and not on behalf of any one else In this case a Mahomedan widow sued the daughters (1) for her dower, and (2) for her share in the husband's estate. The Allahabad case was approved in Hafizaboo v. Mahommed Kassim, 31 B 105 · 8 Bom. L R. 734, noted below.

Claim Against Executor When Can be Combined with Claim Against Him Personally.—The word " estate " in Or II, r 5, C P Code means both the estate rightly and properly held as executor and the estate in its physical sense When the claims against the executor as such and against him personally arise in reference to the estate in respect of which the defendant is executor, the joinder of the two claims is permissible; Nripendra Nath v. Birendra Nath, 21 C W N 939 41 I C. 615

" Unless the last-mentioned claims are alleged to arise with reference to the estate."—Partnership between plaintiff's father and defendant—Subsequent partnership between plaintiff and defendant with old assets—Plaintiff obtaining letters of administration to his father's estate—Suit as plaintiff to recover father's share in the first partnership and his own share in the second—Such a suit does not offend the provisions of Or. II, 5, C P. Code and it comes within the exception specified in the rule as the plaintiff's personal claim in respect of the partnership with himself "arises with reference to the estate in respect of which he is suing as administrator." The words "arise with reference to" in the exception to Or II, r 5 are very general and cover a case where the plaintiff's personal claim can only be determined after calculating the amount due to him as administrator The expression "arises with reference to" should not be read as being equivalent only to arises against or on behalf of"; Arunachellam v Arunachellam, 43 M L J 218 16 L W. 175 · (1922) M W. N 453

Cases Illustrating Misjoinder of Claims Contemplated by This Rule.—On the death of a co-parcener of a joint Hindu family his share and interest in the family property is automatically absorbed and the surviving co-parceners become the full owners of the whole estate Such co-parcen-ers are not the heirs of the deceased but inherit by survivorship and become the owners of the interest of the deceased in the family estate as co-owners in their own right and by the legal extinction of the interest of the deceased co-parcener by reason of his death The claim of the widow of such a deceased co-parcener for maintenance is clearly not against "the estate of the deceased" husband but is against the property of which he was a co-parcener at the time of his death Accordingly there is no misjoinder of causes of action if the widow in one suit sues the co-parceners of her deceased husband to recover her stridhan property improperly or illegally detained by them and also to enforce her right of maintenance out of the estate of the joint family of which during his lifetime her husband was a member, Jankibai v. Shriniuas Ganesh, 38 B. 120.

Those to whom this rule relates, have the common characteristic that they own their legal condition to the death of another But there are others of whom this can be predicated, as for instance, legatees or next of kin, who are not named in this rule Executors, administrators and heirs have this characteristic in common, not shared by legatees and next of kin, namely, that not only they acquire title from the deceased, but they may represent him In this is to be found the clue to the meaning of the rule —Hafizaboo v Mahomed Cassum, 31 B 105· 8 Bom L. R 734, (6 B 390 not followed, 18 A 256, approved;) referred to in Jagattarini v Prafulla, 35 I C 792

In a suit for administration and accounts of separate estates against executors of a will, the plaintiff cannot sue for recovery of jewels and ornaments, as the claim for ornaments had no reference to the estate and was personal to the plaintiff herself —Ashabai v Tyeb, 6 B. 390

Procedure.—Where two claims which this rule does not allow to be joined are joined in one suit, the practice is to amend the plaint by striking out one of them, and the suit may then be proceeded with; Ashabai v Haji Tyeb, 6 B 390

Power of Court to order separate trials.

6. Where it appears to the Court that any causes of action joined in one suit cannot be conveniently tried or disposed of together, the Court may order separate trials or make such other order as may be expedient [S. 45, para. 2.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to para 2 of s. 45 of the C P Code, 1882 with some modifications and changes The words "at any time before the first hearing, of its own motion, or on the application of any defendant, or at any subsequent stage of the suit, if the parties agree," which occurred in the old section after the words "Court may," have been omitted; and the words "for the separate disposal thereof" which occurred in the last sentence of the old section, after the word "expedient," have also been omitted. See also s. 47 of the old Code.

"Court may order separate trials."—Where a suit was brought by a Hindu for partition of family property, against his father, brothers, and fifteen others, to whom the father had improperly alienated numerous parcels of the said property at different times, held that the better course was for the Court to have ordered separate trials to be held in respect of each alienation.—Subramanya v. Sadasiva, 8 M. 75.

In a suit on title in which the recovery of immoveable property and mesne profits are claimed, the Court may order separate trials in respect of the claim for the recovery of the immoveable property and in respect of the claim for mesne profits.—Fatima Bibi v. Abdul Majid, 14 A. 531.

Where the parties concerned, though in different relation, in a particular litigation are all before the Court, and their cases have been stated, the Court if it finds the several causes as between plaintiff and the several defendants cannot properly or conveniently be tried together, should deal with them separately as sub-suits under the title and number of the principal suit from which they sprung —Khadar Saheb v. Choti Bibi, 8 B. 616.

A Court has no power to direct a suit to be dismissed by reason of the misjoinder of causes of action, but can take action under this rule; Gur Prosad v. Gur Prosad, 19 C. L. J 616.

The case that is contemplated by Or. II, r. 6, C P Code, is a case where the causes of action joined in the same suit are essentially of a different character. But where the facts alleged in the plaint arise out of facts that are common to both the causes of action joined in the suit, the Court is not justified in excluding one of them on the ground that it would be convenient to try those two causes of action together, Nandarani v. Hari Charan 36 I. C 29

" Such other order as may be expedient.—If the Court finds it inconvenient to order separate trials, then it should allow the plaintiff to amend his plaint or to order that the suit be confined to such other causes of action as may be conveniently disposed of in one suit

A decree-holder, in execution of a decree against the father, attached a house as belonging to him and his two sons, forming a joint Hindu family. The sons objected that the house had been previously partitioned, and was held by them and their father in separate shares, but their objection was disallowed. They then brought a joint-suit for a declaration that their respective portions of the house were not liable to attachment. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit entirely on the ground of misjoinder. Held that the plaintiffs should have been allowed to amend their plaint by striking out the name of one of them —Behari v. Kodu Ram, 15 A. 38.

Where a suit was instituted by six plaintiffs jointly, and five of them were held to be not entitled to proceed in the suit on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action, one plaintiff only was allowed to continue the suit.—Barrow v. Hem Chunder, 35 C. 495.

This rule applies when there are several causes of action against the same defendant or the same defendants jointly, and it empowers the Court to order that the suit be confined to such of the causes of action as may be conveniently disposed of in one suit.— Muthappa Chetty v. Muthupalani, 27 M. 80.

Powers of Appellate Court to Make an Order under this Rule.—In a case of a joinder of causes of action, where the trial Court does not think fit to act under Or. II, r. 6, the appellate Court ought not to interfere with the discretion; Paiva Ram v. Kesho Nath, 73 I. C. 892.

Any objection on the ground that contradictory causes of action ought not to have been tried together cannot be urged in second appeal if such objection as to the frame of the suit was not raised in the trial Court; Dwarik Bala v. Nadhiram, 40 I. C. 462

Consolidation of Suits.—This rule deals with the separate trials of causes of action joined in one suit on the ground of inconvenience But *there is no express provision in the C. P. Code for consolidation of seve*ral suits. In Kali Churn v. Surja Kumar, 17 C W N 526, it has been held that the Court has inherent power under s 151 of the Code to order consolidation of suits in a proper case Consolidation was ordered by the Court in some cases under the old Code on general principles of justice and equity and also on the ground of convenience, see 15 W R 110: 10 C. 58. In consolidated suits the defendants may prefer one appeal, 15 W. R. 395 As to Court's power of consolidation of appeals, see, Janardan v. Shib Prosad, 43 C 95 S 128 (h) empowers the High Courts to make rules for consolidation of suits, appeals and other proceedings.

7. All objections on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and, in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived Objections as to misjoinder.

COMMENTARY.

This rule embodies in a concise and modified form the substance of the provisions contained in sections 46 and 47 of the Code of 1882 It is analogous to Or. I, r. 13, which rule relates to objections as to non-joinder or misjoinder of parties, whereas this rule relates to misjoinder of causes of action. See notes to Or. 1, r. 13

Dismissal of a suit against one of the defendants without trial after first hearing and settlement of issues is illegal, Singa Reddi v Modava, 20 M. 360.

Even on second appeal, if a suit is found to be bad for misjoinder of causes of action, the proper procedure would be not to dismiss the suit, but to direct the Court below to return the plaint for amendment; Sarala v. Sarada, 2 C. L. J. 602, (20 W. R 240, 18 A 131, followed).

Waiver of Objections—See Ahmedbhai v Sir Dinshaw, 13 Bom. L R. 1061, where DAVAR & ROBERTSON, JJ, expressed contrary views on the question of waiver. See also, Ghumanmal v. Papurbai, 9 S. L. R. 11: 30 I. C. 24.

Where the plaintiff raised no objection of non-joinder when the party was taken out of the list of defendant. Held that the objection was waived; Ghumanmal v. Papurbai, 9 S. L. R. 11: 30 I. C. 24.

An objection as to joinder of causes of action, namely, whether the plaintiff could agitate the question as to the tenancy of the defendants in a suit for partition, if not taken in the Court of first instance is to be deemed to be waived; Midnapore Zemindary Co., Ltd. v. Kumar Nurse Narain, 33 C. L J. 317: 63 I. C. 161.

ORDER III.

RECOGNIZED AGENTS AND PLEADERS.

Appearances etc. may be in person, by recognized agent or by pleader.

1. Any appearance, application or act in or to any Court, required or authorized by law to be made or done by a party in such Court, may, except where otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, be made or done by the party in person, or by his recognized agent, or by a pleader appearing, applying or acting, as the case may be, on his behalf.

Provided that any such appearance shall, if the Court so directs, be made by the party in person. [S. 36.]

COMMENTARY.

Changes in the Section.—The italicized words in this section have been substituted by the Amendment Act XXII of 1926 for the words " duly appointed to act " which occurred after the words " or by a pleader."

This rule corresponds to s. 36 of the C P. Code of 1882 with the following modifications The words "to a suit or appeal" before "in such Court" have been omitted; the word "where" has been substituted for the word "when".

Appearance and Act.—These words have a well-defined and well-known meaning To appear for a client in Court is to be present and to represent him in the various stages of the litigation at which it is necessary that the client should be present in Court by himself or some representative. To act for a client in Court is to take on his behalf in the Court or in the offices of the Court, the necessary steps that must be taken in the course of the litigation in order that his case may be properly laid before the Court, Kali Kumar v. Nobinchandra, 6 C. 585 (590). As to what amounts to appearance, see, notes under Or. IX, rr 9 and 13.

Proviso.—This proviso is to be read with Or V, r. 3, under which the Court is authorized to order a plaintiff or defendant to appear in person. As to consequence of non-appearance of a party who has been ordered to appear in person, see Or IX, r. 12.

" Except where otherwise expressly provided."—Or. XXXIII, r. 3 expressly provides that application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is to be made by the applicant in person; so also for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, see Or. XLIV, r. 1

Party in Person.—A party to a suit or any proceeding can himself appear, act or make applications on his own behalf A barrister or pleader appearing before the Court, as a litigant in person, ought to address the Court from the same place and in the same way as any ordinary member of the public, and not from the advocate's table or in robes; In re West Hope Tea Co. Ltd., 9 A. 180: 7 A. W. N. 7.

Appearance by Recognized Agent.—A karinda, who holds neither general nor special power-of-attorney authorizing him to act for his employer, is not a recognized agent; Badri Prosad v. Bhagwati, 16 A. 240.

An agent holding a power-of-attorney authorizing him to act and appear for a party to a suit, cannot bring the suit to a close by offering to be bound by the oath of the opposite party in a particular form; nor can a pleader so bind his client —Sadasiv Rayaji v. Maruti Vithal, 14 B. 455.

A recognized agent under this section is competent to make a reference to arbitration, but a person authorized by a muktarnama to look after a case is not competent to make the application —Bhugwan Dass v. Nund Lall, 12 C 173 (78). See also, Saturjit v. Dulhin Gulab Koer, 24 C. 469.

An attorney who has acted for a party to a suit and has discharged himself, cannot afterwards act for the opposite party, and the Court will on application restrain him from doing so; Ram Lall v Moonia, 6 C. 79.

Appearance by Pleader.—The words " by a pleader duly appointed to act in his behalf" in this section do not simply mean a person duly appointed by the party in the suit, but a pleader duly appointed according to the law regarding pleaders in force in the particular Court.—In re Pleaders of the Bombay High Court, 8 B 105, Veerappa v. Sundaresa, 48 M. 676

An application by a pleader who is instructed only to apply for an adjournment, which is refused, is not an "appearance" within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure; Satis v. Apara Pershad, 34 C. 403 F. B.: 11 C W N. 329: 5 C. L J. 247; Maung Pway v. Saya Pe, A. I. R. 1927 Rang. 46.

The mere presence of a recognized agent or pleader in Court without any intention to conduct the case on behalf of his client, is not an appearance within the meaning of this section. Appearance by pleader means appearance by pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit —Soonder Lal v. Goor Prosad, 23 B. 414. See also Venkatarama v Nataraja, 24 M L J 235: 13 M. L. T. 140: (1913) M W N 165 In Ram Chandra Pandurang v. Madhav, 16 B. 23, it has been held that the mere fact the pleader was not prepared to proceed with the case will not enable the Court to deal with the case as if there was no appearance at all But see, Shibendra Narain v. Kinoo Lam, 12 C 605, in which it has been held that unpreparedness of a pleader amounts to non-appearance

The personal appearance of a plaintiff who has instructed a pleader to appear in his behalf for the purpose of conducting the suit is not necessary and if the suit is dismissed in the presence of the pleader, the decree of dismissal would not be subject to the procedure for setting it aside laid down in Or IX. r 9 of the C P Code; Mowar Raghbar Singh v. Gowri Charan, 46 I C 492

As to the meaning of the term " pleader " and the appointment, appearance and authority of pleaders see notes under section 2.

"Duly appointed."—A pleader duly appointed by an official liquidator, who has obtained the sanction of the Court to institute a suit is "duly appointed" within the meaning of this rule, though no sanction was obtained for the appointment of the pleader; Kathiawar & Ahmedabad Banking Corporation v. Gurdas, 5 Lah. 414: A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 222: 84 I. C. 510

Where a party to a suit authorizes an agent, by special power of attorney, to appoint a pleader to sign execution petitions, a pleader appointed by the agent to support a petition verified by the agent is "a pleader duly appointed to act on his (party's) behalf" within the meaning of this rule; Thiruvenkata sami v. Pavadai, 48 I. A. 534: 44 M. 736: A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 403.

Under the new C. P. Code a pleader duly appointed to act for a party has authority under Or. III, r. 1 to make any application, including one for reference to arbitration; Sri Krishen Rochumal v. Relumal Penomal, 9 S. L. R. 183: 34 I. C. 845

Recognised agents.

2. The recognized agents of parties by whom such appearances, applications and acts may be made or done are—

(a) persons holding powers-of-attorney, authorizing them to make and do such appearances, applications and acts on behalf of such parties;

(b) persons carrying on trade or business for and in the names of parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application or act is made or done, in matters connected with such trade or business only, where no other agent is expressly authorized to make and do such applications and acts. [S. 37.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations and their Effect.—This rule corresponds to s. 37 of the Code of 1882 with some alterations. Clause (a) has been made wider and more comprehensive than the corresponding clause of the old Code, by the omission of the word "general" which preceded the words "power of attorney" and of the sentence "from parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application or act is made or done" which followed it. These omissions have made the scope of the present clause (a) more comprehensive, as the present clause (a) authorizes any person holding a simple power of attorney to make appearance and application in Court, and hence clause (b) of the old section, in which there was specific mention of certificated mooktears, has been omitted, as unnecessary.

By the omission of the sentence above referred to, the rulings in 6 B. 100, 28 A. 135, 23 A. 99 and 26 A. 19 and 154 have been rendered obsolete and inoperative, as those cases explained the meaning of the word "non-resident" which occurred in cl. (a) of s. 37 of the old section.

"The provisions of the existing Code which are represented by this clause are in somewhat different terms and are limited to persons holding general powers of attorney within certain local limits. The Committee think it unnecessary to preserve these limitations and have made the sub-clauses general. It follows that the present clause 37 (b) becomes unnecessary. It is included in sub-clause (a) The last paragraph of section 37 has been omitted as no longer necessary."—Report of the Special Committee.

Power of Attorney—Proof of Authority.—Where an act, purporting to be done under a power-of-attorney, is challenged as being in excess of the authority conferred by the power, it is necessary to show that on a fair consideration of the whole instrument, the authority in question is to be found within its four corners, either in express terms or by necessary implication.—Raj Radha Kissen v. Nauratan Lal 6 C. L. J. 490, Ghasiram v. Raja Mohan Bikram, 6 C. L. J. 639.

Where the defendant in the Court below failed to take the objection that a power-of-attorney constituting a recognized agent was not valid, he must be deemed to have waived the same. The objection cannot be allowed to be raised for the first time in appeal; Gopal Singh v. Bhaga, 69 I. C. 365.

Cl. (a).—"Persons holding power-of-attorney.—A plaint signed by authorized agent is valid in law unless it is shown that the suit has not been instituted with plaintiff's approval; Amirunnissa v. Ram Charan, 31 I. C. 859.

A power-of-attorney which authorizes a person to do all things and take all necessary steps to compel the execution of a decree is a general power-of-attorney, Venkataramana v Narasinga, 38 M. 134; 24 M. L. J. 180

Where a recognized agent carried on the litigation on behalf of his principal up to the High Court and obtained a decree without objection, held that the debtor could not object to the agent's right to execute the decree obtained by him as agent.—Parvatibai v Vinayek, 12 B. 68

A recognized agent cannot prosecute or defend a suit in his own name.—Mokha Harakraj v Biseswar, 5 Bom. L. R. Ap 11: 13 W. R. 344.

Where a lower appellate Court threw out a case on the ground that the plaint had not been filed by recognized agent, held, that the case should not have been thrown out on such a technical objection not affecting the merits of the case.—Mannoo Dassee v. Ishan Chander, 15 W. R. 215.

Plaintiff instituted a suit for recovery of possession of land from defendants and the plaint was filed by a mukhtear holding a special power-of-attorney for the plaintiff and not a general power-of-attorney as required by Or. III, r. 2 (a), as amended by the rules made by High Court of Bombay. The defendants objected that the suit was not properly instituted, but the Courts below overruled the plea and decreed that suit. Held, on second appeal, that the irregularity, if any, was cured by s. 99 C. P. Code, and that the decree of the Court below should be affirmed; Ganapathy Nana Powar v. Jivanabai, 24 Bom. L. R. 1302; Achut Sitaram v. Tarachand, 72 I. C. 1003.

Appellants, who held a decree for mesne profits and who were residents within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits an application for the execution of the decree was to be made, executed a special power-of-attorney in favour of R authorizing him, amongst other things, to execute necessary proceedings. R retained a pleader to present an execution petition verified by him (R), to examine witnesses, argue, etc An execution petition verfied by R and signed, not by any of the appellants, but by R and the pleader, and filed in the Court concerned, was held to have been duly presented though R was not a "recognized agent" within the meaning of s. 37, C. P. Code of 1882 (Or. III, r 1), Thiruvenkatasuami v Pavadai Pillai, 44 M 736: 41 M. L. J. 645

Special leave must be obtained from the Court in each case by a mukhtear desiring to conduct a contested civil suit Such leave should be given in exceptional cases; Raj Mohan v Basiruddin, 8 C W. N. 401.

A mukhtear filed an application for execution, but his name had been omitted by mistake from the mukhtearname Held that the Court has power to amend the mukhtearnama with retrospective effect; Chhaymannissa v Kazi Basirar, 11 C. A mukhtear having presented an application for execution, the Court returned it upon the ground that it ought to have been presented through a pleader and not through a mukhtear The meanings of the words "act" and "plead" explained —In the matter of Ishur Kant, 24 W. R 233 But in Gunnamayee Debi v Nobin Chander, 1 C. W. N. 11, it has been held that a mukhtear is authorized to apply for execution.

A recognized agent as such has no power to plead and examine witnesses, Hurchand v B N Ry Co, 19 C W N 64

The mere fact that a person looks after an appeal, and gives instructions to pleaders in connection with such appeal, does not show that such person was practising as a mukhtear Distinction between mukhtear and private agent pointed out.—Kali Kumar v. Nobin Chunder, 6 C. 595. 7 C. L R 562.

A mukhtearnama under seal is as valid as a mukhtearnama under signature A Judge is not bound or authorized to require proof of the genuineness of the seal.—In re the petition of the Maharaja of Burdwan, 7 W. R 475

An outsider, other than a duly certificated mukhtear practising as a mukhtear and receiving monthly wages from his employers, is neither a private agent nor a recognized agent of any of the employers within the meaning of this rule; Tussuduq Hussain v. Girbor Narain, 14 C. 559.

A person who uses special power-of-attorney to evade the provisions of law relating to appointment of pleaders or advocates is liable to punishment; Nga Nyun v. Nga Po, 7 Bur. L. T. 206: 25 I. C. 163.

A mere power to sue does not authorize an agent to do more than employ a vakil on the terms of paying him a reasonable remuneration; Keshav Bapuji v. Narayan, 10 B. 18.

Naibs or gumastas of a landlord empowered by written authority are recognized agents; see sections 145 and 187 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Cl. (b).—" Persons carrying on trade or business."—The munim of a firm is not, for the purposes of presenting a plaint, the recognized agent of a partner who is present within the jurisdiction.—Bisandas Valaid v Luckmichand, 6 Bom. H. C. 150.

The munim of a firm which has ceased to carry on business, who is engaged in collecting the assets of such firm, is a recognized agent of the owner of such firm, and can, on behalf of his absent principal, maintain or defend a suit brought in respect of the business of the firm.—Tukaji Maharaj Holkar v. Pitambar Das, 9 Bom. H. C. 427.

The agent contemplated by this section is one who has an initiative and independent discretion, albeit, subject possibly to principles and general orders prescribed for his guidance. A mere servant employed to carry out orders, or to execute a particular commission, or a factor or common agent who is not identified with the firm for which he acts, is not such an agent as is contemplated by cl. (c) of this section.—Gokul Das v. Ganesh Lall, 4 B. 416.

Where a plaint is signed and presented by the plaintiff's clerk who has no authority from the plaintiff to carry on business in the plaintiff's name, the plaint cannot be said to have been signed by the plantiff's "recognised agent." In such a case the Court may rightly dismiss the suit; Uttamram v. Thakurdas, 46 B. 150. A. I. R 1922 B 113· 64 I. C. 55 .

The Political Agent appointed by Government to manage the estate of the Chief of Mudhal is not a " recognized agent " within the meaning of cl. (b) of this rule; Venkatrav Raje v. Madharav, 11 B 53.

S. 85 was not intended to limit the scope of this rule and does not prevent the institution of a suit by an independent Prince in his own name and through a recognized agent other than one appointed under s. 85 — Maharaj of Bharatpur v Kacheru, 19 A. 510 (10 C 136 followed).

Service of process on recognized agent.

3. (1) Processes served on the recognized agent of a party shall be as effectual as if the same had been served on the party in person, unless the Court otherwise directs.

(2) The provisions for the service of process on a party to a suit shall apply to the service of process on his recognized agent. [S. 38.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 38 of the Code of 1882. The words "to a suit or appeal" after the word "party" have been omitted.

A mere mukhtear, unless specially authorized, is not the recognized agent of the judgment-debtor on whom notice can be rightly served within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code.—Kristo v. Fazul Ali, 17 W. R. 389.

A person holding a power-of-attorney, even if authorized by the power to appear and defend suits on behalf of his principal, is at liberty to refuse to accept service of summons, and to appear in a suit brought against his principal, but may either act upon the power or not as he may think proper. —In the matter of the Petition of Luchmee Chand, 2 C. 317.

Service upon an attorney's clerk of an order directed to be served upon an attorney is not good service —Emrit Lall Saligram v. Kidd, 2 Hyde 116.

When legal proceedings are conducted through a mukhtear, it follows from the general principle of law which underlies s 229 of the Indian Contract Act and s 3 of the Transfer of Property Act, that the agency of the mukhtear extends to receiving notice on behalf of his principal of whatever is material to be stated in the course of the proceedings. The knowledge of the agent is imputed to the principal, not on the ground of constructive notice nor as an inference of facts The rule is a rule of law of universal application, Raja Rampal v. Balbhaddur, 25 A. I. P. C.: 6 C. W. N. 849.

Appointment of pleader.

4. (1) No pleader shall act for any person in any Court, unless he has been appointed for the purpose by such person by a document in writing signed by such person or by his recognized agent or by some other person duly authorized by or under a power of attorney to make such appointment.

(2) Every such appointment shall be filed in Court and shall be deemed to be in force until determined with the leave of the Court by a writing signed by the client or the pleader, as the case may be, and filed in Court, or until the client or the pleader dies, or until all proceedings in the suit are ended so far as regards the client.

(3) For the purposes of sub-rule (2) an application for review of judgment, an application under section 144 or section 152 of this Code, any appeal from any decree or order in the suit and any application or act for the purpose of obtaining copies of documents or return of documents produced or filed in the suit or of obtaining refund of monies paid into the Court in connection with the suit shall be deemed to be proceedings in the suit.

(4) The High Court may, by general order, direct that, where the person by whom a pleader is appointed is unable to write his name, his mark upon the document appointing the pleader shall be attested by such person and in such manner as may be specified by the order.

(5) No pleader who has been engaged for the purpose of pleading only shall plead on behalf of any party, unless he has filed in Court a memorandum of appearance signed by himself and stating—

(a) the names of the parties to the suit,

(b) the name of the party for whom he appears, and

(c) the name of the person by whom he is authorised to appear:

Provided that nothing in this sub-rule shall apply to any pleader engaged to plead on behalf of any party by any other pleader who has been duly appointed to act in Court on behalf of such party.

COMMENTARY.

Changes in the Rule.—The present Rule 4 is an entirely new rule. It has been substituted for the old rule by Amendment Act XXII of 1926. The effect of the amendment is to recognise the status of a practitioner who is empowered only to plead but not to act, in requiring from him a memorandum of appearance signed by himself and not by the party on whose behalf he is required to plead (sub-rule 5) The well-recognised practice of one practitioner appearing for another practitioner at his request, without any fresh writing, has now received statutory approval.

Sub-rule (1).—" Act."—Under s 2 (15), " pleader " includes advocate and therefore an advocate " acts " when he files a memorandum of appeal or cross-objections or any other document in a case other than a memorandum of appearance under sub-rule (5), and that in all such cases a power of attorney is necessary; In re filing powers by an advocate or pleader; 4 Rang. 219: A. I. R. 1926 Rang. 215.

" By a document in writing."—The " document in writing " is the Vakalatnama,

A telegram from the client asking the pleader to file the appeal and informing him that the power of attorney was being sent, does not amount to an authority in writing entitling the pleader to file an appeal or to act on behalf of his client; Uram Baksh v. Mast Ram, 101 I. C. 613: A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 398.

Sub-rule (2).—" Until all proceedings in the suit are ended so far as regards the client."—Applications for execution are "proceedings in the suit"; a fresh Vakalatnama is therefore not necessary to present an application for execution; Sadasiva v. Vithaldas, 20 B. 198; Raghubar v. Jadunandan, 16 C. W. N. 731, 736: 15 C. L J. 89; or to plead in a claim case under Or. XXI, r 58; Gopal Joychand v. Haragobind, 5 B. H. C. R. 83; or to appear in an application for new trial; Sutto Churn v. Suroop; 12 W. R. 465; Raghunath v. Raghubir, 15 A. 55.

The words " when accepted by a pleader," which occurred in the old rule after the words " every such appointment," have been omitted in this rule by the Amendment Act XII of 1926, and the word " deemed " has been substituted for the word " considered."

Sub-rule (3).—Sub-rule (3) now expressly provides that the following are to be considered " proceedings in the suit " within the meaning of sub-rule (2), viz:—

(1) An application for review of judgement under Or. XLVII, r. 1,

(2) An application for restitution under s. 144;

(3) An application for amendment of clerical or arithmetical mistakes in judgments, decrees or orders;

(4) Any appeal from any decree or order in a suit; and.

(5) Any application or act for the purpose of obtaining copies of documents or return of documents produced or filed in the suit or of obtaining refund of monies paid into the Court in connection with the suit.

As they are " proceedings in the suit," it is not necessary that any fresh Vakalatnama should be filed by a pleader in respect of any appearance or act in connection with the aforesaid matters.

Sub-rule (4).—In pursuance of the provisions of this new sub-rule, the High Court of Calcutta has now framed the following rule for the guidance of subordinate Courts:—

" No vakil or pleader shall receive a Vakalatnama from a person who is unable to write his name unless it bears an endorsement thereon in the following form: 'I, A. B., do hereby appoint C. D., pleader, to act for me in the above-named case, in token whereof I have affixed my mark, and attested the same in the presence of E. F. who is known to me.' "

Sub-rule (5).—This new sub-rule empowers a pleader to appear in any suit for the purpose of pleading only, provided that in such a case he files a memorandum of appearance signed by himself and stating—(a) the names of the parties to the suit, (b) the name of the party for whom he appears, and (c) the name of the person by whom he is authorized to appear.

Endorsement of Acceptance of Vakalatnama in Writing if Necessary.—An acceptance or act by a pleader named in a vakalatnama would, if allowed by Court, expressly or by implication, be valid and operative even without an endorsement in writing on the vakalatnama by the pleader; but r. 45, Ch. XI, p. 301, Vol. I of the General Rules and circular orders of the High Court requiring acceptance of a vakalatnama by endorsement in writing, ought to be complied with. Per D. Chatterjee, J.—The rule is a salutary rule prescribed for safeguarding the interests of litigants and should be followed in the mofussil in the manner indicated by the construction placed thereon by the High Court. Courts in the mofussil must be specially careful in enforcing this rule in cases of compromise and withdrawal of cases and withdrawal of money or documents; Mohesh Chandra v. Panchu, 43 C., 884; 20 C. W. N. 287: 23 C. L. J 297. In the matter of two pleaders, 2 Pat. L. J. 259; Kunja Behari v. Sheo Dahin 2 Pat. L. T. 447: 68 I C. 659; Budhu Ram, v. Kalu Ram, 6 Lah. 461.

Legality of Delegation of Duty by One Pleader to Another.—Where a pleader duly authorized to act in that behalf, delegates to another practitioner the doing or making of any act or appearance for which he is himself responsible, the delegate, if not exempted under Or. III, r. 4 (3), must himself obtain a power-of-attorney from the client or from the delegating pleader or other authorized agent; Dhanoo Lal v Musst. Baij, 12 N. L. R. 189: 37 I. C. 103.

Where a pleader cannot attend, he has no power to delegate his authority to another pleader; Shiv Dayal v Khetu, 20 B 293.

Vakalatnama Not Containing the Name of Pleader.—A vakalatnama not containing the name of the pleader is defective, and the pleader is not duly appointed by such defective vakalatnama; therefore, anything done under such vakalatnama is invalid; Md. Ali Khan v. Jas Ram, 36 A. 46. But see, Chhayemannessa v Kazi Basuar, 11 C. L J 285 37 C 399, where the mukhtearnama was allowed to be amended by inserting the name and this was held to have retrospective effect. See also Maulvi Muhfoozal Huq v. Maulvi Muzhoral Huq, 41 I. C. 685; Musst. Masumbi v Dongar Singh, 55 I. C. 415.

Where a vakalatnama executed without the pleader's name appearing on it is accepted by the particular pleader who was engaged by the party and a plaint was presented by that pleader, held, that the provisions of Or III, r. 4 were sufficiently complied with and that the presentation of the plaint was proper. Or III, r. 4 provides that the authorization must be in writing not that it must be in any particular form, or must show the pleader's name in the main body of the document; Maharashtraya Jnan Kosh Mandal v. Bijju Lal, 6 N. L J. 100. 19 N. L. R. 36 71 I. C. 436

Validity of Vakalatnama, Signed by Person Authorised to Instruct.—The rules as regards appointing pleaders are salutary and strict rules have been made to prevent fraud. But in a case where no fraud has been committed and one person signs for another with the full knowledge and acquiescence of the latter, the irregularity is a formal one not affecting the merits of the case and is cured by s. 99, C. P. Code; Banwari Rai v. Chethru Lal, 74 I. C. 1033.

Power-of-attorney Not Signed by Party or His Agent.—An appeal was presented by a pleader whose power-of-attorney was not thumb-marked or signed by the appellant or his agent till after limitation had expired. Held, that the omission to sign the power-of-attorney was obviously an oversight, and the consequent signing cured the defect and consequently the appeal was properly presented; Khaira v. Nathu, 2 U. P. L. R. 18: 55 I. C. 290 (22 A. 55, 40 A. 147, 36 A. 46 refd. to).

Presentation of Appeal by Pleader Without Vakalatnama Invalid.—The presentation of a memorandum of appeal by a vakil without any authority in the shape of a vakalatnama is not valid presentation; Sheikh Palat v. Sarwan Sahu, 55 I. C. 271.

Mode of Revocation.—The appointment of an attorney can be revoked only with the leave of the Court by a writing signed by the client and filed in Court as laid down in this rule; Atul v Lakshman, 36 C. 609

A counsel, unless his authority to act for his client is revoked and such revocation is notified to the opposite side, has by virtue of his retainer and without need of further authority, full power to compromise a case on behalf of his client; Idug Bahadur v. Shankar Rai, 13 A. 272.

When Employment of a Pleader Ceases.—Under Or. III, r. 4, C. P. Code, when a pleader has once been appointed by a party, his employment cannot be terminated except by a writing signed by the client or pleader and filed in Court with leave or by the termination of proceedings in suit. This rule should be strictly observed; In re Two Pleaders, 2 Pat. L. J. 259. 1 Pat L W 469 (1917) Pat. 217. 41 I C. 329.

Unless and until the conditions specified in Or. III, r. 4, C. P. Code, are complied with, the duties and obligations of the pleader will remain; Emperor v. Rajani Kanta, 49 C 732 26 C. W. N. 589: 35 C L. J. 356.

So far as the client is concerned, the appointment of a pleader is not determined until all proceedings in the suit are ended. The return of a plaint for presentation to the proper Court does not put an end to the authority of the pleader, and if the plaint is presented to the proper Court on the same day, the pleader can act in the case; Debi Lal v. Krishnaji, 5 N. L. J. 265. 67 I. C. 296.

Advocate.—An advocate on the roll of the High Court can perform on behalf of a suit all the duties that may be performed by a pleader, subject to his exemption in the matter of a Vakalatnama and to any rules which the High Court may make; Bakhtawar v. Sant Lal, 9 A. 617.

Service of process on pleader.

5. Any process served on the pleader of any party or left at the office or ordinary residence of such pleader, and whether the same is for the personal appearance of the party or not, shall be presumed to be duly communicated and made known to the party whom the pleader represents, and, unless the Court otherwise directs, shall be as effectual for all purposes as if the same had been given to or served on the party in person. [S. 40.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to old s. 40. The word "any" has been added in the beginning: and the words "relative to a suit or appeal" have been omitted.

Service of Process on Pleader.—The materiality of the service consists in the fact that the party is properly made aware of the matter contained in the notice, but if the party or his pleader, where notice is served on him, dispenses with the compliance of the correct formalities prescribed, he cannot afterwards object that, although he in fact had notice, the service was not directly in accordance with the formalities prescribed. The initialling of the order sheet by the pleader, when produced before him, amounts to a waiver of his right to any more formal notice; Bhola Nath v. Bata Krishna, 7 P. L. T. 189. A. I. R 1927 Pat. 135· 95 I. C. 321.

Where a notice of filing of an award is not given to the party, but the order filing the award is communicated to his pleader, and the pleader admits such communication, it is a sufficient compliance with the mandatory provisions of Sch. 2, Para 10, having regard to Or. III, r, 5; Saroj Bala v. Jatindra, 45 C. L. J. 458 A. I R. 1927 Cal 619.

Service on an Attorney's clerk of an order directed to be served upon an attorney is not good service.—Emrit Lal Saligram v. Kidd, 2 Hyde 116.

Service upon respondent's pleader is good service upon himself, so far as notice of the appeal is concerned.—Ishur Dutt v. Shib Pershad, 15 W. R. 290.

An appeal preferred to the High Court against a preliminary decree for accounts having been dismissed, the record was sent back to the lower Court which directed notices to be served on the pleaders of the parties for the further hearing of the case a week hence. Notice was served on the defendant's pleader, but he did not inform the defendant. Held, that the notice was not a good notice on the defendant and an exparte decree passed against him should be set aside.—E. F. Sandys v. Upendra Chandra, 13 C. W. N. 142.

Agent to accepts service.

6. (1) Besides the recognized agents described in Rule 2 any person residing within the jurisdiction of the Court may be appointed an agent to accept service of process.

Appointment to be in writing and to be filed in court.

(2) Such appointment may be special or general and shall be made by an instrument in writing signed by the principal, and such instrument or, if the appointment is general, a certified copy thereof shall be filed in Court. [S. 41.]

This rule corresponds to old s. 41. No material change has been made. The word "certified" has been substituted for "attested" in sub-rule (2).

ORDER IV.

INSTITUTION OF SUITS.

Suit to be commenced by Plaint.

1. (1) Every suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf. [S. 48.]

(2) Every plaint shall comply with the rules contained in Orders VI and VII, so far as they are applicable. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Sub-rule (1) corresponds exactly to old s 48. Sub-rule (2) is new Order VI contains rules relating to pleadings and Order VII gives the particulars to be contained in plaint. See also, s 26 of the present Code.

" By presenting a plaint to the Court."—A " plaint " in law means merely " a private memorial tendered to a Court in which the person sets forth his cause of action, the exhibition of an action in writing."—Assan v. Pathumma, 22 M. 494.

A suit must commence with a plaint, and a proceeding which is capable of terminating in a decree or an order having the force of a decree cannot on that ground alone be deemed to be a suit, if it has not commenced with a plaint.—Venkata Chandrappa v. Venkatarama Reddi, 22 M. 256.

A petition of appeal is not duly presented when having been signed by a pleader, it is handed in by a person who is not his clerk, and over whose conduct and actions he has no control.—Queen-Empress, v. Rama, 21 M. 114.

The word "presenting" does not mean sending by post; it means delivery to the Court or to its officer either personally or by a pleader.—Queen-Empress v. Arlappa, 15 M 137. See also, Badri Prosad v Sheodhian, 18 A. 354. But see Sankaranarayana v. Kunjappa, 9 M 411.

The placing of a petition on the table when the officer is not present is not a presentation to the proper Court.—Tajuldeen v Ghafoorulnissa, 3 N. W. 341.

The plaintiff filed a suit on 23rd October 1920, in which the plaint and vakilpatra were signed not by the plaintiff but by his servant who was not his recognised agent. On 3rd December 1920, when the fact came to the notice of the trial Judge, he dismissed the suit The plaintiff having appealed, held, that though the plaint was not duly presented nor duly signed, the plaintiff should have been allowed to sign the plaint on the 3rd December 1920. Uttamram Vithal Das v. Thakordas, 23 Bom. L. R. 911.

Where a plaintiff presented a plaint to the District Court, the Sub-Judge's Court in which it ought to have been presented being then temporarily closed, it was held that the District Court could not be considered a competent Court to receive the plaint.—Ramaya Elapa v. Mahamadbhai, 10 B. 495.

Validity of Presentation of Plaint to Judge Outside Court and Out of Office Hours.—A Judge may accept a plaint presented to him outside Court and after the usual office hours. In such a case, the suit must be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the plaint was so presented; Sattaya v. Soundarathachi, 46 M. L J. 78: 47 M. 312: A. I. R. 1924. Mad. 448; Thakurdin v. Haridas, 34 A. 482: 14 I. C 714.

Presenting a plaint out of office hours to one authorized to receive it is not a valid presentation unless ratified by the Court on that very day; Appa Vupillar v. Sheikh Amir, 23 I. C. 362.

" Or its officers."—A plaint cannot be said to be validly presented if presented to the Head Clerk of the Collector unless the Collector has appointed him to receive it; The Receiver of the Nidadavole v. Surapparazu, 38 M 29 5 F. B.; nor a presentation to Nazir of a S. C. Court; Raj Chunder v. Joogul, 18 W. R. 172, or Karkun Nandaballbh v. Alibhan 6 B. H. C. 254.

Presentation of Plaint on Holiday.—A judicial act done by a Civil Court on a day specified in the list of holidays, shall not be invalid by reason only of its having been done on that day. See Bengal Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), s. 15 (3).

A plaint may be received and admitted by a Court on a Sunday or other holiday.—Anuntoram v. Protab Chunder, 16 W. R. 231. See also, Gobind Kuwar v. Haragopal, 3 Bom. L R. Ap 72 .11 W. R. 537.

The disposal of a Civil suit on a Sunday is a mere irregularity, which is covered by s. 99 —Sheo Ram v. Thakur Prasad, 29 A. 562.

On a close holiday, a Judge may properly decline to proceed with any inquiry or trial; and any party can successfully object to any such inquiry being proceeded with, and, in the event of any such inquiry having been proceeded with in his absence and without his consent, would be entitled to have the proceeding set aside as irregular But a party who after waiving the right does attend on close holiday and without protest takes part in a judicial proceeding, cannot afterwards dispute the jurisdiction of the Judge to hear and determine the matter —Ram Das v. Official Liquidator, 9 A. 366.

A plaintiff was held to be right in stating that the fact of his plaint not having been accepted on the day on which it was actually presented, ought not to deprive him of his right of suit —Young v. MacCorkindale, 19 W R. 159.

Date of Presentation and Institution for the Purposes of Limitation.—The date of presentation of the plaint is to be taken as the date of institution, and not the date when the order appointing a guardian ad litem for a minor was made.—Khem Karan v. Har Dayal, 4 A. 37.

The date of the amendment of the plaint does not affect the question of limitation for the institution of the suit, and the return of the plaint for amendment and its subsequent presentation and acceptance by the Court does not constitute a fresh institution of the suit.—Ismail Saheb v. Arumuga Chetti, 1 M. 427; Ram Coomar v. Dwarka Nath, 5 W. R. 207; Husrutollah v. Aboo Mahomed, 6 W. Presentation of plaint with insufficient court-fee is a valid presentation and for the purposes of limitation the suit is instituted on the day when the plaint is presented and not on the day on which the deficient court-fee is paid. There was a conflict of decisions on this point under the old Code, and s. 149 which gives power to the Court to allow deficient court-fee to be paid at any stage has been enacted to set at rest the conflicting rulings. See notes, s. 149. As regards pauper suits, see cases noted under Or. XXXIII, r. 8.

Expiry of the Period of Limitation on Holiday.—If the period of limitation expires on the day when the Court is closed, the plaint or application may be presented on the first re-opening day.—Peary Mohun v. Ananda Charan, 18 C. 631. See also, Boyamma v Balajee Rau, 20 M. 469.

See, the provisions of s. 5, Limitation Act and s. 10 (1) of the General Clauses Act X of 1897.

When parties are prevented from doing a thing in Court on a particular day, not by any act of their own, but by the act of the Court itself, i. e. on account of holiday, they are entitled to do it on the next opening day.—Surendra Narain v. Sauravini Dasi, 10 C. W N. 535; 3 C. L. J. 339.

Institution of Suit Against a Deceased Person.—Where the defendant died before the plaint against him was filed, the Court had no jurisdiction to decide the case.—Mohan v. Azim, 3 Bom. L R. 233; 12 W. R. 45.

Where a suit is instituted against a deceased person, Courts have no jurisdiction to allow the plaint to be amended by substituting the names of the representatives of the deceased.—Veerappa v. Tindal, 31 M. 86.

Register of suits.

2. The Court shall cause the particulars of every suit to be entered in a book to be kept for the purpose and called the register of civil suits. Such entries shall be numbered in every year according to the order in which the plaints are admitted. [S. 58, last Para.]

COMMENTARY.

Where two suits are filed on the same day, it must be presumed until the contrary is proved that they were presented and admitted in the order in which their numbers appear in the Register of Civil suits, prescribed by this rule.—Murti v. Bhola Ram, 16 A 165.

ORDER V.

ISSUE AND SERVICE OF SUMMONS.

Issue of Summons.

1. (1) When a suit has been duly instituted a summons may be issued to the defendant to appear and answer the claim on a day to be therein specified :

Summons.

Provided that no such summons shall be issued when the defendant has appeared at the presentation of the plaint and admitted the plaintiff's claim.

(2) A defendant to whom a summons has been issued under sub-rule (1) may appear—

(a) in person, or

(b) by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or

(c) by a pleader accompanied by some person able to answer all such questions.

(3) Every such summons shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court. [S. 64.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to old section 64 which has been re-arranged no change seems to have been made in the meaning. The present rule is rather elaborate and clear:

What the Summons should Contain.—See Appendix B, form 1.

Appearance of Defendant.—The Judge has discretion, when the defendant has confessed judgment, to decide the suit at once in accordance with such confession. He is not bound to wait till the time fixed for the regular hearing of the suit; but he cannot exercise that discretion where there is any doubt as to the good faith or identity of the parties.—Bank of Bengal v. Currie, 8 Bom. L. R. 396: 12 W. R. 432.

Where no date has yet been fixed for the appearance of the defendant within Or. V, r. 1, C. P. Code, the Court has no power to dismiss the suit for default under Or. IX, r. 3. Failure of plaintiff on the date fixed for him to attend and find out what date is fixed for appearance of the defendant does not empower the Court to dismiss the suit for default. The Court must fix a date for the appearance of the defendant and if on the date so fixed, plaintiff does not appear, the Court can dismiss the suit; Indar Singh v. Shom, 22 P. W. R. 1921 · 60 I. C. 475.

Decree Without Issue of Summons.—The proviso to sub-rule (1) contemplates cases where a decree may be passed against a defendant without issue of service of summons upon him; Bank of Bengal v. Currie & Co., 3 Bom. L. R. 396.

Fresh Summons.—Where there is no return of service to a summons, the law gives a Court full discretion either to issue a second summons or to take or not take stronger measures. It is not imperative on one Court to take measures to expedite the service in another Court but it is the business of the party interested to move the Court to do what is necessary.—Dowlut Mundur v. Omrao Singh, 14 W R. 336 See Or. IX, r. 5.

Appear.—The appearance referred to in s 100, C P Code, 1882, (Or. IX, r. 6) is an appearance in answer to a summons, to appear and answer the claim on a day specified, issued under this section.—Hira Dai v. Hira Lal, 7 A 538

Appearance by pleader, who was instructed only to apply for an adjournment and not duly instructed and able to answer all material questions is not an appearance under Or. V, r 1; Venkata Rama Iyer v. Nataraja Aiyar, 24 M L J 235. 18 I C. 360; Maung Pway v. Saya Pe, A. I. R. 1927 Rang. 46.

All processes are to be filled up by the parties or their pleaders. See Calcutta High Court's General Rules 7 and 7-A of 1907, published in the Calcutta Gazette, Part I, Page 1100 of 26th June 1907

Copy of statement annexed to summons.

2. Every summons shall be accompanied by a copy of the plaint or, if so permitted, by a concise statement. [S. 65.]

The words "if so permitted" are new A copy therefore must now accompany every summons unless the Court permits a concise statement.

Court may order defendant or plaintiff to appear in person.

3. (1) Where the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the defendant, the summons shall order him to appear in person in Court on the day therein specified.

(2) Where the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the plaintiff on the same day, it shall make an order for such appearance. [S. 66.]

COMMENTARY.

Where an order is made under this rule for the personal appearance of a party on a specified day, he is not bound to appear personally on any adjourned date, unless a fresh order is made requiring his presence on that date. Where no fresh order is made, and the Court disposes of the suit under Or. IX, r. 12, the order is one made without jurisdiction; Sundarnath v. Mallu, 39 A. 476: 39 I. C. 634.

No party to be ordered to appear in person unless resident within certain limits.

4. No party shall be ordered to appear in person unless he resides—

(a) within the local limits of the Court's ordinary original jurisdiction, or

(b) without such limits but at a place less than fifty or (where there is railway or steamer communication or other established public conveyance for five-sixths of the distance between the place where he resides and the place where the Court is situate), less than two hundred miles distance from the court-house. [S. 67.]

COMMENTARY.

The words, "or steamer communication or other established public conveyance," have been added after the word "railway" in cl (b).

Summons to be either to settle issues or for final disposal.

5. The Court shall determine, at the time of issuing the summons, whether it shall be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit; and the summons shall contain a direction accordingly:

Provided that, in every suit heard by a Court of Small Causes the summons shall be for the final disposal of the suit. [S. 68.]

COMMENTARY.

Summons for Final Disposal.—It is for the Court to determine at the time of issuing summons, whether it should be for the settlement of issues or for final disposal In a suit on mortgage, the first summons should be for settlement of issues and not for final disposal As a general rule summons for final disposal should be issued only in simple cases, Tuljaram v Sitaram, 38 B. 377, 16 Bom. L. R 39

Fixing day for appearance of defendant.

6. The day for the appearance of the defendant shall be fixed with reference to the current business of the Court, the place of residence of the defendant and the time necessary for the service of the summons; and the day shall be so fixed as to allow the defendant sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer on such day. [S. 69.]

COMMENTARY.

Para. 2 of the old section "what shall be deemed sufficient time must be determined with reference to the circumstances of the case," has been omitted, as superfluous.

date so fixed, plaintiff does not appear, the Court can dismiss the suit, Indar Singh v. Shom, 22 P. W. R. 1921: 60 I. C. 475.

Court may order defendant or plaintiff to appear in person.

3. (1) Where the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the defendant, the summons shall order him to appear in person in Court on the day therein specified.

(2) Where the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the plaintiff on the same day, it shall make an order for such appearance. [S. 66.]

COMMENTARY.

Where an order is made under this rule for the personal appearance of a party on a specified day, he is not bound to appear personally on any adjourned date, unless a fresh order is made requiring his presence on that date. Where no fresh order is made, and the Court disposes of the suit under Or. IX, r. 12, the order is one made without jurisdiction; Sundarnath v. Mallu, 39 A. 476: 39 I. C. 634.

"Sufficient time."—Under this rule, a defendant is entitled to sufficient time to enable him to appear in person or by pleader. What may be "sufficient time" in a particular case can only be determined by considering the peculiar circumstances of the case.—Khadar Bhi v. Rahiman Bhi, 5 Mad. H. C. 167.

Where a summons was not served on the defendant in sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer, and an ex parte decree was passed, the decree was reversed in appeal on the ground that the summons had not been served in sufficient time.—Chanbasappa v. Mainba, 7 Bom. H. C. 138.

Reasonable time should be given to a defendant to appear and file his written answer.—Attention of the subordinate Courts drawn to the necessity of carefully seeing themselves that reasonable time is allowed to the defendants in all cases.—Lokenath v. Sobanath, 5 W. R. (Act X 1859) 89.

Summons to order defendant to produce documents relied on by him.

7. The summons to appear and answer shall order the defendant to produce all documents in his possession or power upon which he intends to rely in support of his case. [S. 70.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to old s. 70 The words "containing evidence relating to the merits of the plaintiff's case" after the word "power" have been omitted.

On issue of summons for final disposal, defendant to be directed to produce his witnesses.

8. Where the summons is for the final disposal of the suit, it shall also direct the defendant to produce, on the day fixed for his appearance, all witnesses upon whose evidence he intends to rely in support of his case. [S. 71.]

COMMENTARY.

The word "also" has been added after the word "shall" and "all" has been substituted for the word "the" before "witnesses."

SERVICE OF SUMMONS.

Delivery or transmission of summons for service.

9. (1) Where the defendant resides within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is instituted, or has an agent resident within that jurisdiction who is empowered to accept the service of the summons, the summons shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, be delivered or sent to the proper officer to be served by him or one of his subordinates.

(2) The proper officer may be an officer of a Court other than that in which the suit is instituted, and, where he is such an officer, the summons may be sent to him by post or in such other manner as the Court may direct. [S. 72.]

COMMENTARY.

" Unless the Court otherwise directs "—Service by Post—The words " unless the Court otherwise directs," have been added to give the Court power to order the service of summons in any other way the Court thinks proper; e.g., by post. This is clear from the following: " Increased facilities have been given for the service of process to which further reference has been made in the Notes on Clauses It is hoped that by the gradual introduction of service by post may be found a solution of one of the principal defects in our legal system."—Report of the Special Committee. The observations of MOOKERJEE, J., in Khiroda v. Nabin, 21 C L. J. 653 p. 655: 19 C. W. N. 1231 (1234), also show that Court may direct service of summons by registered post. Delivery of summons by post to one who was not shown to be the defendant is not good service; Jagannath v. Sassoon, 18 B. 606.

" Resides."—The word ' resides ' in this rule refers to the place where a person eats, drinks and sleeps, or where his family or servants eat, drink and sleep; Kumud v. Jotindra, 38 C. 394 13 C. L. J. 221.

A summons cannot be sent by post to any place to which letters are not registered by a post office. A special bailiff cannot be sent to serve a civil process in a foreign territory.—Kasim Ajim Duplay v. Kasim Mohammed, 2 Bom. L. R. 59· 10 W. R. 349.

" Proper officer."—The Nazir is the proper officer of the Court to whom the summons is delivered for service, and who is to return it to the Court if unserved.— Parshotam v. Abdul, 18 B 500. See also, Dharam v. Queen, 22 C. 596.

10. Service of the summons shall be made by delivering or tendering a copy thereof signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, and sealed with the seal of the Court. [S. 73.]

Mode of service.

COMMENTARY.

Mode of Service.—Mere showing of summons is not a tendering of it; R. v. Karsan Lal, 5 B. H. C. R. 20 Service of summons must be effected in some of the ways mentined in the follwing rules (see, r. 12 et seq). For service on Corporations or Companies, see, Or. XXIX, r. 2, post; and as regards rent suits, see, s. 148 (d), B. T. Act (VIII of 1885).

Or. V, r. 10 of the C. P. Code lays down the main rule that service shall be made by delivering or tendering copy of the summons signed and sealed as prescribed. Whenever such delivery or tender has been made to the defendant personally, the service is complete and no subsequent irregularity by the process-server or other ministerial officer of the Court such as the omission of the process server to obtain the signature of the defendant can undo it. Such a case is particularly of a kind to which the maxim of factum valet seems applicable. But where the service is not personal, there is necessity for a strict compliance with the rules of procedure laid down in the C. P. Code; Gopal Das v. Islu, 46 I. C. 217.

11. Save as otherwise prescribed, where there are more defendants than one, service of the summons shall be made on each defendant. [S. 74.]

Service on several defendants.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to the first para of old s 74, the words "save as otherwise prescribed" have been added in the beginning The proviso to the old section relating to the mode of service of summons upon partners, has been omitted. The reason for the omission is the addition of a separate Order in the present Code relating to suits by or against partner in which provisions have been made for service of summonses upon partners See Or. XXX, r. 3.

Where it was shown that there had been only one summons, against three brothers and that the serving-officer had merely posted it on the door of one of them without attempting to serve it personally on him, held that the service was insufficient —Shiboo Ray v Kashee Roy, 25 W. R. 394.

12. Wherever it is practicable, service shall be made on the defendant in person, unless he has an agent empowered to accept service, in which case service on such agent shall be sufficient.

Service to be on defendant in person when practicable or on his agent.

COMMENTARY.

Where it is practicable, the service of summons must be in person, Abraham Pillai v Donald Smith, 29 M. 324 See, Madurathachi v. Chokalinga, (1914) M W. N 314 23 I C 324.

If a defendant is going from place to place it is not the duty of the plaintiff to go about seeking him in all the places through which he is travelling. If however, he had any other place of business or residence, the plaintiff is bound to take out summons to that place; Madurathachi v. Chokalingam Pillai, (1914) M. W. N 314: 23 I C 324

Agent Empowered to Accept Service.—A person holding a power-of-attorney, even if authorized by the power to appear and defend suits on behalf of his principal, is at liberty to refuse to accept service of summons and appear in a suit against his principal; or, in other words, he may either act upon the power or not as he may think proper —In the matter of the petition of Luchmee Chand, 8 C. 317.

Persons merely looking after the affairs of the defendant are not agents on whom service of summons will be sufficient under this rule; Ram Soonduree v. Surut Soonduree, 17 W. R. 33.

Minor Defendant.—Where the defendant is a minor, service of summons on a guardian ad litem is not a good service. Under the Code, the summons should be served on the minor.—Suresh v. Jugat, 14 C. 204 (215). See also, Jotindra v. Srinath, 26 C. 267: 3 C. W. N. 261.

Service of Summons on Pardanashin Lady.—As it is not always practicable to effect personal service on a pardanashin lady, the affixing of a summons at the lady's residence may be taken to be sufficient service; Khunam, v. Musst. Husnara Begam, 57 I. C. 594.

A pardanashin lady executed a power-of-attorney in favour of her husband, but there was no power given to accept service of summons on her behalf. The summons was served on the defendant. Held, that there was no proper service under Or. V, r. 12 as the husband was not an agent duly authorized to accept service of summons As a pardanashin lady is not able to accept service personally, she comes under the expression " cannot be found " under Or. V, rr. 15 and 17 and service of summons can be effected by serving it on any adult male member of the family, or affixing it on the outer door of the house in which the lady ordinarily resides.—Musst. Najimunnissa v. Jagmohan Lal, 4 Pat. L. T. 89 72 I C. 910

Service on agent by whom defendant carries on business.

13. (1) In a suit relating to any business or work against a person who does not reside within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court from which the summons is issued, service on any manager or agent, who, at the time of service, personally carries on such business or work for such person within such limits, shall be deemed good service.

(2) For the purpose of this rule the master of a ship shall be deemed to be the agent of the owner or charterer. [S. 76.]

COMMENTARY.

Service on Agent, When Valid.—A foreign corporation carrying on business through an agent in India can only be served through its agent. In order that such service should be treated as service on the foreign corportion, the agent must have power to enter into contracts on behalf of the corporation; Mohomed Omar v Reliance Marine Insurance Co , Ltd.; 43 C. L. J. 576: A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 1030. 97 I. C 286

A mere servant employed to carry out orders or to execute a particular commission, or a factor, or a commission agent who is not identified with the firm for which he acts, is not such an agent as is contemplated by this rule; Gokuldas v. Ganesh Lal, 4 B. 416

To satisfy the conditions of this rule as to the service of summons on an agent, there must be a person residing without the local jurisdiction, but carrying on business or work within those limits by a manager or agent, and sued on account of such work Service duly effected under this rule is effectual without reference to the circumstance of its being or not being communicated to the real defendants.—Gokul Das v Ganesh Lal, 4 B. 416.

Service of summons on an agent to whom a ship is consigned is good service on the owner in respect of matters connected with such ship.—Rajaram v. Brown, 7 B. H. C. 97.

14. Where in a suit to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immoveable property, service cannot be made on the defendant in person, and the defendant has no agent empowered to accept the service, it may be made on any agent of the defendant in charge of the property. [S. 77.]

Service on agent in charge in suits for immoveable property.

A suit for foreclosure or sale of immovable property, is one to obtain "relief respecting immoveable property"—Michael v Ameena, 9 C 733.

15. Where in any suit, the defendant cannot be found and has no agent empowered to accept service of the summons on his behalf, service may be made on any adult male member of the family of the defendant who is residing with him.

Where service may be on male member of defendant's family.

Explanation.—A servant is not a member of the family within the meaning of this rule. [S. 78.]

COMMENTARY.

"Adult male member of the family."—A munim is not a member of the family of his employer within the meaning of Or. V, r 15, C. P. Code. In a suit for recovery of money, the Court directed the notice to be issued to the parties and their pleaders that they should attend on a certain date. It appeared that no notice was served on the plaintiff's pleader, but one was served on the munim of the plaintiff's firm Held, that service on the munim, even if he was the person having the control or management of the plaintiff's business, was not sufficient and that the Court had no power to dismiss the suit for default, Firm Ram Gopal Kanhia Lal v Naraindas, 105 P. W. R 1918 45 I C. 932.

Where no attempt is made to find the defendant and the summons is served on his son, the summons cannot be said to be duly served. The enquiry as to the whereabouts of the defendants must not be perfunctory; Bharam Chand v Kanak, 26 C W N. 359 68 I C 991.

A notice served under Or V, r 15 on the members of the family of a person in marine service, who was, both before and after such service, in communication with the family, is good service sufficient to authorize the Court to pass an ex parte decree against him, Intu Miah v Darbush Bhuiyan, 42 C. 67: 25 I C 380.

Service of summons on the paternal uncle of the defendant, who was a member of the joint family and dining in the same house, is not sufficient in the absence of evidence that the defendant himself could not be found; Makhan Das v. Mannu Lall, 35 A. 556· 11 A. L J 875.

A person above the age of 16 years at the date of the service of the notice is an "adult."—Haricharan v Chandra Kumar, 35 C. 286.

The date of service of summons, as shown in the sheriff's return, is to be taken as the date of service.—Madhub Lall v. Upendranarain, 23 C. 573.

amily, and does not ... to inform the defendant of what takes place in his absence.—... Tinappashetti v. Umabai, 21 B. 223 See Ram Hurukh v. Saruj Prasad, 16 O. C. 83: 16 I. C. 600.

Person served to sign acknowledgment.

16. Where the serving-officer delivers or tenders a copy of the summons to the defendant personally, or to an agent or other person on his behalf, he shall require the signature of the person to whom the copy is so delivered or tendered to an acknowledgment of service endorsed on the original summons. [S. 79.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule contemplates three distinct classes of service: (1) on the

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Cancel Rule 17, Order V, and substitute therefor the following:—

"17. Where the defendant or his agent or such other person as aforesaid refuses to sign the acknowledgment, or where the defendant is absent from his residence at the time when service is sought to be effected on him thereat and there is no likelihood of his being found thereat within a reasonable time and there is no agent empowered to accept service of the summons on his behalf, nor any other person upon whom service can be made, the serving officer shall affix a copy of the summons on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain, and shall then return the original to the Court from which it was issued, with a report endorsed thereon or annexed thereto stating that he has so affixed the copy, the circumstances under which he did so, and the name and address of the person (if any) by whom the house was identified and in whose presence the copy was affixed." (P. 979.)

person on whom service can be made, the serving officer shall affix a copy of the summons on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain, and shall then return the original to the Court from which it was issued, with a report endorsed thereon or annexed thereto stating that he has so affixed the copy, the circumstances under which he did so, and the name and address of the person (if any) by whom the house was identified and in whose presence the copy was affixed. [S. 80.]

COMMENTARY.

The Old Section.—The first important change is the addition of the words "after using all due and reasonable diligence," before "cannot find" in accordance with the principles laid down in 26 C. 101, 19 C. 201, 24 A. 302, 21 M 419 and 324, 21 B 223, 30 B 623, and 5 C. L. J 12-n. The second important change is the addition of the words "or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides or carries on business or works for gain," and the third important change is the addition of the words "and the name and address of the person (if any) by whom the house was identified and in whose presence the copy was affixed" The addition of these last words shows that the name of the identifier, if there is any, should also be inserted in the peon's return. The words "if any" are inserted for the purpose of showing that the service of process, without an identifier will be valid; for instance, where the person to be served is known to the process server

Where the Defendant or his Agent Refuses to Sign the Acknowledgment.—Under rule 17, no question of refusal arises, till the serving officer has delivered or tendered a copy of the summons under rule 16 to the defendant personally or to his agent or to other person competent to accept service on his behalf When a pardanashin lady is not able to accept service personally, has no agent empowered to accept service on her behalf, and, has also no adult male member in her family upon whom service can be effected, a valid service is effected under the provisions of this rule, if the serving officer affixes a copy of the summons on the out-door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the lady ordinarily resides It is open to the Court, even when there has been a technical compliance with the provisions of rule 17, to order service in another mode, by directing the issue of summons to a pardanashin lady by means of notice sent by registered post, Khiroda Sundari v. Nabin Chandra, 21 C. L. J. 653: 19 C. W. N. 1231.

Where a notice was tendered to the party to be served, and he refused to sign the receipt, and it was posted on the outer-door of his house, it was a good service; Baishnab v. Bank of Bengal, 19 C L. J. 581 p. 587; Radhakishen v. Tirath Ram, 41 P. L R. 1918· 43 I. C. 718.

On respondent's refusal to sign the acknowledgment, the serving officer, instead of affixing a copy on the outer-door of his house, returned the notice to Court with an affidavit, stating the respondent's refusal to sign the acknowledgment and the Court passed an ex parte decree against the respondent. Held, that there was no due service; Marutha v. Vithu, 16 B. 117.

Where the summons was served by delivering a copy of the summons together with a copy of the plaint to the defendant personally and the defendant refused to grant a receipt therefor but retained the summons and the copy of the plaint—and the peon not having any other copy of the summons to affix upon the outer-door of the house could not affix it, held that the defendant having by his own conduct rendered it impossible to have the copies affixed on the house, the requirements of Or. V, r. 17 were complied with; Nageshwar Bux v Biseswar Dayal, 2 Pat. L. R. 58.

Where a notice was ordered to two ladies and it was tendered to an adult male resident of their house who was closely related to them and he refused to take the notice. Whereupon it was affixed to their door, held, that service was sufficient; Musst Bashiran v Bishambar Nath, 9 O. L J. 439: A. I. R. 1922 Oudh 268

Where a defendant, to whom tender of a copy of the summons is made under r. 10 of Or. V of the C P. Code, does not accept it, and by concealing himself, deliberately prevents the process-server from complying with r. 16 of the order, he may be deemed to have refused to sign the acknowledgment required by that rule and a copy of the summons may be affixed to his house under r 17, Imdad Hussain v. Parashwar, 13 N. L. R. 46: 38 I. C. 545.

A mere refusal to sign a receipt for a summons is not an offence under section 173 or section 180 of the Indian Penal Code.—Queen-Empress v Krishna Gobinda, 20 C 358. See also, In re Bhubuneswar Dutt, 3 C. 621 2 C. L. R 80; Reg v. Kalaya Bin, 5 Bom H. C Cr. 34; Queen v. Panamalai, 5 M. 199 and 200-note; 31 A. 608.

"After using all due and reasonable diligence."—Service under this rule can be effected only when the defendant cannot be found after the serving officer has used all due and reasonable diligence Proper efforts must therefore be made before such service, to find out the defendant, for instance, going to the place or places and at the times at which it is reasonable to expect that the defendant would be found.

An affidavit in support of service of a writ of summons under this rule should show (1) that proper efforts have been made to find out when and where the defendant is likely to be found, and (2) that the copy of the summons was affixed on the outer door of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resided at the time of the service —Rajendro v Jan Meah, 26 C. 101: 2 C. W. N. 574; Cohen v. Nursing, 19 C. 201; Sakharam v. Padmakar, 30 B. 623: 8 Bom L R 757, and Patiruddin v Kali Prosonno 5 C L. J. 12. This rule has been amended to give effect to these decisions See also, Kumud v Jatindra, 13 C L J. 221 38 C 891: 15 C. W. N. 399; Lonhar Tiwari v Jagtoo, 29 I C 564, Maung Maung Than v. Soma Sundram, (1918) 3 U B R 123, 50 I C 566 Baldeodas v. Subkarandas, 52 C 179 A I R 1926 Cal 327 91 I C. 965; Dinanath v Upendra, 40 C. L J 151 A I R 1924 Cal 1001 82 I. C. 703. In Cohen v Nursing, PETHERAM, C J said "It is true that you may go to a man's house and not find him, but that is not attempting to find him; you should go to his house, make enquiries, and, if necessary follow him. You should make inquiries to find out when he is likely to be at home, and go to his house at a time when he can be found."

Mere temporary absence of a person to be served does not justify the process-server in affixing the summons to a door. It is the duty of the process-server to take pains to find out the person to be served, in order that, if possible, personal service may be effected —Subramania Pillai v. Subramania Ayyar, 21 M. 419; see Vellayappa v. Veerappa, (1914) M. W. N. 79: 22 I. C. 498: 16 O. C. 83: 19 I C. 600 and Sakina v Gauri Sahai, 24 A. 302; followed in Kunj Behari v. Sarju Prasad, 32 I. C. 826. See also, Bhoonshetti Jinnappashetti v. Umabai, 21 B 223, where it has been further held that the summons should be again sent to the defendant's house to be served upon him when the inquiries made show that he is likely to be at house and to be found there. The same view has also been taken in Cohen v. Nursing Das, 19 C. 201; folld in Kassim Ebrahim v. Johurmull, 23 C. L. J. 183; 20 C W N. 173.

A peon is not justified in affixing a copy of summons, because he could not find the defendant The only condition under which he can affix copy of summons on the outer door of the defendant's house is if he cannot find the defendant, and there is no agent empowered to accept service of summons on his behalf, or any other person on whom service can be made.—Kali Narain v. Shaikh Bajoo, 3 C W. N. 307

Before a service can be effected by posting a notice on the residence of the party on whom it is wished to serve it, it must be shown that some attempt has been made to effect personal service, and that such personal service, for reasons stated, could not be made When the fact of service is denied, the onus is on the party alleging service to prove it.—Rakhal Chandra v. Secretary of State, 12 C. 603. A notice is not duly served when it is merely affixed on the defendant's residence without any attempt being made to effect personal service—Rash Behari v Khettro Nath, 1 C. L. R 418, and Buroda Kant v. Ray Churn, 24 W R. ; Anandram v. Nityananda, 32 I. C 744.

Service of notice upon a defendant by affixing the same upon the outer door of his house is not sufficient, unless the condition exists which alone renders substituted service good, namely, that the person to be served is keeping out of the way —Rama Rai v Sridhur Pershad, 4 C. L. R. 397 (12 Bom L. R P. C., 229: 19 W. R., P C , 353, followed). See also, 22 W. R. 482.

Where it is impossible for the serving officer to obtain access to the person to be served, either by reason of the custom of the country, or for any other reason, the case is covered by the description in rule 17, " where the defendant cannot be found by the serving officer."—Khiroda Sundari v. Nabin Chandra, 21 C. L. J. 653. 19 C W N 1213.

Where summons was not served personally on a defendant as in the opinion of the serving officer the defendant was evading service or was away at some other place but the affidavit filed by him did not show what action he took in the way of serving summons it was held that the service was not sufficient. The serving officer must set out in full in his affidavit what steps he took in serving the summons; Bilu Ram v. Chhajjer Mal, II A. L. J. 540.

The amount of due and reasonable diligence required must of course depend on the peculiar circumstances of each case.

Affixing a copy on the door is not good service if the defendant is away from home and the serving officer knows where he is and can be found; Sakina v. Gauri, 24 A. 302. A process server is not entitled to post a summons at the house of a person, when he knows or has reason to believe that the person has gone to a particular place and will return to his house; Pir Baksh v. Dy. Commissioner, 13 O. C. 54: 5 I. C. 804.

A peon went to serve the defendant with a summons, but could not find him at his place of residence; upon enquiry he was told by the defendant's wife that her husband had gone to a place in the Madras Presidency. He thereupon affixed a copy of the summons to the outer door of the defendant's house. The defendant returned to his house three months after. Held that the peon had used all due and reasonable diligence within the meaning of this rule, and that the service of summons had been properly effected; Sitaram v. Kalandi, 17 C. W. N. 999: 13 I C 127 See also, Basavayya v. Kistna, 23 I. C 219: 1 L. W 351, where it has been held that the process-server is not bound to follow the defendant to the place where he had gone or to wait for him indefinitely, when the date of his return was uncertain and not known

In Sankaralinga Mudali v. Ratnasabhapati Mudali, 21 M 324, it has been held that, if it appears from the serving-officer's return that, according to the information given to him, there is no prospect of his being able to serve the defendant personally within a reasonable time, then he is justified in affixing the summons to the outer door of his house. See also, Gontala v. Sawdagar, 26 M. L. J. 368: 15 M L. T. 217 (1914) N. W. N. 253.

Temporary Absence of Defendant.—Mere temporary absence of the defendant does not justify the serving officer in affixing a copy of the summons on the door of his house Before that can be done all due and reasonable diligence to find him must be used, and where it cannot be said that this was done service by affixture is improper, Nihala v Khazan Singh, 73 I C. 34.

Service by affixture should not be made the very first time notice is sought to be served If it is done and a decree is passed ex parte, it is sufficient case within the meaning of Or IX, r 13 to set aside the decree. Temporary absence at the time of the process server's call does not mean he cannot be found within the meaning of Or V, r 17, Mathura Singh v. Sheo Mohan 10 O. L. J. 337· 74 I. C 792

Service by affixture during the temporary absence of the party to be served with a notice, on the outer door of his house where his wife was living is sufficient service within the meaning of Or V, r 17, Kasiviswanathan Chetty v. Somasudaram Chetty, 42 M L J. 422. (1922) M. W. N. 173.

Where a serving officer found that the respondent on whom he had to serve a summons was away from his house but was expected back in two or three days, and affixed the summons to the door of his house Held that it was not a sufficient service within Or. V, r 17 of the C. P. Code; Nathu v. Sarup Singh, 80 I. C. 541.

Shall Affix a Copy of Summons on the Residence of the Defendant.—The word "residence" means the place, where a person eats, drinks and sleeps, or where his family or servants, eat, drink and sleep; Kumudnath v. Jotindranath, 38 C. 394 (399): 18 C. L. J. 221 (224): 15 C. W. N. 399.

If a person leaves his place of residence only temporarily, it cannot be said that the house he occupied is not where he ordinarily, resided; Sitaram v. Kalandi, 17 C. W. N. 909: 13 I C. 127.

Summons is to be affixed to the outer door of the house where the defendant ordinarily resides, and not where he actually resides—Hari Dass v. Fulkumari, 9 C W. N. cviii (108 n). See also Annanda v. Jogendra, 8 C. L. J. 294; Braja Nath v Surendra, 41 I C. 181.

It is necessary that the defendants should be residing in the house in such a manner as to make it probable that the knowledge of the service will reach him. There may be a dwelling sufficient to give jurisdiction, and yet not the kind of dwelling necessary to make a good service.—Anantha Narayan v. Penyona Kone, 5 M H C. 101. It should be shown that he was dwelling in the house and that he could not after diligent search, be found.—Khudeerun v Chutterdaree, 21 W. R 242

The affixing of a summons to the outer door of the place of business of a defendant is not a good service upon him—Chanbasappa Bin v. Mainabha Bin, 7 Bom H C 138

Every summons not actually served on a defendant or respondent, or his recognized agent, must be stuck up on the house in which he is residing; if the defendant or the respondent cannot be found, the summons should be returned to the Court, and an order obtained from the Court as to the mode of service—Gopaul v. Greedharee, 6 W. R. 13.

Where the service of summons has been effected on the defendant by affixing a copy, the Court must decide whether the service is sufficient or not and if it decides in the negative, a new summons must be issued, or a substituted summons directed—Nusur Mahomed v. Kasbai, 10 B. 202.

"Ordinarily resides etc."—For the meaning of the expression, see s. 20, ante. Where a person moves from place to place, service on the last place of residence is good, Madhunithachi v Chokalinga, (1914) M. W. N. 314.

For the purposes of summons, a Railway Company must be deemed to dwell at its principal office—Hanlon v. India Branch Railway Co., 1 Hyde 197.

Return.—The return must contain the particulars mentioned in the last part of the rule.

Endorsement of time and manner of service.

18. The serving officer shall, in all cases in which the summons has been served under Rule 16, endorse or annex, or cause to be endorsed or annexed, on or to the original summons, a return stating the time when and the manner in which the summons was served, and the name and address of the person (if any) identifying the person served and witnessing the delivery or tender of the summons. [S. 81.]

COMMENTARY.

This corresponds to s. 81 of the Code of 1882 with some alterations. The sentence, "and the name and the address of the person (if any) identifying the person served and witnessing the delivery or tender of the summons," has been added after the words "was served" as in rule 17.

Identifier If should be Supplied by Party.—It is not incumbent on a party to provide an identifier for the purpose of Or. V, r. 18, C. P. Code. The identifier may be a person in the village knowing the defendant. Nagendra v. Sambu Nath, 3 Pat. L. T. 498; 65 I. C. 49.

Return is Not Evidence of Service.—A nazir's report of service of summons or of issue of proclamation is not legal evidence on which to punish a witness failing to attend a Court when duly summoned.—In the matter of the petition of Nil Kant, W. R. (1864), Mis. 9; Okhoy Chandra v. Erskine, 3 W. R. Mis. 11; Sree Nath v. Watson, 4 W. R., Mis 4; Ram Soonder v. Kalee Komul, 6 W. R , Act X, 92; Koondoon v. Noor Ali, 10 W. R. 3; Meah Khan v. Narain, 18 W. R 365; Raj Kishore v. Bydonath, 12 W. R. 365.

Form of Return.—As to form of affidavit of process-servers, see Appendix B, from A-11.

Examination of

19. Where a summons is returned under rule 17, the Court shall, if the return under that rule has not been verified by the affidavit of the serving officer

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

IV. Cancel Rule 19, Order V, and substitute therefor the following:—

"19. Where a summons is returned under rule 17, the Court shall, if the return under that rule has not been verified by the declaration of the serving officer, and may, if it has been so verified, examine the serving officer, on oath, or cause him to be so examined by another Court, touching his proceedings, and may make such further inquiry in the matter as it thinks fit, and shall either declare that the summons has been duly served or order such service as it thinks fit" (P 985.)

able to serve ... is perfectly legal evidence, if believed.—Ram v. Ram, 17 W. R. 362.

The petitioner, at the hearing of an application to set aside an ex parte decree, alleged that the summons had not been affixed on the outer door of his house as stated in the return, but the Court refused to enquire into

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

V. Insert the following after Rule 19, Order V:—

"19A A declaration made and subscribed by a serving officer shall be received as evidence of the facts as to the service or attempted service of the summons" (P 986)

The Provisions of s 82, C P Code, 1882 (Or V, r 19) should be complied with before issuing a warrant under s 174, C P Code, 1882 (Or. XVI, rr. 10-13, 17, 18)—Emperor v Narbadeshwar 27 A. 491. (1905) A. W. N. 66.

"Order such service as it thinks fit."—These words mean that the Court may order service by means of registered post, see Khiroda Sundari v. Nabin Chandra, 21 C L J 653 19 C. W N. 1231 30 I C. 64.

Examine on Oath.—Before an ex parte decree can be passed, the process server should be examined on oath as laid down in this rule. The omission to do so is a material irregularity, Kanahia v Durga Prasad, 31 I C. 479; Md. Meera v Kadir Meera, (1914) M. W N. 63: 22 I. C. 302.

"Declare."—Omission to declare that service was sufficient does not invalidate an order under Or XVI, rr 10-13, Sree Krishna Das, 19 M. L. J. 31: 4 M. L. T 288

The law requires that the Court should declare the proper service of a notice or process and the omission to make such a declaration is not a mere irregularity, Sundararajulu v Narayanaswami 39 M. L. T. 34: A. I. R. 1927 M. 813

Where a Small Cause Court without recording any order under Or. V, r. 19, C. P. Code, and without finding that the service was sufficient decreed the suit ex parte, held that the ex parte decree must be set aside; Peringadi Abdu Rahimanhaji v. Karuvanta Kath, 15 L. W. 17

"Duly served."—Where a summons is fixed to the outer door of a defendant under Or V, r 17 of the C P Code, it cannot be said to be "duly served" until an order under r. 19 is made by the Court declaring that the summons had been duly served, and such order ought to be obtained as soon as possible after the return is made by the serving officer; Champat Singh v. Mahabir Prasad, 43 I C. 263.

20. (1) Where the Court is satisfied that there is reason to believe that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding service, or that for any other reason the summons cannot be served in the ordinary way, the Court shall order the summons to be served by affixing a copy thereof in some conspicuous place in the Court-house, and also upon some conspicuous part of the house (if any) in which the defendant is known to have last resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain, or in such other manner as the Court thinks it.

Effect of substituted service.

(2) Service substituted by order of the Court shall be as effectual as if it had been made on the defendant personally. [S. 83.]

Where service substituted, time for appearance to be fixed.

(3) Where service is substituted by order of the Court, the Court shall fix such time for the appearance of the defendant as the case may require. [S. 84.]

COMMENTARY.

Substituted Service, When should be Ordered.—It is only when reasonable grounds exist for believing that the defendant is keeping out of the way to avoid service or that for other reasons it cannot be served in the ordinary way, that substituted service should be ordered.—Abraham Pillai v. Donald Smith, 29 M. 324 (21 M 419 followed). See also, Gangadhur v. Ramachandra, 7 Bom L R 159, where it has been further held that when copy of the summons is tendered to the defendant, personally, and he refuses to sign the acknowledgment, the Court should proceed in the manner directed by Or V, rr 17, 19 and 20

The advisability of effecting service by substituted service is, under Or. V, r. 20, a matter primarily for the trial Court alone. If the trial Court is satisfied on the matters set out in that rule, it shall order the summons to be served by substituted service, and such service by order of Court is as effectual as if it had been made on a defendant personally; Doraisami v. Balasundaram, 52 M L. J 477 A. I R 1927 M 507

Service of notice by affixing is not sufficient, unless the person upon whom it is sought to effect is keeping out of the way —Rama Rai v. Sridhur, 4 C. L. R. 397. See also Ram v. Jogesh, 12 Bom. L R (P C.) 229· 19 W. R. (P. C.) 353.

Before the Court can decide in favour of the sufficiency of this mode of service, it must be satisfied that the defendant is keeping out of the way. for the purpose of avoiding service.—Nusur Mahomed v. Kazbai, 10 B. 202; See also Ram Krishna v. Mula, 69 I C 467.

Where substituted service is ordered under this section, a copy of the summons should be affixed on the notice-board of the Court-house, another copy should be affixed on the outer door of the house and premises in which the defendant was known to have last resided, and the said summons should also be advertised in some newspapers.—Rajnarain v Tek Lal, 1 C. W. N. 104.

A party cannot be fixed with notice of suit merely because somebody unconnected with the suit makes officious enquiries about its result Affixture to outer door is good only where the plaintiff makes an attempt to serve the defendant in the place, where he has gone by taking fresh summons to that place; Kattampudi v. Walji, 29 I. C. 26. See also notes to rule 17, ante.

Provided the tree to which the copy of summons is attached was reasonably near the hut, that would probably be sufficient; Panjab Rao v. Baliram, 69 I. C. 549: A. I. R. 1923 Nag. 13.

For Any Other Reason.—There is no special provision in the present Code, for service of summonses, on pardanashin ladies and where it is impossible for the process server to obtain access to the person to be served, by reason of the custom of the country, then the substituted service should be ordered; Clark v. Mallick, 2 M I. A. 263 Referred to in Khiroda Sundari v. Nabin Chandra, 21 C. L. J. 653: 19 C. W. N. 1231.

Sub-rule (2).—When by the operation of sub-section (2), a defendant is merely deemed to have been served with the summons, he may show that the summons was not duly served upon him The words "as effectual" in sub-section (2) mean as effectual for the purpose of enabling the Court to proceed with the suit The defendant is entitled to show that the circumstances in which a substituted service having the effect of a personal service could be legally made, did not exist. He is also entitled to show that the substituted service was not a due service, that is to say, that he was not keeping out of the way for the purposes of avoiding service; Habibullah v. Karnajee, 9 N. L. R. 35. 19 I. C. 425.

Substituted service, if duly effected under the provisions of the law, is as valid as personal service, and therefore, when substituted service had been effected, an ex parte decree would not be set aside on an allegation of no notice, and of good defence on the merits.—Kisur Chund v. Bhoobunessur, Bourke O. C 25. Cor. 151

In the case of substituted service, the summons is " duly served " on the defendant within the meaning of Art 164 of the Limitation Act, even though it does not in fact come to the defendant's knowledge, and time for an application to set aside the decree runs from the date of the decree; Narasimha Chettiar v Balakrishna, A. I. R 1927 M 487.

Sub-rule (3).—Where substituted service has been ordered under this section, sufficient time ought to be given for notice of the fact to reach the defendant wherever he may be, and if an ex parte decree be obtained by the plaintiff, the Court, on being satisfied that the time fixed was insufficient will set aside the decree.—Ally Bebanee v. Hyder Hossein, 2 B. 449.

Service of Process upon Unknown Person.—The C. P. Code is not exhaustive. Service of process upon persons who have not been heard of for a long time and whose whereabouts are unknown, should be made under this rule; Srinath v. Probodh, 11 C L. J. 580 p. 586.

Appellate Court's Power to Question Propriety of Substituted Service.—It is not within the jurisdiction of the appeallate Court to consider whether the trial Court's order for substituted service was on insufficient ground ; Doraiswami v. Balasundaram, 52 M. L J. 477: A. I. R. 1927 M. 507.

21. A summons may be sent by the Court by which it is issued, whether within or without the province, either by one of its officers or by post to any Court (not being the High Court) having jurisdiction in the place where the defendant resides. [S. 85, para. 1.]

Service of summons where defendant resides within jurisdiction of another Court.

COMMENTARY.

This rule lays down in a concise form the provisions contained in the first para. of the old s. 85. See s. 28 and notes

Service by Registered Post.—It was held in some cases decided under the old Code that when a postal packet was returned endorsed "refused," the service was insufficient and that further evidence was necessary before the Court could act upon such endorsement; Jogendra v. Dwarka, 15 C. 681; Jagannath v Sassoon, 18 B. 606; Aga Ghulam v. Sassoon, 21 B. 412; Fakhruddin v. Ghafuruddin, 23 A. 99.

Where the postal packet containing the summons was properly addressed to the defendant, and was duly stamped, registered and posted, but the packet was returned endorsed "refused," it was held that there was sufficient service; Baluram v Bai Pannabai, 35 B 213 · 11 I. C. 351; Roop Chand v. Haji Hussain, 16 Bom. L R. 204: 24 I. C 437.

The service of summons by post is allowed to litigants as a matter of convenience. The Court should allow the defendant a retrial, if after the decree has been passed against him on evidence that the summons was sent by registered post and returned refused, he appears and denies that the packet had ever been delivered to him by the postal authorities; Sundar Spinner v Makan Bhula, 46 B. 130. 64 I C. 386: A. I R. 1922 Bom. 377.

22. Where a summons issued by any Court established beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Rangoon is to be served within any such limits, it shall be sent to the Court of Small Causes within whose jurisdiction it is to be served. [S. 86, para. 1.]

Service within Presidency towns and Rangoon, of summons issued by Courts outside.

23. The Court to which a summons is sent under rule 21 or rule 22 shall, upon receipt thereof, proceed as if it had been issued by such Court and shall then return the summons to the Court of issue, together with the record (if any) of its proceedings with regard thereto. [S. 85, para. 2.]

Duty of Court to which summons is sent.

COMMENTARY.

"Sufficiency of service."—Where a summons has been transmitted by one Court to another for service, the transmitting Court is not bound, in every case, to satisfy itself that the law as to service has been strictly followed As a rule, on a return from a competent Court it may be presumed that either direct or substituted service has been duly effected — Nusur Mahomed v. Kazbai, 10 B. 202 (1 B. 214, referred to). But in Romanath Bural v. Juggodanandan Sen, 22 C. 889, it has been held that the Court from which the summons originally issued should not proceed upon any presumption either way but must determine for itself whether the service of summons by the Court to which it has been sent for service is sufficient or not. The same view seems to have been taken by the Allahabad High Court in Raj Kumar v. Jugal, 18 A. 241 But see Dwarka v. Brij Mohan, 33 A 649: 8 A L. J. 715: 11 I. C 39, where dissenting from 22 C. 889, it has been held that it is for the Court to which such summons is sent for service to determine whether the service is sufficient or not The view of the Calcutta High Court has been taken on grounds of expediency as also on the ground that it ignores the last sentence of Or. V. rule 19, which applies not only to the Courts issuing the summons, but also to the Court to which it is sent for service

Service on defendant in prison.

24. Where the defendant is confined in a prison, the summons shall be delivered or sent by post or otherwise to the officer in charge of the prison for service on the defendant. [S. 87. para 1 & S. 88.]

COMMENTARY.

The Court shall take judicial notice of the signature of the jailor under s. 16, Act XV, of 1869, the Prisoners Testimony Act —Tamar Sing v. Kali Das Roy, 4 Bom L R O C. 51.

When a defendant or a witness is in jail, summons should be served upon him, according to the procedure laid down in the Prisoners Act (III of 1900, Part IX, ss 34-48), by which the Prisoners Testimony Act (XV of 1869) has been repealed.

See r. 29 below as to return of service and the duty of the officer to whom process is sent under this rule

Service where defendant resides out of British India and has no agent.

25. Where the defendant resides out of British India and has no agent in British India empowered to accept service, the summons shall be addressed to the defendant at the place where he is residing and sent to him by post, if there is postal communication between such place and the place where the Court is situate. [S. 89.]

COMMENTARY.

Where a summons is sent by post to a defendant residing out of British India, it is not, in the absence of evidence, that the person to be served was not at the time residing at the place to which the summons was sent, sufficient proof of service to show that the summons was posted; but there must be some evidence of its having been received by the defendant.—Fakhruddin v. Khafuruddin, 23 A. 99.

Mode of service of notice in England pointed out; Satish Chandra v. Porter, 9 C. L. J. 244.

Where a respondent resides in Chandernagore (out of British territory), the summons or notice should be sent to him by post under registered cover, and if he does not appear, a verified statement should be put in to show that he is at present residing there.—Sonatun v. Gopal, 15 W. R. 31.

Service of summons by registered post upon a person who was not shown to be the defendant is not a good service under the C. P. Code; Jagannath v. Sassoon, 18 B. 606. Distinguished in Baluram v. Pannabai, 35 B. 213: 13 Bom. L R 323, where it has been held that there was sufficient service, even where the envelope was returned with the endorsement " refused to take."

A summons cannot be sent by post to any place to which letters are not registered by a post office. A special bailiff cannot be sent to serve civil process in a foreign territory.—Kasim Ajim Duplay v. Kasim Mohammed, 2 B. L R. 59: 10 W. R. 349.

A person refusing a registered letter sent by post cannot afterwards plead ignorance of its contents.—Lootf Ali v. Pearee Mohun, 16 W. R. 223. Followed in Jogendra v. Dwarka, 15 C. 681; see also 17 C. W N. 1073; 20 C. L. J. 455; 19 C W. N. 489; 21 B. 412 (418), and 23 A. 99.

On proof of posting a registered cover, a presumption that the cover reached the addressee in due course arises under ss 16 and 114 (b) of the Evidence Act; see the cases noted under these sections in the author's Evidence Act.

Service in foreign territory through Political Agent or Court.

26. Where—

(a) in the exercise of any foreign jurisdiction vested in His Majesty or in the Governor-General in Council, a Political Agent has been appointed, or a Court has been established of continued, with power to serve a summons issued by a Court under this Code in any foreign territory in which the defendant resides, or

(b) the Governor General in Council has, by notification in the Gazette of India, declared, in respect of any Court situate in any such territory and not established or continued in the exercise of any such jurisdiction as aforesaid, that service by such Court of any summons issued by a Court under this Code shall be deemed to be a valid service, the summons may be sent to such Political Agent or Court, by post or otherwise, for the purpose of being served upon the defendant; and, if the Political Agent or Court returns the summons with an endorsement signed by such Political Agent or by the Judge or other officer of the Court that the summons has been served on the defendant in the manner hereinbefore directed, such endorsement shall be deemed to be evidence of service. [S. 90.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 90 of the C P Code, 1882, with some change of words. The words "in respect of any Court, etc., etc. . . valid service," in sub-rule (b) were added by the Second Repealing and Amending Act XVII of 1914.

Section 90 (this rule) provides for the service of summons upon a defendant in a foreign territory, where there is a British Resident, Agent, Superintendent or Court. Such summons need not be sent through the District Judge.—Fakruddin v Ghafuruddin, 23 A. 90.

Service on civil public officer or on servant of Railway company or local authority.

27. Where the defendant is a public officer (not belonging to His Majesty's military or naval forces or His Majesty's Indian Marine Service), or is the servant of a railway company or local authority, the Court may, if it appears to it that the summons may be most conveniently so served, send it for service on the defendant, to the head of the office in which he is employed, together with a copy to be retained by the defendant. [S. 422.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule embodies the provisions of s 422 of the C. P. Code, 1882, with some alterations and additions The provisions regarding service of summons on servants of Railway Company and local authority are new. This rule is to be read with r 8 of Or XVI, which prescribes the mode of service of summons on witnesses Service of summons on a person belonging to Indian Marine Service is to be made under rr 15 and 17 of this Order, as such person is excluded by this rule; Intu Meah v. Darbuksh, 42 C. 67.

"The Court may send it for service on the defendant, to the head of the office."—The provisions of Or. V, r. 27 are permissive and a non-compliance with them is no ground for getting an ex parte decree set aside by a separate suit, although it may be a ground for an application under Or 9, r. 13, C. P. Code; Musst. Megh Koer v Deo Narain Rai, 1 Pat. L. W. 246: 38 I. C. 207.

Service on soldiers.

28. Where the defendant is a soldier, the Court shall send the summons for service to his commanding officer together with a copy to be retained by the defendant. [S. 468.]

COMMENTARY.

Service of summons on a military officer was effected by transmitting a copy by post to the commanding officer at Secunderabad, where the defendant was stationed, and it was returned with the defendant's acknowledgment endorsed on it, and with a certificate that it had been duly served, but there was no affidavit of service: service was held to be sufficiently proved.—Harrison v. Hope, 9 Bom. In a suit against a soldier to recover a debt not amounting to £30 the commanding officer of the defendant is bound to cause the summons of the S. C. Court to be served on him.—Mahomed v. Aggas, 10 M. 319.

In a suit against a soldier to recover Rs. 183-7, a summons having been sent by the Court to the Commissionary of Ordinance to be served on the defendant, his subordinate, the Commissary of Ordinance returned the summons unserved, and referred to s. 144 of the Army Act, 1882, as his reason for such action. Held, that the Commissary of Ordinance was [illegible] 168 of the C. P. Code, 1882, although [illegible] he privilege given by s. 144 of the [illegible], 11 M. 475.

An officer or mechanic in the Indian Marine Service is subject to exactly the same rules with regard to service of summons as any other person as provided in rr 27, 28; Intu v Darbaksh, 42 C. 67.

29. (1) Where a summons is delivered or sent to any person for service under rule 24, rule 27 or rule 28, such person shall be bound to serve it, if possible, and to return it under his signature, with the written acknowledgement of the defendant and such signature shall be deemed to be evidence of service.

Duty of person to whom summons is delivered or sent for service.

(2) Where from any cause service is impossible, the summons shall be returned to the Court with a full statement of such cause and of the steps taken to procure service, and such statement shall be deemed to be evidence of non-service.

A return under this rule is deemed evidence of service, though not supported by affidavit; Harrison v. Hope, 9 Bom. L. R. App 43 See notes to r. 28 ante.

30. (1) The Court may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, substitute for a summons, a letter signed by the Judge or such officer as he may appoint in this behalf, where the defendant is, in the opinion of the Court, of a rank entitling him to such mark of consideration.

Substitution of letter for summons

(2) A letter substituted under sub-rule (1) shall contain all the particulars required to be stated in a summons, and, subject to the provisions of sub-rule (3), shall be treated in all respects as a summons.

(3) A letter so substituted may be sent to the defendant by post or by a special messenger selected by the Court, or in any other manner which the Court thinks fit; and, where the defendant has an agent empowered to accept service, the letter may be delivered or sent to such agent. [Ss. 91 and 92.]

ORDER VI.

PLEADINGS GENERALLY.

Pleading. 1. "Pleading" shall mean plaint or written statement. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This order relating to pleadings is entirely new. Rules 1 to 13 and 16 to 18 have been taken from the English rules. Rules 14 and 15 correspond to ss. 51 and 52 of the Code of 1882. Courts in India should always insist on a strict adherence to the rules in this order, which are intended to diminish expense and delay, and to narrow the parties to definite issues. But the system of pleadings in this country, has not attained that state of perfection as in England, and as has been pointed out in Arabar v. Ismail, 27 I. C. 373, the High Court when dealing with pleadings in the mofussil should not be so strict as it would be in cases from the Original Side of the High Court. In addition to plaint and written statement, the particulars required by rr. 4 and 5, the answer to a set off, the additional written statement from any party are also parts of pleading. They are called "subsequent pleadings." See Or. VIII, r. 9.

Object of Introducing English Rules of Pleading.—"The Committee have added a few rules relating to pleadings based upon the system of pleading introduced by the Judicature Acts in England, which is generally admitted to be the best form of pleading in civil suits. In this country, outside the Presidency towns, the pleadings are seldom artistically drawn. They are neither concise, nor precise, but contain vague and general statements from which it is difficult to ascertain definitely the real question in controversy. The sole object of pleadings is thus frequently defeated; the issue is enlarged; the trial is delayed and much unnecessary expense incurred by the parties, who are also liable to be taken by surprise. They have further provided that the forms in the Schedule shall, when applicable, be used for all pleadings, and when they are not applicable, forms of the like character shall be used. The rules prescribed will not prevent the pleader from exercising his discretion for the amount of detail must necessarily vary with the nature of each suit; it is however, made clear, that there must be particularity sufficient to apprise the Court and the other party of the exact nature of the questions to be tried. The Committee have also given a party, who considers that his opponent's pleading, does not give him the information to which he is entitled, the right to apply for further particulars so as to enable him to know what case he has to meet at the trial. They have however endeavoured to modify the rigour of the rules by providing in accordance with s. 58 of the Indian Evidence Act (vide Or. VIII, r. 5), that the Court may, notwithstanding the absence of any specific denial, require any fact to be proved by the party who relies upon it."—Report of the Special Committee.

The whole object of pleadings is to bring the parties to an issue, and the meaning of the rules (relating to pleadings) was to prevent the issue being enlarged, which would prevent either party from knowing, when the cause came on for trial, what the real point to be discussed and decided was. In fact, the whole meaning of the system is to narrow the parties to definite issues, and thereby to diminish expense and delay, especially as regards the amount of testimony required on either side at the hearing.—Per JESSEL M. R. in Thorp v. Holdsworth, 3 Ch. D. 637, 639

Summary of English Rules of Pleadings.—The pleadings, it may be explained, are the written allegations of the parties terminating in propositions distinctly affirmed on one side, and denied on the other, called the issues. The pleadings being intended to apprise the parties of the specific questions to be tried, this object would be defeated if either party were at liberty to prove facts essentially different from those stated on the record, as constituting the claim or charge, on the one hand, or defence on the other. Every material disagreement, between the allegation and the proof, constitutes what is called a variance, which, in strictness, is as fatal to the party on whom the proof lies as a total failure of evidence.

The present rules relating to pleadings are intended to effect three material objects: (1) to make each party acquainted with the intended case of his opponent, and thus to save the expense of collecting unnecessary evidence, and to prevent either side from being taken by surprise at the trial, (2) to bring legal defences more prominently forward on the face of the record; and (3) to do away altogether with pleadings in cases where they are unnecessary, and to curtail them in all cases.

Or. VI deals with pleadings in general, order VII deals with plaints, and Or. VIII with written statements.

Pleadings to state material facts and not evidence.

2. Every pleading shall contain, and contain only, a statement in a concise form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence, as the case may be, but not the evidence by which they are to be proved, and shall, when necessary, be divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively. Dates, sums and numbers shall be expressed in figures. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

The rule is new and it follows the English Order XIX, r. 4.

What Pleadings shall Contain.—Rule 2 embodies the fundamental rules of pleadings. Every pleading must state: (1) Facts and not law; (2) It must state material facts only; (3) It must state only those facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence, and not the evidence by which they are to be proved; (4) It must state such facts in a concise form

Every Pleading must State Material Facts and Not Law.— What are and what are not material facts depend on the peculiar circumstances of each case. For example, if an agreement be alleged in any pleading, it is not sufficient to aver generally its existence, and to state its effect, but the party relying on it should state whether it be in writing or by parole, or the result of a series of documents. COTTON, L. J., said in Phillips v. Phillips, 4 Q. B. D. 127, that it is absolutely essential that the pleading, not to be embarrassing to the defendants should state those facts which will put the defendants on their guard and tell them what they will have to meet when the case comes on for trial (Followed and quoted with approval in Matilal v. Judhistir, 20 C. W. N. 810: 22 C. L. J. 254, 255). In other words, the parties should state those material facts only on which they base their claim or defence, for, as BRETT, L J. said in Phillipps v. Phillipps, ante, the parties should be held strictly to their pleadings and should not be allowed to prove at the trial any fact which is not stated in the pleading. Pleadings however may be amended with the leave of the Court at any stage of the proceedings (see rule 17, post and notes). The words of the rule are not " the facts which will be necessary to support the case of action ": they are " the material facts on which the party relies for his claim."—Per BRETT, L. J , in Phillips v. Phillips, ante. These same principles apply to the case of a defendant.

Pleadings must be confined to facts, and a point of law need not and should not be raised in pleadings. Points of law can be urged by the parties up to the stage of judgment, and the Judge can take them up suo motu at the time of writing judgment; Gaura Telin v. Shriram, 92 I. C. 926: A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 256.

Where a claim is put forward by virtue of a right of inheritance, he must state the facts constituting his heirship, viz., the claim of relationship, and not simply that he is the heir-at-law; Palmer v. Palmer, (1892) 1 Q. B. 319.

The plaintiff is bound to state the nature of the deeds on which he relies in deducting his title from the person under whom he claims and to show the devotion of the estate to himself.—Per MOOKERJEE, J., in Matilal v. Judhistir, 22 C. L. J. 254, 255.

The bare statement that " under and by virtue of a certain deed I am entitled ", is not sufficient. The plaintiff must state the facts which go to show his title; Riddell v. Earl of Strathmore, 3 Times L R. 329.

Where a cause of action or a defence is based upon an enactment, all facts necessary to bring the party within the terms of that enactment must be set out; Scar v. Dawson, 16 Ch. D. 121; Read v. Brown, 22 Q. B. D. 128.

An offer without prejudice should be omitted from the pleadings. In a suit where the written statement of the plaintiff contained letters relative to an offer made by the defendants without prejudice, the Court ordered, on the application of the defendant, that the paragraphs relating to the offer should be struck out.—Halford v. East Indian Railway Company, 12 Bom. L. R. Ap. 19.

Rules of Pleading in Matters Affecting Damages.—The phrase "material facts" will include any fact which the party pleading is entitled to prove at the trial. Thus in an action for breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff may allege in her statement of claim her consequent seduction or infection, these matters being important by way of aggravation (Taylor on Evidence, 10th Ed., Vol. I, p. 240). This was decided in Millington v. Loring, 6 Q B. D. 190. See also Whitney v. Moignard, 21 Q. B. D. 630. But in Wood v. Durham, 21 Q. B. D. 501, it has been held that a defendant is not in general entitled to plead in his defence matters in mitigation of damages. It should be remembered that Or. XXI, r. 4 of the English Order which says that no denial or defence shall be necessary as to damages claimed or their amount but they shall be deemed to be put in issue in all cases unless expressly admitted, has not been embodied in the C. P. Code. Whatever may be the rule in England, r. 2 of this order says that the pleading shall contain material facts on which the party relies for his claim or defence, but does this include the facts which the plaintiff is entitled to prove at the hearing? It seems not. Or. VII, r. 1 (e) says that the plaint should contain the facts constituting the cause of action. The plaint therefore need not state matters in aggravation of damages, nor need the written statement contain matters in mitigation of damages (Or VIII, r. 3)

Pleading should Not Contain Allegations in Anticipation of the Opponent's Answer.—It is no part of the statement of claim to anticipate the defence and to state what the defendant would have to say in answer to it That would be a return to the old inconvenient system of pleading in Chancery which ought certainly not to be encouraged when the plaintiff used to allege in his bill imaginary defences of the defendant, and make charges in reply to them —Per JAMES, L J. in Hall v Eve, 4 C. D. 341, 345; that is, parties should only plead what is material at the present stage of the suit; Rassam v Budge, (1893) 1 Q B 571

Pleadings shall Contain Statement of Facts but Not the Evidence.—That is, pleadings shall state the material facts on which a party relies for his claim or defence, but not how or in what way he is going to prove those facts. This much the plaintiff is bound to do, though he need not set out the evidence whereby he proposes to prove the facts which give him the title—per MOOKERJI, J in Matilal v. Judhistir, 22 C. L. J. 254, 255 It is wrong to set out in the pleadings admissions made by the opponent, for admissions are only evidence; Davey v. Garrett, 7 Ch. D. 473. As to what should be pleaded when it is material to allege malice, see r. 10, notice, see r. 11; contract or relation, see r. 12.

In a Concise Form.—Material facts should be stated in the pleadings as briefly as possible Conciseness does not do away with the necessity of preciseness. A plaint ought to be drafted with sufficient definiteness to enable the opposite party to understand the case he is called upon to meet; Indur Chunder v. Radha, 19 C. 507. Rule 4 lays down that where particulars are required they should be given (see notes, post).

Alternative and Inconsistent Pleadings.—are permitted under certain conditions. A plaintiff " may rely upon several different rights, alternatively though they [illegible] "—Per BRETT, L. J., in Phillipps v. Phillips, 4 Q [illegible] dant " may raise as many distinct and [illegible] defences as he may think proper."—Per [illegible] reenwood, 3 Ex. D. 251, 255. " A person may rely upon one set of facts if he can succeed in proving them, and he may rely upon another set of facts if he can succeed in proving them; and it appears to me to be far too strict a construction of this order to say that he must make up his mind on which particular line he will put his case, when perhaps he is very much in the dark."—Per LINDLEY, L. J., in re Morgan Owen v. Morgan, 35 C. D. 492, 499. "If alternate cases are alleged, the facts ought not to be mixed up, leaving the opponent to pick out the facts applicable to each case; but facts ought to be distinctly stated, so as to show on what facts each alternative of the relief is founded."—Per THESINGER, L J., Ibid (see Or. VIII, r. 7, a new rule in the Code). The rule is not different in India. A plaintiff may in certain cases rely upon several different rights alternatively though they may be inconsistent. This was recognised by the Full Bench in Narendra v. Abhoy, 34 C. 51: 4 C. L. J. 437. But as pointed out by the Judicial Committee in Mahomed Baksh v. Hosseini Bibi, 15 C. 684, the plaintiff cannot be permitted to allege two absolutely inconsistent state of facts, each of which is destructive of the other See also, Moti Lal v. Judhistir, 22 C. L. J. 254, 257; Nripendra v. Birendra 21 C W. N. 939, p. 944. A plaintiff cannot be allowed to abandon his own case, adopt that of the defendant and claim relief on that footing; Nagendra v. Pyari, 20 C. W. N. 819: 21 C. L. J. 605; nor can he turn round at the stage of the suit and put forward a case inconsistent with the allegations in the plaint; Kali Mohan v. Birendra Kishore, 22 C. L. J. 309. There is no rule of law which prevents a defendant from raising inconsistent pleas, at any rate when the facts to which the pleas relate are not within his personal knowledges; Sri Janaganti v. Kappojee, 15 I. C. 382: 1912 M W. N. 413.

Falsification of Pleadings.—Pleadings are required by law to be true and therefore a wilful falsification is punishable by criminal law; Br India S. N. Co. Ld. v. Fakir, 25 I. C 805: 7 L. B R. 257.

Forms of Pleadings.

3. The forms in Appendix A when applicable and where they are not applicable forms of the like character, as nearly as may be, shall be used for all pleadings. [New.]

The rule is new and follows the English Order XIX, r 5.

Particulars to be given where necessary.

4. In all cases in which the party pleading relies on any misrepresentation, fraud, breach of trust, wilful default, or undue influence, and in all other cases in which particulars may be necessary beyond such as are exemplified in the forms aforesaid, particulars (with dates and items if necessary) shall be stated in the pleading. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and follows the English Order XIX, r. 6 and embodies the principles already laid down in several cases in India.

Fraud, Misrepresentation, Undue Influence, etc.—The following observations of LORD SHAW in the case of Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shriniras Pandit 39 B. 441 P. C.: 19 C. W. N. 729: 22 C. L. J. 1: 13 A. L. J. 570: 17 Bom. L. R. 527; 29 M. L. J. 34, are very important and instructive and every reader should carefully go through that judgment. His Lordship observed: " Under the contract law of India, as well as by ordinary principles, coercion, undue influence, fraud and misrepresentation are all separate and separable categories in law. It is true that they may overlap or may be combined. But in the present case it is impossible to discover what ground or grounds are really taken up. There is a well-known rule of pleadings expressed in the frequently quoted language of LORD SELBORNE, see Wallingford v. Mutual Society, (1880) 5 App. Cas. 685 (697), that with regard to fraud, if there be any principle, which is perfectly well-settled, it is that general allegations, however strong the words in which they are [illegible] to amount to an averment of fraud of which any [illegible] law of India is in no way different from this, [illegible] and over again, e.g., in Ganga Narain Gupta v. [illegible] 533 P. C. It is, in their Lordships' opinion, much to be regretted, that the rule is not much strictly observed, and their Lordships are of opinion that in the present case much confusion and contention have been caused, together with much expense to the parties in consequence of its neglect. No definite issue upon any one of the well-known categories of attack was settled for trial, the only issue on the subject being whether the plaintiff No. 4 is a validly adopted son of Baba Mahraj. From time to time, in the course of this case, it is clear that specific pleadings in Indian procedure have been abandoned altogether. In short, several of the careful prescriptions of the law and of the Legislature, all of which were intended to bring litigation within definite compass and to make articulate and clear the points of difference between the parties, have been lost sight of " See 39 B. 441 (467, 468).

Allegation of Fraud.—Where a party seeks to avoid the statute of Limitation on the ground of fraud, the statement of claim should set forth specifically the particular acts which constitute the fraud as well as the time when it was discovered in order to enable the defendant to meet the fraud and the alleged time of its discovery, so that the Court may see whether by the exercise of ordinary diligence, the discovery might not have been made before; Bansiram v Panchami Dasi, 20 C. W. N. 638. 35 I. C. 284.

Where a case is based on fraud, the fraud must be proved, and no relief can be given in the suit on any different ground, Satis v. Kalidasi, 34 C. L. J. 531.

Where fraud is alleged and relied upon, it must before it can be proved, be clearly stated in accordance with the provisions of Or. VI, r. 4, C. P. Code, but the rule does not apply where the party aggrieved raises no objection and fights the case at the original hearing as though the pleadings were in proper form; Beni Madho v. Basanto, 35 I. C. 252.

A charge of fraud must be substantially proved as laid, so that when one kind of fraud is charged, another kind of fraud cannot, upon failure of proof, be substituted for it; Satis v. Kalidasi, 34 C. L. J. 531. (14 I. A. 111: 11 B. 620 refd. to).

Where defendants challenged the contract of sale by plaintiffs on the grounds of forgery and fraud, but these points were not pointedly put in the defendants' written statement, and, though perhaps open under the general words of the defence and on the issues, it was put without detail or our, was not raised in the cross-examination of the plaintiffs or their nesses, and was only disclosed when defendants' witnesses, after an rval of several months, came into the witness-box; held, that these ences should not be easily accepted; Nasiruddin v. Ahmed Hossain, . W. N. 731: 97 I. C. 543: A. I. R. 1926 P. C. 109.

Allegation of Undue Influence.—Undue influence being a species of d must be pleaded with precision and unless a case of undue influence ade in the pleadings such a case cannot be investigated by the Courts; er Chand v. Bidyadhar, 2 Pat. L. T. 111: 5 Pat. L. J. 744. (1921) . 107.

Each Party is Entitled to Have Any and Every Particular of Mate- Facts.—The object of this rule is to furnish the opposite party with particulars regarding the suit as are necessary to enable him to find what case he has to meet. It is but right and proper that each party ild have any and every particular that will enable him to know his onent's case and prepare himself accordingly, but he is not entitled ave any information as to the evidence by which they are intended to roved. What particulars are to be stated must depend on the peculiar umstances of each case, but generally "as much certainty and parti- rity must be insisted on as is reasonable, having regard to the circum- ices and to the nature of the acts themselves To insist upon less ld be to relax old and intelligible principles. COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and follows the English Or. XIX, r. 7.

If the pleadings of either party be too vague, the Court may require him to file a further and fuller statement under this section —Ali Kader v. Gobind Dass, 17 C. 840 p. 848.

Object of This Rule.—The object of the pleadings being to make each party acquainted with the intended case of his opponent, and thus to save the expense of collecting unnecessary evidence, and to prevent either side from being taken by surprise at the trial and also to bring legal defences more prominently forward on the face of the record, this rule directs, that if the allegations in the pleadings of any of the parties, are too vague and do not contain all particulars required by rule 4, the other party may apply for further and better particulars of any matter stated in any pleading; and upon such application being made, the Court may in all cases, upon such terms as to costs and otherwise, as may be just, require the other party, to file a further and better particulars. The object of particulars is to fix a party to definite statements on all points, to limit the matters in question and the points on which the party giving them is entitled to give evidence; Yorkshire Provident Co. v. Gilbert, (1895) 2 Q. B. 148.

"Upon such terms as to costs, etc."—The words "upon such terms as to costs and otherwise" seem to authorize the Court to impose upon a party, such terms, as may be just, that is, in case of non-compliance with the Court's order, it may impose penalty, such as, the striking out the vague allegations complained of, and according to English practice, may even order the dismissal of the suit, see, Davey v. Bentinck, (1893) 1 Q. B. 185.

Court may ask for an affidavit in support of the application for particulars, or dispense with it if it thinks proper to do so. Affidavits are not as a general rule asked for in England, except in special cases.

As to filing of subsequent pleadings, see Or VIII, r. 9.

Time for Application.—Particulars may be applied for under this rule at any time (Thomson v. Berkley, 47 L. T. 700), but as a general rule they should be asked for at the earliest opportunity, e.g, before putting in the defence (Mackie v. Osmoston, 28 Ch. D. 125), but the right to ask for particulars is not waived by putting in defence. (Sachs v. Sheilman, 37 Ch. D. 295).

Discovery Before Particulars.—Any strict and uniform rule as to whether discovery should precede particulars and vice versa seems impossible. Everything depends on the peculiar circumstances of the particular case. There is no hard and fast rule as to the class of cases in which particulars should precede discovery, or discovery be ordered before particulars; but the Judge must exercise a reasonable discretion in every case after carefully looking at all the facts and taking into account special circumstances; Waynes Merthyr Co. v. Radford & Co., (1896) 1 Ch. 29, 35. For instance, when the defendant knows the facts and the plaintiff does not, defendant should be asked to give discovery before plaintiff delivers particulars; Millar v. Harper, 38 Ch. D. 112.

Amendment on Delivery of Further Particulars.—A party who de to give further particulars after discovery of new facts or amend partic already given should first obtain leave of the Court; Spedding v. Fitzpat 38 Ch. D. 410; Yorkshire Provident Co. v. Gilbert, (1895) 2 Q. B. 148, and such leave may be granted and costs allowed if the opposite p does not suffer any injury thereby; Clarapede v. Commercial Union A ciation, 32 W. R. 262. Such application is generally refused if mad the trial; Moss v. Malings, 33 Ch D. 603.

Effect of Omission to Apply for Particulars.—Where the averm in a plaint are not sufficiently precise, it is open to the defendant to a for particulars under Or. VI, r. 5, C. P. Code, and if such applicatio not made, he cannot in second appeal be permitted to refer to the mat Premsukh Das v. Ram Bujhawan, (1919) Pat. 451; 1 Pat L. T. 34 I. C. 964.

Condition precedent.

6. Any condition precedent, the performance or occurre of which is intended to be contested, shall distinctly specified in his pleading by the pla tiff or defendant, as the case may be; a subject thereto, an averment of the performance or occurrence all conditions precedent necessary for the case of the plaintiff defendant shall be implied in his pleading. Departure.

7. No pleading shall, except by way of amendment, raise any new ground of claim or contain any allegation of fact inconsistent with the previous pleadings of the party pleading the same. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, it follows the English Order XIX, r.16.

Principle and Meaning.—This rule means that after a party has once pleaded, he shall not in his subsequent pleading be allowed to plead or allege anything contradictory to what he has first pleaded. If, however, he wishes to add to his claim or to alter it in any way, he may apply for amendment of pleading under Or. VI, r. 17, or the plaintiff or defendant may file an additional statement or additional written statement (Or. VIII, r. 9).

Alternative and Inconsistent Pleadings.—See under this head in notes to Or. VI, r. 2.

Denial of contract.

8. Where a contract is alleged in any pleading, a bare denial of the same by the opposite party shall be construed only as a denial in fact of the express contract alleged or of the matters of fact from which the same may be implied, and not as a denial of the legality or sufficiency in law of such contract. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new; it has been borrowed from English Order XIX, r. 20. It is an application of the general rule stated in Or. VIII, r. 2.

Object and Effect of the Rule.—The effect of this rule is, whenever a party intends to rely on the illegality or insufficiency in law of any contract whether with reference to the Statute of Frauds or otherwise, he must specially plead such illegality or insufficiency, and it will not be sufficient to traverse allegations made by his opponent in anticipation of objections to the contract upon such grounds. Neither can a defendant avail himself of Amendment on Delivery of Further Particulars.—A party who desires to give further particulars after discovery of new facts or amend particulars already given should first obtain leave of the Court; Spedding v. Fitzpatrick, 38 Ch. B. 148, 153, and such leave may be granted and costs allowed if the opposite party does not suffer any injury thereby; Clarapede v. Commercial Union Association, 32 W. R. 262. Effect of Omission to Apply for Particulars.—Where the averments in a plaint are not sufficiently precise, it is open to the defendant to apply for particulars under Or. VI, r. 5, C. P. Condition precedent.

6. Any condition precedent, the performance or occurrence of which is intended to be contested, shall be distinctly specified in his pleading by the plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be; and, subject thereto, an averment of the performance or occurrence of all conditions precedent necessary for the case of the plaintiff or defendant shall be implied in his pleading. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new; it follows the English Or. XIX, r. 14. For illustrations, see Forms No. 13, para. 2, No. 20, para. 2; No. 37, para. 2; No. 47, para. 3; No. 48, para. 5, etc., etc., in Appendix A.

Introduction of the Rule as to Non-pleading of Condition Precedent.—In some cases right to sue does not accrue till a certain thing has been done or some event has happened; in other words, something more is necessary than the mere common law right of action to entitle a person to come to Court. This something is called a condition precedent. Though not the cause of action itself, the ordinary right of action is suspended until the condition has been performed. Previously in England, the rule was to specify every such condition precedent, and to aver its due performance. The Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 57, did away with this practice by providing that "it shall be lawful for the plaintiff or defendant in any action to aver performance of condition precedent generally, and the opposite party shall not deny such averment generally, but shall specify in his pleading the condition or conditions precedent, the performance of which he intends to contest." This was followed by English Or. XIX, r. 14 (present rule) which provides that condition precedent need not be pleaded or alleged even generally.

Distinctly Specified.—The due performance of all conditions precedent is implied in every pleading, and the opposite party must specify distinctly the conditions the performance or occurrence of which he intends to contest; Bradly v. Chamberlyn, (1893) 1 Q. B. 439. A defendant relying on the non-fulfilment of a condition precedent, must give every particular regarding in Or. VI, r. 2. The meaning is that if reliance is placed on malice, [illegible], as grounds of attack or defence, [illegible] facts. But the circumstances from [illegible] be stated as they constitute evidence of those facts. For illustrations, see Forms No. 21, para. (3); No. 22, para. (3); No. 31, para. (4) and No. 33, para. (3), etc., etc., in Appendix A.

Malice.—In suits for slander of title and for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff must allege malice in his plaint because it forms a necessary part of the cause of action in such suits.

Fraudulent Intention.—See notes under Or. VI, r. 4.

Notice.

11. Wherever it is material to allege notice to any person of any fact, matter or thing, it shall be sufficient to allege such notice as a fact, unless the form or the precise terms of such notice, or the circumstances from which such notice is to be inferred, are material. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and it follows English Or. XIX, r. 23. The meaning is that when the cause of action depends on notice, it must be pleaded as a fact, e.g., notice of suit against the Secretary of State, Railway Co., etc., In ordinary cases a mere allegation in the pleadings that notice has been given to the opposite party will be sufficient. See, Form No. 12, para. 4, in Appendix A. But in suits against Government or Public Officer, there must be statement in the pleadings as to the precise terms of such notice. See, s. 80 of this Code and the cases noted thereunder.

Implied contract or relation.

12. Whenever any contract or any relation between any persons is to be implied from a series of letters or conversations or otherwise from a number of circumstances, it shall be sufficient to allege such contract or relation as a fact, and to refer generally to such letters, conversations or circumstances without setting them out in detail. And if in such case the person so pleading desires to rely in the alternative upon more contracts or relations than one as to be implied from such circumstances, he may state the same in the alternative. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

The rule is new and it follows the English Order XIX, r. 20.

When a contract is to be found out from a series of letters, the whole of the correspondence must be taken into consideration; Hussey v. Horne Payne, 4 App. Cas. 311. Contract may be implied from conduct of parties; Brogden v. Metropolitan Ry. Co., 2 App. Cas. 666.

13. Neither party need in any pleading allege any matter of fact which the law presumes in his favour or as to which the burden of proof lies upon the other side unless the same has first been specifically denied (i.e., consideration for a bill of exchange where the plaintiff sues only on the bill, and not for the consideration as a substantive ground of claim). [New.]

Presumptions of law.

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and it follows the English Or. XIX, r. 25. The meaning is that a person suing on a bill of exchange need not allege consideration, for the law presumes that the bill was for consideration (s. 118, Negotiable Instruments Act). But if he sues for consideration as a substantive ground of claim, he must specifically allege it (material fact).

The presumptions of law, referred to in this rule, are to be found in sections 79 to 90 of the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872; the reader may consult the notes and cases noted under those sections in the author's Indian Evidence Act

15. (1) Save as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, every pleading shall be verified at the foot by the party or by one of the parties pleading or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case

Verification of pleadings

(2) The person verifying shall specify, by reference to the numbered paragraphs of the pleading, what he verifies of his own knowledge and what he verifies upon information received and believed to be true. [New.]

(3) The verification shall be signed by the person making it and shall state the date on which and the place at which it was signed. [Ss. 51, 52 & 115.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations in the Rule.—The provisions contained in ss. 51, 52 and 115 of the C. P. Code of 1882 have been summarised in the above two rules. To meet the cases on points on which there is a conflict of authority, several alterations and additions have been introduced in these rules.

Sub-rule (2) have been added in accordance with the principles laid own in 6 C. 675; 7 C. L. R. 413; 15 A. 59; 4 C. L. R. 366, and 18 A. 396.

The last sentence in clause (3) of rule 15 has been inserted according to the Calcutta High Court's Circular Order No. 5, 22nd February 1870, to be found in High Court Circular Orders, Vol. I, p. 3.

The contents of verification contained in para 1 of s. 52 of the old Code have not been given in these rules.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

XIII. Insert the following after Rule 14, Order VI.—

" 14A. Every pleading when filed shall be accompanied by a statement in a prescribed form, signed as provided in rule 14 of this Order of the party's address for service. Such address may from time to time be changed by lodging in Court a form duly filled up and stating the new address of the party and accompanied by a verified petition The address so given shall be called the registered address of the party and shall, until duly changed as aforesaid, be deemed to be the address of the party for the purpose of service of all processes in the suit or in any appeal from any decree or order therein made and for the purposes of execution, and shall hold good subject as aforesaid for a period of two years, after the final determination of the cause or matter. Service of any process may be effected upon a party at his registered address in like manner in all respects as though such party resided thereat." (P. 1008.)

knowledge or by the authority of the plaintiff, may be waived by the defendant, or, if necessary, cured by amendment at any stage of the suit and having regard to s. 99 of the Code, is not a ground for interference in appeal.—Basdeo v. Smidt, 22 A. 55; Syed Mohiuddin v. Pirthichand, 19 C. W. N. 1159 (1163); Sashi Bhusan v. Rasik, 17 C. W. N. 989; Palaneappa v. Arunachellam, 7 Bur. L. T. 202: 25 I. C. 140; Ramgopal v. Dhirendra, 31 C. W. N. 397: A. I. J 11, where a plaint which was not duly signed and verified, was ordered to be removed from the file (discussed in 17 C. W. N. 989, 990).

Amendment was allowed with regard to the verification of an incomplete plaint; Fateh v. Mansab, 20 A. 442; or a defective plaint; Rajitram v. Katesar, 18 A. 396 See also, Port Canning & Land Improvement Co. v. Dharanidhar, 9 C. W. N. 608.

Proviso—Signature by Persons Duly Authorized.—A plaint signed by the authorized agent of the plaintiff is valid in law unless it is shown that the suit has not been instituted with the approval of the plaintiff; Amirunnissa v. Ramcharan, 31 I. C. 859.

A plaint signed by a person holding a general power-of-attorney to sue on behalf of the plaintiff is properly signed within the meaning of the proviso but the Court must be satisfied that person other than the plaintiff verifying the plaint is acquainted with the facts of the case.—Kastalino v. Rustomji, 4 B. 468. See also, Manohar Das v Ram Autar, 25 A. 431 (435).

Section 36, read with section 51, C. P. Code, 1882, shows that a plaint which may be presented by an authorized agent may also be subscribed by him; Dhunput Singh v. Jhoomuk Khawas, 3 C. L. R. 579

Under section 51, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. VI, rr. 14, 15), the Court may, in its discretion, admit a plaint which has been subscribed by an authorized agent of the plaintiff —Surnomoyee v Pulin Behary, 3 C. L. R. 15.

An agent authorized to enter appearance can sign amended plaint where once the suit has been instituted with the approval of plaintiff; Palaniappa v Aruna Chellam, 7 Bur. L. T. 199: 25 I. C 136

A person in jail who is unable to sign a plaint may authorize some other persons under Or. VI, r. 14 to sign it for him and the plaint so signed will be a valid plaint (22 A refd. to), Bisheshar Nath v. Emperor, 40 A. 147: 16 A. L. J. 64: 44 I. C 28

Where a plaint is signed by a third person on instructions from the real and ostensible plaintiff, it must be deemed to be signed by a duly authorized person; Ali Ahmed v. Abdul Ghani, 75 I. C 889

Absence and Inability to Sign.—Mere absence is no good cause for not signing. It is only absence of such a kind as makes signature impossible that would justify the applicability of the proviso. The words "other good cause" are of wide significance and leave the matter in the discretion of the Court; Chandra v. Ganpat, 4 .N L. R. 117.

Admission in Pleadings Signed by Pardanashin Women When Binding.—Where a party to a suit relies on admissions by an ignorant pardanashin woman in the pleadings purporting to be signed and verified by her in the manner required by Or VI, rr. 4 & 5, which are subsequently disproved by evidence of her conduct during trial; strict proof must be given of her having signed the document and of the same having been read out and explained to her. In the absence of such evidence, the pleadings will not be accepted as satisfactory proof that the purport and effect of such admissions were brought to her knowledge; Sadie Husain Khan v. Hashim Ali Khan, 14 A. L. J. 1248 P. C.: 38 A. 627: 21 C. W N. 130.

Objection to Verification—Should be taken before the settlement of issues, and after that the case should be tried on its merits and not dismissed for insufficient verification; Shama Soonduree v. Rohimuddin, 24 W. R. 71

Procedure Where Verification is Challenged.—The proper procedure in cases where the verification is challenged is not to frame any issue but to decide the preliminary question as to the validity of the plaint first. But if issues have been as a matter of fact framed, this does not stand in the way of the return of the plaint by the Court for amendment under s. 53 (Or. VI, r. 17); Sasi Bhusan v. Rasik, 17 C W N. 989 (Ganga Sahai v. Mahomed Ali, 22 A. 444-n. followed).

Omission to Sign or Verify—Procedure.—Where a plaintiff omits to sign the plaint but signs only the verification, the plaint ought to be returned for amendment or it should be amended in open Court, but cannot be rejected; Nand Lal v Shankru, 165 P W. R 1911 (22 A 55 followed). Want of signature or verification does not entail the rejection of plaint, as they can be supplied at any stage; Arunachellam v Prabhayya, 1912 M. W N 1207

Object of Verification—Is to fix upon the plaintiff the responsibility for the statements made in the plaint, and to affirm a guarantee of its good faith, Basdeo v Smidt, 22 A 55, Ross v Scriven, 43 C 1001.

Verification of Pleadings.—A Court ought never to allow a person other than the plaintiff to verify the plaint, save strictly under the exception which the law permits, namely, where the plaintiff, by reason of absence or other good cause, is unable to subscribe it —Keenoo Singh v. Eshan Chunder, 6 W R 213, Ram Mohun v Nursing Deb, W. R. F. B. 54; In re Mohessur Buksh, 5 W R Mis 33, Mohessur Buksh v. Sheo Narain, 6 W. R Mis 59.

In a suit brought by a firm, one partner can, without having obtained special leave, verify the plaint, on his own behalf, and also on behalf of his co-partners.—Ram Chunder v. Choonee Lall, 12 B L R 35.

A written statement, filed by the defendant, should be verified, but if admitted on the record without verification, its allegations should be noticed and issues framed accordingly.—Radha Churn v. Moran and Company, 13 W. R. 312. See also, Rustum Gazi v. Tara Prosanna, 11 C. W. N. 871.

Verification by Agent or Other Person.—Where a plaint or an execution petition is verified by an agent, he must satisfy the Court, by an affidavit, that he is acquainted with the facts of the case.—Bakar Sajjad v. Udit Narain, 26 A 154.

The verification should be made by some person acquainted with the facts of the case.—Mussoori Bank v. Barlow, 9 A. 188.

S. 52, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. VI, rr 14, 15), does not require the verification of a plaint to be made in the presence of an officer of the Court; but when a plaint is verified by any person other than the plaintiff, it is desirable that a verification by such person should be made in the presence of the Court, unless the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient ground for dispensing with his attendance.—Kastalino v. Rustomji, 4 B. 468.

The verification of an application under Or XXI, r. 66, C P Code, by the Karpardar of the decree-holder who is acquainted with the facts verified is sufficient and valid under Or VI, r. 15; Raja Braja Sundar v. Sivaranjan, 1 Pat. L. T 647. 59 I C 282.

Where Plaintiff should Himself Verify.—Where a plaint contains statements of a scandalous nature, the plaintiff should himself subscribe and verify the plaint.—Brajeshwari v. Budhanuddi, 6 C. 268, p. 270: 7 C L. R. 6. In a case where the plaintiffs set up gross fraud, and where the case depends mainly upon the personal knowledge of the plaintiffs, it is imperative on the plaintiffs or one of them to verify the plaint.—Protap Chunder v. Kriste Kishore, 8 C 885 See also, Jardine, Skinner & Co. v. Shurnomoyee, 24 W R. 215, and Rajah of Tomkuhi v Braidwood, 9 A 505.

As to subscription and verification of pleadings in suits by or against corporation or company, see cases noted under Or XXIX, r 1

Mode of Verification.—In all cases, the person verifying should state shortly what paragraphs he verifies of his own knowledge, and what paragraphs he believes to be true from the information of others.—In the matter of Upendra Lall Bose, 6 C 675. 7 C. L. R. 413 Referred to in Girdhari v. Kanhaiya Lal, 15 A 59, where it has been further held that a verification in the form " to the limit or extent of my knowledge, the purport of this is true," does not satisfy the requirements of law. See also, Solomon v. Abdul Aziz, 4 C. L. R. 366, and Rajit Ram v. Katesar Nath, 18 A. 396.

Section 52, C. P. Code, 1882, says about actual personal knowledge on the part of the verifier; but Or. XXIX, r. 1 does not say so.—The Port Canning and Land Improvement Co. v. Dharanidhar, 9 C. W N 608 (609).

Omission to Verify Pleading.—A pleading which is not verified in the manner required by this rule, may be verified at a later stage of the suit even after the expiry of the limitation period The omission to verify a pleading is a mere irregularity within the meaning of s 99 of the Code; Rajit Ram v. Katesar, 18 A 396; Fateh Chand v Mansab Rai, 20 A. 412; Shiv Deo v. Ram Prasad, 46 A. 637, 640: A. I R. 1925 All. 79: 87 I. C. 938.

False Verification.—A person filing a written statement is bound to state the truth, and if he makes a statement which he knows or believes to be false, he is guilty of giving false evidence within the meaning of s. 191 of the Penal Code; Queen-Empress v. Mehrban Singh, 6 A. 626.

A petition filed in the Civil Court not requiring verification cannot, from the fact of its being verified unnecessarily, be made the subject of a prosecution for giving false evidence.—Juggut Chunder v. Kasi Chunder, 6 C. 440: 7 C. L R. 330; and Queen v. Kartick Chunder, 9 W. R. Cr. 58.

Striking out pleadings.

16. The Court may at any stage of the proceedings order to be struck out or amended any matter in any pleading which may be unnecessary or scandalous or which may tend to prejudice, embarrass or delay the fair trial of the suit. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is taken from Or. XIX, r. 27 of the English rules

"At any stage of the proceedings."—Although the words "at any stage of the proceedings" show that the power given under this rule may be exercised by the Court at any time during the pendency of the suit, the application to take action under this rule, should be made with reasonable promptitude, and as a rule, before the pleadings are closed, as the Court has discretionary power either to grant or refuse the prayer, and if the application under this rule is made at the last stage of the proceeding, the Court may in its discretion refuse to exercise its power See Cross v Howe, (1893) 62 L J. Ch 342. An application to remove a written statement from the file should be made at the earliest opportunity. —New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company v. Kessowji, 9 B. 373 (381)

Striking Out or Amending Pleadings.—"The parties must not offend against the rules of pleading which have been laid down by the law, and if a party introduces a pleading which is unnecessary, and it tends to prejudice, embarrass or delay the trial of the action, it then becomes a pleading which is beyond his right," per BOWEN, L. J., in Knowles v. Roberts, 38 Ch D. 270, 271 "The defendant may claim ex debito justitiae to have the plaintiff's case presented in an intelligible form, so that he may not be embarrassed in meeting it;" per JAMES, L J., in Davey v. Garrett, 7 Ch D. 473, 486. The Court has jurisdiction to take a written statement off the file for irrelevancy until it is "tendered," which is when it is produced at the hearing of the suit "Relevancy" is to be judged by what the defendant believed to be material to his case, and not whether it did, in fact, disclose a good defence to the action —Kesharji Naik v. Nasarvanji, 10 Bom. H. C. 425.

"Unnecessary."—Where the statement in the pleadings are inordinately prolix and contain matters which are quite unnecessary and wholly immaterial and are calculated to raise irrelevant issues, the Court may order that such portions of the statements which are quite immaterial, be struck out, as the introduction of unnecessary matters in opponent's pleadings makes it incumbent on the petitioner to plead to it and colle unnecessary evidence, which will involve trouble, expense and delay.

affidavit, that he is acquainted with the facts of the case.—Bakar Sajjad v. Udit Narain, 26 A. 154.

The verification should be made by some person acquainted with the facts of the case.—Mussoori Bank v. Barlow, 9 A. 188.

S. 52, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or VI, rr 14, 15), does not require the verification of a plaint to be made in the presence of an officer of the Court; but when a plaint is verified by any person other than the plaintiff, it is desirable that a verification by such person should be made in the presence of the Court, unless the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient ground for dispensing with his attendance —Kastalino v Rustomji, 4 B. 468.

The verification of an application under Or. XXI, r 66, C P. Code, by the Karpardar of the decree-holder who is acquainted with the facts verified is sufficient and valid under Or VI, r 15, Raja Braja Sundar v. Sivaranjan, 1 Pat L T 647· 59 I C 282.

Where Plaintiff should Himself Verify.—Where a plaint contains statements of a scandalous nature, the plaintiff should himself subscribe and verify the plaint —Brajeshwari v. Budhanuddi, 6 C 268, p. 270: 7 C. L. R. 6 In a case where the plaintiffs set up gross fraud, and where the case depends mainly upon the personal knowledge of the plaintiffs, it is imperative on the plaintiffs or one of them to verify the plaint.—Protap Chunder v Kriste Kishore, 8 C 885 See also, Jardine, Skinner & Co. v. Shurnomoyee, 24 W R 215, and Rajah of Tomkuhi v. Braidwood, 9 A. 505.

As to subscription and verification of pleadings in suits by or against corporation or company, see cases noted under Or XXIX, r 1

Mode of Verification.—In all cases, the person verifying should state shortly what paragraphs he verifies of his own knowledge, and what paragraphs he believes to be true from the information of others —In the matter of Upendra Lall Bose, 6 C 675 7 C L R 413 Referred to in Girdhari v. Kanhaiya Lal, 15 A 59, where it has been further held that a verification in the form " to the limit or extent of my knowledge, the purport of this is true," does not satisfy the requirements of law. See also, Solomon v. Abdul Aziz, 4 C L R 366, and Rajit Ram v. Katesar Nath, 18 A. 396.

Section 52, C P. Code, 1882, says about actual personal knowledge on the part of the verifier, but Or. XXIX, r. 1 does not say so —The Port Canning and Land Improvement Co. v Dharanidhar, 9 C W N. 608 (609).

Omission to Verify Pleading.—A pleading which is not verified in the manner required by this rule, may be verified at a later stage of the suit even after the expiry of the limitation period The omission to verify a pleading is a mere irregularity within the meaning of s 99 of the Code; Rajit Ram v. Katesar, 18 A. 396; Fateh Chand v. Mansab Rai, 20 A. 442; Shiv Deo v. Ram Prasad, 46 A. 637, 640 A I R 1925 All. 79: 87 I. C. 938.

False Verification.—A person filing a written statement is bound to state the truth, and if he makes a statement which he knows or believes

Appellate Court's Power to Expunge Remarks Made in the Judgment of the Lower Court.—The power of the High Court to expunge remarks appearing in the judgment of a lower Court will only be exercised in extraordinary circumstances, such as, when the observations are pointedly seditious, blasphemous, or irrelevantly scandalous or indecent, Ramabadra Naidu v. Subramania, 3 L W. 283 · 33 I. C. 608.

Who may Apply.—Any person affected by the scandalous allegations, be he a party or not to the suit, may apply to have them struck out; Cracknell v. Janson, 11 C. D. 1, 13.

As to inconsistent statements in plaint, see the cases noted under Or. VII, r. 7; and in written statement, see the cases noted under Or. VIII, r. 2.

Amendment of pleadings.

17. The Court may at any stage of the proceedings allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and on such terms as may be just, and all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties. [Ss. 53 & 116.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations in the Rule and their Effect.—This rule is substantially identical with Or. XXVIII, r 1. of the English rules, and it briefly lays down the provisions contained in ss 53 and 116 of the C P. Code of 1882, relating to the amendment of pleadings. The language and the wording of this rule are quite different from those of the above two sections; but they are intended to take their place. The most important change is the omission of cl (b) of s 53 of the old Code, which provided that a plaint can be returned for amendment only at or before the first hearing of the suit. Under the present Code, the Court may at any stage of the proceedings allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings, as may be necessary for determining the real questions in controversy Therefore, cases decided before the enactment of the Code of 1908, ruling that it is not desirable to allow amendments at a very late stage, or so as to oust the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit was instituted, are no longer of much value on the amendment of plaints; Parameswara v Sankara, 16 M. L. T. 241: 1914 M. W. N. 689.

Besides the provisions of this rule, the Court, under s 153 of the present Code may, at any time, and on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it may think fit, amend any defect or error in any proceeding in a suit. See notes, post. This rule, coupled with s. 153, has considerably enlarged the power of Courts to allow amendments.

Section 53 of the old Code expressly provided that a plaint should not be amended so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character. That limitation on the Court's power has been omitted from this rule; Kastur Chand v. Mg. Ba, 11 I. C. 856.

The general rule that amendment shall be made as may be necessary for the determination of the real question in controversy is subject to the limitation that the case tried must be consistent with the case as originally laid and that the state of facts and equities and grounds of relief originally alleged and pleaded by the plaintiffs should not be departed from; Kluaram v. Chattomal, 7 S. L. R. 23: 20 I. C. 570. The only limitation to the Court's duty of making such amendments appears to be that suggested by s. 151; the legal rights of no party should be violated and the process of Court must not be abused; Syud Thrababchah v Bibi Nagu, 8 S. L R 28.

Different Kinds of Amendment.—(1) Voluntary amendment, i e., those amendments which a party seeks to make in his own pleading [Or. VI, r. 17]; (2) Compulsory amendment, i e, those amendments which a party desires to be made in his opponents' pleading, as for instance, in cases where the pleading contains irrelevant or scandalous matters [Or. VI, r. 16]; (3) Striking out or adding parties [Or. I, r 10 (2)]; (4) Amendment of proceedings in a suit by the Court for the purpose of determining the real question or issue between the parties [s 153]; (5) Amendment of clerical and arithmetical mistakes in judgments, decrees and orders [S. 152].

The present rule deals with voluntary amendments

"The real question in controversy"—is a matter not of law but of fact, and it means the question which both the parties really intended to have tried and not any question, which, during the course of the trial, may for the first time be brought into controversy by one of the litigants, Roles v. Davis, (1859) 28 L. J, Ex 287.

It is the manifest duty of a Judge to try to put an end, once for all, to all questions that can arise in relation to a particular transaction. Where an amendment is necessary for the purposes of settling all matters in controversy and works no injustice, nor takes by surprise the opposite party, the Judge should make such amendment, Nur Mahomed v. Natwar Lal, 45 A 220. 71 I C 452; Hamid Mirza Beg v Ahmed Mirza Beg, 9 O. L. J. 359 A I R 1922 Oudh 266· 68 I C 986

General Principles Governing the Rule of Amendment—When to be Allowed and When Not.—This rule has been stated in terms very general and wide, and the Court's power to allow amendment is very comprehensive under the new Code. It authorizes the Courts to permit amendments, whenever, in the opinion of the Judges, it is just that they should be done. The discretion is judicial and not arbitrary; and an erroneous exercise of it is capable of correction by a Court of appeal See Kishandas v. Rachappa, 33 B. 644, Rang Behari v Rachhaya Lal, 15 C L. J 430. 16 C. W. N. 128; Ramji v Saligram, 14 C L J 188· 11 I C. 481 Courts in England have uniformly held that amendment should always be allowed even though it be at a late stage of the suit, if it is necessary for determining the real controversy between the parties, on the principle that multiplicity of suits should, if possible, be cautiously avoided. The only limitation which they have in view is that a suit of one character should not, by amendment, be allowed to be converted into a suit of another character which can and ought to be tried by a separate action. There was an express provision to this effect in the Code of 1882, which has been abandoned now, adopting the English order. This naturally follows from the rule of amendment broadly stated in the section. The only object and justification for amendment being the determination of the real question in issue, an amendment which introduces a totally different or inconsistent case, or completely changes the character of the suit should never be permitted. This would on the contrary lead to confusion and involve departure from the real points in suit. See Laird v. Briggs, 16 C. D 440. This rule merely gives effect to what has been the recognized practice, because, as was stated by the Judicial Committee in Australian Navigation & Co. v. Smith, (1889) 14 App. Cas. 318, " their Lordships are strong advocates for amendments, whenever it can be done without injustice to the other side, and when they have been put to certain expense and delay, yet if they can be compensated for that in any way, an amendment ought to be allowed for the purpose of raising the real question between the parties " The two cardinal elements to be borne in mind are: (1) whether the application for amendment is made in good faith, and (2) whether the application is made at such a late stage of the case that if the defendant's prayer be granted, the plaintiff would be injured because the defendant would without notice raise totally different and inconsistent case, which the plaintiff has not sufficient opportunity to meet; Tildesley v. Harper, 10 Ch. D 393; Clarapede v. Commercial Union, 32 W. R. Eng. 262. Weldon v. Neal, 19 Q. B. D. 394; Laird v. Briggs, 16 Ch. D 440 (446); Steward v. North Metropolitan Rly. Co., 16 Q. B D 178. " There is one panacea which heals every sore in litigation and that is costs "; per BOWEN, L J., in Cropper v Smith, 26 C. D 711. " My practice has always been to give leave to amend unless I have been satisfied that the party applying was acting mala fides or that by his blunder he had done some injury to his opponent which could not be compensated for by costs or otherwise "; per BRAMWELL, J., Tildesley v. Harper, 10 Ch. D. 393. An admission made inadvertently may be withdrawn and the pleading amended; Hollis v. Burton, (1892) 3 Ch 226, 236.

Under this rule all amendments ought to be allowed at any stage of the proceedings which satisfied the two conditions (1) of not working injustice to the other side; and (2) of being necessary for the purpose of determining the real question in controversy between the parties Amendments should be refused only where the other party cannot be placed in the same position as if the pleading has been originally correct, but the amendment would cause him an injury which could not be compensated in costs. It is merely a particular case of this general rule that where a plaintiff seeks to amend by setting up a fresh claim in respect of a cause of action which, since the institution of the suit, had become barred by limitation, the amendment must be refused (see post, " Amendment and Limitation "); to allow it would be to cause the defendant an injury which could not be compensated in costs by depriving him of a good defence to the claim. In the English cases noted above the same doctrine has been laid down; see Kishan Das v. Rachappa, 33 B 641 p. 649. If the amendment altered the nature of the suit it should be refused no matter at what stage it was sought to be made: Steel Bros. Ld. v Cassump, 11 I. C. 827 (see post, " Alteration of Nature of Suit "). The test for amendment is, whether the evidence to be offered will not in any substantial respect be different from what it would have been, if the suit had proceeded as at present constituted; Gopal v. Budree, 10 C. W. N. 662 (665): 33 C. 657: The wide power of amendment under this rule should not be exercised where the plaintiff has not availed himself of other remedies open to him; Ramdhan v. Annamalai, 29 I. C. 132. Where a party i allowed to amend, the opposite party must be given an opportunity o meeting it by amendment or by calling fresh evidence to rebut the nev case.

The Courts, being desirous of getting at the true facts, will allov amendment subject to the three chief general conditions· Bona fides on th part of the applicant, possibility of amendment without such prejudic to the other party, as cannot be compensated by costs (such as prejudic to rights accrued) and subject to this that the amendment is not such a to turn a suit one character into a suit of another character; Upendra Narain v. Rai Janoki Nath Roy, 45 C 305. 22 C. W. N. 611: 47 I. C. 129 (8 C. 871; 18 B. 144; 16 W. R. 123, 9 C. 695, 5 B. 496; 21 W. R. 208; 5 B. 613 refd. to). See also, Gyanendra Nath v. Paresh Nath, 26 C. W. N. 73; Ma E Gywe v. Ma Lewa, 13 Bur L T. 201.

Order VI, r. 17, gives ample power to the Court to give leave to the parties to amend the pleadings, but such leave should not be given when the amendment would prejudice the opposite party, Rebati Raman v. Harish, 24 C. W. N. 749.

Before deciding whether an amendment should be allowed, the Court will look into its substance or materiality (Wood v. Earl of Durham, 21 Q. B. D. 501), and leave for amendment will be refused if it is sought only to avail oneself of a technical rule of law (Edevain v. Cohen, 43 C. D. 189; Dillon v. Balfour, 20 L R. Ir. 609) Leave to amend ought to be refused where the amendment is merely technical or is immaterial; Nagendra Bala v Secy. of State, 14 C. L J. 83. This rule has been carried so far that in James v. Smith, (1891) 1 Ch. 384, where a defendant had pleaded section 4 of the Statute of Frauds, he was not allowed to amend the pleading with a view to avail himself of s. 7. The defendant was bound to plead the statute and was not obliged to plead the particular section; but, as he had relied on a particular section of the statute, it was ruled that he could not renounce the position taken up and avail himself of some other section

As to amendment of application for execution, see Or. XXI, r. 17, and notes thereto.

Amendment by Putting Forward Plea of Fraud.—" It is the universal practice, except in the most exceptional cases, not to allow an amendment for the purpose of adding a plea of fraud where fraud has not been pleaded in the first instance; " per Lord Esher, M. R. in Bentley v. Black, 9 T. R. 580. Thus in Riding v. Hawkins, 14 P. D. 56, leave to add a charge of fraud was given to the plaintiff after the defendant had been cross-examined and his case closed, as particulars of fraud came out during the cross-examination of the defendant. As to the mode of pleading where a party relies on fraud, see, r. 4, and notes ante.

Amendment may be Allowed at Any Stage.—The words of the rule are very wide and empower the Court to permit either party to alter or amend the pleadings at any stage of the suit. However negligent or careless may have been the first omission, and however late the proposed amendment, the amendment should be allowed if it can be made without injury to the other side. There is no injustice if the other side can be compensated by costs"; per Brett, M. R., in Clarapede v. Commercial Union Ass, 32 W. R. 267, 263; Weldon v. Neal, 19 Q. B. 394, 596. Amendment may be allowed in appeal or even in second appeal.

Tests for Allowing or Refusing Amendments.—Upon a careful analysis of the leading English and Indian cases, we get the following results:—

(1) Whether the original omission is due to negligence, carelessness or accidental error, amendments of pleadings will always be allowed unless allowing the amendment will place the other party at a disadvantage for which he cannot be adequately compensated by costs.

(2) Amendment should not be allowed when a claim or relief was deliberately omitted.

(3) An amendment of pleadings must be allowed where it is necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties.

(4) Amendments should be refused where the application for amendment is not made in good faith and the application is made at such a late stage of the case that if granted, the plaintiff may be injured, because the defendant would without notice raise a totally different and inconsistent case which the plaintiff has not sufficient opportunity to meet.

(5) An amendment should be refused, where it is such as will materially alter or transform the nature of the suit

(6) Leave to amend pleadings should be refused where the amendment is merely technical or is immaterial.

Extent of Amendment.—Plaints can be amended only to the extent allowed by Court. So where a plaint is returned to add parties, a prayer for relief asked therein cannot be altered; Husaina v Nurand Muhammadji, 86 P. W. R. 1910: 7 I. C. 505

Substitution of New Plaint by way of Amendment can Not be Allowed.—A plaintiff cannot by amendment be allowed to substitute one plaint for another; Kokamal v. Gulab Singh, 27 Bom. L R. 277 87 I. C 481: A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 248.

Amendment of Plaint should be Attended with Opportunity to Defendant to Amend Written Statement, and Vice Versa.—When a plaint is allowed to be amended, defendant should be given an opportunity to amend his written statement and produce evidence to rebut the new claim; Manji v. Kalanand, 16 I. C. 785 (12 C. L. J. 556 referred to). Where defendant asks for amendment of written statement after the close of the plaintiff's case it should be refused unless the latter also is given an opportunity to call further evidence to rebut the new case; Tadipatri v. Madduhuri, 21 I. C. 822; see also, Poosapathi v. Raja Vacharayi, 29

M. L. J. 53. After plaint has been allowed to be amended by addition of new parties, the added as well as the original defendants have a right to file fresh written statements and to have the whole case re-opened. In such circumstances the appellate Court has powers to remand the case for trial, independently of rr. 23 and 25 of Or. XLI, Uzir v. Savai, 20 C W. N. 547.

When Court can Not Return Plaint under this Rule.—Where in a suit for a declaratory decree, the Court was of opinion that the plaintiff could seek further relief, but the plaintiff was unwilling to amend, held that the Court had no jurisdiction to return the plaint under this rule, Venkata Chala v. Narayana, 24 M L J. 455 19 I C 672.

Amendment must be by the Proper Court.—When the High Court directed an amendment to be made by the first Court, an amendment by the lower appellate Court was bad, Madan v Maharaja of Chotanagpur, 19 C .W. N 200 22 I C. 778

Instances where Amendments were Allowed.—Omission to ask for proper reliefs, Abdul v Bangaruswami, 9 M L T 429 10 I. C. 260, Tukaram v Govinda, 95 I C. 294 A I R. 1926 Nag. 385; erroneous description of the plaintiff and defective verification; Md. Yusuf v. Himalayan Bank, 18 A 198 (17 A 292 overruled), omission to make averment as to ownership, Mukti Gopaludu v Krishna, 8 M L T 245; 6 I C 876, changing form of the suit where cause of action is not altered; Pulamada v. Ravuthu, 11 M 94, alteration of a suit for partition into one partly for partition and partly for recovery of certain property as plaintiff's own or in the alternative for partition, In re Jothy Mahalinga, 10 M. L T. 188; in a suit for recovery of account books by addition of a prayer for recovery of moneys on the same facts, Sevugan Chetty v. Krishna, 10 M. L T 557.

Where in a suit on a pro-note, which was on the face of it barred by limitation, defendant produced a document which was discovered to save limitation and the lower appellate Court allowed the plaintiff to amend the plaint, held that the amendment was rightly allowed as there was no change in the cause of action; Vasudeva v Venkalakshmi, (192 M. W N 175. 38 M L T 221 A I R 1927 Mad 501.

In a suit which was bad for misjoinder of the plaintiffs, the plaint was allowed to be amended by permitting one of the plaintiffs to proceed with the suit by striking out the other plaintiffs —Aldridge v. Barrow 34 C. 662: 11 C. W. N. 680.

An error in the number of the plot from which ejectment is sought is a clerical error liable to amendment under Or VI, r 17, Sheoraj Singh v. Koulhan Singh, 32 I. C. 512.

A sued for an injunction to restrain interference with his right to graze cattle on the bed of a tank. The other ryots of the village, in whom the same right vested, were originally joined as plaintiffs' but the plaint was amended by striking out their names —Venkatachala v Kuppusami, 11 M. 42. In a claim for injunction plaintiff was allowed an amendment which enabled him to urge an alternative ground in support; Manilal v. Harendra 8 I. C. 79.

If it can be said, in the interests of justice, that there has been a misdescription of a party in the title of a plaint, the necessary amendment ought to be allowed; if otherwise, the rights of the parties would be prejudiced.—The Saraspur Manufg. Co. v. B. B. C. I. Ry. Co., 47 B. 785: 25 Bom. L. R. 513: 73 I. C. 1027.

Where a mortgage-debt was payable on demand, the suit ought to have been brought not for interest only, but for an account and payment of what remains due on the mortgage for principal and interest up to the filing of the plaint. This amendment was allowed in this case.—Annapa v. Ganpati, 5 B. 181.

A suit to enforce exchange of pottah and muchalka should not be dismissed as not maintainable, but the plaint should be allowed to be amended by a prayer for a declaration of the plaintiff's title.—Narasimma v. Suryanarayana, 12 M. 481.

Amendment and Limitation.—Amendment of plaint by correcting the description of the plaintiff has not the effect of introducing a third party on the record and no question of limitation arises; Jodhi Bai v. Basdeo, 8 A L. J 813 F. B : 10 I. C 47. Where an amendment of a plaint is allowed, it relates back to the date of the presentation of the plaint and the period of limitation of the suit is counted from the date of the presentation of the plaint, and not from the date on which the plaint is actually amended; Nripendra Nath v Hemanta Kumar, 63 I C. 701. Where the amendment amounts to a mere correction of the description of the property, limitation relates back to the date of institution of suit; Md. Sadiq v. Abdul Majid, 8 A L J 636

A power of amendment should not as a rule be exercised where its effect is to take away from a defendant a legal right which has accrued to him by lapse of time, but there are cases where such considerations are outweighed by the special circumstances of the case; Charandas v. Amir Khan, 47 I A (P C.): 18 A L J. 1095· 39 M. L J 195· 25 C. W. N. 289 48 C 110, Dip Chand v. Parmanand, 19 S L R 262.

C. 700: A I R. 1926 Mad. 827 See also, Gatiganti Subbarayadu v Arumith, 37 I. C 914 But not so where a party was never fairly entitled to it. Thus A sued B for dissolution of partnership and accounts. The Court of first instance found that A had advanced Rs 4,001 to B, but dismissed the suit holding that no partnership existed and the suit was bad in form A appealed and at the hearing applied for leave to amend by adding a prayer for recovery of Rs 4,001 which was allowed and the suit decreed. B appealed on the ground that the amendment was wrongly allowed, especially as at its date it was time-barred It was held that the amendment was rightly allowed as it only withdrew from B an advantage which he ought never to have received, Kisandas v. Rachappa, 33 B 641

In the absence of special circumstances, amendment allowing a fresh relief which has become barred since the institution of the suit will not be allowed If an amendment has been asked for within the period of limitation, the fact that the first Court wrongly disallowed it, will not prevent an appellate Court from giving effect to it, even though the appellate order is passed after the period of limitation; Nemasa v. Ramkrishna, 10 N L R 32 Where the cause of action has become barred by limitation, amendment by introducing a new cause of action cannot be allowed, Balkaran v Gaya Din, 36 A. 370; Galrajmal v. Pamanmal, 8 S L R 69, Bisheshar v Gobind, 12 A L J. 833

An amendment ought not to be allowed whereby the cause of action is materially changed and a party is prevented from setting up a plea of limitation; Sreedharan Valiah Rajah v. Narayana Namouripad, 41 M L. J. 525: (1921) M. W. N 639.

Where a suit is mistakenly brought in the name of a wrong person, amendment even if made after the period of limitation does not bar the suit. C. 764.

A suit was brought against persons who were dead at the time it was instituted Held that the plaintiff should not be allowed to amend the plaint by substituting the names of the legal representatives of the deceased, as against whom the suit would have been barred by limitation. —Mallikarjuna v. Pullayya, 16 M. 319 See also, Veerappa v. Tindal, 31 M. 86.

Where a plaintiff originally suing for possession of certain plots of land seeks to amend the plaint by including certain other plots, the question is not one of amendment of plaint, but of an addition of entirely new lands and as regards such lands and as regards such new lands, the suit must be taken to have been filed on the date when the claim in respect thereof was made by the plaintiff; Manindra Chandra v. Rangalal, 41 I. C. 728.

Power of Court to Amend Pleadings at Any Stage.—Leave to amend may be granted at any stage of the proceedings. It may be granted on appeal [s. 107, sub-sec. (2)], or even on second appeal (s. 108). In Muhammad Zahoor Ali v. Rutta Koer, 11 M I. A. 468, leave to amend his plaint was given to the plaintiff in appeal before the Privy Council The amendment of a plaint is in the discretion of the Judge and is not the right of the suitor. It is not enough to show that the amendment does not alter the character of the suit; Tapi Ram v Sadu, 21 B. 570.

The power to amend is inherent in Court; Kanakammal v. Panchapakesa, 26 M. L. J. 313: 23 I. C 82; and it has always the discretion to allow or disallow; Satyes v. Monmohini, 19 C. L. J. 518. It has power to allow amendment enabling continuance of suit on cause of action pedente lite, when original cause of action has failed The Court's power of amendment may supply a cause of action where one does not appear, and there is no distinction between what does not appear and what does not exist; Musst. Nur Khattun v. Sumar, 9 S. L. R. 61.

When a plaintiff sues on a promissory note simply and solely, without adding an alternative cause of action based on the original loan, he should be allowed to succeed on such original cause of action after necessary amendment. The plaintiff sued the defendant on a promissory note for Rs. 175. The defendant denied execution of the pro-note, but admitted receipt of Rs. 100 only. The plaintiff failed to prove execution of the pro-note. It was held that inspite of the fact that no alternative cause of action based on the original consideration was pleaded by the plaintiff, he could be given a decree for Rs 100 (the amount admitted by the defendant) after the plaint was amended, Maung Shwe Myat v. Maung Po Sin, 3 R. 183 89 I C. 425: A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 282 F. B.

A Court has power to make all such amendments in the plaint, and in issues, as may be necessary in order to bring about a fair and proper trial of the matter which the plaintiff takes into Court to have tried.—Gobind Chandra v. Ganga Dhye, 7 Bom L. R. 333. See also, Sahiji Kesraji v. Raj Sangji, 2 Bom H. C. 169. Plaint may be returned for amendment after framing of issues; Sasi v. Rasik, 17 C. W. N. 989.

Amendment of plaint by Subordinate Judge by striking out a portion of the reliefs asked for, and then returning for presentation in the Small Cause Court, is not allowable.—Motabhai Moti Lal v. Surat City Municipality, 20 B. 675. See also, Annaji v. Rama Kurup, 10 M. 153, in which it has been held that, where a suit brought for an amount was in excess of jurisdiction of a Court, the plaint cannot be amended to bring it within its jurisdiction. See, however, Karum Bajira v. Authimoola, 33 M. 262: 3 I. C. 338.

Alteration of Nature of Suit—Amendment When Allowed and When Not.—The general rule is that any amendment allowed must be such as is either raised in the pleadings, or is consistent with the case as orginally laid, and that the state of facts and the equities and grounds of relief originally alleged and pleaded by the plaintiff should not be departed from; Eshan Chunder v. Shama Charan, 11 M. I A. 7; Mukhoda v. Ram Charan, 8 C 871; Hamilton v. Land Mortgage Bank, 5 A. 456. It follows from the above general rule that an amendment which materially transforms the nature of the claim cannot be made and certainly not in appeal; Bai Shri Majirajba v. Magan Lal, 19 B. 303; see also, Dassorathy v Ramkrishna, 9 C. 526

The wide powers of amendment given under the Code of 1908 are always subject to the rule that, by means of an amendment, the subject-matter of the suit cannot be changed, or one distinct and inconsistent cause of action cannot be substituted for another; Inaganti Venkatarama Row v. Venkatalingama Nayanim, 42 M. L. J. 43: (1922) M. W. N. 42.

An amendment of plaint which entirely alters the points of contention between the parties, or puts forward an entirely new case inconsistent with the plaint cannot be allowed in appeal; Narayanrar Damodar v. Jarherrahu, 12 B. 431; Punjab National Bank v. Mercantile Bank, 8 I. C. 98.

A plaintiff ought not to be allowed to alter his case so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character — Lakshman Bhisaji v. Hari Dinkar, 4 B. 584; Bala Krishna v. Govind, 5 N. L. R. 67: 2 I. C. 241; Mahabharat, v. Abdul, 1 C. L. J. 73; Narayan v. Rameswar, 51 I. C. 435; Laxmi Shankar v. Hemjabhai, 22 Bom. L. R. 735: 44 B. 515.

A plaint cannot be returned for amendment, where it is found that the suit is not maintainable in the form in which it is brought, so as to convert the suit into one of a different character.—Mussoorie Bank v. Barlow, 9 A. 189

The Court will not add an issue or amend the plaint, so as to raise a wholly different question to that upon which the parties have come into Court.—Bizjic Bibee v. Monohar, 2 Ind., Jur., N. S. 118. See also, Nehora Roy v. Radha Pershad, 5 C. 64: 4 C. L. R 353. A plaintiff cannot be allowed to amend his plaint by abandoning his own story, and adopting that of the defendant and asking relief on that footing —Shib v Abdul, 5 C. 692.

Amendment of plaint by referring to a document not included in the list of documents annexed to the plaint does not alter the nature of the suit; Gunnaji v. Makanji, 11 Bom L. R. 498: 6 M. L. T. 234: 3 I C. 159.

Suit based upon fraud and upon instigation of false claims cannot be allowed to be converted into one based upon implied contract, by amendment; Palakunath v. Manathanath, (1913) M. W. N. 983.

The Court refused to amend a plaint of a Mitakshara son who sought to set aside mortgages effected by his father and grandfather prior to his birth, by adding a prayer for redemption, Bhola v. Kartick, 11 C. W. N. 426.

A suit for the restoration of a pond, which, it was alleged, the defendants were wrongfullly filling up, to its original condition, was altered into one for declaration of plaintiff's right to share in the produce and the use of the water by way of easement. Held, that the alteration was a material one; Farzand Ali v. Yusuf Ali, 2 A. 669.

A plaint in a suit for arrears of rent by a co-sharer landlord, for his separate share of rent, cannot be amended so as to convert it into a suit for recovery of full rent.—Lala Ram v. Nem Narain, 6 C. W. N. 326. See also, Obhoy v. Hurry, 8 C. 277.

A suit for possession of a share of a joint Hindu family property, before partition can be converted into a suit for partition by amending the plaint —Krishnaji v. Sitaram, 5 B. 496

A suit to recover possession of land based upon title, cannot be treated partly as a summary suit for possession under sec. 9 of Act I of 1877 and partly as a suit based on title —Ramasami v. Paraman, 25 M 118; contra in Ram Harakh v. Sheodihal, 15 A. 384.

A suit for possession cannot be amended into one for a declaration for a charge; Md. Ebrahim v. Mg. Ba, 24 I. C. 482: 7 Bur. L T. 69; or a suit for ejectment into one for redemption; Munna v. Maiku, 24 I. C. 723.

Where a suit was brought for a declaration that certain alienations made by a Hindu widow were invalid, and pending appeal by the plaintiff, the widow died. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to proceed with his appeal; that he could not be permitted to amend his plaint, and claim for possession.—Gobinda v Perumdevi, 12 M. 136.

Where, in an action of ejectment against a tenant holding over, the lease sued on was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration, and the plaint was not amended by adding an alternative claim for partition. Held that the plaintiff could not be allowed to obtain a decree for partition.—Ram Chandra Bapuji v. Vasudev Morbhat, 10 B. 451.

In a suit for perpetual injunction to restrain the defendant from the erection of a building, if it appears at the hearing, that the defendant erected the building after the filing of the suit, the plaint may be amended by adding a prayer for mandatory injunction directing the demolition of the building.—Bindu Basini v. Jahnabi Chowdhrani, 24 C. 260. See also, Magan Lal v. Chhotalal, 26 B. 136, where it has been further held that without amending the plaint, the Court can pass a decree for mandatory injunction, as the plaint contains a prayer for such other relief as the Court might think fit In Ram Adhar v. Ram Shankar, 26 A. 215, it has been held that no action on the part of the defendant subsequent to the institution of the suit can affect or prejudice the plaintiff's right and he is not required to amend the plaint on account of such subsequent dispossession.

Where the plaintiff, in a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption, did not allege in his plaint that he was ready and willing to pay any price which the Court might find the actual price, and on the day of the hearing of the suit, presented an application that he was ready and willing to do so. Held that the Court was not bound to allow him to amend his plaint. —Durga Prasad v. Nawazish Ali, 1 A 591

Where the plaintiff alleged that he was in possession of certain room as representing his father and uncle, who were alive, but who were not parties to the suit, and that he had been dispossessed from such room within six months of the institution of the present suit Held, that his possession, not being judicial possession, did not entitle him to maintain a suit under s 9 of Act I of 1877 Permission to amend the plaint by alleging that plaintiff's possession was exclusive on his own account was not allowed, such allegation being inconsistent with the case in which he came into Court.—Nritto Lall v. Rajendro Narain, 22 C 562

A suit for the share of produce of the property left undivided at a partition cannot be amended by making it a suit for partition without entirely changing its character —Gouri Shankar v Atmaram, 18 B 611.

Plaintiff originally claimed a share in two bonds as heir of his wife, but subsequently he obtained leave to amend his plaint, so as to claim the two houses as his own property. Held that this amendment was allowable.—Mani Jan v. Abdul, (1907) A W. N. 203.

Suit for redemption of a mortgage cannot be so amended as to make it a suit for avoidance of sale; Rambilas v. Brijnarain, 14 I C. 713.

Amendment as to Relief.—An amendment may be allowed at any time so long as it does not alter the character of the suit. An alteration in the relief does not alter the character of the suit, Kashinath v Sadasu, 20 C. 105; see also, Lakshmakka v. Nagi Reddi, 28 M. 500. A mere technical mistake in pleading will not affect the relief to which the parties are entitled; Vithoba v. Gyaniram, 5 N. L. R. 66. See also, Or. VII, r. 7 and notes.

No amendment will be allowed if the application for amendment is made at a late stage of the proceedings, so that, if allowed, it would necessitate trying the case de novo, Narayana v Shankunni, 15 M. 255; Ramanadan v. Pulikutti, 21 M. 288. If the character of the suit is not materially altered, and the defendant cannot possibly be taken by surprise, amendment may be allowed. Thus a mortgagee suing for sale of the mortgaged property may be allowed to amend the plaint by merely asking for a simple money-decree against the mortgagor; Sukhdeo v. Lachman, 24 A. 456. Similarly, in a suit for specific performance, the purchaser may be allowed to amend his plaint by asking for a refund of the earnest money in the alternative, Ibrahimbhai v. Fletcher, 21 B. 827.

Where an order for amendment would operate prejudicially to the defendants so far as their evidence of possession is concerned, the Court will refuse to allow amendment of plaint, Mahobar Das v. Ramdas, 75 I. C. 549: A. I. R. 1923 Sind 17.

In a suit for declaration of right, if the defendant objects that the suit is barred by the proviso to s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, the Court should allow the plaintiff to amend the plaint by adding thereto a prayer for injunction by way of consequential relief, even if the application for amendment is made long after the settlement of issues.—Kalabhai Bapuji v. Secretary of State, 29 B. 19.

Leave was granted to plaintiff to amend his plaint and convert the suit for recovery of possession of the disputed share, subject to the exercise of the right of redemption of the defendant.—Jugdeo v. Habibulla, 6 C. L. J. 612.

Cause of Action Arising After Institution of Suit can be Included* by way of Amendment.—Events that happened, even after the filing of suit, including those that add to the title of the plaintiff, may be taken notice of, so that a cause of action that arose after the filing of the suit can be included by the amendment of a plaint. But the discretion ought not to be exercised when there is a change of jurisdiction, or when there is a great delay in making the application, and may not be exercised if fresh inquiry on other facts is necessary. But when these features do not exist, the amendment ought, as a general rule, to be allowed, to avoid multiplicity of proceedings; Appalasuri v. Kannama Nayuralu, A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 6; Buddala Gangayya v. Vennavalli, 91 I. C. 503: A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1021. Where the basis of the plaintiff's right to sue has been jeopardized by a decision in another suit after the plaint in the suit was filed, an application for the amendment of the plaint put in promptly ought to be allowed; Venkataratnam v. Venkamma, A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 754: 23 L. W. 618.

Variance between Pleading and Proof.—The rule that allegations and proof must correspond is intended to serve a double purpose, viz., first, to apprise the defendant distinctly and specifically of the case he is called upon to answer so that he may properly make his defence and may not be taken by surprise; and secondly, to preserve the accurate record of the cause of action as a protection against a second proceeding founded upon the same allegations Hence every variance between pleading and proof is not fatal; Hiralal v Giribala, 23 C. L J. 429 (18 C. W. N. 473 followed). The rule should not be applied in an abstract way. The question in ultimate analysis is one of circumstances and not of law; Haji Umar v. Gustadji, 20 C. W. N. 297 P. C.. 30 M. L. J. 444: 1916 M. W. N. 187.

A plaintiff is not entitled to a decree upon a cause of action not alleged in the plaint, but proved in the course of trial. He is only entitled to succeed upon the cause of action alleged by him in his plaint.—Madhub Ali v. Hossain Riza, 4 C. L. R. 52; Gobindrav Desmukh v. Ragho Desmukh, 8 B. 543; Lakshman Bhikaji v. Hari, 4 B. 584; Hari Ravji v. Shapurji Hormasji, 10 B. 461; Hamilton v Land Mortgage Bank, 5 A. 546; Terictput v. Sudarsan, 4 C. 46; Muttsuami v. Rama, 12 M. 292; Mylapore Iyasawmy Vyapoory v. Yeakay, 14 C. 801 (P C.); Abdul v. Turner, 11 B 620 (P. C.); Krishna v. Rangasami, 18 M. 462, Nana v. Appa, 20 B. 627, Sheo Prasad v. Lalit, 18 A 403, and the cases therein referred to. But in the following cases a different view seems to have been taken.—Shib v. Joymala Dasi, 7 C. L R 103; Appayya v Ramiraddi, 11 M. 367; Chimnaji v Shakharam, 17 B. 365; Ranchor Das v Mancklal, 17 B. 648; Nurul Hossain v. Sheosahai, 20 C 1 (P. C), Parashram v. Miraja, 20 B. 569; Rasul Jehan v. Ram Suran, 22 C 589.

Although the rule is that proofs must correspond with the allegations in the pleadings, the requirement in that behalf is fulfilled if the substance of the declaration is proved No variation ought to be regarded as material, when the allegation and the proof substantially correspond —Balbhadar v. Barkat Ali, 11 C. W N. 85· 4 C. L. J. 370 (3 C L J 481 followed).

A plaintiff is only entitled to succeed upon the cause of action alleged in his plaint A plaintiff seeking to redeem a mortgage of 1854 and failing to prove it, is not entitled to a decree to redeem other mortgages which might be found to subsist between the parties, but which formed no part of the cause of action upon which the plaintiffs came into Court.—Sheo Prasad v. Lalit Kuar, 18 A 403. See also, Krishna Pillai v. Rangasami, 18 M. 462, and Govindrav Deshmukh v Ragho Deshmukh, 8 B. 543, in which it has been held that a plaintiff, failing to establish the particular instrument on which the suit is based should not be allowed to fall back upon some other instrument of a similar description.

A litigating party can only succeed secundum allegata et probata, and the Courts should check the tendency of defeated litigants to evade their defeat by devising a new case which was never set up when it should have been set up A Court of appeal is not justified in exposing a party after he has obtained his decree to be the brunt of a new attack of which he had never had notice during the hearing of the suit. Nathu v. Umedmal, 33 B 35.

Where the plaintiff in his pleadings pledged himself to prove a specific case of fraud, and made his cause of action entirely dependent on t[illegible]

he was not allowed to succeed, when he failed to prove fraud on a collateral matter.—Saheb Roy v. Gujadhur Pershad, 22 W R 221

A suit based on fraud, and fought out on the ground of fraud, and dismissed in the first Court on the ground of there having been no fraud, cannot be converted on appeal into one for redemption —Ram Dao v. Indromani, 3 C. W. N. 325. See also Ghurphekni v Purmeshar Dayal, 5 C. L. J. 653.

Where a plaintiff claimed in his plaint a right of pre-emption as co-partner of the vendor. Held that he could not be entitled to a share on the ground of vicinage.—Kunjabehari Lal v Girdhari Lal, 1 B L. R., S. N. 12. 10 W. R. 189 See also Shiu Suhai v Lala Hari Suhai, 3 B. L. R Ap. 142 Where a plaintiff founded his claim on a special agreement, he was not allowed on appeal to set up a claim to enforce his right of pre-emption founded on custom —Chadami Lal v Muhammad Baksh, 1 A. 563.

A plaintiff who sues on and fails to prove an alleged gift, may rely on his title by inheritance —Tirumala Chariar v Andal Ammal, 30 M. 406.

Where a plaintiff sues to recover possession of property on the ground that it is his self-acquired property, the Court is not justified in giving him a decree for a partition of the property on the ground that the whole was the property of a joint Hindu family in which the plaintiff was a co-sharer.—Mukhoda v Ram Churn, 8 C 871 11 C L R 194

Where a plaintiff claims possession of a separate share in entire property and fails to prove the separation, he is entitled to a decree for joint possession to the extent of his share along with other co-sharers —Ananta v. Parmananda, 12 C W N 172-n (8 C 871 explained)

When a plaintiff asks for one thing (exclusive possession), a Court ought not to give a decree because he proves that he is entitled to another thing (joint possession) —Bejoy Nath v Luckheemonee, 12 W R. 248; Sree Narain v Miller, 15 W R 7 Exclusive possession can only be awarded on proof of exclusive title If a case not alleged by the plaintiff is disclosed in the evidence, the Court can allow it to be set up, provided a specific issue is raised on it and the defendant is given an opportunity of meeting it —Parasram v Miraji, 20 B 569 See also, Nana v. Appa, 20 B 627, and Naranbhai v Ranchod, 26 B 141

Where the plaintiff claimed exclusive possession of immoveable property, to which the defendant also claimed to be exclusively entitled. Held, that the Court was competent, upon the finding that the properties belonged to the parties jointly, to give the plaintiff a decree for joint possession.—Wahad Alam v. Safat Alam, 12 A 536 (10 A. 637 distinguished).

Where a plaintiff sued to eject a tenant, alleging that he had forfeited his tenure by denying his landlord's title, and it was found that no relation of landlord and tenant existed between the parties. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed on the ground that the defendant was a trespasser.—Laljee Singh v. Bunwari Lall, 25 W. R. 148.

Where a plaintiff sued for rent and failed to prove any contract, express or implied, to pay it, he was held not entitled to change his case and ask for compensation for use and occupation.—Luchmeput v. Enael

Ali, 22 W. R. 319. See also, Surendra Narain v. Bhai Lal, 22 C. 752 (13 B. L. R. 243: 21 W. R. 208, referred to); Rachhea Singh v. Upendra Chandra, 27 C. 239 (13 B L. R. 243, 21 W. R. 208, and 22 C. 752, referred to and followed). See, however, Azim Sirdar v Ram Lall, 25 C 324.

In a suit for rent, if the plaintiff fails to prove the amount of the jumma claimed in his plaint, he is entitled to a decree at the rate admitted by the defendant provided he accepts the defendant's admission as a whole.—Bonomalee Churn v. Hafhzuddin, 13 B. L. R. 247-note; 12 W. R. 317; Lukhee Kanto v Sumeruddi, 13 B L R (F. B.) 213: 21 W. R. 208, Roushan Bibee v. Hurray Kristo, 8 C 926; Kishen Mohun v. Rajoo Dey, 13 B. L. R. 245-note. 19 W R. 234, Rukmini Kant v Sarikatunissa Bibee, 13 B. L. R. 246-note. 20 W. R 64; Hulodhur Sen v. Seetul Chunder, 23 W. R. 85.

In a suit for rent, where there is no specific prayer in the plaint for ejectment, the Court is competent to pass a decree for ejectment under s. 66 (2) of the B. T. Act, on failure to pay the arrears claimed within a given time.—Chand Mia v. Asima Banu, 3 C. L. J. 43-n

In a suit for rent, based upon an alleged settlement, the plaintiff failed to prove such settlement. Held that the suit must either be decreed at the rate admitted by the defendant or dismissed.—Lutf Ali v. Fakira, 6 C. L R 208; Sufder Reza v. Amzad Ali, 7 C. 703; Nangali v. Raman, 7 M. 226.

Where plaintiff fails to prove the rate of rent claimed it is the duty of the Court to find the proper rate, and not to give a decree merely for the rent admitted by the tenant.—Punoo Singh v. Nirghin Singh, 7 C. 298: 8 C. L. R. 310. But see, Rash Dhari v. Khakon Singh, 24 C. 433, in which it has been held that it is not the duty of the Court to ascertain the proper rate unless it is asked to do so. See also, Pijraddi v. Ambika, 5 C. W. N. 121.

The plaintiff sued to eject the defendant, alleging that the defendant was his tenant, who denied the tenancy and pleaded adverse possession for more than 12 years; it was found that the plaintiff was the owner of the land and defendant's possession was permissive. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled upon the facts found to a decree for possession notwithstanding that his case had been that the defendant was his tenant.—Abdul Ghani v. Musammat Batin, 25 A. 256 F. B. But see, Haji Khan v. Baldeo Das, 24 A. 90 and Naiku Khan v. Gayani Kuar, 15 A. 186.

A plaintiff must recover according to the allegation made in the plaint, and no decree should be given in his favour on a point not raised in the pleadings and not embodied in an issue.—Joytara v. Mahomed Mobaruck, 8 C. 975. 11 C. L. R. 399; Tara Chand v. Nobin Chunder, 21 W. R. 132: Protap Chunder v. Collector of Goalpara, 22 W. R. 216 and 31 M. 531.

A plaintiff ought not, by reason of his having claimed too much, to be precluded from recovering a proportionate amount, to which he is entitled, if the pleadings are sufficient to cover such a claim. The question as to whether a partial decree ought to be made, in such a case, is not one of indulgence to be granted or refused at the Court's discretion.—Malik Ahmad v. Shamsi Jahan Begum; 10 C. W. N. 626 P. C.: 28 A. 482; 3 C. L. J. 481.

Lawful possession of land is sufficient evidence of right as owner as against a mere trespasser. A plaintiff failing to prove title is entitled to a declaratory decree on the strength of his long possession.—Ismail Ariff v. Mahomed Ghous, 20 C. 834 (P C) Followed in Gangaram Chimma v. Secretary of State, 20 B 798. See also, Wali Ahmed v Ajudhia Kandu, 18 A. 537; Mustappa Saheb v Santha Pillai, 23 M 179; Narayana Ram v. Dharmachar, 26 M. 514, and Hanmant Rav v. Secretary of State, 25 B. 287. See, however, Shama Churn v Abdul Kabeer, 3 C. W N. 158; Kedar Nath v. Raj Nath, 3 C W N. 497, and Nisa Chand v Kanchiram, 3 C. W. N. 568: 26 C. 579.

In a suit to recover possession of land if the plaintiff fails to prove the specific title set forth in the plaint, he is entitled to succeed on the strength of his title by adverse possession —Sundari Dassee v. Mudhoo Chunder, 14 C. 592 (2 C. 418, distinguished, 8 C 975, discussed) See also, Goluck Chunder v. Nundo Coomer, 4 C. 699 3 C. L R 450; Gossain Das v Issur Chunder, 3 C 224, and Somasundaram v Vadivelu, 31 M. 531. But see, Bhaygo Muty v. Mahomed Wasil, 25 W R. 315; Krishna Churn v. Protap Chunder, 7 C 560; Tirumalasami Reddi v Rama Sami, 6 M. 420 and 17 C. 444 (448)

A Court can in its discretion pass a decree for redemption in a case in which the plaintiffs have sued for possession —Parshotam Bhaishankar v. Ramalzunjar, 20 B 196 See also, Kokilasari Dasi v Mohunt Rudranand, 5 C. L J 527, and Ghurphekni v Purmeshar Dayal, 5 C. L. J. 653

The plaintiff sued for a declaration of mokurari rights to certain lands. Held, that a decree on a ground of occupancy-right, not claimed in the plaint is wrong —Brindabun Chunder v Dhununjoy, 5 C. 246; 4 C. L. R. 443. See, however, Shib Chand v. Joymala Dasi, 7 C. L. R. 103.

Plaintiff sued to recover dower under a kabinnama which was not proved, but the Court gave a decree holding that, according to the custom of the family, the plaintiff was entitled to get the amount claimed. Held that the Court was wrong in decreeing the suit on the basis of the family custom not alleged by the plaintiff and not admitted by the other side.—Khaja Mahomed Asghur v Manija Khanum, 14 C 420

The plaintiffs, being members of a joint family, alleging division and a sale to them by other members of their share, sued to eject a more recent purchaser They failed to prove division as alleged. Held, that the plaintiffs, having failed to prove division, as alleged, were not entitled in second appeal to have the suit treated as a suit for partition.—Muttusami v. Rama Krishna, 12 M 292 See also, Palani Kanan v. Mosakonan, 20 M. 243.

The determination in a cause must be founded upon a case either to be found in the pleadings, or involved in, or consistent with the case thereby made —Mylapore Iyasawmy Vyapoory v Yeolay, 14 C. 801, P. C.

The objection that the plaintiff cannot be allowed to succeed on a right different from that on which he came into Court was not allowed to be taken in appeal when it was not raised in the first Court, where the plaint and issues might have been amended had the objection been taken.

—Nurul Hossein v. Sheo Sahai Lal, 20 C. 1 P. C. (11 M. I. A. 7: 6 W. R. P. C. 57, refrd. to).

A usufructuary mortgagor having failed to deliver possession of the mortgaged property, the mortgagee sued for the principal and interest by enforcement of lien. The property was not hypothecated as security for the mortgage money. Held, that, as regards the money claim, the suit might be treated as one for compensation for breach of contract, and should be determined on its merits.—Mohesh Singh v. Chauharia Singh, 4 A. 245, and Sheo Narain v. Jai Gobind, 4 A. 281.

The plaintiffs sued to recover certain lands, alleging that they had succeeded thereto on the death of their collaterals, widows and daughters being excluded from inheritance according to their custom. Held, that the plaintiffs should not have been allowed to shift the basis of their claim from an alleged custom which excluded both widows and daughters to one which only excluded daughters.—Desai Ranchoddas v. Ramal Nathubhai, 21 B 110.

The plaintiff sued for possession alleging partition. He also prayed in the alternative, that if the alleged partition be not proved, then the land should be partitioned. He failed to prove partition, and the suit was dismissed. Held, that the plaintiff's failure to prove partition did not preclude him from seeking the alternative relief on the strength of his general title.—Ningappa v. Shivappa, 19 B 323.

In a suit for possession, relief was granted on a different ground from that asked for.—Rasul Jehan Begum v. Ram Surun Singh, 22 C. 589.

Where, in a suit for redemption, the plaintiff fails to prove the mortgage set up by him, the Court may allow the plaintiff to redeem on the basis of a different mortgage under which the defendant claims to hold.—Kadalamvalli v. Mokkath Ussain, 30 M. 388: 17 M. L. J. 329.

Costs.—It is generally the privilege of the opposite party to get costs when amendment is allowed. The words " upon such terms as to payment of costs as the Court thinks fit " have been omitted in the present rule, and it has been stated in terms of the English rule, where amendments are allowed " on such terms as may be just." See Gunaji v. Mahanji, 34 B. 250. The Court therefore can now impose any terms that may seem to it just and proper when allowing amendments, and not terms as to costs only.

Return of Plaint for Amendment or Refusal of Amendment and Revisional or Appellate Powers of High Court.—The mere fact that the discretion of refusing amendment was erroneously exercised is no ground of interference in revision; Vadlamudi v. Vadlamudi, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 257; the discretion cannot be interfered with until it is shown to have been abused or perversely exercised; Indar Narain v. Nanak, 193 P. W. R. 1911; 9 I. C. 267; see also, Heydorn & Co. v. Md. Shafi, 34 A. 348: 9 A. L. J. 294: 14 I. C. 507; Hari Krishna v. Dinor, 29 I. C. 355. An illegal order returning plaint for amendment may be interfered with in revision; Mahadeo v. Nago, 7 N. L. R. 130. But see Gurdas v. Bhag, 11 I. C. 231: 216 P. L. R. 1911, where it has been held that the High Court will not interfere, in revision under s. 15, with an erroneous order refusing to allow amendment of plaint, there being no error in the exercise of jurisdiction or material irregularity. See also Kanhailal v. Mulchand, 26 I. C. 808. In Mahalingam v. Natesa. (1916) M. W. N. 146: 3 L. W. 107, it has been held that an order refusing leave to amend is not a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, Madras, and is not appealable.

Where a party has another effective remedy, the High Court will not interfere under s. 115. As an erroneous order, refusing to allow amendment of a plaint can be questioned by way of appeal under s. 105 (1), the High Court will not interfere under s. 115; Penumarti v. Reddi Subbamma, 14 M. L. T. 588: 22 I. C. 89 (1914) M. W. N. 98 (12 I. C. 104, 10 M. L. T. 188, folld.) See also Ramji Ram v. Saligram, 14 C. L. J. 188. See notes on s. 115, ante

Failure to amend after order.

18. If a party who has obtained an order for leave to amend does not amend accordingly within the time limited for that purpose by the order, or if no time is thereby limited, then within fourteen days from the date of the order, he shall not be permitted to amend after the expiration of such limited time as aforesaid or of such fourteen days, as the case may be, unless the time is extended by the Court. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and follows the English Or. XXVIII, r. 7. It provides that if a party fails to amend his pleading within the time fixed, he shall not be permitted to amend after the expiration of the time limited by this rule. But this rule does not affect the Court's general power of amendment under s. 153 of this Code.

A plaint was rejected on the ground that the plaintiff had no right to bring a suit without filing an agreement to arbitrate under cl. 20 of Second Schedule. Held, that neither Or. XVII, r. 3, nor Or. VII, r. 11, nor Or. VI, r. 18 applied. Under Or. VI, r. 18, the Court has no power to reject the plaint or to dismiss the suit, but must proceed to try the suit on the original plaint.—Murlidhar v. Narain Das, 19 I. C. 472, 160 P. L. R. 1913: 107 P. W. R. 1912.

Powers of High Court Independently of this Rule.—In an appeal, High Court held that the plaint did not specify properly the property as was required by s. 47, Chotanagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act (I of 1879) and sent it to the lower Court for amendment. On an objection that the plaint was amended after fifteen days of order, it was held that the High Court order was not made under this rule, but under the power of the Court to order that certain steps should be taken by the parties to enable the difference between them to be properly settled, and the amendment was not out of time; Madan Mohan v. Maharaja of Chotanagpur, 19 C. W. N. 200: 22 I. C. 778.

ORDER VII.

PLAINT.

Particulars to be contained in plaint.

1. The plaint shall contain the following particulars :—

(a) the name of the Court in which the suit is brought;

(b) the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff;

(c) the name, description and place of residence of the defendant, so far as they can be ascertained;

(d) where the plaintiff or the defendant is a minor or a person of unsound mind, a statement to that effect;

(e) the facts constituting the cause of action and when it arose;

(f) the facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction;

(g) the relief which the plaintiff claims;

(h) where the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so allowed or relinquished; and

(i) a statement of the value of the subject-matter of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction and of Court-fees, so far as the case admits. [S. 50.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule corresponds to s. 50 of the C. P. Code of 1882 with some additions and alterations. In the first para. the word "shall" has been substituted for the word "must." The distinction between the words "must" and "shall" has been clearly pointed out and explained in Sheo Prasad v. Lalit Kuar, 18 A. 403.

Clauses (a), (b) and (c) exactly corresponds to clauses (a), (b) and (c) of the old section. Clauses (d), (f) and (i) are new. Clause (e) corresponds to clause (d) of the old section, with some alterations. Clause (d) of the old section ran as follows: "A plain and concise statement of the circumstances constituting the cause of action, and where and when it arose." Clause (g) corresponds to cl. (e) of the old section, with some verbal alterations. The words "a demand of" which occurred in the old section have been omitted. Clause (h) corresponds to cl. (f) of the old section; "where" has been substituted for "if" diction or material irregularity. See also Kanhailal v. Mulchand, 26 I. C. 808. In Mahalingam v. Natesa. (1916) M W. N 146: 3 L W. 107, it has been held that an order refusing leave to amend is not a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, Madras, and is not appealable.

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and follows the English Or XXVIII, r. 7. It provides that if a party fails to amend his pleading within the time fixed, he shall not be permitted to amend after the expiration of the time limited by this rule But this rule does not affect the Court's general power of amendment under s 153 of this Code.

A plaint was rejected on the ground that the plaintiff had no right to bring a suit without filing an agreement to arbitrate under cl. 20 of Second Schedule Held, that neither Or XVII, r 3, nor Or VII, r. 11, nor Or. VI, r 18 applied Under Or VI, r 18, the Court has no power to reject the plaint or to dismiss the suit, but must proceed to try the suit on the original plaint —Murlidhar v Narain Das, 19 I C 472: 169 P L. Powers of High Court Independently of this Rule.—In an appeal, High Court held that the plaint did not specify properly the property as was required by s. 47, Chotanagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act (I of 1879) and sent it to the lower Court for amendment. Cause of Action.—As to its meaning, see s. 20, and Or. II, r. 2

Facts Constituting the Cause of Action.—It is imperative under this rule that the plaint should contain in addition to other particulars the facts constituting the cause of action and when it arose; Madras Steam N. Co., v. Shalimar Works, Ld., 42 C. 85 (100): 28 I. C. 463; Kalikanuna v. Biprodas, 19 C. W. N. 18 (24). Every party should state the material facts on which he relies for his claim or defence. This has been dealt within Or. VI, r. 2. See notes, ante. As to the particulars to be given in cases of fraud, etc., see Or. VI, r. 4 and notes.

A plaintiff must set out in his plaint the cause of action in the way prescribed in this rule; Gano v. Sidheswar, 4 Bom. L. R. 58. The plaint should include all the existing points on which the plaintiff can succeed; Hanmer v. Flight, 24 W. R. (Eng.) 846. As to what should and what should not be stated in the plaint, see, Moti Lal v. Judhistir, 20 C. W. N. 310: 22 C. L. J. 254. The Court cannot go outside the allegations in the plaint in order to decide an issue as to whether the plaint discloses a cause of action; Kshitish v. Osmond, 16 C. W. N. 516: 39 C. 587: 14 I. C. 4.

A part of the cause of action arises at a place where the pro-note is endorsed; Subramanian v. Maung Po, 11 I. C. 851.

If in a partition suit it cannot be ascertained with precision whether some of the owners are alive, then both the unascertained owners and their legal representatives should be added as defendants and notice on them under Or. V, r. 20 is sufficient; Srinath v. Probodh, 11 C. L. J. 580.

A Court is justified in refusing to give a decree upon a plaint which it deems to be intentionally indistinct and obscure; Mahomed v. Krishna, 20 W. R 147. See Ram Dayal v. Ram Doolal, 11 W. R. 273.

Cause of action for a claim of dower is distinct from the cause of action for a share in inheritance; Kisar Begam v. Nizam, 10 O. C. 69.

Where a person, by right of inheritance, sued for a declaration of his title to a share in a certain sum of money to which the defendants laid claim, and the defendants met that allegation by setting up a sale which the plaintiff admitted, held, that the plaintiff was bound to mention in his plaint the fact that he had parted with his title, and to allege the particular circumstances, misrepresentation, under-value or fraud, on which he relies to have the sale set aside; also that the cause of action arose at some time within the period of limitation.—Azimudin Khan v. Ziaulnissa, 6 B. 309.

The whole subject of pleadings has been allotted to Or. VI, r. 2, and what facts constituting the cause of action should or should not be alleged and what particulars should be embodied in the plaint have been discussed there.

Cause of Action must Arise Before the Institution.—A plaintiff, whose right to sue had not accrued at the date of institution of suit, cannot claim a decree simply on the ground that his right to sue has become complete during the pendency of the suit; Nanak Chand v. Mehr Jawata, 137 P. W. R. 1910.

The cause of action must be based on something which accrued antecedent to the suit.—Mallika v. Makkam, 2 C. L. J. 389, 9 C. W. N. 928.

A denial of a right in a written statement does not give rise to a cause of action or operate as forefeiture of tenancy; a cause of action must be antecedent to any allegation made in the pleadings.—Nizamuddin v. Mamtazuddin, 28 C. 135 (13 C. 96 followed). See also, Pertap v. Maigh, 36 C. 927, 13 C. W. N. 949 and Madan [illegible] Mohun v. Rajab Ali, 28 C. 223.

Institution of suit is not itself a notice to quit; [illegible] the tenancy must be determind before the institution of the suit.—Heman[illegible]gini v. Srigobinda, 29 C. 203: 6 C. W. N. 69 (23 C. 200 not followed; [illegible] 2 C. 146 F. B. followed). In a suit for ejectment, held that the cause of action must be based on something that accrued antecedent to the suit. A disclaimer of the landlord's title in the pleadings after suit brought, does not of itself determine the tenancy, and § 445 [illegible] notice to quit [illegible] unnecessary.—Pran Nath Saha v. Madhu Khulu, [illegible] desc. [illegible] Vithu v. [illegible] Dhondi, 15 B. 407; Ambabai v. Bhau, 20 B. 759 [illegible] an [illegible] Gulzar v. [illegible] Kalyan, 15 A. 399. But see, Baba v. Vishna Nath, [illegible] 8, and Pertap v. Maigh, 36 C. 927.

The Civil Courts must adjudicate on the rights of the parties as they existed when the plaint was filed and not on any title subsequently derived.—Purkhit v. Ananda, 8 C. L. J. 116 (21 M. 288 referred to).

The defendants obtained advances of money on hundis by making untrue representations, knowing them to be untrue. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to rescind the contract and claim immediate repayment before the due date of the hundis.—Baboo Lall v. Jaylall, 24 C. 543.

Where plaintiff has got a right, every invasion of that right gives him a fresh cause of action; Jevanand v. Beni, 12 O. C. 320.

Date and Place of Cause of Action.—The date and place of the accrual of the cause of action must be inserted in the plaint; Ram Prosad v. Sachi Dassi, 6 C. W. N. 585, p. 588; Baidyanath v. Ojan, 11 W. R. 238. But a plaintiff is not absolutely bound by the statements made in his plaint as to the date; Fuckoruddeen v. Mohim, 4 C. 529, p. 531.

A plaint must state when the cause of action arose and in an action of ejectment, it is for the plaintiff to prove a title subsisting at the date of the suit; Parsoo v. Munna Lal, 13 N. L. R. 16: 39 I. C. 21.

Suit to be Tried on the Original Cause of Action—Exception to the Rule.—The rule that a suit must be tried in all its stages on the cause of action as it existed at the date of its commencement was recognized in Radhay v. Ajodhya, 7 C. L. J. 262; Govinda v. Perumdevi, 12 M. 136; Ramanandan v. Pulikatti, 21 M. 288; Wamanrao v. Rustomji, 21 B. 70; Narasayya v. Venkatagiri, 37 M. 1 and Anundmoyee v. Sheeb Chunder, 9 M. I. A. 287 (301). An exception to this rule, namely, that a Court may take notice of events which have happened since the institution of the suit and afford relief to the parties, on the basis of the altered conditions, is applied in cases where it is shown that the original relief claimed has, by reason of subsequent change of circumstances, become inappropriate or that it is necessary to base the decision of the Court on the altered circumstances in order to shorten litigation or do complete justice between the parties; Rai Charan v Biswanath, 20 C. L. J. 107. The grounds of exception have been fully considered in Ramratan v. Mohunt, 6 C. L J. 74: 11 C. W. N. 732. See also, Sakharam v. Hari, 6 B. 113; Sangili v. Mookun, 16 M. 350; Ahmadjee v. Mahmadjee, 1 Bom. L. "Relief which the plaintiff claims."—See Or. VII, r. 7 and notes.

"Where the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished."—See Or. II, 2 (2) and notes.

Valuation for Purposes of Jurisdiction and for Purposes of Court-fees.—It is not contemplated under Or. VII, r. 1 that the subject-matter of the suit should be given two values, one purely arbitrary and fanciful for purposes of jurisdiction, and one in strict conformity to the real value for purposes of Court-fees In either case the valution should conform to the reality. Therefore when a plaint contains a valuation for purposes of jurisdiction, it is a natural presumption that the same valuation would apply, if it were necessary to have a valuation for an ad valorem Court-fee; Annapurnayya v. Nagaratnamma, 92 I. C 730: A. I. R 1926 Mad. 591

In money suits.

2. Where the plaintiff seeks the recovery of money, the plaint shall state the precise amount claimed: But where the plaintiff sues for mesne profits, or for an amount which will be found due to him on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant, the plaint shall state approximately the amount sued for.

COMMENTARY.

It is wholly unnecessary for the plaintiff to fix any value for the purposes of jurisdiction. The approximation required by this rule may be a rough and ready approximation such as the plaintiff in any given case is able to give —Bai Hiragavri v. Gulabdas, 15 Bom. L. R. 1123.

Money.—If a plaintiff seeks the recovery of money, the plaint must state the precise amount so far as the case admits, while, in a suit for the amount which will be found due on taking unsettled accounts, the plaint need only state approximately the amount sued for.—Khusal Chand Mulchand v. Nagindass, 12 B. 675.

Mesne Profits.—This clause has no application to suits where mesne-profits are claimed from date of institution, Ram v Bhima Bai, 15 B. 116. In a suit for mesne profits which had accrued due, the plaintiff is bound to state approximately the amount sued for Court-fees cannot be levied in respect of a claim for mesne profits pendente lite. A Munsif has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for mesne profits in excess of the limits of his pecuniary jurisdiction; Bhupendra v Purna, 24 I. C. 232 (15 B 416: 21 M. 371: 13 C. W. N 815 relied on) As to the essence of a claim for mesne profits, see Maniyam v Kuppanna, 29 I. C. 195 (1915) M. W. N. 319. For measure of compensation as mesne profits in respect of a godown, see Kamini v Krishna, 10 I C. 312.

Account.—In a suit for an account, the valuation entered in the plaint for the purpose of fixing Court-fees, determines the question of jurisdiction the valuation for both purposes being the same under section 8 of Act VII of 1887.—Bhagawantrai v Bajurao, 18 B 40; Bai Amba v Pranjivandas, 19 B. 198. See also, Ijuttulla v Chandra, 34 C. 954, F B 11 C. W. N. 1133: 6 C. L. J 255 The value of an account suit is the value as originally tentatively stated by plaintiff for purposes of Court-fees and jurisdiction; Olpherts v Arjundas, 9 N L R. 112: 20 I C 928 In an account suit the claim was valued at Rs 150 After the preliminary decree the amount due was found to be Rs. 8,424. Held, that as the jurisdiction of the Munsif was up to Rs 1,000 a decree for any sum above this cannot be passed.—Golap v Indra, 13 C W. N. 491 9 C L J. 367. Discussion as to form of plaint in a suit for an account —Gobind v. Sheriff, 7 C 169; 8 C L R 357, Shoshi v. Guru, 7 C 89 8 C. L R. 285. A "suit for an account" is a special form of suit and does not include every case in which accounts have to be gone into for ascertaining the amount claimed —Maroti v Balaji, 14 I. C. 786 8 N. L. R. 36.

Contribution.—A claim for contribution should distinctly set forth the amount due by each party sued; Bhola v. Indra, 14 W R 373. Quaere: Whether claim for contribution can be made in respect of further liability; Muthamal v. Secy. Of State, 24 M L J 405 19 I C. 68. A statement showing the liability of each defendant may be submitted afterwards; Bishnu v Bepin, 18 C. W N 622.

Partnership.—The plaint in a partnership suit ought to be framed on the lines of Form No 49 (Plaints) and the accounts should be taken as prayed in that form —Ram v Manick, 7 C. 248 9 C L R. 157. In a suit by a sole surviving partner to recover partnership debt, the plaint ought to allege that the debt was a partnership-debt, that the deceased partner had died before the suit, and that the suit was brought by the plaintiff for his own benefit and that of the estate.—Gobind v. Chandra, 9 A. 486.

Damages, Trespass.—Where the owner of a tank wishes to bring a suit against a person for fishing in the tank without his permission, the plaint should be framed for the recovery of damages for trespass, and should be based on an alleged dispossession by reason of the defendant's fishing in the tank; Lukhimoni v. Korunna, 3 C. L. R. 509.

In a suit for damages based on fraud the plaintiff may claim an amount approximately and offer to pay extra Court-fee if they prove heavier; Raghavaji v. Annamalai, 17 M. L. J. 625 As to suits in general, see s. 9 and notes.

Where the subject-matter of the suit is immoveable property.

3. Where the subject-matter of the suit is immoveable property, the plaint shall contain a description of the property sufficient to identify it, and, in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, the plaint shall specify such boundaries or numbers. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new. It is similar to Or. XX, r. 9 of this Code which directs that a decree for recovery of immoveable property should contain boundaries.

Immoveable Property.—A right to extra-territorial fishery is not immoveable property for all purposes; but it is an interest in immoveable property; Lokenath v. Jahania, 14 C. L J. 572. Right to cut and appropriate plaints is an interest in immoveable property, Kuttavat v. Thoppai, 15 I. C. 234

The Plaint shall Specify Boundaries or Survey Numbers, etc., Sufficient for Identification.—A suit to recover land without defining boundaries cannot be maintained, because, if decreed, the decree cannot be executed. —Mahomed Ismail v. Lalla Dhundhur Kishore, 25 W. R. 39 See also, Kangal Chundra v. Kanye Lall, 4 C 69 But where merely a declaratory decree in respect of title is sought, the suit should not be dismissed upon the ground that no boundaries were given —Raj Narain v. Shama Nund, 26 C. 845: 4 C. W. N. 126.

In suits concerning immoveable property, the plaintiff must describe the property in such a manner as may suffice for its identification, it is not absolutely necessary to set forth the boundaries —Aftabooddeen v. Shumsoddeen, 18 W. R. 461.

The mere omission from the schedule annexed to a plaint of the boundaries of the land will not exclude from the operation of the decree matters which are by name strictly claimed in the plaint and referred to as such in the decree and which do not need any further specification.—Shib Narain v. Ram Narain, 20 W. R. 142

Where the object of the suit is to prevent the plaintiff's rights over certain lands from being infringed upon, the boundaries of the land should be given in the plaint.—Ajoodhia Lall v. Gunamani Lall, 2 C. L. R. 134.

In case of boundary dispute or where there is any doubt about the identity of the land in suit, the Judge should insist on a good plan.—Po Gyi v. Mg. Paw, 2 I. C. 347: 5 L. B. R. 1.

A suit cannot be dismissed merely on the ground that the plaint did not contain a specification of the lands in defendant's possession, and that there was an error in the plaint in the description of the defendant's residence.—Riza Ali v. Purnanund, 6 B. L. R. Ap 84. 14 W. R. 474. See also, Kazeem v. Danes, 1 C. W. N. 574, and Jaladhar v Kinoo, 1 C. W. N. clxxxix (189).

Where a whole estate bearing a name is sued for, the boundaries need not be given.—Ramdoyal v. Ajoodhia Ram, 2 C. 1 25 W R 425.

In a suit in which the plaintiff claimed several plots of land, but did not specify the boundaries in respect of one of them, it was held that the proper course was for the Court to call upon the plaintiff to amend his plaint.—Jonabali v Golam Assad, 21 W R 187

Boundaries of Lands in Rent Suits.—In a suit for arrears of rent it is not absolutely necessary for the plaintiff to give the boundaries, it is enough if a description sufficient to identify the lands is given.—Pijraddi Naskar v. Ambika Churn, 5 C. As to the effect of misdescription of area and boundaries in a suit for enhancement of rent.—Tarnee Churn v Mohima Chunder, 22 W. R. 426

Right of Way.—In a suit for obstruction of a private right of way, the plaintiff should state with reasonable precision the termini of the way and its course, Harris v Jenkins, 22 Ch. D 481

Conflict between Boundary and Quantity.—In such cases that which is more certain and stable must prevail, Raja Durga v Rajendra, 10 C L J. 570. 14 C. W N 268 37 C 293 Where there is a description of land in a conveyance or lease setting forth the boundaries and specifying the area, the land within the boundaries passes by the deed, Annada v. Mathura, 13 C W N 702

When plaintiff sues as representative.

4. Where the plaintiff sues in a representative character, the plaint shall show not only that he has an actual existing interest in the subject-matter, but that he has taken the steps (if any) necessary to enable him to institute a suit concerning it.

[S 50, para. 4.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to para. 4 of s. 50 of the Code of 1882, with verbal changes only. The three illustrations have been omitted, but they are reproduced here for clear exposition of the object and meaning of the rule:—

(a) A sues as B's executor. The plaint must state that A has proved B's will.

(b) A sues as C's administrator. The plaint must state that A has taken out administration to C's estate.

(c) A sues as guardian of D, a Muhammadan minor. A is not D's guardian according to Muhammadan law and usage. The plaint must state that A has been specially appointed D's guardian.

"Where the plaintiff sues in a representative character."—The executor or administrator, as the case may be, of a deceased person is his legal representative for all purposes, and all the property of the deceased vests in him as such (Indian Succession Act XXXIX of 1925). A suit by a person as executor or administrator of a deceased person is a suit by him in representative character. It is not necessary in all cases to obtain probate or letters of administration to entitle a plaintiff suing in representative character to a decree in respect of the estate of the deceased. In the case of Europeans, Parsis, Jews and Armenians subject to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), no right as executor or legatee can be established in a Court of Justice unless a probate or letters of administration, as the case may be, are obtained. In the case of Indian Christians, up to the year 1901, it was necessary for the executor, where the deceased left a will, to obtain probate (Succession Act, 1865, s 187), and where the deceased died intestate, letters of administration were necessary (Succession Act, 1865, s. 190) But since the passing of the Native Christians Administration of Estates Act (VII of 1901), which declared that the provisions of s. 190 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, shall not apply to any part of the property of an Indian Christian who has died intestate, it is not necessary for Indian Christians, in the case of intestacy, to obtain letters of administration The repeal of these Acts by the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), has made no change in the law in this respect —See ss. 212 and 213 of the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925). In the case of Hindus, probate is necessary in the case of wills made by any Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain, where such wills are of the class specified in s. 57 of the Indian Succession Act, but no letters of administration are necessary when a Hindu dies intestate (s 212, Succession Act, 1925). In the case of Mahomedans, neither probate nor letters of administration are necessary.

This rule does not require that when the plaintiff sues in a representative capacity, that fact should be stated in the cause title of the plaint, although that is a convenient place to state it; Rani Kuarmoni v. Wasif Ali, 19 C. W. N. 1193: 28 I. C. 818.

"Has taken the steps."—The grant of probate is not a condition precedent to the institution of the suit and that the executor or legatee (mentioned in s. 213, Indian Succession Act, 1925) may institute the suit without obtaining probate, but that no decree in the suit will be passed till he obtains probate; Chandra Kishore v. Prasanna Kumari, 38 C. 327: 38 I. A. 7: 9 I. C. 122; Jamshedji v. Hirjibhai, 37 B. 158. The same principle applies where there is no will and a person takes out letters of administration after institution of the suit but before decree. A contrary view was, however, taken in Sethna v. Hemingway, 38 B 618, where it was held that if the plaint does not show that letters of administration have been obtained before institution of suit, it should be rejected, but if the suit is not rejected and the hearing is allowed to proceed, there is nothing to prevent the Court from passing a decree if letters of administration are obtained before decree. See also, Administrator-General of Bengal v. Lalit, 12 C. W. N. 738.

When Plaintiff Sues as Representative.—Before the introduction of the C. P. Code, it was not obligatory for a Hindu manager to set forth that he sued in a representative character.—Gansavant v Narayan, 7 B. 407.

When an administrator sues in his capacity as such, no suit is maintainable unless and until letters of administration are issued to him; Administrator-General v Lalit Mohun, 12 C W N 738.

The purchaser of the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor, who is a member of a joint Hindu family, at a sale in execution of a decree, does not acquire any title to the rights and interests of the other members of the family, unless it is clear that the judgment-debtor was sued in his representative capacity —Loki Mahto v Aghoree Ajail, 5 C 144. 4 C. L. R. 465.

A decree was obtained against the karnavan and anandravan of a Malabar tarwad, but the plaint did not describe them otherwise than by their individual name. Held, that the decree and the execution-sale thereunder did not bind the tarwad, Sankaran v. Parvati, 12 M 434

Suit By or Against Club.—An action for price of goods supplied to a member cannot be brought in the name of the secretary, as the goods belonged to the club, Michael v Briggs. 14 M 591. The secretary of a club cannot be sued personally for goods delivered for use of the club, nor can the club be sued through its secretary, N. W P. Club v Sadullah, 20 A 497.

Suit By or Against Shebait.—Where a suit is brought by or against a person in a representative capacity, it is not necessary to state in the cause title of the plaint, the representative capacity in which the plaintiff or the defendant sues or is sued, although, no doubt, that is a convenient place to make such a statement; Bidhushikhar v. Kulada Prasad, 46 C 877: 50 I. C. 525.

A mortgagee praying for the sale of the property and asking for no relief personally against the mortgagor is not bound to take out a certificate, under Act VII of 1889, before he can obtain a decree —Kanchan Modi v. Baij Nath, 19 C. 336; Palaniyandi Pillai v. Veerammal, 20 M. 77. See also, Amanna v. Gurumurthi, 16 M. 64; Baijnath Das v. Shamanund Das, 22 C. 143; Mahamad Yusuf v. Abdur Rahim, 26 C. 839: 4 C. W. N. 558; followed in Nanchand v. Yenawa, 28 B. 630, and Subramanian v. Rakku, 20 M. 232. But see, Fatehchand v. Mahammad Buksh, 16 A. 259.

Application by heir of mortgagee for supplementary decree under s. 90 of T. P. Act IV of 1882: Held (on review of authorities) that no such decree could be made without a certificate under the Act.—Sahadev v. Sakhawat, 12 C. W. N. 145; 7 C. L. J. 658; Abdul Sattar v. Satya Bhusan, 35 C. 767.

What Is and What Is Not "Debt" within S. 4 of Succession Certificate Act.—Debt has been defined by LORD JUSTICE LINDLEY in Webb v. Stenton, 11 Q. B. D. 518 (527), as "a sum of money which is now payable or will become payable in future by reason of a present obligation." See also, Syud Tuffuzzool v. Loghoo Nath, 14 M. I A. 40 (56). In Nemdhari v. Bissessari, 2 C. W. N. 591, it was held that the Succession Certificate Act refers to such debts as the deceased could sue upon, but debts accruing due after death can be sued upon without certificate This decision has been overruled by a Full Bench in Bancharam v. Adya Nath, 13 C. W. N. 966: 10 C. L. J 180 36 C. 936, where it has been held that a debt that falls due after the death of a creditor also comes within s. 4, and his heirs cannot obtain decree without certificate See also, Abdul Karim v. Maqbulunnissa, 30 A. 315 5 A L. J. 598.

Rent.—In a suit for rent which became due after the death of the deceased, it was held that no certificate is necessary, Ranchordas v. Bhaghubhai, 18 B 394; the principle of this case is identical with that of Jones v. Thompson, E. B. & E 63, where CROMPTON, J., held that rent not due is not an existing debt, and cannot therefore be described as a debt accruing.

Rent is not a debt within the meaning of s 4 of the Succession Certificate Act VII of 1889 A suit for rent accruing due partly during the lifetime of the registered tenant, and partly after his death, is maintainable by the legal representatives of the deceased without a certificate; Nagendra Nath v Satadulbashini, 26 C. 536: 3 C W N. 294. See also, Andolammal v. Venkatacharlu, 17 M L J 257

Amount of decree for rent deposited by judgment-debtor is considered rent even after the death of decree-holder and his heir can withdraw it without certificate; Surendra v Upendra, 18 I. C 495

A suit for account is not a suit for the recovery of a debt within the meaning of s 4 of the Succession Certificate Act —Bisseswar Roy v. Durgadas, 32 C. 418.

Dower of a deceased Mahomedan wife is a debt and cannot be recovered by her heirs without certificate.—Abdul Karim v. Maqbulunnissa, 30 A. 315.

Succession certificate cannot be granted for collection of a part only of debt; Gofur v. Kalandari, 33 A. 327. But see, Md. Abdul Hossani v. Sarifan, 16 C. W. N. 231: 15 C. L. J 384, where 33 A 327 has been dissented from and it has been held that certificate may cover a part of the debt; see also, Annapurna v. Nalini, 18 C. W. N. 836: 42 C. 10.

It is a serious irregularity not to ask for certificate in the case of a separate Hindu family, Ghisu v Ram Ballabh, 13 I C 363

Right to Execute Decree Without Certificate of Administration.—The heir of decree-holder applying for execution of the decree is bound to obtain a certificate of heirship under Act VII of 1889—Chimniram Umaji v. Hanmant, 15 B. 265 (15 B. 79 referred to).

Application for execution of a decree may be made by the legal representative of a deceased person without a certificate, the certificate being supplied during the pendency of the proceeding.—Brojo Nath v. Isswar Chandra, 19 C. 482 (13 C. 47 followed). See also, Mangal Khan v. Salimullah, 16 A. 26; Kalian Singh v. Ram Charan, 18 A. 34.

A decree in favour of a deceased mohunt for costs incurred in proceedings carried on by him on behalf of the muth may be executed by the successor and representative of the mohunt without certificate—Jogendra Nath v. Ram Chunder, 20 C. 103.

An application for execution of a decree by the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder, without the production of a certificate under Act VII of 1889, is one made in accordance with law within the meaning of Art. 179 (4) of the Limitation Act, 1877.—Balkishan v. Wager Singh, 20 B. 76; Hafizuddin v. Abdool, 20 C. 755; Adhar v. Lalmohun, 24 C. 778.

Right of Executors, etc., to Sue Without Probate or Letters of Administration.—It has been held by the Privy Council that where probate was obtained subsequent to suit, but before decree, this was sufficient compliance with s. 213 of the Succession Act: Chandra Kishore v. Prosanno Kumari, 38 C. 327: 15 C. W. N. 121 P. C.: 13 C. L. J. 58: 8 A. L. J. 96. It is submitted that the same principle ought to apply to cases where there is no will, and a person takes out letters of administration after institution and before decree. A contrary view has however been taken in Sethna v. Hemingway, 38 B. 618, where it has been held that if the plaint does not show that letters of administration have been obtained before institution of suit, it should be rejected; but if the plaint without being dismissed the hearing is allowed to proceed, a decree passed is not contrary to s. 190 Succession Act. See also, Admn -Genl. v. Lalit, 12 C. W. N. 738.

Where a will is not governed by the Hindu Wills Act, s. 187, Succession Act does not apply; the estate of the deceased vests in the executor under s. 4, Probate and Admn. Act, on his death and there is nothing to prevent his instituting a suit at once for debt due without taking out probate. Of course if he omitted to take out probate he could not get a decree without producing a succession certificate but he can produce this at any time after institution and before decree; Balakrishnadu v. Narayanswamy, 37 M. 175 24 I. C. 852, Jamsetji v. Hirjibhai, 37 B 158· 15 Bom L R.. 92: 19 I. C. 406

Sec. 187 of the Indian Succession Act X of 1865, not being made applicable to wills of Hindus made before 1st September 1870, it is not obligatory on executors or legatees under them to take out probate or letters of administration in order to establish their rights in a Court of Justice.—Krishna Kinker v. Rai Mohun, 14 C. 37 (referred to in Krishna Kinker v. Panchurani, 17 C. 272). See also, Kanhaiya Lal v Munni, 18 A. 260 and Sarat Chandra v. Bhupendra Nath, 25 C 103.

An executor in order to bring a suit must file, not merely a copy of the grant of administration, but also the copy of the will attached to it, the two together forming the probate.—Delaney v. Rohamat Ali, 32 C. 710

Sec. 187 of the Succession Act does not debar a defendant from relying upon a will of which no probate or letters has been taken out, Caralapathi v. Cota, 33 M. 91. A will, of which probate has not been taken, may be proved in a proceeding other than under the Probate Act; Basanta v. Gopal, 18 C. W. N. 1136.

In Bombay, Mahomedan executors can sue without first taking out a probate.—Moosa v. Essa, 8 B. 241. Probate need not be taken of Mahomedan will; Sakina Bibee v. Md. Ishak, 15 C. W. N. 185: 37 C. 839 (8 B. 241 folld.). It is not obligatory on a Hindu to obtain letters of administration to the estate of the last owner; Jogendra v. Apurma, 18 C. W. N. 1190.

Defendant's interest and liability to be shown.

5. The plaint shall show that the defendant is or claims to be interested in the subject-matter, and that he is liable to be called upon to answer the plaintiff's demand. [S. 50, para, 5.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to para 5 of s 50 of the Code of 1882, with this modification that the word "shall" has been substituted for the word "must" after the word "plaint," and the illustration has been omitted But for the clear exposition of the object and meaning of the rule, the illustration attached to the old section is reproduced below —

"A dies, leaving B his executor, C his legatee, and D a debtor to A's estate. C sues D to compel him to pay his debt in satisfaction of C's legacy The plaint must show that B has causelessly refused to sue D, or that B and D have colluded for the purpose of defrauding C, or other such circumstances rendering D liable to C"

For the distinction between the words "shall" and "must," see Sheo Prasad v Lalit Kuar, 18 A 403

Where the defendant is sued in a representative character, that fact must be stated, Girdhur v Bai Shiv, 8 B 309, Loki v Aghoree, 5 C. 544.

Grounds of exemption from limitation law.

6. Where the suit is instituted after the expiration of the period prescribed by the law of limitation, the plaint shall show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed. [S. 50, last para.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to the last para of section 50 of the Code of 1882 with some change of language only The grounds on which exemption can be claimed are set forth in sections 12 to 20 of the Limitation Act, 1908

Applicability of Rule.—Order VII, r 6 applies to cases in which the suit, as laid in the plaint, is prima facie barred by limitation; Khandu Lal v. Fazal, 1 Lah, 21: 51 I. C. 956. But see, Deo Raj v. Shiv Ram, 70 P. R. 1914: 105 P. W. R. 1914.

Grounds of Exemption from Limitation Law.—A plaintiff cannot take advantage of any ground of exemption from the law of limitation which has not been set up in the plaint —Jogeshwar Roy v Raj Narain, 31 C. 195: 8 C. W. N. 171. See, Gulam v. Mahamad, 34 B. 540, Gobinda v. Santa, 83 P. R. 1914: 26 I. C. 441; Bhupendra v Purna, 24 I. C 232; Uttam Chand v. Mt. Thakur Debi, 4 Lah. L. J. 190; 3 Lah 233, Nanak Chand v. Muhammad Khan, 75 I. C. 1048.

If the plaint shows the ground of exemption, the requirements of this rule are satisfied and the plaint cannot be rejected merely because the exemption is not claimed specifically; Raghunath v. Syed Samad, 12 C. W. N. 617: 7 C. L. J. 560; Gangadhar v. Abdul, 11 C. L. J. 34: 14 C. W. N. 128.

When a ground has been stated in the plaint, the plaintiff is not precluded from taking another and not inconsistent ground, if he believes that the latter is the true ground to get over the bar of limitation; Yakub v. Bai Rahimat, 10 Bom. L. R. 316. In Parmeshri Das v. Fakiria, 3 Lah. L. J. 22: 60 I. C. 772; Hingu v. Heramba, 13 C. L J. 139; Gangadhar v. Khaja, 14 C. W. N. 128, it has been held that a plaintiff who has stated one ground of exemption may be allowed to take another and inconsistent ground.

Effect of Omission to Set Out Grounds of Exemption in Plaint.—Though Or. VII, r. 6, C. P. Code, requires the plaint in a suit filed after expiry of the period of limitation to show on what ground exemption is claimed, yet an omission to do so in respect of a suit filed on the day the Court re-opened after the summer vacation (the period of limitation for bringing which had expired during the vacation) would not entail dismissal of the suit S. 57 (a) of the Evidence Act empowers the Court to take judicial notice of any public holidays notified in the official gazette and the plaintiff is entitled to presume that the Court would take such notice, at any rate the Court in such a case should not dismiss the suit, but require the plaint to be amended; Tekchand v. Patto, 56 I. C. 926.

Objections based on plaintiff's failure to set out the ground of exemption from limitation in the plaint must be taken in the trial Court, otherwise the High Court will not permit them to be raised before it in revision; Reguva Nagendran Chetty v Kuppuswami, 4 L. W 148 36 I. C 593. A plaintiff should not be allowed to rely upon a ground of exemption from the law of limitation for the first time in appeal; Uttam Chand v Musst Thakur, 3 Lah 233 69 I. C. 419: A. I. R 1922 Lah. 39

Under Or VII, r. 6, C P Code, a plaintiff, whose suit is on the face of it barred by limitation, must state explicitly in the plaint the ground on which the bar is saved and where nothing is so stated, and no issue is framed on it, any document cannot afterwards be used in the course of the trial as being an acknowledgment saving limitation; Marudai Muthurian v. Chinna Kannu, 25 M L. T. 295: (1919) M. W N. 429 · 52 I C 243.

If a plaint does not show any ground of exemption, the Court of first instance should allow the plaint to be amended, save under very exceptional circumstances; Gunnaji v Makanji, 34 B. 250: 3 I C. 159; Ramsukh Das v Ghulam, 46 I. C. 495.

Relief to be specifically stated.

7. Every plaint shall state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims either simply or in the alternative, and it shall not be necessary to ask for general or other relief which may always be given as the Court may think just to the same extent as if it had been asked for. And the same rule shall apply to any relief claimed by the defendant in his written statement. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new. It follows English Or. XX, r. 6 and has adopted the principle laid down in several cases in India.

Relief to be Specifically Stated.—This rule makes it imperative that the plaintiff shall state specifically, in his plaint, the relief which he claims. If he omits, except with the leave of the Court, to sue for all the reliefs to which he may be entitled in respect of the same cause of action, he will not afterwards be permitted to sue for any relief so omitted [Or II, r. 2 (3)].

Though a relief is claimed upon a specific ground, it is competent to the Court to grant it upon a different ground if the ground is disclosed by the allegations in the plaint and the evidence in the case; Rasul Jehan v. Ram Saran, 22 C. 589; Haji Khan v. Baldeo, 24 A 90. When the plaintiff asks for more relief than he is entitled to, he may be given that much relief only that he is entitled to, but the suit should not be dismissed on that account; Pitambar v Ramjoy, 7 W R. 93 · Lakshman v. Hari, 4 B. 584.

" General or other relief."—It is no longer necessary under the present rule to specifically ask for general relief Where a suit is for cancellation of a sale deed on the ground of failure of consideration and for recovery of property comprised in it. Held that the Court might grant the plaintiff a decree for the unpaid portion of the purchase-money; Mahalinga v. Tirumalai, 8 M. L. T. 463.

The relief to be awarded to the plaintiff depends upon the facts established by him and not upon an unfounded assertion of a claim by him which is negatived by the Court; Surendra Nath v. Girdhari, 62 I. C. 633.

The mere fact of a plaintiff not having asked for a relief specifically would not debar the Court from granting it if it thinks just to do so; Naraindas v. Butto, 13 S L R 159, 53 I C 722.

A usufructuary mortgagee who sues the purchasers of the equity of redemption, and prays (1) for a decree on the mortgage, or (2) for possession, or (3) for a money-decree, is not entitled to a decree for the usufruct of the property accumulated in the hands of the District Magistrate while the property was under attachment in proceedings under s. 145 of the Cr. Pro. Code; Khebhani Ojha v Gulab Ojha, 2 Pat L J. 698: 43 I. C. 463.

If a suit for specific performance be dismissed, the Court can nevertheless give the plaintiff a decree for refund of the deposit, although he had not asked for any such alternative relief, Raghunath v Chandra, 17 C. W. N. 100.

A plaintiff is entitled to ask for any remedy which the Court may think proper upon the state of facts disclosed in his plaint and established by the evidence, and a mistake in asking for a particular remedy will not debar him from some other remedy similar in its nature and not more extensive, provided it requires no change in the facts.—Nudiar Chand v. Prannath, 21 W. R. 8.

Where a plaintiff mistakes the relief to which he is entitled in his special prayer, the Court may afford him the relief to which he has a right, provided it is such a relief as is agreeable to the case made by the plaint.—Nistarini v. Makhan, 9 B. L. R. 11: 17 W. R. 482. See also, Gobind v. Durga, 14 B. L. R. 337: 22 W. R. 248; Kristo Mohiny v. Kally, 6 C. 485: 8 C. L. R. 43.

A plaintiff proving a wrong done to him, though not exactly to the extent of which he complains, is entitled to relief, though not to the extent or on the ground on which he seeks.—Bishnu v. Ram, 22 W. R. 2 (5 B. L. R. 514-note: 12 W. R. 248, explained and distinguished).

Relief not founded on the pleadings should not, as a rule, be granted. But where substantial matters which constituted the title of all the parties are touched in the issues, and have been fully put in evidence and formed the main subject of discussion and decision in the Courts, the case does not come within the rule, and a declaration of the rights of the parties, though not founded on the pleadings, may be made.—Srimahanta Gobind Rao v. Sita Ram, 2 C. W. N. 681 P. C.; Mohan Lal v. Maya Mal, 4 Lah. L. J. 393.

In a suit for possession by partition of certain property from which the defendants had ousted the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs proved their title, but the only obstacle in their way was that the property was of a nature incapable of being partitioned. On this ground, the Court dismissed the suit entirely and refused to grant a declaratory decree as such a relief had not been specifically asked for. Held, that the Court should have granted as much of the plaintiff's prayer as it could and given them a decree for joint possession over such share as was found to belong to them; Rajjab Shah v. Tahir Shah, 43 A. 318: 19 A. L. J. 61.

When the plaint contains a statement of all the material circumstances, but the prayer is inartistically framed, the Court should give the plaintiff the appropriate relief if he is otherwise entitled to it.—Gopi v Bansidhar, 27 A. 325 P. C.: 9 C. W. N. 577; Satyataran v. Jyoti Prasad, (1923) Pat. 153.

Relief may be granted of a different description from the specific relief prayed-for by the bill, provided the bill contains charges putting in issue material facts which will sustain such relief.—Gangaram v. Junmajoy, 1 C. L R. 144; Cockrell v. Dickens, 2 M I. A 353 · Brojendra v. Luckhey, 6 C. W. N. 816; Sukhdeo v. Lachman, 24 A. 456. But upon a prayer for general relief, a plaintiff is not entitled to any relief which is inconsistent with his plaint.—Hira v. Mati, 5 B. L. R. 682. The plaintiff cannot desert the specific relief claimed, and under the claim for general relief, ask for specific relief of another description, unless the facts and circumstance alleged on the pleadings will, consistently with the rules of the Court, maintain that relief; Kokamal v. Golab Singh, 27 Bom. L. R. 277. 87 I. C. 481: A. I R. 1925 Bom. 248; Ramgharib v. Shankar, 29 A. L J. 15: A. I. R. 1922 All 5. See also, Debi v. Bhan, 31 C. 433: 8 C. W. N. 408, where it has been held that a prayer for a general relief is limited by the facts alleged and by the prayer for express relief.

The rule that the plaintiff is entitled to relief only upon the case made by his pleadings, is strictly enforced when he relies upon fraud; Banshiram v. Panchami, 20 C. W. N. 638; see also, Rajendra v. Gangaram, 37 C. 856.

Alternative Relief.—Where the title on which a plaintiff sues is put forward in the alternative, not inconsistent with each other, he ought to obtain a decree if he makes out either branch of his alternative.—Woodit v. Baldeo, 21 W. R. 12. See also, Perumal v Kavedi, 16 M. 121, and Ningappa v. Shivappa, 19 B. 323. But where a plaintiff claims in his plaint two alternative reliefs, which are wholly inconsistent with each other, the Court should not grant him any relief—Mahomed Buksh v. Hussein Bibi, 15 C. 684 P. C.; Iyyappa v. Ramlakshmamma, 13 M. 549; dissented from in Jeno v. Manon, 18 A. 125.

A plaintiff may sue to set aside a deed of gift on the ground that she executed it under a fraudulent representation that it was a power-of-attorney, or, in the alternative, on the ground that she executed it under undue influence; Official Assignee v Bidyadhari, 24 C. W. N. 145: 54 I. C. 700

A plaintiff can claim in the alternative over the same plot of ground rights of (i) ownership, and (ii) easement; Narendra v Abhoy, 34 C. 51 F. B.: 11 C W N 20 4 C L J 437, see also, Durgamani v. Ambika, 4 C L J 367 A plaintiff in a pre-emption suit may base his claim in the alternative, on contract, custom, or Mahomedan Law; Muhammad v Shamsunnisa, 36 A 456, or he may set up his claim as owner in the alternative, Bhagurti v Parmeshar, 36 A 476.

In a suit for specific performance of a contract, the purchaser may, as an alternative relief, claim a return of the earnest money, and at the hearing may give up his prayer for specific performance and ask for a return of the earnest money, and the Court may direct the defendant to return the earnest money, Karson Das v Chhota Lal, 48 B. 259: A. I. R 1924 Bom 119. 77 I C 275.

Relief founded on separate grounds

8. Where the plaintiff seeks relief in respect of several distinct claims or causes of action founded upon separate and distinct grounds, they shall be stated, as far as may be, separately, and distinctly. [New.]

This rule is new and it should be read with Or I, r 3

Procedure on admitting plaint.

9. (1) The plaintiff shall endorse on the plaint, or annex thereto, a list of the documents (if any) which he has produced along with it; and, if the plaint is admitted, shall present as many copies on plain paper of the plaint as there are defendants, unless the Court, by reason of the length of the plaint or the number of the defendants, or for any other sufficient reason, permits him to present a like number of concise statements of the nature of the claim made, or of the relief claimed in the suit, in which case he shall present such statements,

Concise statements.

(2) Where the plaintiff sues, or the defendant or any of the defendants is sued, in a representative capacity, such statements shall show in what capacity the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued.

(3) The plaintiff may, by leave of the Court, amend such statements so as to make them correspond with the plaint.

(4) The chief ministerial officer of the Court shall sign such list and copies or statements if, on examination, he finds them to be correct. [S. 58.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 58 of the Code of 1882, with some modifications of a verbal character. The last para. of section 58 of the old Code has been omitted and inserted under Or. IV, as r. 2.

10. (1) The plaint shall at any stage of the suit be returned to be presented to the Court in which the suit should have been instituted.

Return of plaint.

(2) On returning a plaint the Judge shall endorse thereon the date of its presentation and return, the name of the party presenting it, and a brief statement of the reasons for returning it. [S. 57.]

(4) The chief ministerial officer ot the Court shall sign such list and copies or statements if, on examination, he finds them to be correct. [S. 58.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 58 of the Code of 1882, with some modifications of a verbal character. The last para. of section 58 of the old Code has been omitted and inserted under Or. IV, as r. 2.

10. (1) The plaint shall at any stage of the suit be returned to be presented to the Court in which the suit should have been instituted.

Return of plaint.

(2) On returning a plaint the Judge shall endorse thereon the date of its presentation and return, the name of the party presenting it, and a brief statement of the reasons for returning it. [S. 57.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 57 of the Code of 1882, with several important changes. Clauses (a) (b) and (c) of the old section have been omitted; and the words "in which the suit should have been instituted," have been added to sub-rule (1). These words mean where the suit ought to have been instituted in some other Court in accordance with the provisions of ss. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20 of this Code. Thus the present rule embodies in a more convenient and concise form the provisions contained in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of s. 57 of the old Code.

"At any stage of the suit."—The words "at any stage of the suit" have been added to sub-rule (1). The addition is an important one and it has been made in accordance with the principle laid down in Prabhakar v. Viswambhar, 8 B. 313 F. B., where it has been held that the provisions of this rule might be put into force at any stage of the suit, even after the trial has begun and concluded Sub-rule (2) exactly corresponds to the last para. of 57 of the old Code.

Want of Pecuniary Jurisdiction.—On the hearing of a suit, the Court came to the conclusion that the value of the property in dispute placed the claim beyond its jurisdiction, and it therefore dismissed the suit Held that the plaint ought to have been returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court.—Moshingan v. Mozari Sajad, 12 C. 271.

See also, Ram Gutty v. Goonomonee Dabee, 11 W. R. 177; Kartick Nath v. Roy Nundeput, 23 W. R. 263, and Shridhar Hari v. Chinna Valad, 10 B. H. C. 17.

Or. VII, r. 10 applies to a Small Cause Court, and where a Small Cause Court Judge finds that he has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit he must return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court He must not go into the merits of the case; Abdul Armith v Ponnambala, 51 M. L. J. 158: 94 I. C. 550: A. I. R. 1926 Mad 679

Where, after a trial has begun, or even after it has concluded, it appears that the Court has not jurisdiction to hear the case, the plaint should be returned for presentation to the proper Court, and no additional Court-fees are required.—Prabhakarbhat v. Vishwambhar, 8 B. 313; Visweswara v. Nair, 35 M 567. See also, Khimji Jivraju v Purshotam, 7 M. 171; Nagamma v. Subba, 11 M 197, and Kandu v Konda, 8 M. 62.

Where an appeal is presented to a wrong Court, the proper procedure is to return the appeal for presentation to the proper Court; Krishna Pattar v. Kavalappara, 5 L W 294 · 38 I C 772

Where a portion of the claim is struck out in a superior Court, and the rest of the claim is within the jurisdiction of the inferior Court, the superior Court should return the plaint for presentation to the inferior Court.—Krishna v. Ravi Varma, 8 M. 384.

Where a plaint contains several causes of action and the Court has jurisdiction to try only one of them, the Court should return the plaint and strike out from the plaint that part of it which is beyond its jurisdiction, and the plaintiff can file another suit upon the cause of action so struck out; Shankar v Balkrishna, 28 Bom. L. R 521 94 I. C 783: A. I R 1926 Bom 283

If in a suit for ejectment, in which the defendant shows he is a mortgagee, the defendant consents to a decree for redemption, and the amount, secured by the mortgage exceeds the jurisdiction of the Court, the Court should not proceed further, but return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court; Chandu v. Kombi, 9 M. 208.

Want of Jurisdiction for Other Causes.—In a suit for immoveable property if the property is situate outside the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is filed it ought not to dismiss the suit, but should return the plaint to be presented to the proper Court, Isak v. Khatija, 23 B. 756.

Where a suit is wrongly filed in a Revenue Court, the Court should not dismiss the suit but return it for presentation to the proper Court; Ramjas v Balu, 44 A. 686 70 I C 98: A I. R. 1922 All. 424.

A suit was dismissed on the ground that none of the defendants (who were agriculturists) was residing within the local limits of the Court in which it was filed. Held that the suit should not have been dismissed, but the plaint should have been returned for presentation to the proper Court.—Ladhaji Nathaji v. Hari, 23 B. 679; Ramjas Singh v. Balu Nandan Singh, 44 A. 686.

A Judge of a Small Cause Court cannot proceed to try and dismiss a suit on the merits which he on the objection of the defendants, holds not to be cognisable by a Court of Small Causes, for, under Or. VII, r. 10, C. P. Code, it is incumbent upon him to return the plaint at any stage for presentation to the proper Court; Padu Mahammad v. Chatra Nath, 27 C. L. J. 590; 41 I. C. 203.

Where a plaint consists of a claim within the local jurisdiction of the Court and also a claim outside such jurisdiction, e.g., where a suit is brought on two contracts only one of which was entered into the local jurisdiction of the Court, that portion of the plaint which relates to the matter outside the jurisdiction is to be deemed as though it was a distinct plaint by itself and returned under Or. VII, r. 10 for presentation to the proper Court; Kishan Lal v. Ram Sundar, 19 A. L J. 822

Return by Appellate Court.—Where the Appellate Court decides that the lower Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, it should return the plaint to plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court —Bai Mahkor v. Bulakhi Chaku, 1 B. 538; Dheraj Mahtab Chand v. Damoder Singh, W. R. (1864) 65; Shurut Soonduree v. Khemunkuree, 5 W R., Act X, 87; Abdulla v. Ashraf, 7 C. L. J. 152. An Appellate Court is not bound to return the plaint under all circumstances where defect of jurisdiction appears.—Yacoob v Mohan Singh, 11 M. 482

The High Court, in second appeal, finding that the lower Court had no jurisdiction to try a case, directed the plaint to be returned for presentation to the proper Court.—Babaji v Lakshmibai, 9 B 266; Kalian Dyal v. Kaliyan Narer, 9 B. 259.

A Munsif dismissed a suit for improper valuation and want of jurisdiction. The lower Appellate Court affirmed the order, and directed the plaint to be returned This was not done Held that a second appeal would lie.—Joynath v. Lall Bahadoor, 8 C 126 · 10 C L. R. 146.

Where the first Court returned a plaint for want of jurisdiction, and the Appellate Court remanded the case, holding that the first Court had jurisdiction: Held that the lower Appellate Court's order was not appealable.—Bindeshri v. Nandu, 3 A. 456, and Krishna Ram v Narsing, 3 A. 855. But see, Goor Bux v. Brijilal, 26 C. 275 · 3 C W N. 243.

Provisions of Or. VII, R. 10 Mandatory.—The direction in Or. VII, r. 10 is mandatory and where in an ejectment suit by a land-holder, the Court arrives at the conclusion that the defendants tenants have permanent rights of occupancy, it is bound to return the plaints for presentation to the Revenue Court even though the plaintiff himself may not have asked for such return; Ambalavana v Pichakutti Odayar, (1920) M. W. N. 163: 10 L. W. 525.

Appeal.—An order under this rule returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court, whether such order is made by the Court of first instance or by the Court of first appeal in the exercise of powers conferred by s. 107, is appealable; Wahidullah v. Kanhaya Lal, 25 A. 174; Dalip Singh v. Kundan Singh, 36 A. 58; Nanda Kishore v. Abdur Rahman, 42 A. 74: 52 I. C. 801; Goor Bux v. Birj Lal, 26 C. 275; Chinnasami v. Karuppa, 21 M. 234; but no second appeal lies from the order of the first Appellate Court; Nil Kanth v. Balvant, 27 Bom. L. R. 635; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 431: 88 I. C. 753.

Limitation.—The Court returning a plaint may grant a reasonable time for presentation to the proper Court, and if it is filed within that time, the suit will not be barred by limitation; Nibaran v. S. C. Mukerjee, 6 I. C. 637.

The combined effect of this rule and s. 14 of the Limitation Act is that when a plaint, which has been returned, is presented in a proper Court, the suit must be taken to be instituted on the date of such presentation; Hedlot v. Karam, 15 C L. J. 241.

Rejection of plaint.

11. The plaint shall be rejected in the following cases :—

(a) where it does not disclose a cause of action :

(b) where the relief claimed is undervalued and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to correct the valuation within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so :

(c) where the relief claimed is properly valued, but the plaint is writen upon paper insufficiently stamped, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp-paper within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so :

(d) where the suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by any law. [Ss. 53 & 54.]

COMMENTARY.

Clause (a) of this rule corresponds to the latter part of clause (a) of s. 53, clause (b) to clause (a) of s. 54, and clause (c) to clause (b) of s. 54 of the old Code with some verbal changes.

Clause (d) corresponds to clause (c) of s. 54 of the old Code, with this important alteration, that the words "by any law" have been substituted for the words "any positive rule of law" which occurred in the old section. The words "any law" would include codified as well as case law. But the words "any positive rule of law" meant only any codified law.

Clause (d) of s. 54 of the Code of 1882, has been omitted. The reason seems to be, that there is no express provision in the present Code for return of pleadings for amendment —Or. VI, r. 16, 17. See 44 C. 352.

Clause (a). "Where the plaint does not disclose a cause of action."—A suit is liable to be dismissed on the ground that the plaint discloses no cause of action, although such ground is taken in the argument of the pleader and not in the written statement of the defendant.—Umamoyee Dassee v. Rajkristo Nundun, 3 C. W. N. 220.

A plaint can be rejected under this section on the ground that it does not disclose any cause of action; but it is too late for an Appellate Court to reverse the decree solely on that ground; Shah Ahmed v. Taree, 7 C. 343.

The lower Court returned the plaint on the ground that it did not disclose a cause of action. Held that the plaint should have been rejected. —Nagar Mal v. Macpherson, 8 A. 766.

Where a plaintiff seeks relief on the ground of fraud, and the plaint contains general allegations, but no specific instances of the alleged fraud, it ought to be, immediately on presentation, rejected or returned for amendment, as it does not disclose a cause of action.—Ganga Narain v. Tiluck ram, 15 C. 533 (P. C.); Krishnaji v. Wamaji, 18 B. 144. See also, Abdul Hossein v. Turner, 11 B. 620.

When the plaint does not sufficiently disclose the cause of action, and a cause of action exists, the plaintiff should be allowed to amend his plaint. —Luckee Prea v. Brindabun, 12 W. R. 318. Where it appears that the plaintiff has misstated his cause of action, the plaintiff should be directed to amend his plaint.—Daboo Jha v. Luwa Jha, 11 W. R. 223.

Where in a suit for money, the real cause of action arose only after the institution of the suit, the Court should not reject the plaint and drive the plaintiff to filing a fresh suit, but pass a decree there itself; Kanshi Ram v. Jaimal Singh, 75 I. C. 562: A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 590.

Clause (b). " Where the relief claimed is undervalued."—If the relief sought is undervalued, the Court should require the plaintiff to value the relief he seeks, and then, if the plaintiff undervalues the relief, the Court can apply this section, and reject the plaint, but the Court cannot itself value the relief; Balvantrao v. Bhima Shankar, 13 B. 517.

If the relief claimed is undervalued, the Court should, in the first instance, require the plaintiff to pay the additional Court-fee, and on his failure to do so, the Court should not return the plaint for amendment under Or. VII, r. 10, but should reject it under this rule. If, however, the plaintiff pays the requisite Court-fee, and the Court finds that the value of the subject-matter exceeds its jurisdiction, it should return the plaint under Or. VII, r 10; Kandasami v. Subbai, 46 M L. J. 345: 77 I. C. 781. A. I. R 1924 Mad 646

The valuation of the relief in a suit for a declaration of right and for an injunction, rests with the plaintiff and not with the Court; Sardar Singji v. Ganpat, 17 B. 56 See also, Harishankar v. Kali, 32 C. 734: 9 C. W. N. 690, But see, Bibi Umatul v. Nanji, 11 C. W. N. 75, where it has been held that the Court has power to raise the valuation.

The decision of a first Court, that a plaint is undervalued, is binding upon the Court of Appeal, Reference, or Revision; but the first Court is not justified in rejecting the plaint without giving to the plaintiff an opportunity of supplying the additional stamp.—Bai Anope v. Mulchand, 9 B. 355 (2 B 145 and 219 followed). See, however, Vithal v. Bal Krishna, 10 B. 610, in which it has been held that the decision of a subordinate Court on a question of valuation is subject to revision.

Clause (c). " Where the plaint is insufficiently stamped."—Where the plaintiff fails to supply the requisite stamp-paper within the time fixed by the Court, the Court has power, under this rule, to reject the plaint even after it has been numbered and registered as a suit; Brahmomoyi v. Andi Si, 27 C. 376; Padmanund v. Anant Lal, 34 C. 20.

Where a plaint written upon paper insufficiently stamped is presented to the Court on the last day allowed by the law of limitation and the Judge to whom it is presented directs extra Court-fee to be paid, but fixes no time for payment, and the plaintiff pays the extra Court-fee though it be after the expiry of the period of limitation and the Court accepts it, the plaint should be treated as if the full fee had been paid in the first instance, and the suit cannot be held to be barred by limitation; Surendra v. Atabuddin, 26 C. W. N. 391: 70 I. C. 43: A. I. R. 1922 Cal. 234; Gaya v. Awadh, 1 Pat. L. J. 420: 37 I. C. 507. In a similar case, it was held by the Patna High Court that the acceptance of the deficit Court-fee, though tendered late, and the subsequent admission and registration of the plaint amounted to an exercise by the Court of its discretion to allow the deficiency to be paid on the day when it was tendered, and therefore, the suit was not barred by limitation, Raghunandan v. Ram sundar, 4 Pat. 190: 85 I. C. 172: A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 299. The Court directed a plaintiff to put in deficit Court-fees within a time fixed by it. He failed to do so, but put in the Court-fee on a subsequent date, and the plaint was admitted and registered. Held that the plaint might be regarded as presented on the date it was registered, with all the consequences that would follow in regard to limitation.—Padmanand Singh v. Anant Lal, 34 C. 20, F. B. 11 C. W. N. 38: 4 C. L. J. 421.

Where a plaint is presented with a deficit Court-fee, the Court is bound to fix a time within which the deficit shall be paid, and has no discretion to refuse to fix it. The Court also has discretion to extend the time already fixed to any limit, and if the fee is paid within the time fixed, the plaint shall stand good as on the day of presentation. Basavayya v. Venkatappayya, (1926) M. W. N. 341: A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 676.

The date of the institution of the suit should be reckoned from the date of the presentation of plaint, and not from that date on which the requisite Court-fees are subsequently put in, Moti Sahu v. Chhatri Das, 19 C. 780. Followed in Rajkishori v. Madan, 31 C. 75, and in Dhondiram v. Taba Savodan, 27 B. 330. See also, Hari Mohun v. Naimuddin, 20 C. 41, and Surendra v. Kunja, 27 C. 814: 4 C. W. N. 818; Gauranga v. Botokrishna, 32 M. 305 F. B. See, however, Venkatramayya v. Krishnayya, 20 M. 319; Assan v. Pathumma, 22 M. 494, Bishnath v. Jagarnath, 13 A. 305 and Brahmomoyi v. Andi Si, 27 C. 376.

For the purposes of limitation, an appeal is preferred when the memorandum is filed, and not when (where the memorandum is insufficiently stamped, and is returned in order that the deficiency may be supplied) it is again presented. An Appellate Court should fix a time within which the deficiency is to be supplied.—Sheo Partab v. Sheo Gholam, 2 A. 875. See also Jagannath v. Lalman, 1 A. 260.

Where a plaintiff in the initial stage of the litigation abandons a portion of his claim he is not compellable to pay Court-fees in respect of the portion abandoned under a penalty of having the whole of his suit dismissed.—Ram Prosad v. Bhiman, 27 A. 151. But see, Vallie v. Mahmad, 16 Bom. L. R. 763; Midnapur Zem. Co. v. Secy. of State, 44 C. 352.

Where the plaintiff sues in the alternative for one of two reliefs, the larger of the two reliefs sought determines the amount of stamp.—Kashi Nath Narayan v. Govinda Bin, 15 B. 82. (6 B. 302. followed).

An appeal lies against an order rejecting a plaint on the ground of its being insufficiently stamped.—Ajoodhya v. Gunga, 6 C. 250: 6 C. L. R. 567. See also, Muhammad Sadik v. Muhammad Jan, 11 A. 91: Kanaran v. Komappan, 14 M. 169; Omrao Mirza v. Jones, 12 C. L. R. 148; Mt. Sada Kaur v. Buta Singh, 80 P. R. 1914: 25 I. C. 565.

Where a memorandum of appeal is insufficiently stamped, it is competent to the Appellate Court to levy the deficiency.—Chennappa v. Raghunath, 15 M. 29. See also, Parshotam Lal v. Lachman Das, 9 A. 252.

Where the plaintiff fails to pay the required Court-fee as ordered by the Court, the suit should not be dismissed but the plaint should be rejected; Nanak v. Jiwan, 237 P. L. R. 1914: 25 I. C. 435.

Provisions of This Rule are Mandatory.—The provision of Or. VII, r. 11, are mandatory and they require that where a plaint is written on paper insufficiently stamped, the Court is bound to give the plaintiff time to make good the deficiency (38 B. 41; 2 Pat. L. J. 74 refd. to). The fact that the objection is heard at a time subsequent to the registration of the suit is immaterial because the provisions of the rule can be brought into operation at any stage of the suit, Radha Kanta v. Debendra, 49 C. 880 (12 A. 553: 47 C. 376: 34 C. 20 relied on)

A Court is not justified in rejecting a plaint under Or. VII, r. 11 unless and until it has given the plaintiff an opportunity to supply the deficit Court-fee within a time fixed for the purpose and the latter has failed to comply with the order; Jiwan Das v Khushabi Ram, 27 P. L. R. 1917: 39 I. C. 766

The provisions of Or. VII, r 11 (c) are mandatory, where the plaintiff fails to supply the deficit Court-fee within the time fixed, the plaint must be rejected; the Court has no jurisdiction to allow the plaint to be amended by omitting the prayer in respect of which the extra Court-fee was directed to be paid; Midnapur Zemindary Co v. Secy of State, 44 C. 352: 21 C. W. N. 834. See also, Vallie v. Mahmad, 16 Bom. L. R. 763.

Rejection of Plaint in Part.—This rule does not justify the rejection of any particular portion of a plaint; Raghubans v Jyotis, 29 A. 325.

Cl. (c). Extension of Period Fixed for Payment of Deficit Court-fee.—Under Or. VII, r. 11, a Court has power to extend the period originally fixed by it for the payment of the deficit Court-fees. Such extension may be granted by the Court even more than once, Nasir Mandal v. Satish Chandra, 51 I. C 154 If such deficiency is made good within the time prescribed, the fact that in the meantime limitation had expired would not affect the suit, Ram Dial v Sher Singh, 45 A 518 21 A. L. J 387: 74 I. C. 358.

When the party pays the deficit Court-fee beyond the time fixed and has not asked the Court to extend the time for payment, but the Court nevertheless excuses the delay and receives the fee, the only reasonable interpretation is that the Court has implicitly, although not explicitly, extended the time.—Gopal v. Rajendra, 20 C. W. N. 615; Thangathammal v. Iravatheswara, (1915) M. W. N. 228: 28 I. C. 504; Raj Kishori v. Madan Mohan, 31 C. 75; Basavayya v. Venkatappayya, (1926) M. W. N. 341: A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 676.

The obligation cast upon a Court by s. 4 of the Limitation Act to dismiss a suit, although limitation has not been set up as a defence, is only in cases where the Court is in a position to dismiss the whole claim or suit; Kandasamy v. Annamalai, 28 M. 67.

Where a suit appears, from statements in the plaint, to be barred by the law of limitation, the Court may, in a proper case, without rejecting it, allow it to be amended at the hearing; Gunnaji v. Makanji, 34 B. 250: 8 I. C. 159.

Where a plaint in a civil Court alleges facts which, if true, would show that the dispute or the matter involved in the suit was one to which s. 93 or s. 95 of Act XII of 1881 would apply, the plaint should be rejected under Or. VII, r. 11; Tarapat v. Ram Ratan, 15 A. 387.

An action for defamation was brought against a Judge for words used by him whilst trying a cause in Court on the allegation that the words were false, malicious and without reasonable cause. The District Judge rejected the plaint under Or VII, r. 11 as barred under Act XVIII of 1850. Held that the order was right; Ramannayar v. Subramanya Ayyar, 17 M. 87.

The provisions of s 80 are imperative. Where they are not complied with, the plaint should be rejected under Or. VII, r 11; Bachchu Singh v. Secretary of State, 25 A 187

This rule does not apply where there is no statement in the plaint which suggests that the suit is barred, Ratan v Secy. of State, 18 C. W. N. 1340.

Where the plaintiff questions the propriety of orders (under Reg. III of 1872) passed by the Commissioner as ultra vires, a plaint cannot be rejected under Or VII, r 11; Nawab Singh v. Charan Rana, 6 C. W. N. 411.

If a suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by any law, the proper course is to reject the plaint and not to dismiss the suit; Prankrishna v. Kripanath, 21 C. W. N 209 . 29 C. L. J 17.

A suit which is bad for multifariousness falls under this clause, and so if a plaint is rejected on this ground as not amended within the time allowed, the plaintiff is not precluded from bringing a fresh suit on the same cause of actoin merely on account of such rejection; Sewan Singh v. Surain Singh, A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 83.

At What Stage the Plaint can be Rejected.—A plaint can be rejected at any stage of the suit, even after it has been registered, Kishore Singh v. Sabdal Singh, 12 A. 553; Venkatesha v. Ramasami, 18 M. 339; Padmanund v. Ananta Lal, 34 C. 20 F. B.: 11 C. W. N. 38: 4 C. L. J. 421.

For a contrary view, see, Habibul v. Mahomed Reza, 8 C. 192; Valiya Kesava v. Suppan Nair, 2 M. 308 and Bhawan v. Zahur, 29 I. C. 410.

The powers conferred by this rule are intended to be exercised only before the final disposal of the case; Mahadei v. Ram Kishen, 7 A. 528.

An Appellate Court has the same powers of rejecting a plaint under Or. VII, r. 11 as the Court of first instance, Vithoba Yadeo v. Sunabhan, 69 I. C. 554.

Rejection of Plaint on Other Grounds.—The words "rejecting the plaint" in s. 2, are not limited to cases provided for in Or. VII, r. 11; Beni Ram v. Ram Lal, 13 C 189.

A and B, worshippers at a temple, obtained sanction under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863 for the removal of the managers, on the ground of breach of trust and for damages. They sued to remove the managers without claiming any damages. Held that, as the suit instituted differed from the one for which sanction was given, the plaint was properly rejected.—Srinivasa v. Venkata, 11 M. 148.

A suit was brought against several persons claiming under different titles. The Court, after inquiry, gave the plaintiff the option of amending the plaint by withdrawing his claim against any particular sets of defendants; but the plaintiff elected to go to trial on the suit as brought, and it was dismissed. Held that the proper order of the Court should have been to reject the plaint and not to dismiss the suit on the ground of misjoinder.—Sudhendu Mohun v. Durga Dasi, 14 C. 435.

Under this rule the Court cannot reject a plaint in part.—Raghubans v. Jyotis, 29 A. 325.

There is no provision in the Code for the dismissal of a suit on the ground that the land in suit has not been sufficiently identified.—Kazem v. Danesh, 1 C. W. N. 574 See also, Durga v. Kalachand, 7 C. W. N. 615.

The mere fact that there is a misjoinder of parties and of causes of action does not justify rejection of a plaint; Shahabuddin v. Anjuman, 248 P. W. R. 1911: 10 I. C. 212

A Court can reject a plaint filed by a next friend on behalf of a minor, on the ground that the suit was not instituted in the interests of the minor; Lakshmanan v. Lakshmanan, 1 L. W. 875: 25 I. C. 738.

The want of a proper signature of the plaintiff on the plaint is not included in Or. VII, r. 11, among the circumstances which necessitate the rejection of a plaint; Duragir v. Kollu, 7 N. L. R. 33: 10 I. C. 731.

Rejection of Plaint When Proper.—A Court has no jurisdiction either to dismiss a suit or reject a plaint merely because the plaint is defective in that it does not comply with a provision of the law. The proper procedure is to call on the plaintiff to cure the defect and on his failure to do so, the Court may proceed to decide the suit forthwith and to dismiss it under Or. XVII, r. 3 or it may reject the plaint under its inherent powers; Maharaja Sir Rameswar Singh v. Sadanand, 1 Pat. L. T. 188: 55 I. C. 445. Where a plaintiff who is directed to produce a certain document by a certain time fails to do so, he cannot put it in as evidence later without leave of Court, but this does not entitle the Court to reject his plaint—neither Or. VII, r. 11 nor Or. XVII, r. 3 applies to such a case; Mahomed Baksh v. Malik Musa, 76 I. C. 254.

Appeal.—An order rejecting a plaint is a decree and is under s. 2 (2 therefore appealable as such; Musst. Sada Kaur v. Buta Singh, 265 P. L R. 1914: 25 I. C. 565. It has been held by the Patna High Court ii Chandra Mani v. Basdeo Narain, 4 Pat. L J. 57. 49 I. C. 442 that ar order rejecting a plaint is not appealable when such order is based on a question of valuation pure and simple, but when the order necessarily involves a decision of the category or class under which a suit falls, even though it incidentally decides a question of valuation, the order is appealable.

Revision.—The Calcutta High Court has held that the decision of the Court of first instance, on the question of the correctness or incorrectness of the valuation put by the plaintiff on his claim, is not open to revision on the ground that it does not fall under any of the three clauses contained in s. 115; Falkner v Mirza, 29 C W N 627. 86 I. C 853: A. I R. 1925 Cal 814 But it has been held by the Patna High Court in Mani Lal v. Durga Prasad, 3 Pat 930 A I R. 1924 Pat 678, that an order of the Court of first instance demanding additional Court-fee, which involves a question as to the jurisdiction of the Court to try the suit, is open to revision.

Review.—An order under clause (c) of this section rejecting a plaint is open to review, Rameshwardhari v Sadhu, 2 Pat. 504. 72 I. C. 629: A. I. R 1923 Pat. 354

In a proper case, an order under clause (b), rejecting a plaint, is also open to review, Adit Prasad v Ramharakh, 4 Pat. 180. A I. R. 1925 Pat 435: 91 I. C 213.

Rejection of Plaint for Non-payment of Court-fee—Application for Restoration under Or. IX, R. 9, Not a Proper Remedy.—Where a plaint has been rejected by a Court for non-payment of Court-fees and the order has been signed by the Court, the order operates as a decree and the Court has no power to restore the suit undr Or XI, r 9, C P. Code, or under its inherent powers under s 151 The proper remedy of the plaintiff is by way of an application for review under Or XLVII, r 1; Rameshwardhari Singh v Sadhu Saran, 2 Pat 504. 4 Pat L T. 261.

12. Where a plaint is rejected, the Judge shall record an order to that effect with the reasons for such order.

Procedure on rejecting plaint.

COMMENTARY:

Where a memorandum of appeal is summarily rejected, whether under Or. XLI, r. 3, or under Or. VII, r. 11, read with Or. XXII, r. 11, the reasons for such rejection should be recorded —Rudra Prasad v. Baij Nath, 15 A. 367.

13. The rejection of the plaint on any of the grounds

Rejection of a plaint for non-appearance of plaintiff in Mamlatdar's Court under Bombay Act III of 1876 does not preclude the plaintiff from bringing a fresh suit in the Civil Court on the same cause of action.—Raja Ram v. Ganesh Hari, 21 B. 91; Ram Chandra v. Narsinhacharya, 24 B. 251. See, however, Ram Chandra v. Bhikabai, 6 B 477.

The "dismissal" of a suit under s. 10 or s. 11 of the Court-fees Act has the same effect as that provided by Or. VII, r. 13 in the case of "rejection" of a plaint under Or. VII, r. 11.—Balkaran v. Gobind, 12 A. 129.

DOCUMENTS RELIED ON IN PLAINT.

14. (1) Where a plaintiff sues upon a document in his possession or power, he shall produce it in Court when the plaint is presented and shall at the same time deliver the document or a copy thereof to be filed with the plaint.

Production of document on which plaintiff sues.

(2) Where he relies on any other documents (whether in his possession or power or not) as evidence in support of his claim, he shall enter such documents in a list to be added or annexed to the plaint [S. 59.]

List of other documents.

COMMENTARY.

This rule exactly corresponds to s 59 of the old Code Its object is to prevent the dishonest fabrication of documents and to give the opponent notice of the documents relied on by the plaintiff in support of his claim. The penalty for not complying with this rule is that prescribed in r. 18. In the recent Privy Council case of Sulaiman v Biyaththumma, 21 C. W .N. 553: 32 .M L. J. 137, it has been held that the High Court should not have treated a Razi petition, as creating rights, where the plaintiff did not produce it in Court when he presented his plaint, or which or a copy whereof he did not deliver to be filed with the plaint as required by this rule. The trial Court had treated the document merely as a piece of evidence, and it is pointed out by the Privy Council that had it been put forward by the plaintiff, as creating rights, a line of defence requiring evidence might have been adopted which was unnecessary so long as it was used merely as a piece of evidence.

The object of Or. VII, r. 14 is to shut out suspicious documents and to afford as little opportunity as possible for the production of false and fabricated documents in Court. If however it is clear to the Court that, in spite of the documents not having been filed or entered in the list along with the plaint, the document cannot be said to have been fabricated on the face of it, there is no reason why the party should be debarred from using such a document in Court; Sukan Sahu v. Jhari Mahto, 60 I. C. 372.

A party who sues upon a certain document must produce it at the time he files the plaint and not spring upon the opposite party a considerable time after when the suit comes on for hearing, Gangadhar Mahadev v. Krishnaji Vishram, 44 B. 625: 22 Bom. L. R. 819.

Under Or. VII, rr. 14, 17 and 18, C. P. Code, it is incumbent on a plaintiff to produce in Court the accounts or other documents on which he bases his claim when the plaint is filed, and if he intends to rely upon any other documents as a piece of evidence in the case, he is bound to produce it at the first hearing as is required by Or. XIII, rr. 1 and 2, C. P. Code; Ram Singh v. Ram Chand, 9 P. L. R. 1920. 6 P. W. R. 1920: 57 I. C. 185.

A defendant is entitled under the Madras High Court rules, to be furnished with a copy of documents sued on, which are deposited with the plaint.—Haji Mahomed v. Subba Naidu, 21 M. 490.

This rule requires a plaintiff to annex to his plaint a list of documents on which he intends to rely, Khetsidas v. Narotumdas, 32 B. 152.

It is not obligatory on the plaintiffs, unless they are called upon to do so, to produce documents which are not such as ought to have been produced in Court when the plaint was presented.—Talewar Singh v. Bhagwan Dass, 12 C. W. N. 312. 8 C. L. J. 147 (1 B. L. R. 120: 21 W. R. 42 followed).

In probate cases, it is not obligatory upon creditors to file a list of the documents with the application for probate. If the proceeding becomes contentious, leave should be given under Or. VII, r. 18 to put them in and to prove them.—Surendra Nath v. Kasimoni Debi, 1 C. L. J. 49-n.

Failure to Produce Documents.—As regards the penalty for non production of documents mentioned in this rule, see Rule 18, below. In such a case, the plaint should not be rejected, Gopal v. Vishnu, 22 B. 971.

Secondary Evidence can be Given where Document is Lost After Production.—Where a promissory note happened to disappear from the file after it was produced and delivered to the Court by the plaintiff as required by this rule, it was held by the Judicial Committee that the plaintiff was entitled to offer secondary evidence under s. 65 (2) of the Evidence Act without showing how it disappeared; Tulsi Ram v. Ram Saran, 27 Bom. L. R. 777: 86 I. C. 552: A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 80.

"He shall enter such documents in a list."—A plaintiff is not bound to list any document in his plaint as relied upon, unless he knows of the existence of that document when he files the plaint; Lahanu v. Matiram, 63 I. C. 968. A document not listed with the plaint may not be admitted by Court at any subsequent stage; Jiwan v. Nawab, 8 Lah. L. J. 346: 95 I. C. 258: A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 527.

Statement in case of documents not in his possession or power.

15. Where any such document is not in the possession or power of the plaintiff, he shall, if possible, state in whose possession or power it is. [S., 60.]

Suits on lost negotiable instruments.

16. Where the suit is founded upon a negotiable instrument, and it is proved that the instrument is lost, and an indemnity is given by the plaintiff, to the satisfaction of the Court, against the claims of any other person upon such instrument, the Court may pass such decree as it would have passed if the plaintiff had produced the instrument in Court when the plaint was presented, and had at the same time delieverd a copy of the instrument to be filed with the plaint. [S. 61.]

COMMENTARY.

The endorsee of a cheque sued the endorser alleging that the cheque had been lost, and that the defendant refused to give a duplicate of it, and claiming a duplicate of it, or the refund of the money paid on that cheque. Held that the plaint should be amended by joining the drawer as a defendant; Baldeo Prasad v. Grish Chandra, 2 A. 754.

Under this rule a plaintiff basing his claim on a lost hundi must furnish security against possible claims; Durga v. Kanshi, 166 P. L. R. 1912.

Production of shop book.

17. (1) Save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Banker's Books Evidence Act, 1891, where the document on which the plaintiff sues is an entry in a shop-book or other account, in his possession or power, the plaintiff shall produce the book or account at the time of filing the plaint, together with a copy of the entry on which he relies.

Original entry to be marked and returned.

(2) The Court, or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall forthwith mark the document for the purpose of identification; and after examining and comparing the copy with the original, shall, if it is found correct, certify it to be so and return the book to the plaintiff and cause the copy to be filed. [S. 62.]

COMMENTARY.

"On the suggestion of the British Indian Association the word 'account' has been substituted for the word 'book'."—Report of the Select Committee.

Where copy of extract from account books was annexed with the plaint, but the copy was not compared and verified by the production of the originals, the plaintiff will not be able to put in that account book, without the special leave of the Judge.—Gopal v Vishnu, 22 B. 971.

Inadmissibility of document not produced when plaint filed.

18. (1) A document which ought to be produced in Court by the plaintiff when the plaint is presented, or to be entered in the list to be added or annexed to the plaint, and which is not produced or entered accordingly, shall not, without the leave of the Court, be received in evidence on his behalf at the hearing of the suit.

(2) Nothing in this rule applies to documents produced for cross-examination of the defendant's witnesses, or in answer to any case set up by the defendant or handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory. [S. 63.]

COMMENTARY.

The object of these rules is to place a check upon the fabrication of evidence They are not intended to prevent a person from commencing his suit until he has collected all his documentary evidence

When a plaintiff can satisfy the Court at the hearing that some document, on which he desires to rely, was not presented with the plaint, because he was ignorant of its existence at the time, the Court will probably allow it to be received as evidence —Campbell v Keith, 1 Hyde 287, Ritchie, Stewart and Co v. Gladstone, Wyllie and Co, 1 I. J. (O. S.) 125; Mohabeer Dass v. Lalla Dass, 1 W R 12

It is for the Court of first instance to decide whether the documents which ought to have been mentioned in the original list, or ought to have been produced earlier, were not so produced for good and sufficient reason. —Talewar Singh v. Bhagwan Dass, 8 C. L. J. 147: 12 C. W. N. 312.

Notwithstanding the omission of the plaintiff to enter a document in a list annexed to the plaint the Court ought to receive the document, which is a registered one in evidence under this rule; Mahadevappa v. Srinivasa Rau, 4 M. 417 (418).

If there is no doubt as to the existence of the document on the date of the suit, the Court should not refuse to accept it, because it was not filed with the plaint.—Deridas v. Pirjada; 8 B. 377; see also 13 C. W. N. 797; Jogunder Kumar v. Ananda, 44 I. C. 21. But the Court may in such a case refuse to receive the document in evidence if it is produced at a very late stage of the proceedings, e.g., ten years after the institution of the suit and only on the day before the judgment was delivered.—Gangadhar v. Krishnaji, 44 B. 625; 57 I. C. 598.

When documents are admitted in evidence by the lower Court, the appellate Court cannot reject, but is bound to consider them.—Minakshi v. Velu, 8 M. 373; Haji Begam v. Jawahir, 11 A. L. J. 537.

An Appellate Court has no right to refuse to admit on general grounds a document which has been received and read in the Court below without objection.—Akbur Ali v. Akram Sen, 6 C. 666: 7 C. L R. 497; Mohabeer Dass v. Lalla Roy, 1 W. R. 12; Gour Surn v. Kanhya Singh, 2 W. R. 237; Crawley v. Maling, 1 Agra 63; Hur Chunder v. Wooma Soonduree, 23 W. R. 170; Roy Luchmeeput v. Moshuruff Ali, 25 W. R. 80; Kashee Nath v. Mohesh Chunder, 25 W. R. 168; Nem Roy v. Lalmun Roy, 25 W. R. 376.

Where leave was granted by the first Court under this rule for the production of a document at a late stage: Held, that the Appellate Court ought not to reverse the judgment on that ground alone, unless it was satisfied that the grant of leave had affected the merits. Policy of this rule pointed out; Mewa Lal v. Kumeri, 13 C. W. N 797. 10 C. L. J. 33.

A document which is in the possession of a third party, and is called for in order to rebut a plea raised by the defendant, may be produced in the course of the trial; Gappamal v. Piarilal, 33 P. W. R. 1916.

"Or handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory."—Where in order to support the case of the plaintiff that he was born on a particular date, a witness produced an almanac and horoscope, and it was rejected on the ground that it had not been entered in the list of documents as required by Or. VII, r. 14 of the C P. Code: Held that the order rejecting the document was erroneous It was not one to be relied upon as a probative document in itself, but it was a record made by the witness at the time, to which he was entitled to refer for the purpose of refreshing his memory; Goswami Banwari Lal v. Mahesh, 23 C W. N 577 45 I. A. 284 P. C.

ORDER VIII.

WRITTEN STATEMENT AND SET-OFF.

1. The defendant may, and, if so required by the Court, shall, at or before the first hearing or within such time as the Court may permit, present a written statement of his defence. [S. 110.]

Written statement.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 110 of the old Code. Material alterations have been made as will appear from a comparison with the old section which is reproduced here: "The parties may, at any time before or at the first hearing of the suit, tender written statements of their respective cases, and the Court shall receive such statements and place them on the record."

Under this rule it is not obligatory upon the defendant to put in a written statement; but if required by the Court he is bound to put in his written statement at or before first hearing, or within such time as the Court may permit.

A written statement tendered by a party either before or at the first hearing of the suit is exempted from Court-fee; Nagu v. Yeknath, 5 B. 400; Cherag Ali v. Kadir Mahomed, 12 C. L. R. 367.

2. The defendant must raise by his pleading all matters which show the suit not to be maintainable, or that the transaction is either void or voidable in point of law, and all such grounds of defence as, if not raised, would be likely to take the opposite party by surprise, or would raise issues of fact not arising out of the plaint, as, for instance, fraud, limitation, release, payment, performance, or facts showing illegality. [New.]

New facts must be specially pleaded.

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new. It has been borrowed from English Or. XIX, r. 15. Full particulars of fraud, undue influence, etc., must be stated. See notes under Order VI.

It is open to a defendant to plead tenancy and limitation in the alternative.—Keamuddi v. Hara Mohan, 7 C. W. N. 294. See also, Dinomony v. Doorga, 21 W. R. 70; Ruttonmonee v. Komola Kanth, 12 W. R. 364; Tekaitni Gowra Kumari v. Bengal Coal Company, 13 W. R. 129, affirmed by P. C. in 19 W. R. 252; Maidin Saiba v. Nagapa, 7 B. 96; Budesab v. Hanmanta, 21 B. 509. But see, Watson and Company v. Shurut Soonderee, 7 W. R. 395, where it has been held that the defendant admitting himself the plaintiff's tenant is precluded from pleading limitation or adverse possession.

It is well established that there can be adverse possession of a tenant's limited interest in property as well as of the full title as owner. A tenant is not precluded by an admission of tenancy from showing that the nature of the tenancy asserted by him to the knowledge of the landlord has been for the period prescribed by the Limitation Act pro tanto adverse to the right to evict either at will or on notice given.—Thakore Fatesingji v. Bamanji, 27 B. 515. See also, Bagdu v. Raja Durga Prosad, 9 C. W. N. 292; Ishan v. Ramranjan, 2 C. L. J. 125: 27 A. 18; Ichharan v. Nilmoney, 35 C. 470 and Krishna Mohan v. Takani Prasad, 12 C. W. N. 195*n*.

It is open to the defendant to set up as a defence that he is the owner of the property in dispute, and if not, he has a right of easement over it; Purnendu v. Dijendra, 8 C. L J 289.

A defendant may, by way of equitable defence, set up the invalidity of a deed, although his right to have it avoided by a separate suit has become time barred; Lakshmi v Roop, 30 M. 169; Raghu v Gobind, 28 B. 639.

A defendant in possession whose right to sue to set aside a sale is barred by limitation, may set up the invalidity of such a sale as a defence.—Venkatachalapathi v. Robert Fischer, 30 M 444; Ramanasari v. Muthusami, 30 M. 248 See also, 14 B 222, 17 M 255, 12 C. W N. 60, 32 C. 546, 2 C L J. 73 and 2 C L J. 599.

The rule that the plaintiff must be held to the state of facts and equities alleged and pleaded by him in his plaint, or involved in or consistent therewith, applies also to the case made on the pleadings by a defendant.—Chova Kara v Isa Bin, 1 B. 209 (11 M I. A 7 and 468, referred to).

A defendant is not precluded from availing himself of any equity which might arise out of the facts proved at the trial, merely because he has not raised that equity on the face of his written statement.—Gour Chunder v. Greesh Chunder, 7 W R. 120

In a suit for wrongful dismissal, in which the defendants pleaded justification by reason of the plaintiff's misconduct. Held that the defendants at the hearing could not give evidence of a transaction involving instances of misconduct not set forth in their written statement —Muncheshaw v. New Dhurumsey Spinning and Weaving Co., 4 B 576

Pleas of estoppel of whatever nature are not barred by this rule even if not set up in the written statement. A plea of res judicata not put forward in the written statement, nor in the grounds of appeal in the lower Court, may be raised with the leave of the Court under Or XLI, r 2; Kishen Dyal v Mohomed Amirul, 19 C W. N 912.

Where a point is not specifically taken in the written statement but was decided in the lower Courts without objection. Held that the parties cannot object to it in second appeal —Kannu v. Gopalan, (1914) M. W. N. 883.

A question cannot be raised for the first time in appeal, specially when the question raised depends upon evidence for its determination.—Hanmant Ram v. Shankar Lal, 95 I. C. 573: 28 Bom. L. R. 518.

Order VIII, r. 2 cannot be raised as overriding the established practice, viz., that effect should be given to a plea of limitation raised at the hearing, even though raised for the first time; Dhanji Jairam v. Secy. of State for India, 45 B. 920: 23 Bom. L. R. 279.

"Facts showing illegality."—In a suit on a bond, the illegality of consideration must be specifically pleaded. Where the defence in a suit on a bond was want of consideration, the Court should not entertain the plea that the consideration was unlawful (stifling criminal prosecution) if such plea is raised for the first time in the argument of the Counsel at the close of the case; Nur Ilahi v. Mawaz Khan, 7 Lah L. J. 80: 86 I. C. 683: A. I. R 1925 Lah 345

Defence of Limitation if to be Allowed to be Raised in Appeal.—A question of limitation cannot be raised for the first time in appeal; Bhusan Chandrá v. Narendra Nath, 32 C L J. 236 60 I C 280 The general rule is that points of limitation should not be allowed to be raised for the first time in appeal when they involve a decision upon questions of fact; Secretary of State v Ananda Mohan 34 C L J 205 See also, Sheikh Haji Sadakah Khan v Janaki Nath, 69 I C 194

Denial to be specific.

3. It shall not be sufficient for a defendant in his written statement to deny generally the grounds alleged by the plaintiff, but the defendant must deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth, except damages.

[New.]

"Deal specifically with each allegation of fact."—This rule is new. It has been borrowed from English Or XIX, r 17 Under the new rule, it is no longer sufficient for the defendant to deny generally the facts alleged by the plaintiff He must take each such fact separately and either admit it, or deny it, or say that he does not admit it. He must make it perfectly clear how much he admits and how much he denies. No denial is necessary as to the damages claimed or their amount. Nor need matters of law be traversed

The expression "not admitted" is a specific denial within Or. VIII, r. 3; Balaghat Hussain v. Abid Baksh, 95 I C 1

No Court ought to enforce an illegal contract, if the illegality is brought to its notice; it matters not whether the defendant pleaded illegality or not; Alice Mary Hill v W. Clarke, 27 A 266

Where the defendants admitted execution of a document, but did not plead fraud or undue influence, and no issue was raised regarding the same, it is not open to Courts to find that the defendants were not aware of the contents of the document; Sadanand Tewari v. Deb Nath, A. I. R 1922 Pat. 154: (1922) Pat. 184.

"Except damages."—In a suit for damages, it is not necessary for a defendant to deny the damages specifically. If he pleads generally to damages, it is sufficient; Ross & Co. v. Scriven, 43 C. 1001, 34 I. C. 235.

4. Where a defendant denies an allegation of fact in the plaint, he must not do so evasively, but answer the point of substance. Thus, if it is alleged that he received a certain sum of money, it shall not be sufficient to deny that he received that particular amount, but he must deny that he received that sum or any part thereof, or else set out how much he received. And if an allegation is made with divers circumstances, it shall not be sufficient to deny it along with those circumstances. [New.]

Evasive denial.

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new. It has been borrowed from English Or. XIX, r. 19.

Evasive Denials.—It is the duty of defendants to particularize in their defence all points either of law or of fact which they desire to take. Evasive denials are deprecated and the points of defence must be stated specifically and clearly; Sharifun Mandalin v Feradone Khatun, A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 578.

5. Every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication, or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability:

Specific denial.

Provided that the Court may in its discretion require any fact so admited to be proved otherwise than by such admission. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new. It has been borrowed from English Or. XIX, r. 13, which, however, operates only with respect to material allegations. See Taylor on Evidence, 10th Ed, Vol I, p 580. The proviso to this rule exactly corresponds to the proviso to s. 58 of the Indian Evidence Act.

"They have, however, endeavoured to modify the rigour of the rules by providing, in accordance with s 58 of the Indian Evidence Act, that the Court may, notwithstanding the absence of any specific denial, require any fact to be proved by the party who relies upon it."—Report of the Special Committee.

The doctrine of admission by non-traverse was not strictly applicable in India as will appear from the following cases.

Scope of the Rule.—Or. VIII, r 5, C. P Code is limited in its application to cases where there is in fact a pleading of the defendant before the Court. Or. VIII, r 5 is really a rule of construction of the defendants' pleadings This rule does not apply where there is no written statement at all; Ross & Co v Scriven, 43 C 1001 20 C W N 1192.

Admission of Fact in Pleadings.—A failure by the defendant to deny an allegation in the plaint is not conclusive in favour of the plaintiff, for, under the proviso, the Court may still call upon the plaintiff to prove his allegations, Satyesh v Monmohini, 19 C L J 518

Pleadings in India should not be construed with the same strictness as in England This is quite apparent from the proviso to this rule as well as the proviso of section 58 of the Evidence Act Following this principle, the defendant was in the following cases allowed to traverse, at the hearing of the suit, allegations of fact made in the plaint which he had omitted to specifically traverse in his written statement.—Natha Singh v Jodha Singh, 6 A 406, Madho Persad v Gajadhar, 11 C. 111; Vir Singh v Bhola Singh 6 Lah L J 358 A I R 1924 Lah. 744.

A defendant must be taken to admit all material allegations in the plaint which he does not traverse —Vehnath v Gulab Chand, 1 Bom H C 85, Ahmehdee v Dabee 18 W R 287 But the mere fact that an allegation is not traversed does not relieve a plaintiff from the burden of proving his case Mulji v Anupram, 7 Bom H C 136; Hameedoollah v. Gendee, 17 W R 171

The strict rule that averments not traversed must be taken to be admitted is not applicable to pleadings in Indian Courts —Deo Nundon v Meghumahton 11 C W N 225 5 C L. J 181 [9 M I A. 287 (305) followed]

In this country a very high standard of pleadings cannot be expected. The absence of specific denial in defendant's written statement cannot therefore be construed as an admission of the plaintiffs' claim; Najamia v Abdul Kadar, 45 I C 878.

Where facts are alleged by the plaintiff and not denied in the written statement or put in issue at hearing it might be presumed that the defendant did not deny those facts; Apaji Patil v. Apa, 26 B. 735.

In a suit to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud, the defendant could not be held, by reason of his not having denied it, to have admitted the truth of the plaintiff's allegation as to the date on which knowledge of the fraud was acquired; Natha v. Jodho, 6 A. 406

Order VIII, r 5 is really a rule of construction of the defendant's pleading It does not justify the passing of a decree on no evidence where there is no written statement; Ross & Co v. Scriven, 43 C. 1001: 20 C. W. N. 1192.

In a suit to recover money the plaintiff relied in the plaint on a letter written by the defendants as saving limitation. The defendants denied that the letter saved limitation. Held that in the absence of any specific denial the letter must be taken as admitted; Lakshmi v. Chimniram, 18 Bom. L R. 948: 41 B. 89.

Where in a suit by a reversioner to recover possession of properties alienated by the widow of a deceased Hindu, the defendants in their written statement pleaded that they did not admit the date on which the widow died as stated in the plaint and also took the further plea that the suit was barred by limitation and an issue was framed by the Court as to the date of the widow's death, it was held that there was no admission by the defendants of the date of widow's death as stated in the plaint, merely because they did not state in their written statement the date which according to them was the correct date of the widow's death; Rajagopala Chariar v. Bhasya Chariar, 47 M. L J. 520 · 82 I. C. 584: A I. R. 1924 Mad. 838.

Onus of Proof When Allegations in Plaint Not Denied in Written Statement.—Where an allegation in a plaint is not denied specifically or by necessary implication it must be deemed to have been admitted and the plaintiff is not bound to prove it by evidence unless required by the Court to do so; Srimati Sakalbatti v Munshi Mundal, 49 I C 733

Effect of Admissions and Statements in the Pleadings.—Where a person uses the admission of another as evidence, the whole admission must be put in. He cannot put in the half, and exclude the other half.—Nilmony v. Ramanoograh, 7 W R 29, Sriram v Ramlal, 11 A L. J. 255. See, however, Brojoraj v Bishonath, W R (1864) 305

A plaintiff abandoning his own case, and falling back on the admission of the defendant, is bound to take these admissions as they stand, and in their entirety.—Tarinee v Dwarka, 15 W. R 451.

Where a defendant's written statement is referred to as evidence in plaintiff's favour, the whole of it becomes evidence in the suit. and the Court can, in its discretion, attach thereto, or to any portion thereof, so much value as seems to it fit.—Radhachurn v. Chunder Monee, 9 W. R. 290.

If a party makes a qualified statement, that statement cannot be used against him apart from the qualification, but if a man makes a series of independent unqualified statements, those statements can be used against him; Baikanta v. Chandra, 1 B L R 133 10 W R 190; Sooltan v. Chand Bibee, 9 W. R 130; Judoo v Buroda, 22 W R 220; Devidas v. Manooji 20 N. L. R 7.

Express admissions of a party to a suit, or admissions implied from his conduct are strong evidence against him, but he is at liberty to prove that such admissions were mistaken and untrue, and is not estopped or concluded by them, unless another person has been induced by them to alter his condition, when he is estopped from disputing their truth as against that person (and those claiming under him) but as to third parties he is not bound; Chandra Kunwar v. Chaudhri Narpat Singh, 29 A. 184, P. C.: 5 C. L J. 115 11 C. W. N 321 17 M L J. 103. 9 Bom L. R. 267.

When a defendant admits any one fact contained in the written statement of the plaintiff, and thereby excludes independent evidence thereof

he is not entitled to say that the plaintiff has relied on his statement as evidence and that he (defendant) is in consequence in a position to claim that the whole of it may be read as evidence in his favour.—Shurfuraz Mollah v. Dhunoo, 16 W R. 257

In a suit for declaration of title to certain land purchased at a private sale from the wife of the judgment-debtor, the defence was that "even granting that any such deed was executed, this can avail the plaintiff nothing, as the deed was fraudulent" Held that there was no such admission on the part of the defendant as shifted the burden of proof upon him.—Hurish Chunder v. Radha Nath, 11 W R 328.

In a suit for specific performance the defendant, admitted in his written statement the terms of the agreement and its execution: Held, that the plaintiff need not prove the execution of the agreement, or put it in evidence; Burjorji Cursetji v. Muncherji Kuverji, 5 B. 143.

The written statement of the defendant filed in a previous suit brought by the plaintiff, was treated as an acknowledgment, under s. 19 of the Limitation Act, 1877, from the date of which the period of limitation should be calculated —Venkataratnam v Ramaraju, 24 M. 361. See also, Shrinivas Krishna v Narhan Khando, 10 Bom L R. 374.

A written statement is not legal evidence in the defendant's favour, although the same penal consequences may follow if it is false, as from a false deposition —Ijjutoolah Khan v. Ram Churn, 12 W. R. 39. See also, Mookta Keshee v Koylash Chunder, 7 W R 493.

A party is not concluded by his own representations unless they have been acted upon by the opposite party, if treated merely as admissions not acted upon, it may be shown by the party who made them that they were not true —Brojendro Coomar v Chairman of Dacca Municipality, 20 W. R. 223 See also, Janan Chowdhry v Doolar Chowdhry, 18 W. R. 347.

Held that the plaintiffs, having failed to prove the averments on which their suit was based, were not entitled to any relief in respect of that portion of the property in suit of which the defendants admitted their possession as mortgagees —Ratan Kuar v Jivan Singh, 1 A. 194.

"Except as against a person under disability."—The scope of Or. VIII, r 5 is only this, that the omission to deny an allegation of fact in the plaint is not to be taken as an admission in the case of minor defendants and the rule has nothing to do with the conduct of the suit afterwards; Nagappa v Siddalingappa, 35 M. L J. 372: 47 I. C. 589.

Effect of Admission of One Co-sharer.—In a suit for rent against two joint tenants, one of them filed a petition, admitting the correctness of the amount claimed by the plaintiff. Held that the admission of one defendant did not bind the other —Chunderreshure Narain v. Chuni Ahir, 9 C. L. R. 359. See also, Kali Kishore v Gopi Mohan, 2 C. W. N. 166, where it has been held that an admission by a co-tenant as to who is the landlord of the holding is not binding on the other co-tenants.

Admission made by one co-sharer in a suit for rent was held admissible against the others.—Kowsulliah Sundari v. Mukta Sundari, 11 C. 588; followed in Meajan v. Alimuddin, 20 C. W. N. 1217.

A defendant's admission, if taken at all must be taken as a whole, but it cannot bind co-defendants —Niamutoollah v. Himmut Ali, 22 W. R. 519.

In the Courts of law in India, where the pleadings are less technical, an admission of a fact on the pleadings by implication is not an admission for any other purpose than that of the particular issue, and is not tantamount to proof of the fact. An admission or even a confession of judgment by one of several defendants in a suit is no evidence against another defendant; Amrito v Rajonee, 15 B. L. R. 10: 23 W. R. 214, P. C., followed in Luchman v. Tansukh, 6 A. 395, and Azizullah v. Ahmed Ali, 7 A. 353.

"Provided that the Court may in its discretion, etc."—Under Or. VIII, r. 5, when the defendant does not appear at all, he must be taken to have admitted all the allegations in the plaint. Therefore ordinarily, in an ex parte case, no issue arises at all and there is nothing for the plaintiff to prove. But by the proviso to Or. VIII, r. 5 it is left to the discretion of the Court to select some of the facts which, under the rule itself, must be regarded as admitted and to say that the plaintiff must prove them, in spite of the implied admission.—Mt. Bhuriba v. Ishak Hussain, 69 I. C. 619 A. I. R. 1923 Nag. 83.

The discretion under Or. VIII, r. 5 should usually be exercised by the Court of first instance in those cases where it suspects on prima facie grounds that an admission was made collusively or in order to evade a rule of policy; Venkata Reddi v. Muthu Pambulu Naick, 39 M. L. J. 463: (1920) M. W. N. 512.

Particulars of set-off to be given in written statement

6. (1) Where in a suit for the recovery of money, the defendant claims to set-off against the plaintiff's demand any ascertained sum of money legally recoverable by him from the plaintiff, not exceeding the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, and both parties fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit, the defendant may, at the first hearing of the suit, but not afterwards unless permitted by the Court, present a written statement containing the particulars of the debt sought to be set-off.

Effect of set-off.

(2) The written statement shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross-suit so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in respect both of the original claim and of the set-off: but this shall not affect the lien, upon the amount decreed, of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree. [S. 111.]

(3) The rules relating to a written statement by a defendant apply to a written statement in answer to a claim of set-off.

he is not entitled to say that the plaintiff has relied on his statement as evidence and that he (defendant) is in consequence in a position to claim that the whole of it may be read as evidence in his favour.—Shurfuraz Mollah v. Dhunoo, 16 W. R. 257.

which they would have had independently of that section. And such rights exist not only in cases of material debts and credits, but also where cross-demands arise out of the same transaction, or are so connected in their nature and circumstance as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover, and the defendant should be driven to a cross suit.—Clark v. Ruthnavaloo Chetti, 2 M. J. 152; Ramdhari v. Permanand, 19 C. W. N. 1183.

An equitable set-off can be pleaded in Indian Courts, which means that if the defendant's claim is for an unascertained sum, but has arisen out of the same transaction as the plaintiff's claim, the defendant can set off such demand against the plaintiff's claim. This he can do, not by virtue of the provisions of this rule which is confined in its application to legal set-off, but in the exercise of the general right of a defendant to plead a set-off whether legal or equitable But equitable set-off cannot be allowed if the cross-demand relates to a different transaction.—Ramdeo v. Pokhiram, 21 C 419; Dhundiraj v. Ganesh, 18 B. 721; Dobson v. Bengal Spinning Co., 21 B. 126; Vithal Das v. Hyderabad Spinning and Weaving Co Ltd., 74 B 182 A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 24: 67 I. C. 326; Kallu Mal v. Partab Singh, A I. R. 1926 Oudh 301 92 I. C. 787 In a suit by a servant against his master for arrears of salary, the defendant is competent to set off a certain sum, being the loss sustained by him by reason of neglect and misconduct on the part of the plaintiff as his servant; Chisholm v Gopal, 16 C 711; but see, Victoria Mills Co. Ltd., v. Brij Mohan Lal, 39 A 362 Similarly, in a suit by the plaintiff to recover from the defendant a certain sum of money due under a contract, the defendant is entitled to set off, against the plaintiff's demand, several sums of money alleged to be due to him as damages sustained by him by reason of the plaintiff's breach of the terms of the contract —Kistnasamy v. Municipal Commissioners of Madras, 4 Mad. H C. 120, Pragi Lal v. Maxwell, 7 A. 289.

Requisites for a Plea of Set-off under this Rule.—(1) That the matter of set-off must be an ascertained sum legally recoverable by the defendant from the plaintiff, and (2) that the character in which the debt is claimed by, and from the plaintiff must be the same.—Chennappa v Raghunatha, 15 M. 29, p. 31.

It is essential to the validity of a set-off that the debts should be mutual and opposing, due from and to the same parties and in the same right; Bhoirub v Hafizunnissa, 2 C L. R 414, Huree v. Hur Kishore, 23 W R. 134.

"In a suit for recovery of money."—A widow, administering her husband's estate, sued to recover certain moveable property wrongfully appropriated by her son, who pleaded a set-off on account of a claim against his father Held, that the defendant was rightly referred to a separate suit.—Manby v. Manby, 14 W. R 136.

A suit for dissolution of partnership, with a prayer for recovery of money that may be found due to the plaintiff upon taking the partnership accounts, is a suit for money within the meaning of this section, and a plea of set-off may be raised in such suit; Ram Jiwan v. Chand Mal, 10 A. 587. But in a suit for an account only, and not for the recovery of money, it is doubtful whether a set-off can be pleaded; Nankaray v. Ko Htaw, 13 C. 124, P. C.

Where the suit was for enforcement of a mortgage security only and not for recovery of money, the right to a personal decree being barred by limitation, no set-off can be claimed; Fakir v Gisborne & Co., 8 C. W. N. 174.

Even in cases of set-off not falling within this rule, the cross-claims must both be for money. This is indicated by Or. XX, r. 19, which provides that where a set-off is allowed, the decree shall state what amount is due to the plaintiff and what amount is due to the defendant and shall be for the recovery of any sum which appears to be due to either party; see Dhundiraj v Ganesh, 18 B. 721.

"Legally recoverable."—For the meaning of the words "legally recoverable," the cases of Mohan v. Bilaso, 14 A. 513, and Bageshri Dial v. Muhammad Naqui, 15 A. 331, may be referred to

The words "legally recoverable" in this rule have no reference to the ability of the debtor to pay the demand in full; and a sum is legally recoverable though, in the result, the creditor may be satisfied with a dividend; Ahmedabad Advance S & Co v Laxmisanker, 30 B 173: 7 Bom L R 246 See also, Subramanian v. Muthuswami, 17 M. L. J 481.

Order VIII, r 6 applies only to a legal set-off and not to any other set-off that a party may be entitled to claim, Firm of Sheo Prosad Radha Kishen v Indore Malwa United Mills, 62 P R. 1917: 65 P. W. R. 1917.

In a suit for arrears of rent, the defendant, according to the construction of a kabuliyat, claimed to set-off a sum which he had paid to the Collector under the Road Cess Act Held that, under the terms of the kabuliyat, the defendant was himself bound to pay the cesses separately, and, therefore, he was not entitled to the set-off claimed.—Shumbhu v. Hurro Sundari, 11 C L R. 140 See also, Surnomoyee v. Paresh, 4 C. 576.

A set-off cannot be allowed for costs not actually awarded, as where a decree of the High Court gave the successful appellant costs of that Court and of the lower appellate Court, but omitted to award the costs of the first Court —Huro Persad v. Kishore, 16 W. R. 308.

Where a receiver sues for the debt due to a person, it is open to the defendant to urge the plea of set-off which he could have urged against the creditor himself. Such a defence is allowable although the sum claimed to be set off is not "legally recoverable" by the defendant from the plaintiff (receiver) within the meaning of this section.—Subramanian v. Muthuswami, 17 M. L. J. 481.

A claim which has become barred by limitation at the time of filing of the written statement in a suit is not a debt legally recoverable by the defendant from plaintiff and cannot therefore be allowed to be set-off; Kanai Lal v. Nitai Saru, 47 I. C. 938; Subraya Bhandary v. Janardhana, 41 M. L J. 370: 62 I. C. 852; Narasimha Rao v. Srirajah Srinivasa, 42 M. 873: 37 M. L. J. 193; Vyravan Chetty v. Nataraja, 39 M. 939: 30 M. L. J. 59. The law in India as well as in England is the same, that limitation applies to a set-off; Raja Narendra Lal Khan v. Tarubala, 25 C. W. N. 800.

"Any ascertained sum of money."—This expression does not mean a sum admitted by the plaintiff, but a sum the amount of which is known; Dalgleish v. Ramdin, 14 C. W. N. 170. The words "ascertained sum" are used to exclude such items as unliquidated damages and mesne profits, the amount of which is not ascertainable until the Court determines them; Har Prasad v. Firm Ram Sarup, 22 A. L. J. 844: 82 I. C. 340: A. I. R. 1924 All. 872; Edward v. Ramdin, 14 C. W. N. 170: 5 I. C. 67.

Under Or. VIII, r. 6, a defendant is entitled to claim a set-off when it is an ascertained amount and does not apply when his proportionate share out of a joint claim has to be ascertained by calculation and after he has given proof that it was legally recoverable at the date of the institution of the suit; Bishun Chand v. Awadh Behary Lal, 1 Pat. L. W. 615: 2 Pat. L. J. 451: 40 I. C. 350.

The expression "ascertained" in Or. VIII, r. 6 (1) means beyond challenge and beyond dispute, concluded and conclusive. The right to equitable-set-off is founded on the condition that the set-off arises out of the same transaction out of which the claim in the suit springs. If it is found that the set-off is foreign to the original claim, the set-off will not be allowed; Diltor Koer v. Harkhoo Singh, 1 Pat. L W. 760: A. I. R. 1917 Pat 225.

Where the defendant's counter-claim is not one for an ascertained sum, he cannot claim as of right to have it investigated in the same suit; Dobson and Barlow v. Bengal Spinning and Weaving Co., 21 B. 126.

In a mortgage suit, the amount of compensation claimed by the mortgagor-defendant, for waste committed by the mortgagee, cannot be set off against the mortgage money; Raghu v. Ashraf, 2 A. 252. But see, Shiva v. Jaru, 15 M. 290.

In a suit for money, claimed on account of the carriage of goods, in which the defendant pleaded a set-off on account of damages done to the goods. Held that the defendant could not answer the claim with the set-off on account of damages; Scanlan v. Herrold, 10 W. R. 295.

In an equitable set-off, the sum claimed as set-off need not be an ascertained sum; Ramdhan v. Permanund, 19 C. W. N 1183, Fateh Mahmud v. Ramzan, 27 I. C. 316.

"The same character."—Illustrations (a) and (b) of the rule are cases in which the parties do not fill the same character. In a suit by the creditor of a deceased debtor to recover his debt Held that an amount due as manager cannot be set off against a personal liability; Abul Hasan v. Zohrajan, 5 A. 299.

In a suit for money due on an account, defendant claimed to set off the amount of pay due to him by the plaintiff. Held that the set-off should be allowed as the parties filled the same character, Raghavendra v. Yalgurad, 19 Bom L R 67 41 B 163 · 39 I C. 17.

In an action by a company to recover a sum fraudulently obtained by the defendants, before the liquidation of the company, one of the defendants claimed to set off against the company a debt from the company due to him, incurred prior to the commencement of the winding up. Held that the set-off was admissible —Ahmedabad Advance v Luxmishanker, 30 B 173.

A set-off can be pleaded as a defence and can only be raised when the claim to set off one against the other whether by plaintiff or defendant, exists in the same right In a suit by a shareholder for recovery of dividends declared by the company, it is not open to the directors to claim by way of set-off damages due from plaintiff in respect of alleged breaches of contract, Vithaldas Gulabdas v The Hyderabad Spinning and Weaving Co. Ld., 47 B 182 24 Bom L R 328, Najan Ahmad Haji v. Sale Mahamed, 24 Bom L. R 998

A defendant is entitled to claim, by way of set-off from the plaintiff company under liquidation, the amount due on a fixed deposit even though the deposit had not matured when the winding up commenced; Mehr Chand v. The Amritsar Bank Ld, (1915) 63 P R 89 P L R : 63 P. W. R

In a suit for rent the tenant-defendant claimed a set-off for costs decreed in his favour in a previous rent suit brought by the benamidar of the landlord against the defendant, in which the landlord was made a pro forma defendant Held that the set-off could not be allowed —Tiluk Chandra v. Jasoda Kumar, 11 C W N 215

Directors cannot set off money due from the company to them against sums which they may be ordered to refund to the liquidators —New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company v Kessaup Naik, 9 B. 373.

In a suit by an inamdar for money due from the defendant as khatedar, the latter cannot set off his wages due from the plaintiff as a pujari; Madhav Rao v Ramavalu, 39 B 131 16 Bom L R 746

Amount Claimed as Set-off must be Within Pecuniary Jurisdiction of the Court.—A Court cannot entertain a question of set-off, if the amount claimed by the defendant exceeds the amount cognizable by it. When a defendant pleads a set-off, and claims a decree, the subject-matter of the suit is no longer the mere claim of the plaintiff, but the cross-claim of both the parties —Brojendra Nath v Budge-Budge Jute Mill Co., 20 C. 527 Abraham & Co v Ebrahim, 2 Rang 462 84 I C 971 : A I. R. 1925 Rang 65 A plea of payment is distinct from a plea of res judicata. Plaintiff sued defendant for Rs. 3,567 in the Court of Small Causes, Rangoon (of which the pecuniary jurisdiction was limited to Rs. 2,000) but admitted receipt of Rs 1,600 and prayed for a decree for Rs 1,967. Defendant admitted the claim for Rs 3,567 but pleaded payment of Rs. 3,000 and claimed a set-off of Rs. 1,573, being the amount due to him by the plaintiff on a promissory note and asked for a decree for Rs. 1,006, it was held that the amount claimed to be set-off being Rs. 1,573, and not Rs. 4,573 (Rs 3,000 plus Rs. 1,573), was within the jurisdiction of the Court; Hoe Moe v. Seedat, 2 Rang. 349 84 I C. 956: A. A Court of Revenue cannot entertain a claim of set-off unless such claim, if made the subject of a suit, would fall within its jurisdiction.—Beni Madho v. Gaya Prasad, 15 A. 404.

A Revenue Court has jurisdiction, under Act X of 1859, to allow a set-off for any sums which the agent might either have paid to his principal directly, or used for the benefit of his principal with his sanction and authority.—Mohima Runjun v. Nobo Coomar, 18 W. R. 339.

Section 35 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887) precludes a Sub-Judge invested with Small Cause Court powers from entertaining a counter-claim beyond the pecuniary limits of his Small Cause Court jurisdiction.—Barote Gaga v. Panju Ramjan, 14 B. 371. But see Ram Pratap v. Ganesh Rangnath, 12 B. 31, where it has been held that the plea of set-off might be pleaded by the defendant. The Judge should exercise his Small Cause Court jurisdiction in trying the plaintiff's claim and his ordinary jurisdiction in trying the defendant's plea of set-off.

Plea of Set-off When Admissible.—In a suit for contribution for satisfaction of a decree for arrears of ijara rent against several co-sharers, held that the defendants' claim for the share of rents paid by them on account of the same ijara in previous years might properly be treated as a set-off; Bhagwat v. Ramdeb, 11 C. 557. See also, Udai v. Jagannath, 1 A. 135 and Gogun v. Hari, 12 C. In a suit to recover wages, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant had engaged him to sell his cloth at a monthly salary. Held that the defendant was entitled to set off the price of cloth which, he alleged, the plaintiff had sold on his account on commission.—Amir Zama v. Nathu Mal, 8 A. 396.

In a suit to recover money payable under an arbitration award, the defendant desired to set off certain debts which were payable under the award by the parties jointly, and which he alone had satisfied. Held that the set-off was admissible; Gouri Sahai v. Ram Sahai, 7 N. W. P. 157.

In a suit against the acceptor to recover the amount due upon several bills of exchange, the defendant sought to set off a claim for unliquidated damages unconnected with the bills of exchange. Held that the defendant had no right to set-off; Clark v. Ruthnavaloo Chetti, 2 M. H. C. 296.

In a suit by Government against the representatives of a lessee of a bridge for balance of account, the plea of set-off, raised by the defendants, on account of seizure by Government of stocks and materials, was not allowed; Secretary of State v. Madari Lal, 13 A. 296.

It is not equitable to allow a set-off against a claim relating to a particular account stated of a matter of another nature altogether.—Kalee Koomar v. Huro Chunder, 17 W. R 177.

A had dealings with a firm consisting of a father and two sons, who carried on business jointly. After the father's death, the brothers separated, and A dealt with each separately. A could not set off against a claim, made by one of the brothers, in respect of the separate dealings between himself and A, a debt due to himself from the former joint concern.—Dhunput Singh v. Forbes, 1 Ind Jur. The defendant was not entitled to set off the plaintiff's share of the Government revenue of the whole estate which had been paid by the defendant for the period for which the arrears of rent were alleged to be due to the plaintiff; Hosseina Bibi v. Smith, 13 B. L. R. 440: 22 W. R. 15.

Counter-claim.—Though there is no provision in the Code for counter-claims, a Court is competent to treat the counter-claim as a plaint in a cross-suit, and to hear the two suits together, provided that the necessary Court-fee on the counter-claim has been paid; Saya Bya v Maung Kyaw Shun, 2 Rang. 276: 82 I. C. 721 A. I. R 1924 Rang. 346

Court-fee.—A written statement, containing a claim of set-off, is chargeable with the Court-fee which would be payable on a plaint of that nature. An Appellate Court is competent to levy the deficiency of Court-fee; Chinnappa v. Raghunatha, 15 M 29; Amirzama v. Nathu Mal, 8 A 396; Bai Shrimajirajbai v. Narotam Hargovan, 13 B 672; Pragi Lal v Maxwell, 7 A. 284; Guise v. Anantharam, 10 C. W. N. 199; M. E Pillai v Vunuka Tathayya, 10 Bur. L. T. 242: 36 I C. 957. In Fakir Chand v Gisborne & Co., 8 C. W. N. 174, it has been held that written statement not strictly one of set-off is not chargeable with Court-fee. The same view has been taken by the Madras High Court in Subramanian v. Muthusawmi, 17 M. L. J. 481. These conflicting decisions led to a Full Bench reference of the Calcutta High Court, Abdul v. Razak, 17 C. L. J. 865, but the question was considered unnecessary in that appeal. The matter has now been set at rest by the amendment of the Court Fees Act (see Sch. IV of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908), requiring all written statements pleading a set-off or counter-claim to be stamped as a plaint. When a set-off is pleaded, Court-fee is payable only on the amount claimed in excess of that claimed by the plaintiff, and only if the defendant wants a decree for the excess; Ramangir v Achharam, 97 I C 916.

Limitation.—The law of limitation applicable to the set-off is Article 83, Schedule II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877); the limitation should run from the time when the plaintiff is actually damnified, and should be reckoned to the date of the institution of the suit, and not to that of claiming the set-off, Pragi Lal v Maxwell, 7 A. 284

A defendant can raise the plea of equitable set-off, even if his claim be barred by limitation —Gajadhar Matho v Raghubar Gope, 12 C. W. A sum of money recoverable under the Punjab Loans Limitation Act (I of 1904), can be set off in the U P, although a claim to the sum would be barred under the Limitation Act, Bachchan v Banarsi, 35 A 238.

Apart from special cases like those of mortgagor and mortgagee, or trustee and cestui que trust, a claim which is barred cannot be the subject of equitable set-off, Vyravan v Nataraja, 39 M 939 · 30 M. L J. 59

Defence or set-off founded on separate grounds.

7. Where the defendant relies upon several distinct grounds of defence or set-off founded upon separate and distinct facts, they shall be stated, as far as may be, separately and distinctly. [New.]

This rule is new It has been borrowed from English Or. XX, r. 7, and is similar to Order VII, rule 8 of this Code

New ground of defence.

8. Any ground of defence which has arisen after the institution of the suit or the presentation of a written statement claiming a set-off may be raised by the defendant or plaintiff, as the case may be, in his written statement. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new There are cases where the Court will take notice of events which have happened subsequent to the institution of the suit; see 6 C. L J 74, 92, 102; see also, Shyama v Mokhda, 15 C W N. 703: 13 C. L J. 481

Subsequent pleadings.

9. No pleading subsequent to the written statement of a defendant other than by way of defence to a set-off shall be presented except by the leave of the Court and upon such terms as the Court thinks fit, but the Court may at any time require a written statement or additional written statement from any of the parties and fix a time for presenting the same. [S. 112.]

COMMENTARY.

The defendant is not entitled to file any supplemental written statement after the plaintiff's case is closed.—Haji Sahoo v. Ayeshabai, 27 B. 485, P. C.

Supplemental written statements cannot be filed after the parties have entered upon their case at the hearing.—Munchershaw Bezonji v. New Dhurumsey Spinning and Weaving Company, 4 B. 576.

A written statement which was in explanation of the plaint, and not starting a new case, was allowed to be put in by the plaintiff after evidence was taken, the defendant not being prejudiced by its admission.—Lall Mahomed v. Dhoolee Ram, 22 W. R. 377.

An additional written statement, though filed long after the fixed date, cannot be removed from the record unless the opposite party takes immediate steps for its removal.—New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company v. Kessowji Naik, 9 B. 373 (381).

If the pleadings of either party be too vague, the Court may require him to file a further and fuller statement under this rule.—Ali Kader v. Govind, 17 C. 840, p. 848.

Procedure when party fails to present written statement called for by Court.

10. Where any party from whom a written statement is so required fails to present the same within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may pronounce judgment against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit. [S. 113.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "may pronounce a judgment" have been substituted for "pass a decree."

In the event of a defendant's neglecting to furnish a written statement, the Court will examine him as to the grounds of his defence, and, should it appear desirable that a written statement should be put in, the case should be adjourned for that purpose at his expense.—Ram Rutton v. Oriental Inland Steam Navigation Co, 2 Hyde 89

A Court has no authority to receive a written statement from one who is not a party, or to permit such person to appear at the hearing; Surnomoye v. Bykunt, 25 W. R. 17. See also, Denomoye v. Tara, Bourke O. C. 153.

This rule empowers the Court to pronounce "judgment" as defined in s 2 (9), and a mere order decreeing the plaintiff's claim is not warranted by it; Nanki v. Tesadduq, 15 O C. 78: 15 I. C. 212.

Under the rules of the Bombay High Court, a defendant who has not filed a written statement may defend the suit; Jayantilal v. Nagnath, 15 Bom. L. R. 126.

Where the plaintiffs who were directed by the Court to put in further written statement under r. 9, filed a statement as to their inability to supply the particulars called for by the Court. Held that the order having been practically complied with, they could not be regarded as having " failed to present " a statement within the meaning of this rule In acting under this rule the Court may pass a decree if the circumstances admit of any decree being passed, but an order merely dismissing a suit under the rule, without any adjudication upon any right claimed or defence set up, is not a decree; and an appeal from such an order is to be treated as an appeal from order under s. 588, C P Code, 1882 (s 104, Or. XLIII, r. 1).—Orr v. Nagappa Chetty, 16 M L J 30

Appeal.—An order under this rule, pronouncing judgment against a party, is appealable under Or XLIII, r. 1 (b).

ORDER IX.

APPEARANCE OF PARTIES AND CONSEQUENCE OF NON-APPEARANCE.

Parties to appear on day fixed in summons for defendant to appear and answer.

1. On the day fixed in the summons for the defendant to appear and answer, the parties shall be in attendance at the Court-house in person or by their respective pleaders, and the suit shall then be heard unless the hearing is adjourned to a future day fixed by the Court. [S. 96.]

Dismissal of suit where summons not served in consequence of plaintiff's failure to pay costs.

2. Where on the day so fixed it is found that the summons has not been served upon the defendant in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the Court-fee or postal charges (if any) chargeable for such service, the Court may make an order that the suit be dismissed:

Provided that no such order shall be made although the summons has not been served upon the defendant, if on the day fixed for him to appear and answer he attends in person or by agent when he is allowed to appear by agent. [S. 97.]

COMMENTARY.

This words "or postal charges (if any)" are new. This rule is to be read with Or. XLVIII, r. 1.

"In consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay."—An order of dismissal previous to the day of hearing is irregular, and does not bar a fresh suit.—Gulab v. Jivan Ram, 2 A. 318.

A Court cannot dismiss a suit for failure to deposit process fee, unless it fixes a time for such deposit.—Lala Prasadi Lal v Lala Ambika Prasad, 3 B. L. R. Ap. 25. 11 W. R. 290.

If it appears on the day fixed for hearing that summons has not been served on the real defendants, but has been served on a wrong person who, appearing, denies liability, the suit ought to be dismissed with costs.—London, Bombay and Mediterranean Bank v. Mahomed Ibrahim, 4 B. 619.

Where the Court ordered a co-defendant to be joined in the suit, but the plaintiff failed to deposit the costs of issuing a notice on the defendant, the suit was dismissed on account of plaintiff's failure to make the deposit.—Abas v. Ibrahimji, 5 Bom. H. C. 118.

A suit is liable to be dismissed for failure to pay the costs of service of summons on substituted defendants, Bissessur v. Murli, 10 C. 103.

Plaintiff failed to file affidavits of service of summons upon the guardians of the two minor defendants and the minors, and the Court passed an order dismissing the suit refusing to grant further time. Held that the Court could not dismiss the suit as against the major defendants; Surendra v. Genasardar, 1 Pat L T. 125 55 I. C. 826; Ramanand v. Chandrama, 2 Pat. L T. 256 · 60 I C 377

Where a plaintiff has made default in paying process fee for service of summons on the defendant but notwithstanding this the defendant applies to the Court to file written statement, the filing of such an application amounts to an appearance under Or. IX, r. 8, and the Court would not be justified in dismissing the suit under Or. IX, r. 2; Musst. Golab Kuar v Bibi Salra, 53 I. C 41.

Where the plaintiff had paid the process fee on such a date when there was sufficient time for the service of summons being effected before the date of hearing, the suit cannot be dismissed under Or. IX, r. 2, C. P. Code. The High Court can interfere in revision and set aside the dismissal even though the plaintiff can sue afresh; Ralla Ram v Mt. Raj, 4 Lah. L. J. 71: A. I. R. 1922 Lah 63

Appeal.—An order under this rule, dismissing a suit for plaintiff's failure to deposit costs for service of summons on defendant is not appealable; Lucky Churn v Buddurrunnissa, 9 C. 627 12 C. L. R. 484; Lachmi v. Darbari, 38 A 357 · 14 A L J. 347.

Revision.—Where the plaintiff duly paid the Court-fee for service of process but the office failed to issue it in time, and the suit was dismissed by the Court under this rule, held that the High Court had power to set aside the order in revision; Ralla Ram v. Raj, 4 Lah. L. J. 71: A. I. R 1922 Lah 63 · 67 I. C. 945.

Where neither party appears, suit to be dismissed.

3. Where neither party appears when the suit is called on for hearing, the Court may make an order that the suit be dismissed. [S. 98.]

COMMENTARY.

Appears.—See notes under rr. 9 and 13, post.

"Where neither party appears."—Where in a suit one of the two defendants only was present on the day of hearing, but the plaintiff and the other defendant were absent, and the Court passed an order dismissing the suit, held that the order of dismissal as between the plaintiff and the absentee defendant was an order under this rule; but as between the plaintiff and the defendant who was present, the order was under r. 8; Damu v. Vakrya, 44 B. 767: 56 I. C 455; Makundi Singh v. Parbhu Dayal, 24 A. L. J. 97: A. I. R. 1926 All. 169.

Where an application for a final decree in a mortgage suit is dismissed for default of appearance of both parties, a fresh application can be made; Ahmad Khan v. Gaura, 40 A. 235: 16 A. L. J. 143.

An order to strike off the case on neither party appearing was held illegal; the proper order should have been an order of dismissal.—Alwar v. Seshammal, 10 M. 270. See also, Khoob Lall v. Toolsee Singh, 17 W. R. 219, and Uluck Monee v. Panch Coomar, 21 W. R. 124.

On the day fixed for the hearing of a suit, neither the plaintiff nor his pleader was present; the defendant not having been served, was also absent. Plaintiff's pleader sent intimation to the Court in writing that as he had been appointed to act as a Sub-Judge, he was unable to attend the Court, and therefore requested the Court to adjourn the case. Held that the suit should not have been dismissed, but adjourned for a reasonable time.—In re Narayen Sadashiv v. Kolee, 23 B. 657.

A case was remanded to the first Court, which dismissed the suit for default of parties. Held, that some date should have been fixed for re-hearing, giving the parties opportunity to appear and take steps to carry on the suit; Haradhun v. Protap Narain, 14 W. R. 401.

An application under Or. XLI, r. 10, praying that an appellant might be required to give security for costs of the appeal, was dismissed for absence of counsel, and an application for restoration was subesquently made. Held that this rule, with s. 141, read with is made applicable to proceedings other than suits, and, further, that an absence of counsel for fifteen minutes was not enough to preclude the Court from restoring the petition; Lachmi Chand v. Gutto Bai, 7 A. 542.

Appeal.—An order of dismissal is not appealable. Nor is it open to review when the plaintiff neglects to make an application under the next rule within 30 days, Koilash v. Nabadwip, 2 C. W. N. 318; Inder Singh v. Ram Singh, (1909) 33 P. R. 1909: 44 P. L. R. 1909: 31 P. W. R. 1909. But see, Raj Narain v. Ananga, 26 C. 598.

Plaintiff may bring fresh suit or Court may restore suit to file.

4. Where a suit is dismissed under rule 2 or rule 3, the plaintiff may (subject to the law of limitation) bring a fresh suit, or he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his not paying the court-fee and postal charges (if any) required within the time fixed before the issue of the summons, or for his non-appearance, as the case may be, the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit. [S. 99.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 99 of the Code of 1882 The important changes are the addition of the words "and postal charge (if any)" after the word " Court-fee," and the substitution of the words " within the time fixed before the issue of the summons " for the words " within the time allowed for the service of the summons."

" We have struck out the provisions about limitation contained in this rule. These provisions will be incorporated in the Limitation Act."—Report of the Select Committee.

" Sufficient cause."—The plaintiff came from a long distance to attend the Court, but not having found the name of his case in the Cause-list went to another Court, thinking that his case might be before another Court, and not finding it even there, returned to the first Court and found that his case had been dismissed under Or IX, r 3. Held that the case should be restored; Nanhum v Jumma, 96 I. C 881 · A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 634.

Notice to Defendant, if Necessary.—On an application under Or. IX, r. 4, notice to a defendant is unnecessary, Ramjilal v. Kesho Ram, A. I. R. 1923 Oudh 55. 64 I. C. 767.

Proper Forum for Application to Set Aside Order of Dismissal.—An order of dismissal for default can, under Or IX, r 4, be set aside only by the Court which passed the order, Luckman Das v Devi Dyal, 100 P. L. R. 1920: 2 Lah. L J. 48 56 I. C 885

Limitation.—The period of limitation for an application under this rule is 30 days from the date of dismissal See Art. 163, Limitation Act (IX of 1908)

A decree passed in a restored suit pending appeal against the order of restoration was held valid —Alwar v Seshammal, 10 M. 290.

A Judge, when restoring a suit to the file under this section has no jurisdiction to pass at that time any order as to the general costs of the suit.—Krishna Vithal v. Ganesh Bhasker, 26 B 201.

A Court of Small Causes can, during the same day and at the same sitting of the Court, ex parte, restore a case struck off for default of parties, though the order for striking off may have been duly recorded.—Sib Chunder v. Kissen Dyal, 1 C 476

When a suit is restored it must be held as instituted on the date when the plaint was originally filed and not on the date of its re-admission; Dhirta v. Kesri, (1909) 31 P. R. 36 P. W R 1909. 49 P. L. R. 1909.

There is no appeal from an order setting aside a dismissal under this rule; Alwar v. Seshammal, 10 M. 270. See also Wahidunnisa v. Kundanlal, 35 A. 427.

An order under this rule refusing to restore a suit is not appealable; Shadilal v. Karamdin, (1911) 250 P. W .R.

A suit was dismissed for default, both parties being absent and an application for restoration of the suit was also dismissed for default of both parties An application for setting aside the order of dismissal of the application for restoration was rejected. Held that no appeal lay from the order of rejection; Faridbi v. Mohammad Amin, 9 N. L. R. 83: 19 I. C. 77.

Remedies Available to Plaintiff.—The plaintiff may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside and may also bring a fresh suit. If he chooses to avail himself of one remedy, he is not debarred from availing himself of the other; Dayashankar v. Rajkumar, 20 O. C. 66; Bhudeo v. Baikunithi, 63 I. C. 239.

Dismissal for Default of Application to Set Aside Dismissal of Suit for Default—Fresh Application, If Maintainable.—When an application under Or. IX, rr. 4 and 9, C. P. Code, for the restoration of a suit dismissed for the plaintiffs' default, is again dismissed for the default of the applicant (the plaintiff), the latter has the right to apply again under Or. IX, r. 4, for the re-hearing of that application; Bipin Behari v. Abdul Barik, 44 C. 950: 21 C. W. N. 30: 24 C. L. J. 446 (19 C. W. N. 758 folld.); Kirpu Singh v. Mula Singh, 1 P. L. R. (1919): 50 I. C. 401; Abdul Rahman v. Shahana, 1 Lah. 339. 58 I. C. 748; Firm Piare Lal v. Haider, 27 P. L. R. 564: 99 I. C. 80: A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 71.

The mere fact that a case had been previously dismissed for default is no reason for refusing to restore it after a second dismissal, Ramjidas v. Bhagwandas, 43 I. C. 180.

Appeal.—There is no appeal from an order setting aside a dismissal under this rule; Alwar v Seshammal, 10 M. 270. See also, Wahidunnissa v. Kundun Lal, 35 A. 427; Ram Nandan Prasad v. Rama Chandra, 2 Pat. L. W. 172: 42 I. C. 613; Pitambar v. Rai Baidynath, 27 C. L. J. 117; Ramaji Das v. Bhagwan Das, 43 I. C. 180.

Whether R. 4 Applies to Execution Proceedings.—Or. IX, r. 4 is not applicable to proceedings in execution by reason of the provisions of s. 141. Where an application under Or. XXI, r. 90 to set aside an execution sale, was dismissed for default and a second application was then made for the restoration of the first application under Or. IX, r. 4, it was held that the second application for restoration under Or. IX, r. 4, could not be entertained; Basaratulla v. Reazuddin, 53 C. 679: A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 773. See, notes to r 9 under the same head.

Or. IX, R. 4 and Or. XXI, R. 100.—An application under Or. XXI, r. 100, is not an application in execution, the proceedings being in the nature of a summary suit Although the provision of Or. IX, r. 4, does not apply to an application under Or XXI, r 90, it can well apply to proceedings under Or. XXI, r. 100; Sheo Nandan v. Debi Lal, 4 Pat. L. T. 93: A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 78: 1 Pat. L. R. 134: 2 Pat. 372.

Dismissal of suit where plaintiff, after summons returned unserved, fails for 3 months to apply for fresh summons.

5. (1) Where, after a summons has been issued to the defendant, or to one of several defendants, and returned unserved, the plaintiff fails, for a period of three months from the date of the return made to the Court by the officer ordinarily certifying to the Court returns made by serving officers, to apply for the issue of a fresh summons, the Court shall make an order that the suit be dismissed as against such defendant, unless the plaintiff has within the said period satisfied the Court that—

(a) he has failed after using his best endeavours to discover the residence of the defendant who has not been served, or

(b) such defendant is avoiding service of process, or

(c) there is any other sufficient cause for extending the time, in which case the Court may extend the time for making such application for such period as it thinks fit.

(2) In such case the plaintiff may (subject to the law of limitation) bring a fresh suit. [S. 99-A.]

COMMENTARY.

Amendment of Sub-rule (1).—This rule as it at present stands was substituted for sub-rule (1) of r. 5 of Or. IX of Act V of 1908 by the C. P. Code Amendment Act XXIV of 1920 The most important change made by the Amendment Act of 1920 is the substitution of the words " for a period of three months " for the words " for a period of one year " which occurred in sub-rule (1) of r. 5 of Act V of 1908. The words " he has failed after using his best endeavours " in cl. (1) (a) of the present rule have been substituted for the words " he has used his best endeavours " which occurred in cl (1) of Or. IX, r 5 of Act V of 1908. The words in sub-clause (c), " there is any other sufficient cause for extending the time " as well as the concluding words of the rule, viz., " in which case the Court may extend the time for making such application for such period as it thinks fit " are new additions made by the Amendment Act of 1920.

" For a period of three months."—These words have been substituted for the words " for a period of one year " which occurred in the original sub-rule. The effect of this substitution is that the plaintiff must now apply for issue of fresh summons within three months from the date of return made by the officer ordinarily certifying to the Court returns made by the serving officers .

Where the plaintiff showed due diligence, the Court has no jurisdiction to reject an application for fresh summons before the lapse of one year; Rameshwar v. Soni, 13 C W. N. 75-n.

When a suit is dismissed under this rule, plaintiff may bring a fresh suit subject to the law of limitation; Sita Ram v Pokhpal, 28 A. 749.

This rule is applicable to proceedings in appeal; a Court cannot dismiss an appeal for failure to take out fresh process, before the expiry of one year from the date of the return of non-service; Gopisetti v. Mamburi, 25 M. L. J. 451. But see, Jaisari v. Jaisari, 17 I. C. 294.

Dismissal under this rule does not release the defendant from liability; Shaik Ali v. Mahomed, 14 B. 267. Striking out the name of the principal debtor, as summons could not be served upon him, does not justify dismissal against surety, a co-defendant; Nathabhai v. Ranchhod, 39 B. 52: 16 Bom. L. R. 696.

"From the date of the return made by the officer ordinarily certifying."—These words have been added to the present rule to give effect to the decision in 13 B. 500 (Parsotam v Abdul) decided under the old Code, where it was held that the period of one year is to be calculated not from the date of the return made by the serving officer, but from the date of the return made by the officer whose duty it is to certify to the Court returns made by the serving officer.

"May make an order that the suit be dismissed."—These words have been substituted for the words "may dismiss the suit," which occurred in the old Code, in order to make it clear that a dismissal under this rule is not appealable, being an order and not a decree.

Procedure when only plaintiff appears.

6. (1) Where the plaintiff appears and the defendant does not appear when the suit is called on for hearing, then—

When summons duly served.

(a) if it is proved that the summons was duly served, the Court may proceed ex parte;

When summons not duly served.

(b) if it is not proved that the summons was duly served, the Court shall direct a second summons to be issued and served on the defendant;

When summons served but not in due time.

(c) if it is proved that the summons was served on the defendant, but not in sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer on the day fixed in the summons, the Court shall postpone the hearing of the suit to a future day to be fixed by the Court, and shall direct notice of such day to be given to the defendant.

(2) Where it is owing to the plaintiff's default that the summons was not duly served or was not served in sufficient time, the Court shall order the plaintiff to pay the costs occasioned by the postponement. [S. 100.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 100 of the old Code, with some additions and alterations. The words "when the suit is called on for hearing, then" have been substituted in sub-rule (1) for the words "procedure shall be as follows": and the words "was not duly served" have been added after the word "summons" in sub-rule (2).

Appears.—See notes to rr. 9, 13.

"The Court may proceed ex parte."—In dealing with a suit ex parte, a Court is bound to see that the plaintiff's case is prima facie proved.

The mere absence of the defendant does not raise a presumption that the plaintiff's case is true, Amrit v. Roy Dhunput, 15 W. R. 503; Satyendra v. Narendra, 39 C L J. 279. 81 I C 867: A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 806; Monmotha v Jasoda, 28 C W N. 300 77 I C. 511. A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 647; Ghulam Hussain v Singer Sewing Machine Co, 91 I. C. 110: A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 192

Or. IX, r 6 is not limited in its application to defendants residing within British India; Fakhruddin v Ghafurddin, 23 A. 99.

Plaintiff cannot obtain an ex parte decree before the returnable date mentioned in the summons; Dhirajlal v Hormusji, 32 B. 534.

The Court may proceed ex parte, whether the defendant has been summoned only to appear and answer the claim, or has, in addition, been summoned to attend and give evidence; Taruck v. Jeamat, 5 C. 353.

No legal decree can be passed ex parte without a Court being satisfied of the due service of the summons From the mere fact of the plaintiff obtaining an ex parte decree, it is not to be presumed that the service of summons was proved, Ram Lochun v Nittya Kallee, 12 W. R 211.

If it appears that sufficient time has not been allowed to the defendant t appear and answer to the suit, the Court should postpone the hearing even if he appears, Abdul Kureem v. Awlad, 19 W R. 141.

A suit having been dismissed for plaintiff's default, he applied for restoration, but the application for restoration was rejected for his failure to serve notice upon the defendant The plaintiff thereupon applied for issue of fresh notice, but the application was rejected. Held that the Court was bound to issue a fresh notice under this rule read with section 141; Lallubhai Vajeram v. Bai Mangangavri, 18 B. 59

If a defendant appears at the first hearing and files a written statement, he should not be placed ex parte A defendant against whom an ex parte decree has been passed, and who has not adopted the procedure under Or. IX, r. 13, can appeal from such decree; Annathanama v. Madhava, 3 M. 264.

No decree can be legally given without evidence in a case where the defendant is ex parte or does not choose to contest, except in suits on negotiable instruments under Or. XXXVII, r. 2. The words "proceed ex parte" in this rule mean "proceed to determine in defendant's absence by the taking of evidence." Verification is not evidence on which a decree can be founded in a civil suit, Ross & Co v. Scriven, 43 C. 1001: 20 C. W. N. 1192

Applicability of the Rule to Adjourned Hearings.—Or. IX, r. 6, by itself is not applicable if the defendant after having appeared in answer to the summons fails to appear at an adjourned hearing; Enatulla v. Jiban Mohan, 41 C. 956: 18 C. W. N. 775.

Or. IX, R. 6 and Or. XVII, R. 2.—Both under Or. IX, r. 6 and Or. XVII, r. 2, the procedure is the same where the defendant fails to appear at the first hearing, whether that hearing takes place on the day fixed in the summons as contemplated by Or. IX, r. 6, or at a later date to which the hearing may be adjourned, which is contemplated by Or. XVII, r. 2; Mahant Damodar Das v. Raj Kumar Das, 1 Pat. 188: A. I. R. 1922 Pat. 485.

Procedure where defendant appears on day of adjourned hearing and assigns good cause of previous non-appearance.

7. Where the Court has adjourned the hearing of the suit ex parte, and the defendant, at or before such hearing, appears and assigns good cause for his previous non-appearance, he may, upon such terms as the Court directs as to costs or otherwise, be heard in answer to the suit as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance. [S. 101.]

COMMENTARY.

"At or before such hearing appears."—Where on the date fixed for the first hearing, the defendant did not appear and the Court declared him ex parte, it is open to him to appear on a subsequent hearing and to ask for leave to file written statement and to examine witnesses; Bhagwat Prasad v. Mohomed Shibli, 20 A. L. J. 270: A. I. R. 1922 All. 110; Mannu v. Tulsi, 20 A. L. J. 39: A. I. R. 1922 All. 33; Satyendra v. Narendra, A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 806. If the defendant does not appear, and so long as he is absent, the proceedings must necessarily be ex parte; and r. 6 empowers the Court to proceed, notwithstanding that he may be absent Should the defendant appear in the middle of the proceedings, by the very fact that he is present, the proceedings cease, thenceforth, to be ex parte. What r. 7 requires is that if sufficient cause is shown for non-appearance, the defendant may, on terms, be placed in the same position retrospectively, as if he had appeared at the proper time, e.g., in regard to right to cross-examine a witness who may have been examined in his absence; Kalla Gella v. Shivji, 92 I. C. 493: A. I. R 1926 Sind 181; Venkata Subbiah v. Lakshmi Narasinham, 49 M. L. J. 273: 92 I. C. 545: A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1274.

Remedy where Defendant's Application to Appear and Defend under This Rule Rejected.—A defendant whose application under this section to be heard in answer to the suit was rejected, and a decree was passed ex parte against him, and who has not appealed against the order under this section, can apply under s. 108, C P Code, 1882 (Or IX, r. 13), to set aside the ex parte decree, Sankaralinga Mudali v Ratnasabhapati Mudali, 21 M. 324.

Defendants who put in no appearance at the first hearing, and who have subsequently been refused leave to appear and defend, are at liberty, when an ex parte decree has been passed against them, to appeal to a higher Court without taking steps to set aside the ex parte decree.—Ashruffunnissa v. Leharcaux, 8 C. 272: 10 C. L. R. 502; Karuppan v. Ayyathorai, 9 M. 415 (4 A. 387 dissented from).

8. Where the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear when the suit is called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order that the suit be dismissed, unless the defendant admits the claim or part thereof, in which case the Court shall pass a decree against the defendant upon such admission and, where part only of the claim has been admitted, shall dismiss the suit so far as it relates to the remainder. [S. 102.]

Procedure where defendant only appears.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 102 of the C. P. Code, 1882, with some additions and alterations. The words "when the suit is called on for hearing" have been added after the words "does not appear."

"Appears."—See, notes under rules 9 and 13.

A plaintiff fails to appear within the meaning of this rule when his pleader declines to go on with the suit; the presence of the party himself in Court, makes no difference; Gopal v. Maria, 30 M. 274: 17 M. L J 225. See also, Lalji Saha v. Lachmi Narain, 3 Pat. L. J. 355: 47 I. C. 27 The Bombay High Court has taken a contrary view in Esmail v. Haji, 33 B. 465.

This rule does not apply where the main issue in the case has been decided on its merits and there has been a subsequent default in appearance; Kanhaya Lal v. National Bank, 37 C. 426 P C. : 14 C. W. N. 594.

This rule does not apply to non-appearance by reason of death of a sole plaintiff. Where the Court not being aware of the plaintiff's death dismissed the suit under this rule, the dismissal should be set aside under the inherent powers of the Court, on the application of the legal representatives within six months of the date of the plaintiff's death; Raja Debi Baksh v. Habib Shah, 35 A 331, P C 17 C W. N. 829: 40 I. A. 150.

This rule cannot be intended to apply in any case when there is a defective suit, and there is known to be no person in the position of the plaintiff who has any right or duty to appear So when a suit was called on for hearing, the defendant only appeared and the plaintiff did not appear as he had already been adjudged an insolvent, the proper procedure for the Court is not to dismiss the suit for default but to call upon the Official Assignee to state whether he intended to continue the suit, and if he decided to do so, to make an order that he should give security for costs of the suit within a fixed time; Kissen Gopal v. Suk Lal, 31 C. W. N. 22: 53 C. 844.

Where an order purported to be passed under Or. IX, r. 8 but in fact the plaintiff was dead on that date though neither the Court nor any of the parties was aware of it, held that the order passed was a nullity; Trilochan Prasad v. Bhagwati, 73 I. C. 230

Where a suit was dismissed for failure to pay Commissioner's fees, the dismissal was not under this rule; Sheik Saheb v. Mohomed, 13 M 510.

The Court would not be justified in dismissing a suit under this rule, when the plaintiff has adduced all the evidence on which he intended to rely but neither he nor his pleader were present on the subsequent hearing; Ningappa v. Govindappa, 7 Bom. L. R. 261; such a dismissal is appealable; Raichand v Mathura, 3 A. 292. See, Or. XVII, rr. 2, 3, post.

Where a suit was dismissed for want of evidence the decision was on the merits and not for default under this section; Kartick v. Sridhar, 12 C. 563.

"And the plaintiff does not appear."—An application by a pleader, who is instructed only to apply for an adjournment, which is refused, is not an apperance within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure; Satis v. Apara Pershad, 34 C. 403 F. B. : 11 C. W. N. 820: 5 C. L. J. 247.

"When the suit is called on for hearing."—The date fixed for the settlement of issues is a date fixed for the hearing of the suit within Or. 9, r. 8 C. P. Code; Firm of Harchand Rai Anand Ram v. Ram Bahadur Singh, (1919) Pat. 32: 48 I. C. 102.

When a party applies for amendment of issues and a day is fixed for that purpose and neither party appears on the day fixed, the application for amendment is liable to be dismissed but not the suit; Sukhdeo Pattak v. Judagi Mian, 6 Pat. L. J. 331: 2 Pat. L. T. 700.

"Shall make an order."—The Court has no option as it apparently has under r. 3. See, Shakharam v. Naro-Ganesh, 7 Bom. L. R. 999; Mata Bux Lal v. Brij Mohan, 55 I. C. 906.

Where the plaintiff does not appear, the defendant has no right to adduce evidence and the Court cannot examine the merits of the case; Keshri v. National Jute Mills, 40 C 119; 16 C. W. N. 908; Parbati v. Tulsi, 18 C. L. J. 128: 18 C. W. N. 604; Phul Kuar v. Hashmatullah, 37 A. 460: 13 A. L. J. 679.

Or. IX, r. 8 and Or. XVII, r. 2.—Where the plaintiff and his pleader are both absent on the date of an adjourned hearing, the Court cannot hear the case on the mertis under Or. XVII, r. 2. It can only dismiss the case under Or. IX, r. 8 or postpone the hearing under Or XVII, r. 2; Rukam v. Tarachand, 20 A. L. J. 123; 69 I. C. 775.

Effect.—The effect of an order of dismissal under this rule is to bar under r. 9, a fresh suit on the same cause of action; Kalyan v. Ram Gulam, 29 I. C. 902; but does not operate as res judicata; Chand Kour v. Partab Singh, 16 C. 98 P. C.; Sankar v. Madan, 14 C. W. N. 40: 11 C. L. J. 61. See also notes under r. 9, "FRESH SUIT BARRED."

Remedy.—An order of dismissal under this rule is not a decree and is not appealable. The fact that a decree was drawn up cannot alter the nature of the order made; Parbati v. Tulsi, 18 C. L. J. 128: 18 C. W. N. 601: Rukmini v. Paran, 30 C. 341: 15 C. L. J. 834

A decree for part of a claim which alone was admitted by the defendant and dismissal of the rest as the plaintiff was in default, is a decree, and the part dismissal also is appealable; Munisami v. Junjadu, 35 I C 65. See also, Maharaja of Burdwan v Rakhal, 16 C. L. J. 559.

An order dismissing a suit for want of evidence is not an order under Or. IX, r 8. It is open to the party either to appeal or to apply for review: Madhu Sudan v Krishna Prasad, 3 Pat. L. J. 428. 1 Pat. W. N. 790.

An appeal lies from an order dismissing a suit for default when part of the claim is rejected, Kanhaiya Lal v National Bank, 49 M L. J. 499: 25 Bom. L. R. 1248 50 I A 162 P. C

After dismissal, plaintiff may apply for a review without any previous application under the next rule; Rajnarain v. Ananga, 26 C. 598; Pandurang v. Mohan Chhatra, A. I. R. 1923 Bom 295.

Where an application under r. 9 for setting the dismissal aside would be barred by limitation, no review of the order of dismissal should be entertained; Koilash v. Nabadwip, 2 C. W. N 818; followed in Deodip v. Gopal, 1 Pat. L. J 547.

Decree against plaintiff by default bars fresh suit.

9. (1) Where a suit is wholly or partly dismissed under rule 8, the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action. But he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

(2) No order shall be made under this rule unless notice of the application has been served on the opposite party.

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule corresponds to s. 103 of the old Code with some alterations. The words "if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance," have been substituted for the words "if it be proved that he was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing." The words "he was prevented" which occurred in the old section, meant, if he was obstructed by something unexpected or by some accident, as for instance, sudden illness, or stoppage of communication, etc, etc. The meaning of the word "prevented" has been clearly explained in 13 B. 12. But the present rule has been so framed as to include any cause, which may appear to the Court sufficient; as for instance, the illness of the husband, wife, or any other relation, inability to give instruction to pleader or the absence of the pleader on account of illness etc., etc, may be sufficient under the present rule for the restoration of the case, if the Court is satisfied, on the evidence that there was sufficient cause for plaintiff's non-appearance. The present rule is certainly an improvement upon the old section.

It should also be noted that the same word "prevented" which occurred in s. 108, C. P. Code, 1882 has not been changed but retained in Or. IX, r. 13. By the change in the language of this rule, indulgence has been shown to the plaintiff, but by retaining the word "prevented" in rule 13, no indulgence has been shown to the defendant applying to set aside an ex parte decree Remedies in case of Dismissal under R. 8.—A plaintiff whose suit is dismissed under rule 8 for default of appearance, has two remedies open to him: (1) He may apply for a review of the order of dismissal under Or. XLVII, r. 1; Raj Narain v. Ananga, 26 C. 598; or (2) he may apply under this rule for an order to set the dismissal aside. As regards the first remedy, it has recently been held by the High Court of Bombay, in Mahadev v. Lakshmi Narain, 49 B. 839: 90 I. C. 610: A. I. R. 1925 B 521, that, since the decision of the Judicial Committee in Chajju Ram v. Neki, (49 I. A. 144: 79 I. C. 945: A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 730), a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed under r 8 has no remedy by way of review. It is not necessary that before applying for review, he should apply for setting aside the dismissal under this rule; Raj Narain v. Ananga, 26 C. 598. The remedy of review is open to any plaintiff whatever the ground of dismissal may be, whether for default of appearance at the hearing or after the hearing on the merits But the remedy provided by this rule, viz., applying for setting the dismissal aside, can only be availed of by the plaintiff whose suit is dismissed for default of appearance at the hearing under r. 8.

Appearance.—The word "appears" occurs in all the rules of this order and in various other parts of the Code. The meaning is the same everywhere. The leading case on the point is Soonderlal v. Goorprasad, 23 B. 414. The referring orders in the Full Bench case of Satish v. Apara, 34 C. 403, are also very instructive where all the earlier cases have been fully considered. 'Appearance' means the actual attendance at the hearing either of the party himself, or his pleader, or recognized agent or a co-party. Where, however, a party is ordered by the Court to attend in person, under the proviso to Or. III, r. 1, 'appearance' can be effected only by personal attendance (Or. IX, r. 12).

Where a party is present in person in Court at the hearing, it amounts to "appearance" and it is immaterial for what purpose he has appeared or what action he takes on appearance Thus a party who is himself present must be deemed to have appeared, even if he withdraws from Court, on his application for adjournment being refused; Soonderlal v Goorprasad, 23 B. 414 Where however, a party was merely within the precincts of the court-house on the day of hearing but did not at all appear in Court when the case was called out, it cannot be said that he appeared; Manilal v. Virchand, 13 Bom L. R. 1222.

The case of appearance by a pleader is different. Mere presence of the pleader is not appearance; he must also be duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit. Thus where a pleader attends at the hearing and states that though he has filed his vakalatnama he has no instructions with regard to the case, there is no "appearance." Nor is there any "appearance" when the pleaders' only instructions are to apply for an adjournment and which being refused, he retires stating that he has no further instructions; Soonderlal v. Goorprasad, 23 B. 414, Laltaprasad v Nandkishore, 22 A. 66: Satis v. Apara, 34 C. 403 F. B. ; Gopala v. Marid, 30 M. 274; Gurdit v. Sohan, (1905) 34 P. R. ; Krishna Das v Ram Ugrah, 21 A L. J. 500: 74 I. C. 845: A. I R. 1923 All. 549; Manickam v. Mahudum, 47 M 819: 82 I. C. 102: A I. R. 1925 M 21 F B ; Ram Kishan v Jatadhari, 3 Pat. L. J. 481. 46 I. C. 488.

If, however, in the above cases the party himself is also present along with his pleader, the Madras High Court has held that there is no appearance; Gopala v. Maria, 30 M 274 The Patna High Court has taken the same view in Lalji Saha v. Lachmi Narain, 3 Pat. L. J. 355: 47 I. C. 27; Shaikh Mahammad v. Chulhai, 4 Pat. L. J. 712: 52 I. C. 290; Mahant Damodar v Kumar, 1 Pat. 188· A I R. 1922 Pat. 485: 69 I. C 837 But the Bombay High Court, in Esmail v. Haji Jan, 33 B. 475. 3 I. C. 992, held that in such a case, he must be deemed to have appeared. In a recent case, however, the same High Court has held that even when he is present in person, he cannot be deemed to have appeared, if he is accompanied by a pleader who is not duly instructed; Moti Lal v. Nandram, 25 Bom L R 1222; 82 I. C. 124: A I. R. 1924 B. 139.

The mere presence of a recognized agent in Court at the hearing is not necessarily an appearance of the party. It must be determined whether he intended to appear and did, in fact, appear for the party under Or. III, r 1. The case of appearance by a co-party also stands on the same footing; he must be duly authorized in writing under Or. I, r. 12, and it is a question of fact whether he did appear for his co-party or not.

These observations apply equally to a plaintiff or a defendant. The case of a defendant in default, will be more fully considered under r. 13 post As to the applicability of Or. IX to adjourned hearings, see notes under Or. XVII, r. 2.

"Shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit."—The dismissal of a suit under Or. IX, r 8 precludes a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action A difference in the mode of relief in the two suits does not affect the identity of the cause of action —Shankar Baksh v. Daya Shankar, 15 C. 422 P C , Asia Bibi v. Seha Mahomed, 39 M. L. J. 412

Where the causes of action in the two suits are not identical but different, there is no bar under this rule A dismissal under r. 8 does not operate as res judicata; Chand Kour v. Partab, 16 C. 98. P. C. See also, Ramchandra v. Khatal, 60 B. 28; Gobind v. Afzul, 9 C. 426; Sankar v. Madan, 14 C. W. N. 298: 11 C L. J. 61; Bindrabun v. Moti, 12 A. L. J. 53.

The operation of Or. IX, r. 9 is confined to those cases only where a second suit is brought for the same object and on the same cause of action as the suit which was dismissed; Balkishan v. Raghubar Dayal, 45 A. 81: 74 I. C. 991.

In order to determine the identity of the cause of action the Court may refer to the issues in the previous suit; Naganada v. Krishnamurthi, 34 M. 97 p. 107.

Where the plaintiff in the fresh suit was a contesting defendant in the former suit, he cannot be said to have been represented by the plaintiff in the former suit, and a fresh suit is not barred; Ottappurakal v. Cherichil, 33 M. 31.

The disability is only against the defendant who was actually present at the hearing of the former suit, and not against those who were absent The dismissal against these latter must be regarded as one under r. 3, and r. 4 does not preclude a fresh suit against them; Bukharam v. Ramji, 10 N. L. R. 39: 23 I. C. 878.

A fresh suit is barred only when the previous suit was rightly dismissed under r. 8; Kanji v. Habib, 2 Bom L. R. 206.

This rule does not bar a partition suit dismissed for default; Bisheshar v. Ram, 28 A. 627; Madon v. Baikanto, 10 C. W. N. 839.

Gross negligence on the part of the minor's next friend prevents the effect of the bar to the institution of a fresh suit by minor, after attaining majority; Sheo Churn v. Ramnandan, 22 C. 8. See also, Hanmantapa v. Jivubai, 24 B. 547; Gurdevi v. Raman, 99 P. L R. 1910.

"Sufficient cause."—This rule makes it compulsory on a Court to set aside a dismissal under r 8, where the plaintiff satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance. But it does not take away the inherent power of the Court to restore the case for any other valid reason, the merits of the case forming an important element. See, Lallaprasad v. Ramkaran, 34 A. 326, Mg Po Thu v Chaung, 5 Bur. L. T. 72; Gardit v. Sohan, 46 P R. 1905; Somayya v. Subbamma, 26 M. 599. Bilasirai Luxmanram v. Cursondas, 44 B. 82: 21 Bom. L. R. 952. In Usto v. Ghulam, 8 S. L R. 241: 27 I. C. 924, a country view has been taken; see also, Charu v. Chandi, 19 C. W. N. 25.

Serious illness in the family is a sufficient cause, but not failure to be in time to catch a train in order to attend the case; Kali v. Prayag, 19 I. C. 334. But late arrival of a train, which prevented a party from appearing in Court, which in ordinary circumstances would have arrived in time, is sufficient cause; Amir Chand v. Karam Chand, A. I. R. 1927 L. 40: 98 I. C. 868.

Illness of plaintiff is sufficient cause, Lachmandas v. Ramjidas, 95 I. C. 240: A. I R 1926 L 541; but illness of a brother was held not a sufficient cause to set aside a dismissal; Rambhanjan v. Pashupat, 2 Pat. 784: 74 I. C. 847.

The plaintiff, who was a female, and her vakil were both absent when the case was called on for hearing. Her husband who was present in Court went to call the vakil and the suit was dismissed for default. The plaintiff then applied for restoration Held, that the suit should be restored; Pallammai Ammal v. Malaimmai Ammal, 23 L. W. 430: 93 I C. 211. When the case was called, plaintiff ran away to call his pleader and returned a few minutes after the suit was dismissed. Held that this is sufficient cause; Bhaical v. Mohla, 96 I. C. 821: A. I. R. 1926 L. 650.

Gross negligence of the next friend of a minor in making default is a sufficient cause: Adayapadı v Krishna, 27 M. L. J. 167.

It is not the duty of the officers of Court to call upon the pleaders to sign the orders issued, or to inform the nature of the orders passed. It is for the pleaders to make themselves acquainted with the orders passed; Robert Watson v Ambika Dasr, 4 C W N 237 (238)

Where plaintiff or counsel is not informed about the adjournment, and consequently there is default in appearance on the adjourned date, the dismissal of the suit must be set aside, as plaintiff has under the circumstance sufficient cause for non-appearance within this rule; Ishar Singh Dharam Singh v Ramdas Karam Chand, 96 I. C. 245

Where it appeared that the plaintiff was not aware of the date of the last hearing and even if he had known about it he had no intention to appear. Held that the order refusing to restore the suit was right under the circumstances of the case, Rama Chandra v Vythianathan, 13 L. W. 834: 62 I C 378.

The plaintiff attended the Court on the day fixed for hearing, but, seeing that the Judge was engaged with other work, left the Court-house. After returning he found that his suit had been dismissed for default On an application to set aside the dismissal Held that there was no sufficient cause for plaintiff's non-appearance He was not taken unawares. He was under no compulsion to leave the Court, nor was his absence due to any weighty cause; Mani Lal v Gulam, 13 B. 12. See also, Toolsy Money v Prosad Money, 2 C W N 490, Charu v Chandi, 19 C. W. N. 25.

Where the plaintiff was present in Court on the day when his suit was called on, but had to be unavoidably absent at the particular time when it was called, and where he put in an application on the same day, held, that under these circumstances the suit should be restored; Hakim Rai v Rahim Baksh, 27 P. L R 431 8 Lah L. J 422: 96 I. C. 402.

"Suit."—An application under s. 158 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885, is not a suit either under this rule or under rule 8; Janki v. Raja Kalanand, 2 Pat. 192 A I R 1923 Pat 381 74 I C 464.

Or. IX, r. 9 and Or. XVII, r. 3.—On the day fixed for hearing, plaintiff's pleader applied for an adjournment on the ground of plaintiffs' inability to attend owing to his illness, and the Court rejected the application and dismissed the suit Subsequently an application was made to set aside the dismissal under Or. IX, r 9, which was also rejected without taking evidence on the ground that Or XVII, r 3, applied to the case Held that Or XVII, r. 3, had no application to the case as no evidence had been recorded and no pleadings had been opened and that the application was under Or. IX, r. 9; Durga Kanta v Anta Koch, 22 C W N 671; Ratanbai Shivlal v. Shankar Deo Chand; 24 Bom L R 775

Applicability.—This rule applies to proceedings under s 9 of the Specific Relief Act, which only bars a review; Anthony v Dupont, 4 216 also to an application for revision; Jimani v. Bhagel, (1907) 97 P

Where, after a reference under the Land Acquisition Act, the proceedings are dismissed for want of prosecution, the proper course for the part is to revive the proceedings under this rule. A separate suit for trial of the questions involved in the reference is barred.—Bandi Singh v. Ramadhin, 2 C. L. J. 359: 10 C. W. N. 991: Behari v. Nanda, 11 C. W. N. 480.

An executor applying for probate cannot be regraded as a plaintiff suing in respect of some cause of action and this rule does not apply and the will may be again probounded; Ramani v. Kumud, 14 C. W. N. 924:

This rule applies in the case of an application for probate; Rallabandi Veeramma v. Rallabandi Subba Rao, 52 I. C 639.

Whether Rule 9 Applies to Execution Proceedings.—The question whether the provisions of Or. IX are extended to execution proceedings by s. 141 of the Civil Procedure Code, has been the subject of much diversity of judicial opinion It was held in the following cases that s. 141 was applicable to execution proceedings.—Krishna Chandra v. Pratap Chandra, 3 C. L. J. 276; Safdar Ali v. Kishun Lal, 12 C. L J. 6; Diljan Nichha Bibi v Hemanta, 19 C. W. N 758; Bhuban v. Dhirendra, 20 C. W. N 1203, Bepin Behari v Abdul Barik, 21 C. W N. 30: 44 C. 950: 24 C. L. J 446. On the other hand it was held by the Judicial Committee, in Thakur Prasad v Fakirullah, 17 A. 106, and in the following cases, that s. 141 was not applicable to execution proceedings —Asim Mandal v. Raj Mohan, 13 C L J. 532; Hari Charan v Manmatha, 41 C 1: 18 C. W N. 343, Charu Chandra v. Chandi, 19 C W. N. 25, Bala Subramania v. Swarnammal, 38 M. 199: 25 M L. J 367; Hajrat Akramanessa v. Valiulnessa, 18 B 429; Bhubaneswar v Tilak Dhari, 4 Pat. L. J. 135. The same view has also been taken in the recent case of Basarutulla v. Reazuddin, 53 C 679 A I R. 1926 C 773, in which an elaborate research into the history of s. 141 and an exhaustive analysis of the case-laws bearing on it will be found: "There is no substantial difference between the terms of s 647 of the Code of 1882 in its original form and s. 141 of the Code of 1908, and, in my opinion the broad and general proposition may be laid down that none of the provisions of the Code are made applicable to execution proceedings by reason of the provisions of s. 141 " (Per Page, J) The matter may now be considered to be concluded by the Privy Council decision in Thakur Prasad v Fakirullah, 17 A. 106 P C

The following cases in which it was decided that Or IX applies to execution proceedings, are no longer good law; Bhuban v Dhirendra, 20 C. W. N 1203; Kali Kanta v. Shyam Lal, 25 C. L J 163; Diljan Nichha Bibi v. Hemanta, 19 C. W N. 758, Safdar Ali v Kishan Lal, 12 C. L. J. 6.

Dismissal for Default of Application for Restoration of Suit.—Rule 9 provides for the revival of a suit dismissed for default Does it apply where an application to set aside the dismissal of a suit is itself dismissed for default? There has been a conflict of judicial opinions on this question. In Bipin Behari v. Abdul Barik, 44 C. 950 21 C. W. N. 30: 24 C. L. J. 446, where an application for the restoration of a Small Cause Court suit under Or IX, rr. 4 and 9, was in its turn dismissed for default, it was held that an application under Or IX, r. 9 for the revival of that application lay by virtue of the provisions of s. 141 In Pitamber v. Dodee Singh, 46 A. 310: A. I. R. 1924 A. 603, it was held that the revival application under rule 9 may itself be treated as an application to restore the suit, provided it is made within the period prescribed for the original application The Rangoon High Court took the same view in Menon v. Lafon, 3 Rang 504 The same question again came up for C. W. N. 576. A. I R 1927 C 534; and it was there held that when a decision in the recent case of Sarat Krishna v. Bisweswar, 54 C. 405: 31 C W. N 576: A I. R 1927 Cal. 534 and it was there held that when an application under Or IX, r 9 for restoration of a suit dismissed for default is itself dismissed for default under r. 4 of that order, no application lies under Or IX, r. 9 for setting aside that order of dismissal and for restoration and re-hearing of the former application under Or. IX, r. 9, but the second application may be treated as an application to restore the suit and not to restore the first application, and if it is within time, there can be no bar to its being dealt with as an application under Or. IX It was further held that if it is not within time, s. 151 may be invoked in proper cases to restore the suit. See also Gonesh Prasad v. Bhagelu, 47 A. 878· A I R 1925 A. 773, Ram Gulam v. Sheo Deo Narain, 4 Pat L J 287

Limitation.—30 days under Art 173, Limitation Act. This cannot be avoided by making an application for review; Deodit v. Gopal, 1 Pat L. J. 547 3 Pat L W 66, Sheorajnandan v. Girija, 1 Pat. L. T. 573. But see, Lala Chet Narain v. Rampal, 16 C. W. N. 643, where it was held that a defendant can apply for review under Or. XLVII, r. 1, even after the expiration of 30 days allowed by law to apply for setting aside the dismissal under this rule

Where no application to set aside a dismissal is made within the period of limitation, the Court has no inherent power under s. 151 to set aside the dismissal after the expiry of the period; Duni Chand v. Pritamdas, 7 Lah L. J 13 86 I C 256: A. I. R. 1925 L. 321; Ajodhya v Musst Phul Kuer, 1 Pat. 277: 65 I. C. 844: A. I. R. 1922 Pat. 479.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order refusing to set aside the dismissal of a suit, under this rule [Or. XLIII, r. 1 (c)], but no appeal lies from an order granting restoration, Hirdhmun v. Jinghhor, 5 C. 711; Maharaj Shibcharan v. Mahomend Zahua, 57 I C. 245.

No appeal lies against an order rejecting an application under this rule for reviving an application under Or XXI, r. 90, which has been dismissed for non-appearance of the judgment-debtor; Jung Bahadur v. Mahadeo, 31 C. 207: 8 C. W. N. 160 (10 B. 433, 11 M. 319, 19 W. R. 122 followed). Followed in Brojo v. Moti, 14 C. W. N. 573· 13 C. L. J. 153; Kalikanta v. Shyamlal, 25 C. L. J. 163; Mrinalini v. Benode, 6 I C. 148; Ghasiti v. Abdul, 29 A. 596 (application under Or. XXI, r. 89). See also Charu v. Chandi, 19 C. W. N. 25, where it has been held that Or. XLIII, r. 1 (c) does not apply to such an order.

No appeal lies from an order rejecting an application under Or. IX, r. 9 to restore a former application which is dismissed for default; Lok Nath v. Mt. Satan Bai, 73 I. C. 821.

Where an application under Or. XXI, r. 69 has been dismissed for default, the Court may entertain a second application treating it as one for review; Swaminatha v. Paul, 22 M. L. J. 148: 10 M. L. T. 589.

Where an application for setting aside the dismissal of a suit has, in its turn, been dismissed for default, an application under Or. IX, r. 9 for revival of that application lies under s. 141 read with this rule; an alternative remedy under the review section also lies; Bepin v. Abdul, 20 C. W. N. 30: 24 C. L. J. 446; Loknath v. Mt. Sattan Bai, 73 I. C. 821. But see Ram Ghulam v. Sheodeo Narain, 4 Pat L. J. 287; Manke v. Walwekar, A. I. R. 1923 B. 386. It also seems that dismissal for default of the original application under Or. IX, r. 9 would amount to an order rejecting the original application and as such would be appealable under Or. XLIII, r. 1 (c). See the analogous case under Or. IX, r. 13, Kumud v. Hari, 21 C. L. J. 628.

An order by a Judge on the Original Side of the High Court, refusing to set aside a dismissal for default is a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable thereunder; Mathura v. Haran, 43 C. 857: 20 C. W. N. 594: 23 C. L. J. 448.

Revision.—Where a suit was dismissed for default, and the lower Court found that there was no "sufficient cause" under this rule for setting aside the dismissal, but taking into consideration the fact that the suit was for nearly Rs. 10,000, set aside the dismissal as a matter of grace It was held that the order of the Court setting aside the dismissal being wholly without jurisdiction, the High Court was bound to interfere in revision and quash the order; Manickam v Mahudam, 48 M. L. J. 152: 85 I. C. 499: A. I R. 1925 M 209.

Restoration of Suit on Application by One of Several Plaintiffs, Whether Restoration in favour of All.—An order under Or. IX, r. 9, setting aside an order dismissing a suit for default made on the application of some of several plaintiffs, may operate in favour of all of them as the Court setting aside the order may direct; Bishwambar Nath v. Girdhari, 23 O. C. 18: 55 I. C. 481.

Grounds for Restoration.—Where a party appears a few minutes after the case has been called on and dismissed during his absence, he should be made to pay the costs of the application to restore the suit and his suit should be restored and heard on the merits, Irappa v. Ningappa, A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 480. When a suit was called on for hearing, the plaintiff who was present in Court left the Court precincts to fetch his pleader who was engaged in another Court When the plaintiff [illegible] with his pleader, it was three quarters of an hour after the case had been called and dismissed for default. Held, that in the circumstances of the cases the suit should be restored; Behari Lal v. Maqsood Ali, 71 [illegible] 283: A. I. R. 1923 All. 189.

Inherent Power of Court to Restore Suit Dismissed for Default.—Even if there is no "sufficient cause" for the plaintiff's non-[illegible] within the meaning of this rule, a Court has inherent power, [illegible] to restore a suit dismissed for default if there is a just [illegible] cause for such restoration; Lalta Prasad v Ram Karan, [illegible] I. C. 187; Bilasi Rai v. Cursondas 21 Bom L. R 952 [illegible] contrary view has however been taken by the Madras [illegible] Neelaveni v Narayana, 43 M. 94, approving Venkataram[illegible] M. L. J. 235 and overruling Somayya v Subamma, [illegible] It was held that a Court has no power, apart from th[illegible] rule, to restore a suit dismissed for default, or apart from the provisions of r. 13, to set aside an ex parte decree. The Patna High Court has taken the same view as the Madras High Court in Ajodhya v. Musst Phul Kuar, 1 Pat 277 65 I. C 34: A I. R. 1922 Pat. 479.

Procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several plaintiffs.

10. Where there are more plaintiffs than one, and one or more of them appear, and the others do not appear, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff or plaintiffs appearing, permit the suit to proceed in the same way as if all the plaintiffs had appeared, or make such order as it thinks fit. [S. 105.]

Procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several defendants.

11. Where there are more defendants than one, and one or more of them appear and the others do not appear, the suit shall proceed, and the Court shall, at the time of pronouncing judgment, make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the defendants who do not appear. [S. 106]

COMMENTARY.

There is nothing in this rule which conflicts with or limits the operation of Or. IX, r. 13 the application of which is not limited to the case of a sole defendant who has not appeared or where there are more defendants than one and none of them has appeared.—G. P. Cooke v Equitable Coal Co., 8 C W. N. 621.

This rule must be read with rule 13 and effect should be given to all the provisions contained in them. Principles which should be applied in determining whether the entire decree is to be set aside or only in so far as it affects the applicant, discussed.—Jadubansa v Mohunt Hari, 6 C. L J. 226.

Where some defendants do not appear, and the Court deals with the case under this rule, the decree given on a ground common to all the defendants is not in the nature of ex parte decree, even as against the absent defendants —Doorga Churn v. Shamanund, 12 W. R. 376.

As to the effect of setting aside an ex parte decree agains several defendants, on the application of one of them, see notes under rule 13 of this Order.

Consequence of non-attendance without sufficient cause shown, of party ordered to appear in person.

12. Where a plaintiff or defendant, who has been ordered to appear in person, does not appear in person, or show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Court for failing so to appear, he shall be subject to all the provisions of the foregoing rules applicable to plaintiffs and defendants, respectively, who do not appear. [S. 107.]

COMMENTARY.

"Has been ordered to appear in person."—Or. IX, r. 12 applies to all cases where a party has been ordered to appear in person and is evidently framed for the purpose of dealing with obstructive tactics and of enabling the Court to proceed against any party who does not attend; Vaiguntathammal v Valliammal, 41 M 250 41 I. C. 710.

The failure of the guardian ad litem of a minor defendant to appear in Court in person in obedience to a direction issued by the Court for such appearance authorizes the Court to act under Or. IX, r. 12; Ayya Nadan v. Thenammal, 27 M. L T 171: (1920) M W. N. 241

Dismissal of Suit on Non-appearance of Plaintiff Ordered to Appear in Person, When Justified.—A Munsif ordered a plaintiff to appear personally on a particular date The case was not taken up on that date. The plaintiff did not appear on the adjourned date and the Court dismissed the suit under Or. IX, r. 12. Held that the order was without jurisdiction inasmuch as the order for personal appearance did not remain in force for the adjourned date; Sundar Nath v. Mallu, 39 A. 476: 15 A. L. J. 522; Rameswar Baksh v. Rasul Beg, 3 O. L. J. 712: 38 I. C 477.

SETTING ASIDE DECREES EX PARTE.

Setting aside decree ex parte against defendant.

13. In any case in which a decree is passed ex parte against a defendant, he may apply to the Court by which the decree was passed for an order to set it aside; and if he satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served, or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the decree as against him upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit:

Provided that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such defendants only it may be set aside as against all or any of the other defendants also. [S. 108.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule corresponds to s. 108 of the old Code, with some alterations. The most important changes are the addition of the words "as against him" after the words "setting aside the decree," and the addition of the proviso which is entirely new. The object of inserting the words "as against him," has been explained in the following report of the Special Committee: "The Committee have inserted words to make it clear that a decree can only be set aside in favour of a defendant against whom the decree has been made ex parte. There is some conflict of judicial authority upon this point, and the Committee think that the matter should be set at rest in this sense." The object of the insertion of the proviso has been explained in the following report of the Select Committee: "We think it necessary to provide, specially for cases in which it may not be possible, to set aside the decree as against the applicant only." There were conflicting decisions on these points under the old Code, which are noted below, under the heading "As Against Him."

Rent and S. C. C. Decrees.—Section 153-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), as amended by Act I of 1907, B. C., prescribes the mode for applying to set aside an ex parte rent decree. It directs the applicant to deposit admitted rent at or before the time when the application is admitted Section 17 of the Provincial S. C. Court Act IX of 1887 also perscribes similar procedure.

Applicability of this Rule.—There can be no ex parte proceedings against a defendant who has entered appearance and filed his written statement; Ramcharan Lal v Raghubir Singh, 21 A. L. J. 495: 45 A. 618.

Applicability of this Rule to Execution Proceedings.—See notes to s. 141 and Or IX, r 9 under heading "Whether Rule 9 Applies to Execution Proceedings"

Order IX, C P Code, does not apply to execution proceedings; Babu Riter Koer v. Babu Alakdeo Narain, 1918 Pat. 265, 4 Pat. L. J. 330. See also Bharat Chandra v Tasin Sarkar, 21 C. W. N 769, Gunjra Koer v. Lakhan Koer, 35 I C 337 (17 A 106 folld.); Basaratullah v. Reazuddin, 53 C. 679 A. I R 1926 C 773; Kahakkal v Palani Koundan, 50 M. L. Ex Parte.—The expression "ex parte" has not been defined anywhere in the Code nor does it appear to have been the subject of any judicial decision for its definition Its accepted meaning, according to Wharton's Law Lexicon is "a proceeding by one party in the absence of the other." Order IX, r 6 lays down that when the plaintiff 'appears' and the defendant does not, the Court may proceed ex parte. It is thus necessary to consider what constitutes "appearance" by the defendant. The nature of the defendant's appearance in obedience to the summons is best explained by the language of the form prescribed in the First Schedule, App. B, for summons to a defendant That form directs the defendant to appear in person or by pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit or who shall be accompanied by some person able to answer all such questions It also gives him notice that in default of his appearance, the suit will be determined in his absence The test of a defendant's appearance, therefore, is whether such of the requirements of the summons as relate to appearance have or have not been fulfilled

What Amounts to an Ex Parte Hearing.—An appearance by a pleader without sufficient instructions to proceed with the case, as well as non-appearance at an adjourned hearing, amounts to non-appearance within the meaning of Or. IX, r. 6, and the decree passed on such hearing is an ex parte one. See the following cases; Ramtahal v. Rameshar, 8 A. 140; Hiradai v. Hira Lal, 7 A. 538; Raj Kumar v. Jugal, 18 A. 241;

Shankar v. Radha, 20 A. 195, (affirmed in 23 A. 220, P. C.); Lalla Prasad v. Nand Kishore, 22 A. 66; Hildreth v. Sayaji, 20 B. 880; Soonderlal v. Goor Prosad, 23 B. 414; Jonardun v. Ram Dhone, 23 C. 738, F. B.; G. P. Cooke v. Equitable Coal Co., 8 C. W. N. 621; Satis Chandra v. Apara Prosad, 34 C. 403, F. B.: 11 C. W. N. 829: 5 C. L. J. 247; Venkatarama v. Nataraja, 24 M. L. J. 235. See also, Gopal Row v. Maria Soosaiya Pillai, 30 M. 274: 17 M. L. J. 235; Marian Nissa v. Ram Kalpa, 34 C. 235: 5 C. L. J. 260; Shibendra v. Kinoo, 12 C. 605; Mahant Domodar Das v. Raj Kumar, 1 Pat 188. See, however, Kador Khan v. Juggeswar Prasad, 35 C. 1023 (distinguished in Enatulla v. Jiban, 41 C. 956).

A defendant filing a written statement, asked for an adjournment, but his application was rejected and no one appearing for him, the case was proceeded with and decreed in his absence. Held that the hearing was ex parte; Administrator-General of Bengal v. Lala Dyaram, 6 B. L. R. 688; Doyal Mistree v. Kupoor Chand, 4 C. 818: 3 C. L. R. 482; Krishna Dass v. Ram Ugrah Singh, 21 A. L. J. 500; 74 I. C. 845.

A defendant who had filed a written statement but had not appeared at the hearing is entitled to apply under this section to set aside the ex parte decree against him.—Muniappan v. Balayan Chetti, 31 M. 505.

Where a party applies to set aside an ex parte decree, alleging that confession of judgment was obtained by fraudulent personation, the Court is bound to enquire into the truth of the allegation, and if it be established, the decree may be set aside.—Koroonamoyee v. Nobokishore, 6 W. R. Mis. 36. Followed in Bholai Naskar v Alach Naskar, 3 C. L. J 158 and Kunja Behari v. Durgamoni, 3 C L. J. 160

The expression "a decree passed ex parte" in s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887) must be read with Or. IX, r. 13 and can only mean a decree passed ex parte against a defendant and does not include cases dismissed for default.—Mussammat Jamina Bibi v. Seri Chand, 2 C. W N. 693. See also Bepin v. Abdul, 21 C. W. N. 30.

What does Not Amount to an Ex parte Hearing.—The words "if the defendant does not appear" in Or. IX, r. 6 must be understood to apply to the case of a defendant who has not appeared at all, and not to the case of a defendant who, having once appeared, failed to appear at the adjourned hearing; Zain-ul-Abdin v Ahmed Raza Khan, 2 A. 67, P. C. This case has been distinguished in 23 C. 738, F. B ; in 18 A. 241; in 20 A. 195; in 20 A. 66, and in 23 B. 44. See also, G. P. Cooke, v. Equitable Coal Co., 8 C. W. N. 621.

An appearance by person or by pleader without putting in any answer or written statement is an appearance within the meaning of this section; and the fact that the defendant did not put in a written statement does not warrant the trial of the suit ex parte —Goluckbur v. Bishonath, Marsh, 52; Jankee Ram v. Chundrabutty, 7 W. R. 295; Sivarajadhani v. Kuppatulu, 2 M. H. C. 311; Raghapa Bin v. Parapa Bin, 1 B. 217.

A decree was obtained upon a solehnama, and in execuiton, one of the defendants, appearing, alleged that he had no notice of the original suit, and that the solehnama was a forgery. Held that the decree was not ex parte; Hemmo Moyce v Waston and Co, 14 W. R. 297; but see 3 C. L. J. 158, 160

A Court passed a decree in terms of a compromise purported to have been signed by all the defendants, under the impression that all the defendants were before it, and joined in the compromise. Held that the decree was not ex parte, Damodar v Hrishi, 19 C W. N. 118; Jadunath v. Assam, 27 I C 261

Where the defendants had entered appearance and filed their written statements, but their defence had been struck out under Or. XI, r 21 for failure to file their affidavit of documents, and the suit had been placed in the undefended list of cases, and a decree made therein: Held that the decree in suit was not an ex parte decree within the meaning of Or. IX, r. 13; Kesharia v Potooah, 2 C W N 676 See also Chuni v. Chumman, 7 A. 159.

Defendant.—Includes his representative in interest See notes to s. 146.

Court which Passed the Decree—Appellate Court.—The mere fact that an appeal against the decree has been filed, does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court making the ex parte decree, to entertain an application under this rule, Damodar v Sarat, 13 C W N. 846; Kumud v. Jatindra, 38 C 394 15 C W N 399 13 C L J 221; Palaniyappa Chetti v Subramaniam Chetty, 44 M 731 41 M. L J 90.

The Court which passed the ex parte decree has no jurisdiction to set it aside under this rule after the decree has been affirmed on appeal, Dhonai v Tarak, 12 C L J 53, Sankara v Subraya, 30 M. 535: 17 M. L. J 436, Palakdhari v Mankaran, 7 A L J 588, Mathura v. Ramcharan, 37 A 208 See also Brijnarain v Tejbal, 32 A. 295 P. C.

Where an applicant for setting aside an ex parte decree is no party to an appeal against that decree either as appellant or respondent and the Appellate Court has not adjudicated upon his case, he may apply to the Court of first instance for setting it aside, Gajrajmati v. Swaminath, 39 A 13, 14 A L J 853 See also, Brijlal v. Chowdhry, 17 C. W. N. 133 15 C L J 432, where all the previous cases on the question of merger of decrees have been considered, and Abdul Ohad v. Amdali Gazi, 48 C. 153.

"That summons was not duly served."—The word "duly" in Or. IX, r. 13 is not equivalent to "personally" The only points open to the Appellate Court to consider under Or IX, r. 13 are whether the summons was duly, that is, legally served and whether the defendant was prevented by sufficient reason from appearing, Doraiswami Ayyar v. Balasundaram Ayyar, A I. R. 1927 M. 507 Where the defendant was aware of the institution of the suit, he having appeared to oppose an application for his appointment as guardian of a minor defendant. Held that this did not absolve the Court from serving him with a copy of the plaint and notice of the date fixed for hearing; after the plaint had been admitted; Gulabchand v. Shankar, 35 A. 163.

The fact that the defendant or his solicitor knew that a suit had been instituted would not dispense with the necessity of proper service of summons; Kassim Ebrahim v. Johurmull, 43 C. 447: 20 C. W. N. 173: 23 C. L. J. 183.

Where the service is effected by serving summons on the son living in the same house as the pardanashin lady, it must be taken to be a proper service on the lady; Khorshedennessa v. Hakkannessa, 94 I. C. 228. A. I. R. 1926 C. 845.

Decision that Summons was Duly Served When Res Judicata.—A decision that summons was duly served in an application under Or. IX, r. 13, is res judicata, and no fresh suit will lie on the ground that summons had been fraudulently suppressed; Jangal Chaudhury v. Laljit, 1 Pat L. T. 785.

"Prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing."—The Court has to determine the sufficiency of the cause in each particular case which is a question not of law but of fact. The rule should receive a liberal interpretation so as to promote the ends of justice by giving every party an opportunity of being heard. It has been held that the affirmative provisions of this rule as well as r. 9, that the party in default may prove that he was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing do not imply the negative. See notes under the heading "Sufficient Cause" in r. 9. A contrary view has been taken in Fakhruddin v. Ghafurudin, 23 A. 99; Esmail v. Haji Jan, 33 B. 475: Durga v. Mahabir, 14 O. C. 111; Venkatarama v. Nataraja, 24 M. L. J 482.

In an application under Or. IX, r. 13, what the Court has to find is not whether the defendant has any good defence on the merits but whether there is proper service, and if there is proper service, whether there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance. Courts even in mofussil ought not to proceed to the trial of a case until at least three services have been taken upon the defendant, which is the practice in the High Court; Muhammad Sahib v. Alagappa Chettiar, A I. R. 1926 M. 31.

Under Or. IX, r. 13, a Court can restore a suit only when the Court is satisfied that the defendant was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing and an order of the appellate Court directing the re-hearing of a suit without any finding as to the sufficiency of the cause for the non-appearance of the defendant is illegal and without jurisdiction; Ramesh Prasad v Gulabchaudhury, 1 Pat. L T. 69: 54 I. C. 955.

On an application to set aside an ex parte decree, the question to be considered is whether the defendant honestly intended to be present at the hearing of the suit and did his best to do so Once the Court is satisfied that he did try to be present in Court in time and would have got there in time but for the intervention of an accident for which he was in no way responsible, it is the duty of the Court to set aside the ex parte decree, mulcting in proper cases, the defendant in costs The fact that by some human possibility the defendant could have been present in time does not affect his right to have the ex parte decree set aside; Arunachella Iyer v. Subaramaiah, 43 M. L. J. 632: 31 M. L T 257 H. C. (1922) M. W. N. 600.

Where a suit is disposed of ex parte on account of the absence of the party or pleader at the time of hearing but later on the pleader turns up in the course of the same day, the Court should after notice to the opposite party, restore the suit to file after imposing such conditions on the defaulting party as might meet the ends of justice: Sorabji Rustomji v. Ramjilal Devjibhai, 26 Bom L R. 321

Where summons was served only 24 hours before the dated fixed for final disposal and the suit was decreed ex parte, held that this was a sufficient cause for defendant's non-appearance on the date fixed—Mc-Carron v. F Wells, 27 A 192

Where the Small Cause Court Bench Clerk gave a wrong date to the petitioner as that on which the case was fixed for hearing and an ex parte decree was passed in consequence Held, that the procedure in the Small Cause Court under which the clerk fixed dates for cases which are ripe for hearing lends itself to such a misunderstanding as was alleged by petitioner, and the ex parte decree should have been set aside; and the High Court accordingly set aside the decree and ordered a re-hearing; Wazir Chand v. B. M. Bharadwaza, 3 Bur L J 34.

Where a defendant was prevented by the fraud of the plaintiff from appearing on the last day of hearing, the suit was held to have been decided ex parte, notwithstanding that the defendant had been represented on the first day of hearing, in Paroye v. Chintamonee, 18 W. R. 457.

An ex parte decree was passed against a mother personally and as guardian of her infant sons The infants subsequently applied to set aside the ex parte decree on the ground that summons had not been duly served Held that, as the infants were not responsible for their non-appearance, it might be said that they had been prevented by "sufficient cause from appearing," and that the ex parte decree might be set aside against them.—Kesho Pershad v Hirdoy Narain, 6 C. L. R. 69; Bhuramal v. Har Kishen, 24 A. 383 See also, Jatindra v Raja Srinath, 3 C. W. Inherent Power of Court to Set Aside an Ex Parte Decree.—A Court has no power, apart from the provisions of Or. IX, r. 13 to set aside an ex parte decree, or an application made for that purpose. The scope of the inherent power of a Court in this respect considered; Gadi Neelaveni v. Narayana Reddi, 37 M L J 590 43 M 94: 53 I. C. 847 (26 M. 599 overruled) Ajodhya v Mt. Phul Koer, 1 Pat 277; Jagannath v. Abdul Hakim, 73 I. C. 660.

Effect of Setting Aside an Ex Parte Decree.—The suit stands revived and any previous order refusing to allow the defendant to appear made under r. 7 necessarily stands reversed, Sankarling v Rathnasabhapti, 21 M. 324.

An attachment of property in execution of the ex parte decree falls to the ground when the decree is set aside; Lala Jagat v. Tulsiram, 1 B. L. R. A. C. 71: 11 W. R. 99.

Where the decre-holder is himself the auction-purchaser the sale cannot stand if the decree is subsequently set aside; Sett Umeddmal v.

Srinath 27 C. 810: 4 C. W. N. 602; Hazari v. Janki, 6 C. L. J. 92; Chandan v. Ramdini, 30 C. 499; Krishna v. Jogendra, 24 C. L. J. 469.

A sale cannot be set aside against a bona fide auction purchaser not a party to the decree, on the ground of the decree having been subsequently reversed; Zainulabdin v. Muhammad Asghar, 10 A. 166 P. C.

An ex parte decree which is subsequently set aside is not a nullity and a stranger at a sale in execution is protected; Paresh v. Hari, 38 C. 622; 15, C. W. N. 875: 14 C. L. J. 400.

As soon as the ex parte decree is set aside the execution-sale held thereunder falls through if the purchaser is the decree-holder and a fresh decree subsequently made cannot validate the sale; Abdul Rahman v. Sarfat Ali, 22 C. L. J. 412. Purchasers from such decree-holder auction purchasers are not entitled to protection as strangers; Satis v. Rameswari, 22 C. L. J. 409.

An attachment in execution is null and void if at the time of attachment the decree had been set aside and was non-existent and a renewed decree passed subsequently will not validate it.—Chettiattil Muhamod v. Kunhi Koree, 29 M. 175.

After an ex parte decree is set aside, the Court has power to cause restitution.—Sarado Prasad v. Soudamini, 3 C. L J. 181.

A sale set aside on the cancellation of an ex parte decree does not revive when a fresh decree is passed against the defendant; Raghunandan v. Jagdis, 14 C. W. N. 182.

The Court cannot after sitting aside an ex parte decree proceed to uphold it as if it was still subsisting; Raman v. Mohideen, 14 M. L. J. 81.

"Upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court or otherwise."—Where the defendant is not in fault, no terms should be imposed Terms may be imposed in other cases; Venkatasami v. Shanmugam, 32 I. C. 984.

The Court may order the deposit of the decretal amount to be paid in Court. The words "payment into Court" do not relate only to costs.—In the matter of an Application by Sharoda Charan, 7 C. W. N. 59-n; Shyam Lal v Ram Narain, 5 Pat. L J 420· 1 Pat. L. J. 443.

But a Court should not as a condition precedent to setting aside an ex parte decree require the deposit of a large sum of money, as it will work hardship on the defendant; Indar Singh v. Gurdayal Singh, 74 I. C. 86.

An ex parte decree may be set aside on condition that the defendant should find a surety, who would be responsible for any amount that might be found due from the defendant by any decree to be subsequently made in the suit; Sonatun v. Dino Nath, 26 C. 222. 3 C. W. N. 228.

In setting aside an ex parte decree, the Court may direct the applicant to pay all costs incurred by the plaintiff within a fixed time and in default the application is liable to be dismissed.—MaCaron v. F. Wells, 27 A. 192.

Where an ex parte decree was ordered to be set aside upon terms of a certain payment by a given date Held, on appeal, that the Court had jurisdiction to extend the time for payment or pass a fresh conditional order, the original order having become inoperative; Jagarnath v Kamta Prasad, 36 A. 77

Proviso. "Cannot be set aside as against such defendant only."—Under the old Code there were conflicting opinions as to the power of the Court to set aside the whole decree where the decree was ex parte against some of the defendants only The Calcutta High Court held that the Court might do so, whereas the Bombay High Court in Menakee v. Sitaram, 18 B 142, took a contrary view All these cases are discussed in Jadubansa v Mohunt Hari Charan, 6 C L J 226; Valia v. Marutha, 31 M. 454, and Bhuramal v Harkishan, 24 A 383 F. B. See also, Haji Ashfaq v Lala Gouri, 33 A 264 P C., which is in accordance with the Calcutta view

It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule of how that whenever an order is made under s 108, C P Code, 1882, the effect is to set aside the whole decree, although it may have been made against some of the defendants after contest, or although an unsuccessful effort may have been made by some other defendants to set aside the ex parte decree, it is not obligatory upon the Court to set aside the whole decree and to re-open the entire suit under all circumstances Principles which should be applied in determining whether the entire decree to be set aside, or whether it should be set aside only in so far as it effects the applicant, discussed and explained.—Jadubansa Narain v Mohunt Hari Charan, 6 C. L. J. 226

The proviso now makes it clear that relief is ordinarily to be given only to the party who is entitled to and applies for it. If, however, in order to give such relief it is necessary to set aside the whole decree as against others also, who are themselves not entitled to have the decree as against them set aside, the decree may be set aside against all; and the fact that the decree is a compromise decree, will make no difference; Meenakshisundaram v Chandrakasa, 38 M. L. T 315. (1927) M. W. N. 294 · A. I R. 1927 M. 550.

The proviso does not apply to the case of a defendant against whom the suit has been dismissed on the merits in the first instance; Ghannumal v Sant Das, 1913 P L. R 91. See also Baburam v. Emperor, 8 A. L. J. 674

The proviso does not authorise the Court in setting aside a decree at the instance of defendants against whom it had been obtained ex parte to set it aside in so far as it is in favour of the contesting defendants behind their back; Ali Ahmad v Brown, 17 C. W. N. 142.

An ex parte decree against a debtor and his surety can be set aside against both on the application of the surety alone · Md. Raza v. Mt. Farka 24 I. C. 115. See, however, Singer Co. v. Mohammad, 1914 P. L. R 246: P W. R. 166

Application to Set Aside Ex Parte Decree by Party Not Properly Represented in the Suit, If Maintainable.—To attract the provisions of Or. IX, r. 13, the persons seeking the aid of the Court must be a party to the suit; Eda Ponnayya v. Jangala Kamakotayya, 37 M. L. J. 390: 26

M. L. T. 327: 53 I. C. 184; Abhoy Ram Jha v. Kandarp Narayan, 60 I. C. 783; Permanand v. Lakhmi Chand, 66 I. C. 460.

Heirs of a defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed before his death, have a right to apply to set aside the ex parte decree; Mt. Banoo v. Lala Hardwari Lal: A. I. R. 1923 All. 30.

Ex Parte Decree Against Minor Defendant.—Mere irregularities in the appointment of the guardian ad litem, who allowed the suit to proceed ex parte, do not entitle the minor to re-open the decree unless he can satisfy the Court that he has been prejudiced and deprived of some good defence which was open to him; Ram Rekha Singh v. Ganga Prasad, 24 A. L. J. 970: 97 I. C. 514: A. I R. 1926 A. 545 F. B. Failure of the guardian ad litem to appear and defend is no ground for setting aside an ex parte decree passed against a minor, unless fraud, collusion, or gross negligence on the part of the guardian ad litem is proved; Vishnu v Datta, 9 Bom. L. R. 1099.

Onus of Proof.—Where a judgment-debtor applies to set aside an ex parte decree on the ground of non-service of summons, he should be called upon to give his evidence, or to make out a prima facie case.—Khudeerun v. Chutterdharee, 21 W. R. 242; Jhuttoo v Lulita, 22 W. R. 423; Torab Ali v. Chooramun, 24 W. R. 262. See also In the matter of Dintarini Debi, 8 C. 880 (882), and Rakhal v. Secy. of State, 12 C. 603 (605).

In appeal against an ex parte decree, it is sufficient in the first instance to establish that in the trial Court the necessary proof of service of summons was not given by the plaintiff It is not incumbent on the appellant to show that summons was in fact not duly served.—Fakhruddin v. Ghafuruddin, 23 A 99.

Where the summons was not served personally on the defendant but on a gomasta, held that the burden of proving that such service was proper under Or. VI, r. 12 or r. 13, was on the plaintiff; Nagari v. Namburi, 14 M. L T. 535.

Ex Parte Decree Obtained by Fraud.—A suit is maintainable to set aside an ex parte decree on the ground of fraud, even after the rejection of plaintiff's application under this rule; Prannath v Mohesh, 24 C. 546. Affirmed in 28 C 475 P C ; Dwarka v. Lachhman, 21 A 289; Ram Narain v. Shew Bhunjan, 27 C. 197; Sadho Misser v. Golab Singh, 3 C. W. N. 357; Khagendra v. Pran Nath, 29 C 395, P C. 6 C. W. N. 473; Debendra v Prasanna, 5 C L J 328; Golap v. Indra, 13 C. W. N. 493; Balkissen v Tapessur, 17 C. W N 219; Maharani Janki Koer v. Babu Thakur Rai, 1923 Pat. 336 · 75 I C 343 In order to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud, it must be shown that the fraud was practised in relation to the proceedings in Court, and the decree must be shown to have been procured by practising some sort of fraud upon the Court, Muktamala v. Ramchandra, 97 I. C. 879.

Where in a suit to set aside an ex parte decree on the ground of fraud, the only fraud alleged was the non-service of summons, and the plaintiff had, on this very ground, previously unsuccessfully applied to set aside the ex parte decree, under this rule. Held that the suit was barred by res judicata.—Puran Chand v. Sheo Dat, 29 A. 212: 4 A. L. J. 51;

Niadar Mal v Raunak Husain, 29 A. 608; Narsingh v. Rafikan, 37 C. 197· 14 C. W. N 507; Khirode v. Sm. Ashtullabu, 20 C. W. N. 845: Yogamba v. Arumuga, 20 M L T 126. See also, Ibrahim Harun Jaffer v. Yusuff Hussain Jaffer, 22 Bom L. R. 798; Janglal v. Laljit, 6 Pat. L. J. 1· 60 I. C 124 But where a suit to set aside an ex parte decree was bassed on two grounds, viz, (1) that the summons was not duly served, and (2) that the decree was obtained by perjured evidence, it was held that the question of non-service of summons was not res judicata, because the suit included matters which could not have been raised on the application to set aside the decree; Nalini Kanta v. Hari, 29 C. W. N. 325; A. I R 1925 C 663 86 I. C 779.

In a suit to set aside ex parte decree on the ground of fraud, the Court has jurisdiction to investigate into the merits of the case; Lakshmi v Nur Ali, 38 C 936 15 C. W. N 1010; followed in Kedar v. Hemanta, 18 C W. N. 447

Other Remedies.—Besides the remedy given by this rule of applying to set aside the ex parte decree, a defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed has two other remedies open to him:—(1) He may appeal from the ex parte decree under s. 96 and the appellate Court has jurisdiction to reverse the decree of the lower Court, on the ground that such Court was wrong in proceeding to decide the suit ex parte and remand the suit for re-hearing—Sadhu Krishna v. Kuppan Ayyangar, 30 M. 54, F B 16 M L J 479 (23 C 738; 17 B. 733; 23 M. 260, dissented from, 23 M 445 followed), Farzand Ali v. Ekadashi, 26 O. C. 10. 10 O L J 36, Jethalal v Varajlal, 46 B. 184: A. I. R. 1922 Bom 267

(2) The defendant may also apply for review of an ex parte decree; Hari Hur Pershad v Buddu Pershad, 13 C L. R 254; Mutto v. Ilahi Begam, 6 A 65, Poreshnath v Khettromonee, 20 W. R. 284; and Ali Azim v Ram Manik, 12 W. R. 195 Hakimgir v. Basdeo, 17 C. W. N. 631; Lala Chet Narain v. Rampal, 16 C W. N. 643; Shavaksha v. Hugh, 12 Bom L R 886 Contra Motee Chand v. Radhamadhub, 2 W. R. Mis 24. The fact that an application under Or. IX, r. 13 could have been preferred and that it was barred on the date of the review application is no bar to the review, Chokkalingam v. Lakshumanan, 38 M L. J. 224 (1920) M W N 228.

The remedy given by this rule is not open to a defendant if the decree is passed on grounds other than his non-appearance.

Whether Remedies Are Concurrent.—The remedies are concurrent The defendant against whom an ex parte decree has been passed is entitled to apply for setting aside the dismissal under this rule and at the same time to appeal from the decree Further, he is entitled to appeal from the decree or to apply for review of judgment, without previously applying to set aside the dismissal under this rule, Karuppan v. Ayyathorai, 9 M. 446; Ashruffenessa v. Lahureaux, 8 C. 272; Raj Narain v. Ananga, 26 C. 598

When a defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed, does not apply to set aside the dismissal under this rule but appeals from the decree, the only question, according to the Calcutta High Court, with which the appellate Court was concerned, was whether the decree was wrong in law or based on insufficient evidence, and that it could not deal with the question whether the lower Court was right in proceeding ex parte; Jonardan v. Ramdhone, 23 C. 738. The Rangoon High Court has followed this decision of the Calcutta High Court in Raj Chandra v. K. D. O. C. Ray, 2 Rang. 108: 79 I. C. 506: A. I. R. 1924 Rang. 137. It was held by the Madras High Court in Sadhu v. Kuppan, 30 M 54, that the appellate Court was competent to deal with the question of the defendant's non-appearance, and further, that if it came to the conclusion that the lower Court ought not to have proceeded ex parte, it had the power to remand the case to that Court for re-hearing. The Bombay High Court, in Jethalal v. Varajlal, 46 B. 181· A I R. 1922 B 267, took the same view as the Madras High Court

Appeal, etc.—An appeal lies from an order rejecting an application to set aside an ex parte decree under Or. XLIII,r. 1 (d) This is so even if the application for setting aside the decree has been dismissed for default; Kumud v. Hari, 21 C L. J. 628; Pikari Pramanik v. Sarat Sundari, 37 I. C 835 But where in such a case the Court refused to set aside the order of dismissal and restore the application, held that no appeal lies; Sharief Hussain v. Haidar Hussain, 20 A. L. J. 67 I. C. 320. The order passed on appeal is final under s 104 and in not open to second appeal; Abinash v. Martin, 8 C 832.

An appeal lies from an order rejecting the application for an order to set aside a decree passed ex parte, when the order is made, because the conditions which were lawfully imposed on the defendant, were not complied with; Narayan v. Vaikunt, 28 B. L R. 1249: A I R. 1927 B. I F. B (Fakirgowda v. Vishnudas, 50 B. 326 28 Bom. L R. 578 overruled)

Where an application to set aside an ex parte decree is dismissed for failure to pay process fee, this is in substance a dismissal for default and an appeal lies from the order; Bahadur Singh v. Wasawa Singh, 69 I C. 713.

There is no appeal from an order setting aside an ex parte decree.—Shama v Hurbuns, 16 C 426 Benaik Rao v Putani Singh, 17 A. L J. 1052. It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta and Lahore that an order under Or IX, r 13, setting aside an ex parte decree, is not an order that affects the merits of the case, and hence the alleged wrongfulness of the order cannot be urged as a ground of objection under s 105 in an appeal from the decree in the suit: Tassaduq v Hayatunnissa, 25 A 280, Nidhalal v Collector of Bullandshahar, 14 A L J 610, Chintamoney v Raghoonath, 22 C 981, Mohamed v Manohar, 40 C L J 588· A I R 1925 C 473; Nishi v Umarlal, 41 C L J 186 A I. R 1925 C 711, Sayma Bibi v Madhusudan, 52 C 472 A I R 1925 C. 766 But a contrary view was taken in Gopala Chetti v Subbier, 26 M. 601, M S Mahomed v Collector Toungoo, where it was held that such an order may be questioned in appeal from final decree.

An order setting aside an ex parte decree may be open to revision under s 115 if the conditions of that section are satisfied; see, Monmohini v. Naranarayan, 4 C. W N. 456; Narayan v Jotindra, 19 C L J.

258; Karuppayee v. Chinnammal, 13 M. L. T. 101: Shidhant v. Anandram, 8 Bom. L R 567.

A party against whom an ex parte decree has been passed can, without applying to have the decree set aside under Or IX, r. 13, appeal from the decree on the ground that the refusal to adjourn the case was not proper; Jethalal Girdhar v. Varajlal, 23 Bom L. R. 789.

Hearing of Application Under this Rule Pending Appeal.—Where a defendant against whom an ex parte decree has been passed, applies under this rule to set it aside, and at the same time appeals from the decree, it has been held that the proper Court to hear the application is the Court which passed the ex parte decree, and not the appellate Court; Kalimuddin v. Esahakuddin, 51 C 715 83 I C 220 A. I. R. 1924 C. 830; Kumud v Jatindra, 38 C 394. 9 I. C 189, Damodar v. Sarat, 13 C. W N 846, Palaniappa v. Subramania, 44 M 731· 62 I. C. 755; Mirza Abdullah v Ramzan, 21 A L J. 901 79 I C. 381: A. I. R 1924 A. 173; Hummi v Azizuddin, 39 A 143: 36 I C. 277

Hearing of Application After Disposal of Appeal.—Where the defendant appeals against the ex parte decree and the decree is confirmed or otherwise disposed of in appeal, the Court which passed the decree loses its jurisdiction to entertain an application under this rule, even though the application was made before the filing of the appeal; Dhonai v. Tarak, 12 C. L J. 53, Kalimuddin v Esahakuddin, 51 C 715 A. I. R. 1924 C. 830; Sankara v. Subraya, 30 M. 535; Mathura v Ram Charan, 37 A 208: 28 I. C 261.

Limitation.—The limitation for an application by the defendant to set aside an ex parte decree is 30 days as provided by Art 164 of the present Limitation Act IX, of 1908 The period of 30 days will commence from the date of the decree or, where the summons was not duly served, when the applicant has knowledge of the decree Under art 164 of the old Limitation Act XV of 1877, the period of limitation began to run from " the date of executing any process for enforcing the judgment." Thus, an important change has been introduced by the present Limitation Act.

An applicant who seeks to have an ex parte decree set aside has to prove that the application is within the time allowed by law. If he alleged that he did not know of the decree, he will have to explain satisfactorily the circumstances which led to the default, The Firm Maghimal Khairati Ram v. The Firm Gopi Ram Ramchand, 75 I C. 1020

Where the right to apply was lost under the old Limitation Act, the new Act cannot revive the right; Nepal v. Niroda, 39 C 506

The term 'knowledge' means knowledge of the fact that a decree of the kind is in existence; it does not embrace knowledge of the contents and general effect of the decree; Abdool v Esmailji, 12 Bom. L. R. 462

The term 'knowledge' means a certain and clear perception of the particular decree which is sought to be set aside; Bapurao Sakharam v. Sadbu, 47 B. 485; Muhammad Sahib v. Alagappa Chettiar, A. I. R. 1920 M.; Kumud v. Jotindra, 38 C. 394: 13 C. L. J. 221; 15 C. W. N. 399, (403).

Proceedings on Application Under this Rule are Proceedings Independent of the Suit.—Proceedings consequent on an application for setting aside an ex parte decree are not merely a branch of the suit which is terminated when the ex parte decree is passed, and the suit does not revive, if at all, until after the proceedings in the application are terminated successfully; Hari Singh v. Muhammad Said, A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 200 (A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 379 followed).

Fresh Vakalatnama Not Necessary in Application to Set Aside Ex Parte Decree.—A pleader duly appearing in a suit is not obliged to file a fresh vakalatnama for the purpose of an application to set aside an ex parte decree in the suit; Bachubai v. Ibrahim Isak, 24 Bom. L. R. 744 A. I. R. 1922 B. 207: 69 I C. 169.

No decree to be set aside without notice to opposite party.

14. No decree shall be set aside on any such application as aforesaid unless notice thereof has been served on the opposite party. [S. 109.]

COMMENTARY.

An auction-purchaser of property sold in execution of an ex parte decree does not come under the description of " opposite party ", Jatindra v. Sri Nath, 26 C. 267: 3 C W N. 261; nor a person who has attached the ex parte decree; Sevugan v. Obla, 23 M. L. J. 524: 8 M L. T. 237.

Notice to opposite party is imperative. Oral notice given to pleader who appeared in execution proceedings, but not in the suit, was considered insufficient; Yerrakantala v. Delavar, 24 M. L. J. 482 13 M. L. T. 344. See also, Mahomed Jamil v. Bibi Tufailan, 63 I. C 47.

The provision for notice shows that the opposite party should be heard before the decree be set aside, Ali Ahmad v. Brown, 17 C. W. N. 142.

ORDER X.

EXAMINATION OF PARTIES BY THE COURT.

1. At the first hearing of the suit, the Court shall ascertain from each party or his pleader whether he admits or denies such allegations of fact as are made in the plaint or written statement (if any) of the opposite party, and as are not expressly or by necessary implication admitted or denied by the party against whom they are made. The Court shall record such admissions and denials. [S. 117.]

Ascertainment whether allegations in pleadings are admitted or denied.

COMMENTARY.

"Shall ascertain from each party or his pleader."—The proper way of clearing up the pleadings after the plaint and written statement have been filed is that prescribed by Or X, r 1, C P. Code, the provisions of which are peremptory. It is of the utmost importance for the purpose of doing justice between the parties that this oral examination contemplated by this rule should be duly and carefully carried out by the Court, Anjuman-un-nissa v Ashiq Ali, A I R 1922 Oudh 178: 66 I. C 222

Admissions made by a party under this rule are conclusive against him; Abdul Aziz v Maryam Bibi, 97 I C 176 A I R. 1926 A. 710

Admitted.—See cases noted under the heading "Effect of admissions and Statements in the Pleadings" in Or VIII r 5

It is a very dangerous thing for a Court to decree in favour of a plaintiff, merely upon alleged verbal admissions by the defendant of a sum due, without the most clear and cogent proof of such admissions, especially when the plaintiff shrinks from bringing his accounts into Court —Lalla Sheo Prasad v Jaggernath, L R. 10 I A 74

Effect of Admission by Pleader.—Admission made in a statement in a case by a pleader on behalf of his client after full consideration and consultation is admissible as evidence against the client in another case, in which he is a party.—Comabutter v Paresh Nath, 15 W. R 135.

The Court will accept the statements from counsel, from his place at the bar, without burdening him with an oath —Sreemuty Nistariney v. Rai Nundo Lall Bose, 3 C W N 694. A pleader cannot bind his client by an erroneous admission of law, Rama v Mannar, 23 M. L J. 327; Krishna v Udit, 9 I C 621

As to the effect of a pleader's admission, see notes, section 2, under heading "Authority of Pleaders to Bind Client."

Oral examination of party, or companion of party.

2. At the first hearing of the suit, or at any subsequent hearing, any party appearing in person or present in Court, or any person able to answer any material questions relating to the suit by whom such party or his pleader is accompanied, may be examined orally by the Court; and the Court may if it thinks fit, put in the course of such examination questions suggested by either party. [S. 118.]

COMMENTARY.

Verbal admissions made by a pleader of a party to a suit must be received with caution, must be taken as a whole, and must not be unduly pressed.—Natha Singh v Jodha Singh, 6 A 406

This rule merely enables the Court to ascertain what the questions in controversy are, and is not intended to be in substitution for regular examination on oath. Any statement made by a party while being examined under this rule is binding only upon him, Janki v. Arku, 2 A L J 777; Surajmal v. Musst. Chhote, 94 I. C. 1003 A I. R. 1926 A 411

Substance of examination to be written.

3. The substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing by the Judge, and shall form part of the record. [S. 119.]

COMMENTARY.

A judgment recording the admission of a pleader must be taken as correct, unless it is contradicted by an affidavit or the Judge's own admission that the record he made was wrong, Hur Dyal v Heera Lal, 16 W. R 107

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original Civil jurisdiction.—Or XLIX, r 3, cl. (2).

Consequence of refusal or inability of pleader to answer.

4. (1) Where the pleader of any party who appears by a pleader or any such person accompanying a pleader as is referred to in rule 2, refuses or is unable to answer any material question relating to the suit which the Court is of opinion that the party whom he represents ought to answer, and is likely to be able to answer if interrogated in person, the Court may postpone the hearing of the suit to a future day and direct that such party shall appear in person on such day.

(2) If such party fails without lawful excuse to appear in person on the day so appointed, the Court may pronounce judgment against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit. [S. 120.]

COMMENTARY.

A Court is not justified in imposing penal consequences upon a party who fails to appear, by passing a verdict against him, unless it is clearly made manifest that he had been ordered to attend and wilfully refused to obey the order, and the evidence which he was required to give was really material.—Rajchookun v. Busject Tewaree, 20 W. R. 165, Obhoy Churn v. Pearc Dassia, 22 W. R. 270.

The stringent provisions of this section ought to be applied only in the case of contumacious litigants.—Data Hurkman v. Oodoychand, 6 W. R. 247, and Thakoor Lall v. Brohmomoyce, 15 W. R. 253.

The discretion which the Court has of passing judgment against a party for non-compliance with its order to attend and give evidence is not confined to cases where the party summoning him cannot prove his case otherwise than by the evidence of such other party, or where the fact to be proved is solely and exclusively within the knowledge of such other party.—Kashinath Shaha v. Dwarkanath, 9 B. L. R. 215: 17 W. R. 550; Ishan Chandra v. Harish Chunder, 9 B. L. R. 218-note: 12 W. R. 369.

The provisions of this section ought to be exercised with the most temperate discretion, and where the Court, waiving the default of a defendant, adjourned the further hearing of the suit, it cannot afterwards pass judgment against the party in default.—Pudiyar Vasudavan v. Kovi-Langatha, 4 M. H. C. 231.

Scope of Section.—Or. X, r. 4 is self-contained and provides for all cases where a party is ordered to attend Court for the purpose of giving evidence. Or. IX, has no application to the special set of circumstances contemplated by Or. X, r. 4, Kandath Puthiyadath v. Puthiyadath Chengara Raman Nayar, (1921), M. W. N. 890. 63 I. C. 961.

"Answer any material question."—Where a plaintiff appears by a pleader, the Court has no power to issue an order under Or. X, r. 4, unless the pleader refuses, or is unable, to answer a material question.—Satu v. Hanmantrao, 23 B. 318, See also, Bhimrao v. Gopal, 5 Bom. L. R. 687.

Plaintiff's mooktear being unable to answer certain material questions, the plaintiff was ordered either to appear in person or send some one who could reply; and he having done neither, the suit was dismissed.—Nilmoney Singh v. Ram Huree, 2 W. R. 161.

Before the Court makes an order compelling the attendance of a party to the suit, it must be satisfied that his evidence will be material.—Gopal Chunder v. Mohesh Chunder, 21 W. R. 44; and Makooand Adit v. Suttoorghun, 17 W. R. 507.

"Without lawful excuse."—A defendant's saying that he was willing to attend when he did not attend, and showed no reason why he could not, is no lawful excuse for his non-attendance when summoned to attend. What is or is not a lawful excuse must depend on the circumstances of each case.—Doorga Dutt v. Jheengoor Jha, 18 W. R. 63.

"Pronounce Judgment."—These words have been substituted for "pass a decree." The two expressions mean the same thing. If the plaintiff is in default the Court may dismiss his suit. If the defendant is in default the Court undoubtedly has the power to decree the suit against him without any evidence; Rajchookun v. Busject, 20 W. R. 165. But the power is discretionary and the Court may in such a case require the plaintiff to give evidence.

The non-attendance of a defendant, when cited as a witness to give evidence, is not alone sufficient to justify the decision of the suit against him. Roop Narain v. Kashee Ram, 2 N. W. P. 67; and Bhally Mahomed v. Nabin Chunder, 15 W. R. 269.

A Court ought not to take everything for granted against the party in fault, but to require the other party to prove his case, so far as he can, without the desired evidence, and to hear what evidence the defaulting party adduces, before imposing upon him the penalty of default.—Mahomed Amidoolla v. Durbesh, 24 W. R. 314.

Effect.—An order dismissing a suit under this rule is a decree and bars a second suit on the same cause of action; Punamchand v. Mollison, 13 Bom. L. R. 658

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order pronouncing judgment against a party under sub-rule (2) [Or. XLIII, r. 1, cl. (e)].

COMMENTARY.

A Court is not justified in imposing penal consequences upon a party who fails to appear, by passing a verdict against him, unless it is clearly made manifest that he had been ordered to attend and wilfully refused to obey the order, and the evidence which he was required to give was really material.—Rajchookun v Busjeet Tewaree, 20 W. ORDER XI.

DISCOVERY AND INSPECTION.

Discovery by interrogatories

1. In any suit the plaintiff or defendant, by leave of the Court, may deliver interrogatories in writing for the examination of the opposite parties or any or more of such parties, and such interrogatories, when delivered, shall have a note at the foot thereof stating which of such interrogatories each of such persons is required to answer. Provided that no party shall deliver more than one set of interrogatories to the same party without an order for that purpose: Provided also that interrogatories which do not relate to any matters in question in the suit shall be deemed irrelevant, notwithstanding that they might be admissible on the oral cross-examination of a witness. [S. 121.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 121 of the C P Code, 1882, with several additions and alterations It follows English Or XXXI, r 1.

" The provisions in the Code as to discovery are based on the rules of English procedure in force at the time when it was passed Since then the English procedure has been amended and is now contained in Or. XXXI. This order has in effect been adopted in rules regulating the procedure on the original side of the High Courts of Calcutta and Bombay and has, it is believed, been found to work satisfactorily in practice

" On the other hand, in mofussil Courts little use has yet been made of the machinery of discovery, and the Committee therefore think, the rules of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts, on their original sides, may be safely adopted without risk of disturbing a procedure with which the mofussil Courts have become familiarized

" This will secure uniformity of practice and the advantage of commentary on the rules prescribed by the English decisions."—Report of the Special Committee

See Form No 1, Appendix C

Scope.—Rules 1 to 11 deal with the first branch of discovery, viz., by way of answers to interrogatories Rules 12 to 19 deal with the second branch of discovery as affecting documents. Rule 12 deals with the simple discovery of documents, i.e., the power of compelling the opponent to disclose the documents he has in his possession; and the subsequent rules deal with their production and inspection.

Discovery by Interrogatories.—This order now closely follows the English Or. XXXI, and English decisions on the subject are of great advantage. The main object of interrogatories is to save expense by obtaining admissions from the opposite party; Waghji v. Khatro, 10 B 167 (171). A plaintiff may interrogate with a view to obtain information or admission in support of his own case, but he cannot be allowed to put fishing questions in order to try whether he can discover any flaw in the defendant's case or suggest any answer to it; the interrogatories must be directed to a case to which the plaintiff has already committed himself; Ali Kader v Gobind, 17 C. 810. The interrogatories must be as to facts and not as to conclusions of law, inference of facts or constructions of a document; Nittomoyee v Soobul, 23 C 117 (123). A party is not entitled to administer interrogatories with the object of ascertaining the evidence in support of his adversary's case. It would thus appear that a party seeking discovery by interrogatories is entitled to put questions for the purpose of extracting from his opponent information as to the facts material to the questions between them, or for the purpose of securing admissions as to such facts, in order that expense and delay may be saved, or to destroy his opponent's case, or to support his own case; Bhagwandas v. Burjorji, 37 B 347 For a full discussion of this order, see Nittomoyee v Soobul, 23 C 117.

What Interrogatories may be Allowed.—Under the English law, interrogatories are allowed in order that a party may know what case he has to meet, i e, to ascertain the nature of the opponent's case. But in Ali Kader v. Gobind, 17 C 840, decided under the Code of 1882, it was held that interrogatories in India are not to be framed to anticipate or supply defects of pleadings or to ascertain the case of the other side It was said that if the pleading was too vague, the Court might require a better statement under s. 112 (Or VIII, r. 9). This view that interrogatories in India have a limited operation was approved in Nittomoyee v. Soobul, 23 C. 117, also a case decided under the Code of 1882 But as pointed out in Baijnath v Raghunath, 41 C 6, no distinction can now be drawn between the English and Indian practice as the Indian Or. XI is the same as the English Order XXXI.

"In any suit."—This order applies primarily to suits, and by virtue of s 141 to miscellaneous proceedings It has been held to apply to probate proceedings and a probate Court can direct an executor on delivery of interrogatories to make a full discovery of the assets of the deceased; Anil v. Rajendra, 43 C 300 · 23 C L J. 680 An order for discovery can be made under r 13 by a Land Acquisition Judge, Br Ind St Navigation Co v Secy of State, 38 C 230 · 15 C W. N 87 12 C L J 505. This order does not apply to rent suit in Bengal; see s 148 (a), Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885)

"By leave of the Court."—It is the duty of Court, under Or XI, r. 1 to determine whether the applicant should be allowed to interrogate the other side, but not to determine at that stage what questions the party interrogated should be compelled to answer This rule contemplates (1) leave to interrogate, and (2) service of interrogatories through the Court. Where interrogatories are scandalous, or an abuse of the process of the Court, the Court may interfere at any stage.—Sham Kishore v. Shoshibhoosun, 5 C. 707; See also Premsukh v. Indro, 18 C. 420.

"Opposite party."—These words do not relate solely to a party on the other side of the record One defendant may administer interrogatories to another defendant if there is some right to be adjusted in the action between them, Shaw v Smith, 18 Q. B. D. 193; Brichal v. Birch, (1913) 2 Ch. 375, but not where there is no issue between them; Marshall v. Langley, (1889) W N 222.

A defendant who does not appear in answer to a suit, and against whom proceedings are ex parte, is not within the connotation of the term "opposite party" in Or II, r 1 of the C. P Code, and the plaintiff is not entitled to administer interrogatories to him and to use his answers to interrogatories as evidence in the case, Krishna Ayyar v. Madhava Panikkar, 63 I C 258

Time or Stage for Interrogatories.—In England discovery is not generally granted to the plaintiff until after defence, for until then it is not possible to say what really is material In England a plaintiff is sometimes (though very rarely) allowed discovery before statement of claim But under our Code this can never be done, for the words of this rule are "in any suit," and there can be no suit without a plaint filed A defendant is also generally not allowed discovery before putting in his defence.

"Probate proceedings."—Or. XI applies to proceedings in probate by virtue of s. 266 of the Indian Succession Act; Anilabala v. Rajendra, 43 C 300. 34 I C 227

Particular interrogatories to be submitted.

2. On an application for leave to deliver interrogatories, the particular interrogatories proposed to be delivered shall be submitted to the Court. In deciding upon such application, the Court shall take into account any offer, which may be made by the party sought to be interrogated, to deliver particulars or to make admissions, or to produce documents relating to the matters in question, or any of them, and leave shall be given as to such only of the interrogatories submitted as the Court shall consider necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new. It follows English Or XXXI, r. 2.

"In deciding upon such application."—Under this rule, the Court has power to state only what interrogatories shall be administered It cannot settle interrogatories; Anilabala v. Rajendra, 43 C. 300: 34 I. C. 227.

"Leave shall be given as to such only of the interrogatories."—Interrogatories should be disallowed if the object of the plaintiff is to know what the evidence is on which the defendants rest their case; Upendra v. Sarada Sundari, 36 I. C. 883.

3. In adjusting the costs of the suit, inquiry shall at the instance of any party be made into the propriety of exhibiting such interrogatories, and if it is the opinion of the taxing officer or of the Court, either with or without an application for inquiry that such interrogatories have been exhibited unreasonably, vexatiously, or at improper length, the costs occasioned by the said interrogatories and the answers thereto shall be paid in any event by the party in fault. [S. 123.]

Costs of interrogatories.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 123 of the C. P. Code, 1882, with some additions and alterations, and it follows the English Or. XXXI, r. 3.

4. Interrogatories shall be in Form No. 2 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require. [New.]

Form of interrogatories.

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 4.

5. Where any party to a suit is a corporation or a body of persons, whether incorporated or not, empowered by law to sue or be sued, whether in its own name or in the name of any officer or other person, any opposite party may apply for an order allowing him to deliver interrogatories to any member or officer of such corporation or body, and an order may be made accordingly. [S. 124.]

Corporations.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 124 of the C. P. Code, 1882, with some change in the language. It follows English Or XXXI, r. 5.

The member or officer is under no obligation either to disclose his own knowledge or to obtain and disclose the knowledge of other agents or servants of the corporation, acquired otherwise than in the course of his or their employment. It seems that all the interrogatories might be delivered to different officers, each officer to answer those on which he had special knowledge. The Secretary is as a rule the proper person to answer. See "Annual Practice," 1917, p. 519.

6. Any objection to answering any interrogatory on the ground that it is scandalous or irrelevant or not exhibited bona fide for the purpose of the suit, or that the matters inquired into are not sufficiently material at that stage, or on any other ground, may be taken in the affidavit in answer. [S. 125.]

Objections to interrogatories by answer.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 125 of the C. P. Code, 1882, with some additions and alterations It follows English Or. XXXI, r. 6

" May be taken."—The grant of leave to one party to deliver interrogatories to another, does not amount to an order requiring the other party to answer them, that party may perhaps have good ground for refusing to answer them or some of them —Prem Singh v. Indro Nath, 18 C. 420, F B

When an order for administration of interrogatories is made ex parte, under r 2, a party objecting to the interrogatories administered, may, at his peril, omit to answer the interrogatories to which he objects; but the more prudent course is to file his affidavit in answer, stating in it his objections to answer such questions as he objects to —Shamkishore v Soshibhusun, 5 C 707

" Scandalous."—Nothing can be scandalous which is relevant, Fisher v Owen, 8 C D 653 Interrogatories, though tending to criminate or discredit the party interrogated are not scandalous if they are pertinent and material to the case of the interrogatoring party

" Irrelevant."—Discovery must be directly relevant to the matters in issue, as shown by the second proviso to r 1, distinguishing between discovery and cross-examination The functions of discovery and cross-examination are different, and the mere fact that the questions would be admissible in cross-examination of a witness does not make them good as interrogatories, e g, questions which are put only to test the credibility of a witness

An objection by the plaintiff under Or XI, r 6 that some of the interrogatories are irrelevant requires adjudication by the Court that the rule gives the plaintiff an alternative remedy and not that he was to ask the interrogatories to which he objected to be struck out; Bhagwan Das v Ramkumar, 16 A L J. 762: 46 I. C 660 A party should not be compelled to give discovery of documents by interrogatories, the relevancy of which is denied; Nittomoye v Soobul, 23 C. 117.

" Not sufficiently material at that stage."—A fact may be relevant but not material at a particular stage of the suit What is material at one stage may not be material at another stage Thus, a question relating to the amount of damages is relevant although it is premature until the question of liability has been determined A party can refuse to answer interrogatories on the ground that the matter enquired after is premature and not sufficiently material at that stage of the suit; Neekram Dobay v. Bank of Bengal, 14 C 703

" Any other ground."—This would include the grounds set forth in the next rule (r 7), for setting aside or striking out interrogatories Besides these grounds there are, under the English law, four other grounds on which discovery can be resisted as of right: (a) as being criminatory or penal, (b) as being within the doctrine of legal professional privilege, (c) as disclosing the party's evidence, (d) as being injurious to public interests

(Bray's Digest, Art. 42). In general, questions excluded by the Indian Evidence Act, ss. 121-129, which could not be asked if the party were in the witness-box cannot also be put as interrogatories. As regards questions tending to criminate, under s. 132 of the Indian Evidence Act, (unlike under English law) the party if he were in the witness-box, could not refuse to answer them. It would thus appear that in India, he can be compelled to answer an incriminating interrogatory. He should, however, to protect himself, claim the privilege; Queen v. Gopal, 3 M. 271. On the point of privilege see notes to ss. 121-129 and 132, in the Author's Indian Evidence Act.

Setting aside and striking out interrogatories.

7. Any interrogatories may be set aside on the ground that they have been exhibited unreasonably or vexatiously, or struck out on the ground that they are prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous; and any application for this purpose may be made within seven days after service of the interrogatories. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 7 Under r. 2 no interrogatories can now be administered except such as have been allowed, and it is difficult to see how the occasion can arise for applying to set aside or strike out interrogatories Any ground for setting them aside or striking them out is of course a ground for disallowing them, or for objecting to answer them See "Annual Practice," 1917, pp 520-521.

Where an ex parte order is made giving leave to interrogate, the party ordered to answer has a right to come into Court to have the order set aside if the case is one in which interrogatories should not have been allowed; Sham Kishore v. Shosibhoosun, 5 C. 707

Affidavit in answer filing.

8. Interrogatories shall be answered by affidavit to be filed within ten days, or within such other time as the Court may allow. [S. 126.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 126 of the C. P Code, 1882; the words "from the service thereof" which occurred after the words "ten days" have been omitted If follows English Or XXXI, r. 8

Form of affidavit in answer.

9. An affidavit in answer to interrogatories shall be in Form No. 3 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and it follows English Or. XXXI, r 9.

No exception to be taken.

10. No exception shall be taken to any affidavit in answer, but the sufficiency or otherwise of any such affidavit objected to as insufficient shall be determined by the Court. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 10.

Order to answer or answer further.

11. Where any person interrogated omits to answer, or answers insufficiently, the party interrogating may apply to the Court for an order requiring him to answer, or to answer further, as the case may be. And an order may be made requiring him to answer or answer further, either by affidavit or by viva voce examination, as the Court may direct. [S. 127.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 127 of the C. P. Code, 1882, the proviso has been omitted It follows English Or XXXI, r 11

Insufficient Answer.—The Court has not to go into the question of the truthfulness of the answer, but to see whether it is sufficient or not A substantial answer is sufficient, but it must be clear and specific and must not be evasive See Or VIII, r 4, which, though dealing with pleading, is equally applicable to answer to interrogatories. A party must answer to the best of his knowledge, information and belief.

Viva Voce Examination.—A roving cross-examination is not legitimate; the party should only be required to make such an answer as would have been sufficient if originally given in writing, Litchfield v. Jones, 51 L. T 572.

Application for discovery of documents.

12. Any party may, without filing any affidavit, apply to the Court for an order directing any other party to any suit to make discovery on oath of the documents which are or have been in his possession or power, relating to any matter in question therein. On the hearing of such application the Court may either refuse or adjourn the same, if satisfied that such discovery is not necessary, or not necessary at that stage of the suit, or make such order, either generally or limited to certain classes of documents, as may, in its discretion, be thought fit: Provided that discovery shall not be ordered when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs. [S. 129.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 129 of the C P. Code of 1882, with much elaboration, and it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 12.

13. The affidavit to be made by a party against whom such order as is mentioned in the last preceding rule has been made, shall specify which (if any) of the documents therein mentioned he objects to produce, and it shall be in Form No. 5 in Appendix C. with such variations as circumstances may require. [S. 129, para 2.]

Affidavit of documents.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to para. 2 of s. 129 of the old Code, with additions and alterations; and it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 13.

Discovery of Documents.—The proper mode of ascertaining what documents the adversary has, is by an application under r. 12 and not by interrogating him. No affidavit is necessary on the application; and it is generally granted as a matter of course; but in case of contest it must be shown that the document are relevant; Nittomoyce v. Soobul, 23 C. 117 (125); Amarendra v. Kallykissen, 2 C. W. N. 17 (18). The Court has discretion to refuse an order for discovery. A Land Acquisition Judge can order discovery; B. I. S. N. Co. v. Secy. of State, 38 C. 230.

In a suit against a public body and generally in cases where the establishment of the plaintiff's claim depends on documents in the defendant's possession, the defendant must allow inspection of the relevant documents to which the plaintiff has no access; The Municipal Board of Agra v. Ashrafi Lal, 44 A. 202: 20 A L. J. 1.

"On oath."—The Advocate-General cannot be called upon to make discovery on oath; Advocate-General v Adamji, 30 B. 474.

"Possession or power."—A party who is ordered under r. 12 to make discovery on oath should set forth in his affidavit all documents which are or have been in his possession or power; see Kalian v. Safdar, 8 A 265 (267). All documents must be included in the affidavit in which the party has any possession or property jointly with others or even in which he has no property at all, if they are in his corporeal possession As regards document which are not but have been in the party's possession he must state what has become of them. The words " possession or power " in r 12 do not bear the limited meaning which they bear under r. 14 for the purpose of an order for production.

Affidavit.—The affidavit should set out the grounds on which privilege is claimed with respect to the production of any document. A party is entitled to put in a further affidavit in support of his claim of privilege; Ambika v. Bengal Spinning Co , 22 C. 105 As to privilege, see notes to r. 14 under the heading " PRIVILEGE," and notes to r 6, ante, under the heading " ANY OTHER GROUND "

When the affidavit is insufficient, a summons may be taken out to consider its sufficiency; Oriental Bank v Brown, 12 C 265; Kennelly v. Wyman, 1 C. 178; Jadub v. Kanai, 20 C 587.

If the affidavit is insufficient the party will be ordered to amend his affidavit; Amarendra v. Kallykissen, 2 C. W N 17.

10. No exception shall be taken to any affidavit in answer, but the sufficiency or otherwise of any such affidavit objected to as insufficient shall be determined by the Court. [New.]

No exception to be taken.

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 10.

11. Where any person interrogated omits to answer, or answers insufficiently, the party interrogating may apply to the Court for an order requiring him to answer, or to answer further, as the case may be And an order may be made requiring him to answer or answer further, either by affidavit or by viva voce examination, as the Court may direct [S. 127.]

Order to answer or answer further.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 127 of the C. P Code, 1882; the proviso has been omitted. It follows English Or XXXI, r 11.

Insufficient Answer.—The Court has not to go into the question of the truthfulness of the answer, but to see whether it is sufficient or not A substantial answer is sufficient, but it must be clear and specific and must not be evasive See Or VIII, r 4, which, though dealing with pleading, is equally applicable to answer to interrogatories. A party must answer to the best of his knowledge, information and belief.

Viva Voce Examination.—A roving cross-examination is not legitimate, the party should only be required to make such an answer as would have been sufficient if originally given in writing; Litchfield v. Jones, 51 L. T 572.

12. Any party may, without filing any affidavit, apply to the Court for an order directing any other party to any suit to make discovery on oath of the documents which are or have been in his possession or power, relating to any matter in question therein On the hearing of such application the Court may either refuse or adjourn the same, if satisfied that such discovery is not necessary, or not necessary at that stage of the suit, or make such order, either generally or limited to certain classes of documents, as may, in its discretion, be thought fit: Provided that discovery shall not be ordered when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs. [S. 129.]

Application for discovery of documents.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 129 of the C. P. Code of 1882, with much elaboration, and it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 12.

13. The affidavit to be made by a party against whom such order as is mentioned in the last preceding rule has been made, shall specify which (if any) of the documents therein mentioned he objects to produce, and it shall be in Form No. 5 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require. [S. 129, para 2.]

Affidavit of documents.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to para. 2 of s. 129 of the old Code, with additions and alterations; and it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 13.

Discovery of Documents.—The proper mode of ascertaining what documents the adversary has, is by an application under r. 12 and not by interrogating him. No affidavit is necessary on the application; and it is generally granted as a matter of course; but in case of contest it must be shown that the document are relevant; Nittomoyee v. Soobul, 23 C. 117 (125); Amarendra v Kallykissen, 2 C. W N. 17 (18). The Court has discretion to refuse an order for discovery. A Land Acquisition Judge can order discovery; B. I. S. N Co. v. Secy. of State, 38 C. 230.

In a suit against a public body and generally in cases where the establishment of the plaintiff's claim depends on documents in the defendant's possession, the defendant must allow inspection of the relevant documents to which the plaintiff has no access; The Municipal Board of Agra v. Ashrafi Lal, 44 A. 202: 20 A. L. J. 1.

"On oath."—The Advocate-General cannot be called upon to make discovery on oath; Advocate-General v. Adamji, 30 B. 474.

"Possession or power."—A party who is ordered under r. 12 to make discovery on oath should set forth in his affidavit all documents which are or have been in his possession or power, see Kalian v. Safdar, 8 A 265 (267). All documents must be included in the affidavit in which the party has any possession or property jointly with others or even in which he has no property at all, if they are in his corporeal possession. As regards document which are not but have been in the party's possession he must state what has become of them The words " possession or power " in r. 12 do not bear the limited meaning which they bear under r. 14 for the purpose of an order for production

Affidavit.—The affidavit should set out the grounds on which privilege is claimed with respect to the production of any document. A party is entitled to put in a further affidavit in support of his claim of privilege; Ambika v Bengal Spinning Co., 22 C 105 As to privilege, see notes to r. 14 under the heading "PRIVILEGE," and notes to r 6, ante, under the heading "ANY OTHER GROUND."

When the affidavit is insufficient, a summons may be taken out to consider its sufficiency; Oriental Bank v Brown, 12 C 265, Kennelly v. Wyman, 1 C. 178; Jadub v. Kanai, 20 C. 587.

If the affidavit is insufficient the party will be ordered to amend his affidavit; Amarendra v. Kallykissen, 2 C. W N. 17.

The oath of the party swearing the affidavit is conclusive upon the question of possession and privilege, Nittomoye v. Soobul, 23 C. 117; Vinayak v Narotam, 17 B 581 Under the English law the oath is also conclusive as to relevancy, but on this point; see Nittomoye v. Soobul, 23 C. 117

The conclusiveness of an affidavit under r 13 does not preclude the opposite party from claiming inspection of specific documents not disclosed in the affidavit, under r 18 (2), Basanta v Kumudini, 38 C. 428; 16 C. W. N. 81

Where there are several plaintiffs, all of them must join in making an affidavit, unless specific reasons are shown to the contrary. The fact that some of them reside in England is no sufficient reason; Byrie v Shivasankar, 15 B. 7

A defendant may obtain discovery or inspection as against a co-defendant, if the latter can be regarded as an opposite party —Anandrao Vithal v Budra Malla, 17 384

Non-disclosure of Documents.—It is open to a litigant to refrain from producing any document that he considers irrelevant; if the other litigant is dissatisfied, it is for him to apply for an affidavit of documents, and he can obtain inspection and production of all that appears to him, in such affidavit, to be relevant and proper If he fails so to do, neither he nor the Court at his suggestion, is entitled to draw any inference as to the contents of any such documents, Bilas Kunwar v Desraj, 37 A. 557 42 I A 202

14. It shall be lawful for the Court, at any time during the pendency of any suit, to order the production by any party thereto, upon oath, of such of the documents in his possession or power, relating to any matter in question in such suit, as the Court shall think right; and the Court may deal with such documents, when produced, in such manner as shall appear just [S. 130.]

Production of documents.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 130 of the old Code It follows the English Or. XXXI, r 14

Production of Documents.—After obtaining knowledge of the documents that are in the possession of the other party (by means of an affidavit under r 13) a party may compel their production under this rule (r 14) No order for production can be made unless a party has admitted the documents in his power or possession (Kumar Rameshwar v. Rani Bikhnath, 5 Pat L J 550), for which purpose, unlike under r. 12, it means sole legal possession and the right and power to deal with them. For this purpose possession of the agent is possession of the principal and one partner represents his other partners; Haji Jakaria v. Haji Casim, 1 B. 496.

An order for production can be made even before the issues have been framed; Gobind v. Kunja, 14 C. W. N. 147; 10 C. L. J. 407.

Only an order for production can be made under this rule. An order for inspection must be made under r. 18; Abdul Karim v. Abdus Subhan, 14 I .C. 51.

A Judge has no discretion to refuse to order production of documents relating to matters in question in a suit, provided they are not privileged; Wallace v. Jefferson, 2 B. 453; Balamoney v. Ramasami, 30 M. 230.

Under the Evidence Act, in regard to certain documents, when they are absolutely privileged, the Court has no power whatever to order production. But, under this section, the Court does possess the discretion, and the discretion is to be exercised according to the practice of the Court. —Vishna Yeshamant v. New York Life Insurance Co., 7 Bom. L. R. 700.

A written summons distinctly describing the nature of the document required must be issued on a party to a suit required to produce a document. A verbal order to his pleader is not sufficient —Doorga Monee v. Benode Monee, W. R. (1864), 164.

Practice to be followed where a party producing documents wishes to have certain portion of them to be sealed up.—Heera Lall v. Ramsurun, 4 C. 835; Jadub Lall v. Kanai Lall, 20 C. 587; and Harendra Nath v. Grindra Kumar, 3 C. W. N. 495.

Where inspection of documents is objected to on the ground of immateriality, the Court will, if necessary, order them to be produced for its own inspection in order to judge of their materiality.—Gurmuk Roy v. Tularam, 28 C. 424.

A Court ought not to delegate to a commissioner the exercise of the power which the Court possesses under r. 14; Gobind v. Kunja, 10 C. L. J. 407: 14 C. W. N. 147.

Privilege.—Confidential communications between principal and agent relating to matters in a suit are not necessarily privileged; Wallace v. Jefferson, 2 B 453. To be privileged under s 126, Evidence Act, a communication by a party to his attorney must be of a confidential or private nature; Memon Hajee v. Abdul Karim, 3 B. 91. Statements laid by clients before counsel for the purpose of obtaining legal advice are privileged; Munchershaw v. New Dhurumsey Spinning and Weaving Co., 4 B. 576.

Letters written by one of the defendant's servants to another for the purpose of obtaining information with a view to possible future litigation are not privileged. In order that privilege may be claimed, it must be shown on the face of the affidavit that the documents were prepared merely for the use of the solicitor.—Bipro Das v. Secretary of State, 11 C. 655.

Documents which contain the purport of interviews with, and of advice received from, the plaintiff's solicitors and counsel as to the plaintiff's position in regard to their said claim, and as to the steps to be taken thereto, are privileged. Documents which record the steps taken by the plaintiffs from time to time in prosecuting their claims against the defendant are not privileged.—Ryre v Shivashankar, 15 B. 7.

Letters written by the solicitor of two plaintiffs to the solicitor of the third plaintiff are privileged, the fact that portions of them had been read to the defendant's solicitor was no waiver of the privilege as regards the parts which were not read —Kay v Poorunchand, 4 B. 631.

Where, in an affidavit of documents, privilege is claimed for a correspondence, on the ground that it contains instructions and confidential communications from the client to his solicitor, it must appear that each letter contains confidential communications with reference to the conduct of the suit —Oriental Bank Corporation v Brown & Co., 12 C. 265.

In a suit for specific performance of a contract to purchase, where the defendant alleged that the plaintiff had induced him to sign the agreement by fraud and misrepresentations regarding the nature, the extent, and the value of the property, the defendant was not allowed inspection of the plaintiff's title-deeds, accounts, and other papers and documents relating to the property agreed to be purchased —Sutherland v. Singhee Churn, 10 C. 808

Admissibility in Evidence of Documents Produced in Court.—Where the Court directs a document to be produced under Or. XI, rr. 12 and 14, it does not ipso facto become evidence in the case It must be proved by witnesses and when marked as an exhibit on the side of the party relying on it; Jugal Kishore v Altra, 4 Lah L J. 385.

Revision.—Under s 115, interlocutory orders passed under Or. XI, r. 14, directing the production of documents, are not subject to revision.—In re Nizam of Hyderabad, 9 M 256 Followed in Balamoni v. Ramaswamy, 30 M 230, 17 M L J 79

Inspection of documents referred to in pleadings or affidavits.

15. Every party to a suit shall be entitled at any time to give notice to any other party in whose pleadings or affidavits reference is made to any document, to produce such document for the inspection of the party giving such notice, or of his pleader, and to permit him or them to take copies thereof; and any party not complying with such notice shall not afterwards be at liberty to put any such document in evidence on his behalf in such suit unless he shall satisfy the Court that such document relates only to his own title, he being a defendant to the suit, or that he had some other cause or excuse which the Court shall deem sufficient for not complying with such notice, in which case the Court may allow the same to be put in evidence on such terms as to costs and otherwise as the Court shall think fit. [S. 131.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 131 of the C. P. Code, 1882 It follows the English Or XXXI, r. 15 It should be read with ss 163 and 164 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Inspection.—This rule does not apply to documents other than those referred to in the pleadings and those relied upon by the plaintiff; Khetsidas v. Narotamdas, 32 B. 152. But the Calcutta High Court has held that r. 15 does not apply to documents relied upon by the plaintiff; Chandmall v. Dhanraj, 24 C. W. N. 302: 56 I. C. 457.

Right to inspection includes right to take notes and obtain copies; Gobind v. Kunja, 10 C. L. J. 407: 14 C. W. N. 147, the party inspecting and obtaining copies will bear its costs, though under exceptional circumstances such costs may be made costs in the cause; Fatmabai v. Haji Cassam, 11 Bom. L. R. 402.

Notice to produce.

16. Notice to any party to produce any documents referred to in his pleading or affidavits shall be in Form No. 7 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and it follows the English Or. XXX, r. 16.

Time for inspection when notice given.

17. The party to whom such notice is given shall, within ten days from the receipt of such notice, deliver to the party giving the same, a notice stating a time within three days from the delivery thereof at which the documents, or such of them as he does not object to produce, may be inspected at the office of his pleader, or in the case of bankers' books or other books of account or books in constant use for the purposes of any trade or business at their usual place of custody, and stating which (if any) of the documents he objects to produce, and on what ground. Such notice shall be in Form No. 8 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require. [S. 132.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 132 of the old Code and follows the English Or. XXXI, r. 17. The place where business is conducted and account books are kept is the proper place to give inspection; Kevaldas v. Pestonji, 5 B. 407.

Order for inspection.

18. (1) Where the party served with notice under rule 15 omits to give such notice of a time for inspection, or objects to give inspection, or offers inspection elsewhere than at the office of his pleader, the Court may, on the application of the party desiring it, make an order for inspection in such place and in such manner as it may think fit: Provided that the order shall not be made when and so far as the Court shall be opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs. [S 133.]

(2) Any application to inspect documents, except such as are referred to in the pleadings, particulars or affidavits of the party against whom the application is made or disclosed in his affidavit of documents, shall be founded upon an affidavit showing of what documents inspection is sought, that the party applying is entitled to inspect them, and that they are in the possession or power of the other party. The Court shall not make such order for inspection of such documents when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs. [S. 134.]

COMMENTARY.

Sub-rule (1) corresponds to s. 133 and sub-rule (2) to s. 134 of the C. P. Code, 1882, with several additions and alterations; and it follows English Or. XXXI, r 18.

"Served with notice.—Before the Court will make an order under this rule, the preliminary notice mentioned in r. 14 must be given by the party applying for inspection, Mohendro v. Ishan, 10 C. 56.

Plaintiff should not be ordered to give inspection of documents not mentioned in the plaint till after the defendant has filed his written statement; but the rule is not inflexible; Khetsidas v Narotum, 32 B. 152.

If a notice under r 15 be not answered as provided by r. 17, the party may apply for an order under this rule and his application must be supported by an affidavit; Dhapi v. Rampershad, 14 C. 768.

The filing of an affidavit of documents under r 13, does not preclude the other party from subsequently applying for an order under this rule for the inspection of specific documents not disclosed in the affidavit; Basanta v. Kumudini, 38 C. 428

Where defendants objected to produce certain documents for inspection, because such documents, were obtained after dispute arose, and for purposes of litigation that might arise between them and the plaintiffs: Held, in an application for their production and inspection, that the affidavit was not sufficient to support the defendant's claim to privilege. —Umbica Churn v. Bengal Spinning and Weaving Co, 22 C. 105 and 4 C. W. N. clxviii (168).

The Court ought not to permit a person, formerly in the service of the defendant, to inspect, as the plaintiff's agent, the defendant's books which had been in his charge.—Enamul Huq v. Ekramul Huq, 25 C. 294.

The proper time for making an application under this section is at the hearing of the suit and not before; Amarendra v. Kallykissen, 2 C. W. N. 17.

Where parties require the inspection or production of telegraphic messages it is for them and not the Court to obtain the necessary sanction of Government; Leckraj v. Palee Ram, 2 N. W. P. 210.

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order allowing inspection; Ahmed v. Ayesha, 11 Bom. L. R. 248.

COMMENTARY.

19. (1) Where inspection of any business books is applied for, the Court may, if it thinks fit, instead of ordering inspection of the original books, order a copy of any entries therein to be furnished and verified by the affidavit of some person who has examined the copy with the original entries, and such affidavit shall state whether or not there are in the original book any and what erasures, interlineations or alterations: Provided that, notwithstanding that such copy has been supplied, the Court may order inspection of the book from which the copy was made.

Verified copies.

(2) Where, on an application for an order for inspection privilege is claimed for any document, it shall be lawful for the Court to inspect the document for the purpose of deciding as to the validity of the claim of privilege.

(3) The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit at any time, and whether an affidavit of documents shall or shall not have already been ordered or made, make an order requiring any other party to state by affidavit whether any one or more specified documents, to be specified in the application, is or are or has or have at any time been in his possession or power; and, if not then in his possession when he parted with the same and what has become thereof. Such application shall be made on an affidavit stating that in the belief of the deponent the party against whom the application is made has, or has at some time had, in his possession or power the document or documents specified in the application, and that they relate to the metters in question in the suit, or to some of them. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and it follows the English Or. XXXI, r. 19-A. Sub-rule 3, " is not a process of discovery, but only a process in aid of discovery; and the documents must be so specified that they can be at once identified "; per FLETCHER MOULTON, L. J., in Huntly v. Backworth Collieries (1911) W. N. 84.

Premature discovery.

20. Where the party from whom discovery of any kind or inspection is sought objects to the same or any part thereof, the Court may, if satisfied that the right to the discovery or inspection sought depends on the determination of any issue or question in dispute in the suit, or that for any other reason it is desirable that any issue or question in dispute in the suit should be determined before deciding upon the right to the discovery or inspection, order that such issue or question be determined first, and reserve the question as to the discovery or inspection. [S. 135.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 135 of the C P Code, 1882, with some verbal changes only It follows English Or XXXI, r 20.

The intention of r 20 is to give the Court the power of raising and determining an issue for the exclusive purpose of deciding the right to discovery before the hearing of the cause, Ahmedbhoy v. Vulleebhoy, 6 B. 572

Non-compliance with order for discovery.

21. Where any party fails to comply with any order to answer interrogatories, or for discovery or inspection of documents, he shall, if a plaintiff, be liable to have his suit dismissed for want of prosecution, and, if a defendant, to have his defence, if any, struck out, and to be placed in the same position as if he had not defended, and the party interrogating or seeking discovery or inspection may apply to the Court for an order to that effect, and an order may be made accordingly. [S. 136.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to paras 1 and 2, of s 136 of the C. P. Code of 1882, with some alterations and omissions The word defended, has been substituted for the word " answered " Para 3 of the old section, relating to criminal prosecution for non-compliance with the order, has been omitted. It is based upon English Or XXXI, r. 21.

Non-compliance with Order for Discovery.—This rule renders the defendant liable to have his defence struck out upon failure to answer an interrogatory It does not make it obligatory upon the Court to do so. If there is obstinacy or contumacy on the part of the defendants, or a wilful attempt to disregard the order of the Court, an order under this rule is appropriate.—Bansi Singh v Palit Singh, 7 C. L J. 295 (5 C. 707, 9 C. 923, and several English cases referred to).

This rule cannot be applied unless there has been an order for discovery under r. 12 or for inspection under r. 18; Dev Karan v. Sangidas, 27 Bom. L. R. 604: 89 I. C. 215: A. I. R. 1925 B. 386: Kishan Lal v.

Sultan Singh, 38 A. 5: 30 I. C. 525; Lalchand Gobindram v. Tejbhandas, 96 I. C. 1003. This rule does not apply to cases where there has been non-compliance with an order for production of documents made under r. 14; Lyallpur Sugar Mills Co., Ld. v. Ram Chandra Gur Sahai Cotton Mills Ld., 44 A. 565: 67 I. C. 73: A. I. R. 1922 A. 235; Sithamalli v. Ramanathan, 46 M. L. J. 350: 77 I. C. 766: A. I. R. 1924 M. 582.

Where a party fails to comply with an order for discovery, the proper remedy is for the party seeking the discovery to apply to have the proceedings stayed or the suit dismissed; Kunj Lal v. Babu Banwari Lal, 4 Pat. L. J. 394: 48 I. C. 711.

The powers given to the Court by r. 21 should not be exercised except in extreme cases; Shamkishore Soshibhoosan, 5 C. 707: 5 C. L. R. 509; Ram Nath v Prabhu Dayal, 65 I. C. 661; Rameswar Narayan v. Rikshash Koeri, 5 Pat. L. J. 550: 58 I. C. 281.

Where a defendant neglects to comply with an order for production and inspection, the Court will, although in the last resort, order his defence to be struck out.—Khajh Assenoollajoo v. Khajah Abdool Aziz, 9 C. 923.

In a suit brought by two purdanashin ladies, they were ordered to declare by affidavit all the documents which were and had been in their possession. After some ineffectual proceedings, the Court dismissed the suit in consequence of the orders not having been complied with. Held that the party from whom discovery was sought being purdanashin ladies, it was not expedient to enforce the penalty; Kalian Bibi v. Sufdar Husain, 8 A. 265.

The Court has no jurisdiction to pass an order under this rule unless the provisions of r. 15 are strictly complied with; Dhapi v. Ram Pershad, 14 C. 768. See also, Kishun v. Sultan, 13 A. L. J. 831 38 A. 5.

Infliction of the penalty imposed by Or. XI, r. 31, C P. Code, for non-discovery, after the whole trial is closed, is improper—Dinbai v. Fromroz 43 I C. 71.

The High Courts in India possess the power of enforcing obedience to their orders by committal for contempt The remedies provided by this section in cases of disobedience to an order of Court may be regarded as cumulative They subject the offender to particular liabilities for his contumacy, but do not extinguish the Court's power of constraining him to obedience.—Hassonbhoy v. Cawasji, 7 B. 1; Navivahoo v Naratamdas, 7 B. 5; Godu v. Surajmal, 27 A 380.

A Court has inherent power to strike the defence of a defendant of its own motion under this rule, Lal Das v. Spratt, 84 P. L R. 1910: 8 I. C. 245.

The Court has no power to strike out a defence under this rule for failure of the defendant to appear for examination as a witness for the opposite side; Vasudeva v. Sankaran, 22 M. L. J. 60.

Order XI, r. 21 of the C P. Code does not justify the dismissal of a suit for non-compliance with an order under Or XI, r. 14, C. P. Code, for production of documents; Sithamalli Subbayyar v. Ramanathan· 46 M. L. J. 350: 19 L. W. 355 (65 I. C. 661 disstd. from).

Under Or. XI, r. 18, when a party applies to inspect documents in the pleadings or in a previous affidavit of documents, and makes an affidavit for that purpose, the Court ought not to make an order for inspection without giving the other side an opportunity of replying to the affidavit. In such a case, dismissal of suit for non-compliance with the terms of the order is not proper, Firm of Durga Prasad v. Firm of Bishwanath Lakshmi Chand, 22 A L J. 299 L. R 5 A 255.

Appeal.—An order under this rule is appealable under Or. XLIII, r. 1 (f).

Review.—Where plaintiff's suit has been dismissed under Or. XI, r. 21, the Court has no power to review its order under s. 151, the order being appealable, Asutosh v. Indu Bhusan, A I R. 1927 C. 158: 98 I C. 70.

An order dismissing a suit under this section is a decree within the definition of s 2, Civil Procedure Code, and is, therefore, appealable.—Maharajadhiraj Maharana Shri Mansingji v Mehta Hariharram, 19 B 309. Followed in Kamalabhy Dassi v Jotindra Mohun, 6 C. L. J. 374.

Where a defence is struck out under this rule and a decree is made, as in an undefended cause, the decree is not ex parte within the meaning of Or. IX, r 13, so as to allow of an application to set it aside under that rule; Keshana v Pottoah, 2 C. W N 676, See also, Chunnilal v. Chamanlal,, 7 A. 159.

Using answers to interrogatories at trial.

22. Any party may, at the trial of a suit, use in evidence any one or more of the answers or any part of an answer of the opposite party to interrogatories without putting in the others or the whole of such answer: Provided always that in such case the Court may look at the whole of the answers, and if it shall be of opinion that any others of them are so connected with those put in that the last-mentioned answers ought not to be used without them, it may direct them to be put in. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and it follows English Or. XXXI, r. 24.

A party, at whose instance interrogatories have been administered, must put in the answers as part of his evidence, if he wishes to use them at the hearing.—Gosto Behary v Johur Lall, 4 C 830: 4 C. L. R. 164.

Under Or. XI, r. 22, the answers or portions of the answers obtained to interrogatories served in a case are admissible as against the party answering them, though great caution should be exercised in using them as evidence; Narayana Bharatigal v Ittuli Amma, 39 I. C. 893

Order to apply to minors.

23. This order shall apply to minor plaintiffs and defendants, and to the next friends and guardians for the suit of persons under disability. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and it follows the case of Nathmull Narsingdas v. Malharao Holkar, 10 B. 350 and of Waghji Thackersey v. Khatao Rowji, 10 B. 167, where it has been held that an affidavit of documents may be required from a minor defendant; and it overrides the case of Duncan v. Bhoyro Prosad, 22 C. 891, where it was held that an infant party cannot be compelled to give discovery by affidavit and inspection of documents in his possession, and that the penalties prescribed by s. 136 of the old Code (r. 21) were obviously inapplicable to infants and persons under disabilities.

ORDER XII.

ADMISSIONS.

Notice of admission of case.

1. Any party to a suit may give notice, by his pleading, or otherwise in writing, that he admits the truth of the whole or any part of the case of any other party. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and it has been borrowed from English Or. XXXII, r. 1.

"The committee think the practice of admissions may with advantage be extended to facts as well as to documents. The procedure is not compulsory, but its adoption would result in cheapening and expediting litigation, and it is hoped that its use will be encouraged by Courts."—Report of Special Committee

Admissions Generally.—Admissions may be considered as being—

I. On the Record (a) Actual, i e, either on the pleadings or in answers to interrogatories under Or. XI, (b) Implied, from the pleadings under Or. VIII, rr 3, 4, 5

II. Between the Parties by (c) Agreement, (d) Notice. This order deals with admissions by notice.

Notice to admit documents.

2. Either party may call upon the other party to admit any document, saving all just exceptions; and in case of refusal or neglect to admit, after such notice, the costs of proving any such document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs; and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice is given, except where the omission to give the notice is, in the opinion of the Court, a saving of expense. [S 128.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 128 of the old Code, with several alterations and additions. It has been borrowed from English Or. XXXII, r. 2.

If an admission be made "with a saving of all just exceptions" as to the admissibility of the document, it so far recognizes the general character and accuracy of the documents, that no objection can subsequently be taken to the authenticity of any part of them, or to their reception in evidence on the ground of any interlineation, however material, appearing upon them. Unless this were so, great inconveniences would follow; for as one main object of inducing a party to admit under notice is to dispense with the necessity of formal proof of the instrument, it would obviously open a door to fraud, if the party admitting were at liberty afterwards to object to an interlineation, which the attesting witness might alone be enabled to explain. An admission will not be vitiated because the date of a promissory note, otherwise correctly described in the notice to admit, is mis-stated. A party will not, however, be entitled to the costs of proving any document specified in the notice unless the witness called to establish this proof has, at least in his examination-in-chief, been questioned to no other fact. Though a notice to admit does not contain any saving of all just exceptions, the party admitting, may still rely on any valid objection to the admissibility of a document specified in it. This rule extends to every document which a party proposes to adduce in evidence, whether or not it be in his custody or control, and whether or not it be put in issue by the pleadings. See Taylor on Evidence, 10th Ed., Vol. I, pp. 518-519.

Form of notice.

3. A notice to admit documents shall be in Form No. 9 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and it has been borrowed from English Or. XXXII, r. 3

Notice to admit Facts.

4. Any party may, by notice in writing, at any time not later than nine days before the day fixed for the hearing, call on any other party to admit, for the purposes of the suit only, any specific fact or facts mentioned in such notice. And in case of refusal or neglect to admit the same within six days after service of such notice, or within such further time as may be allowed by the Court, the costs of proving such fact or facts shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs: Provided that any admission made in pursuance of such notice is to be deemed to be made only for the purposes of the particular suit, and not as an admission to be used against the party on any other occasion or in favour of any person other than the party giving the notice: Provided also that the Court may at any time allow any party to amend or withdraw any admission so made on such terms as may be just. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and has been borrowed from English Or. XXXII, r. 4.

Nine Days.—Would probably mean nine clear days exclusive of the day of service of notice and of the day fixed for hearing. A notice to admit facts should, where practicable supersede interrogatories. See Or. XI, r. 2

Form of admissions.

5. A notice to admit facts shall be in Form No. 10 in Appendix C, and admissions of fact shall be in Form No 11 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and it has been borrowed from English Or. XXXII, r. 5.

Judgment on admissions.

6. Any party may at any stage of a suit, where admissions of fact have been made, either on the pleadings, or otherwise, apply to the Court for such judgment or order as upon such admissions he may be entitled to, without waiting for the determination of any other question between the parties, and the Court may upon such application make such order, or give such judgment, as the Court may think just. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Scope and Object of Rule.—This rule is new and it has been borrowed from English Or. XXXII, r 6 It enables either party at any stage of the suit to apply for judgment on the admissions made by the other side. Either the plaintiff or the defendant may apply, but some of several plaintiffs cannot make the application, all the plaintiffs must join therein, Kirke v. North, (1895) 2 Ch. 747. It enables the party applying, to get rid of so much of the suit as to which there is no controversy; Throp v. Holdsworth, 3 C. D. 640. The rule is merely permissive, and a party by not availing himself of it and proceeding to trial in the ordinary way, does not thereby waive his right to rely, at the trial, on the admissions contained in the pleading, Tildesley v Harper, 7 C D. 403.

The object of this rule is to enable a party to obtain speedy judgment, at least to the extent of the relief which, according to the admissions of the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to The latter need not relinquish the rest of the claim in moving for judgment It is not necessary to have a decree drawn up, but it can be enforced in execution proceedings by virtue of s 36 of the Code; Tabilram Tarachand v. Vassumal, 92 I. C. 602: A. I R. 1926 Sind 119.

Under this rule, in a partition action, where the defendants have, by their statement of defence, admitted the facts stated in the claim showing the plaintiff's title, the plaintiff has a right—instead of having the action set down for hearing—to an order for preliminary decree on motion; in an action between partners, and in one between principal and agent, an order for an account and for the delivery of securities has been made on motion before the hearing, the judge acting solely on the admissions contained in the pleadings. A plaintiff may move for judgment upon admissions, although he has joined issue on the defence, and given notice of trial. See Taylor on Evidence, 10th Ed., Vol. I, pp. 581-582.

"Or otherwise."—These words show that the rule is not confined to admissions made under r. 1 or r. 4, but is of general application and justify the making or giving of an immediate order or judgment when an admission is made by letter, of facts which show that the defendant has no defence to the action; Ellis v. Allen, (1914) 1 Ch. 904. A verbal admission is sufficient when it is clearly proved that it has been made; Re Beeny, (1899) 1 C. 499.

Judgment on Admissions.—A party applying for judgment upon admissions in a pleading must accept as true the statements contained in it. The admissions must be clear and unequivocal. The plaintiff must have a clear case, and the mere admission or non-denial by the defendant of a right asserted by plaintiff, but which in fact has no existence in law, is not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to a judgment; Chilton v. Corporation of London, 7 C. D. 735. Where one defendant does not appear and another makes an admission as to the plaintiff's right to relief, the plaintiff may proceed against the latter under this rule and against the former by default; Parsons v. Harris, 6 C. D. 694.

In order to entitle the plaintiff to have judgment on admission, there must be clear admission that the money is due and recoverable in the action in which the admission is made, and the admission also must be clear and unequivocal. An ambiguous admission in a written statement that a certain sum of money was due to the plaintiff, is not such an admission as would justify an order under this rule; Devsi Narain v. Hassanand, 97 I C. 623: A I. R 1927 Sind. 25.

In a case where the written statement taken as a whole could not be regarded as an unambiguous and unconditional admission that Rs. 9,535 was due to the plaintiff, the sum could not be recovered by the plaintiff by an application under Or XII, r. 6, C. P. Code, Koramull Ramballav v. Mongilal Dahni Chand, 23 C. W. N 1017: 54 I. C 836.

Final judgment ought not to be passed upon admissions in a pleading or an affidavit unless the admissions are clear and unequivocal. It must further be remembered that the power of the Court to pass judgment on admissions is discretionary and its exercise cannot be claimed as a matter of right, Galstaun v E D. Sassoon & Co. Ltd, 27 C. W. N. 783 (23 C. W. N. 1017 folld.)

If the plaintiff's case is clear and the written statement of the defendant raises no defence, the practice in English Courts allows the plaintiff in a suit for specific performance to move for a decree on the written statement being put in, and to get such a decree at once as a matter of course.—Moulvie Mahomed Ikramull Huq v. Wilkie, 11 C. W N. 946, P. C.: 6 C L. J. 682: 17 M. L. J. 454: 4 A. L. J. 740

If a plaintiff abandoning his own case, relies upon the admissions of the defendant, he would be bound to take them as a whole; Sheopershad v. Juggernath, 10 I. A. 74: 13 C. L. R. 206 (171), P. C.

Where a defendant admits the claim, the Court, being satisfied as to his identity, should at once give judgment for the plaintiff. 12 W. R. 432, 434, 435.

A party is not bound by an admission on a point of law, nor precluded from asserting the contrary.—Tagore v Tagore, 9 Bom. L. R. 377, P. C : 18 W. R. 357 (367), P. C See also, 27 C 156 P. C pp. 162, 163, and 21 A. 285.

Title to land cannot pass by admission when the statute requires a deed—Jadu Nath v Rup Lal, 4 C. L. J 22: 33 C 967: 10 C. W. N. 650. See also, Mathura v Ramkumar, 20 C W N. 370: 23 C. L. J. 26

As to the effect of admissions and statements made in the pleadings, see the cases collected under Or VIII, r 5

"The Court may make such order or give such judgment as the Court may think just."—The power of the Court is discretionary and will not be exercised where the case cannot be conveniently tried on motion; Mellor v. Sidebottom, (1877) 5 C. D 342, Galstaun v. E D. Sassoon & Co., 27 C W N 783 82 I. C 348· A. I R. 1924 C 190. "The rule was not meant to apply when there is any serious question of law to be argued"; per Mellish, L J, in Gilbert v Smith, 2 C. D p. 689 An admission made in error may be allowed to be withdrawn; Hollis v. Burton, (1892) Ch 228.

Under Or XII, r 6 of the C .P. Code, though the party has no absolute right, the Court has got discretion to pass judgment for the amount admitted and to allow the plaintiff to prove the balance of his claim in the ordinary way; Premsukhdas Assaram v Udairam Gunga Bux, 45 C. 138. 22 C W N 204.

Infant.—Judgment cannot be obtained under this rule upon admissions contained in the defence of an infant defendant; Byrne v. Byrne, 5 L. R. Ir. Ch. D 134.

Appeal.—An order rejecting an application for judgment on admission is a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable; Koramall v. Mongilall, 23 C. W N. 1017: 54 I. C. 836

Affidavit of signature.

7. An affidavit of the pleader or his clerk, of the signature of any admissions made in pursuance of any notice to admit documents on facts, shall be sufficient evidence, of such admissions, if evidence thereof is required. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and it has been borrowed from English Or. XXXII, r. 7.

Notice to produce documents.

8. Notice to produce documents shall be in Form No. 12 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require. Affidavit of the pleader or his clerk, of the service of any notice to produce, and of the time when it was served, with a copy of the notice to produce, shall in all cases be sufficient evidence of the service of the notice and of the time when it was served. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This is new; it has been borrowed from English Or. XXXI, r. 8. The object of this rule is to enable secondary evidence of the documents to be given at the trial if they are not then produced pursuant to the notice. See s. 65, cl. (a), and s. 66, Indian Evidence Act.

Costs.

9. If notice to admit or produce specifies documents which are not necessary, the costs occasioned thereby shall be borne by the party giving such notice. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, and it has been borrowed from English Or. XXXII, r. 9.

ORDER XIII.

PRODUCTION, IMPOUNDING AND RETURN OF DOCUMENTS.

Documentary evidence to be produced at first hearing

1. (1) The parties or their pleaders shall produce, at the first hearing of the suit, all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power, on which they intend to rely, and which has not already been filed in Court, and all documents which the Court has ordered to be produced. [S. 138.]

(2) The Court shall receive the documents so produced: provided that they are accompanied by an accurate list thereof prepared in such form as the High Court directs. [S. 140, Para. 1.]

COMMENTARY.

In sub-rule (1) the words "shall produce" have been substituted for the words, 'shall bring with them, and have in readiness at the first hearing of the suit to be produced when called for by the Court," which occurred in the old section. Under the present rule, the parties shall have to produce all documentary evidence in their possession and power at the first hearing of the suit, but under the old section, the parties were simply required to bring with them and to have in readiness all their documents, which they had to produce only when called for by the Court. The word "produce" means to bring into view or notice; it does not mean file.

"First hearing of the suit."—The words "first hearing of the suit" in Or. XIII, r 1 mean the date when for the first time the case is called on for hearing and is really gone into and not the date when the case is fixed for hearing but not gone into at all. Consequently documents produced before the commencement of the actual hearing of a suit cannot be rejected though produced after the date originally fixed for the trial of the suit; Taran Mandal v. Raj Chandra Mandal, 50 I. C. 298. But see Biswa Nath v Kali Charan, 27 C L. J 119, in which it was held that the trial Court had under Or. XVII, r. 2 of the Code, a discretion to refuse to accept the documentary evidence on which the plaintiffs intended to rely and which were not produced before the date fixed for the hearing of the suit on which date the parties had been directed to produce their documentary evidence though the hearing resulted only in an adjournment

The provisions of Or. XIII, r 1 do not exclude the discretion of the Court to receive any documentary evidence at any subsequent stage. The trial Court has a discretion in the matter. The Appellate Court shall not interfere with the discretion of the trial Court unless it has been capriciously exercised; Rani Prayag Kumari v. Siva Prosad, A. I. R. 1926 C. 1: 42 C. L. J. 290: 93 I. C. 385.

A party is bound to be prepared at all points with his documentary evidence, and as soon as the Court has framed the issues, at once to tender (if called upon) the documentary evidence bearing thereon. The words "first hearing," do not mean the first hearing on the issue.—Gour Hurree v. Pran Hurree, 21 W. R. 42.

For the meaning of the words "first hearing," the case of Imamuddin v. Liladhar, 14 A. 524 (526), may be referred to.

Parties are required to have with them in Court, at the first hearing of the suit, all their documentary evidence, but need not file it then unless it is called for.—Mahbub Hossein v. Patasu Kumari, 1 Bom. L R. 120; 10 W. R. 179. Approved in 12 C. W. N. 312: 8 C L. J. 147 (21 W. R. 42 referred to).

Or. XIII, r. is enacted to prevent fraud by the late production of suspicious documents, and not to shut out formal evidence beyond suspicion, such as certified copies of public documents like records of Government.—Ranchhod v. Secretary of State, 22 B. 173; Syed Ikram Hossain v. Ramlochan, 23 W. R. 29; Lilabati v. Bishnu, 6 C. L. J 621, p. 634 and Talewar v. Bhagwan, 12 C. W. N 312: 8 C. L. J. 147.

"In such form as the High Court directs."—See Appendix H, Form No. 5.

Effect of non-production of documents.

2. No documentary evidence in the possession or power of any party which should have been but has not been produced in accordance with the requirements of rule 1 shall be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings, unless good cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non-production thereof and the Court receiving any such evidence shall record the reasons for so doing [S. 139.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule should be read with Or. VII, rr 14, 18. See also cases noted under r. 1.

If, when evidence is taken before commissioners, a document is tendered and objected to on any ground, the opposite party is not precluded from objecting to the document, at the trial, on any other ground.—Balli v. Gaukim Swee, 9 C 939.

The plaintiff tendered in evidence a judgment which was filed with the plaint, after he had closed his case, but before the defendant commenced his. Held that the Court was wrong in refusing to receive his document.— Baroda Prasad v Madhab Chandra, 33 C. 1345.

An Appellate Court is bound to consider the documents admitted by the lower Court. it cannot strike them off, on the ground that they were not filed with the plaint.—Minakshi v. Valu, 8 M. 373

Discretion of Court to Admit in Evidence Documentary Evidence Not Produced at First Hearing.—Documentary evidence which has not been produced at the first hearing of a suit in accordance with Or. XIII, r. 1 may be admitted at a later stage at the discretion of the Court; Imambandi v. Mutsaddi, 45 C. 878 P. C.: 22 C. W. N. 50: 23 C. L. J. 409: 16 A. L. J. 800: 35 M. L. J. 422: 45 I. A. 73; Muhammad Tabarak v. Dalip Narain A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 117: 98 I. C. 968.

The Court may admit documents not produced at the first hearing when it is of opinion that the reception of the evidence will enable the person tendering it to win a case which he will otherwise lose; Shankarlal v. Mahbub Shah 70 I. C. 278: A. I. R. 1923 Oudh 59.

The fact that a document sought to be admitted in evidence at a late stage is a public document is a good cause for relaxing the stringency of the rule, Mt. Tabunnessa v. Jugdip Pandey, 2 Pat L. R. 1.

Appeal.—The fact that further documentary evidence is admitted after the first hearing is not a good ground of appeal; Goshain v. Ruckmini, 12 W. R. P. C. 32. An Appellate Court also cannot on that ground reject evidence admitted by the Court of first instance; Minakshi v. Velu, 8 M. 373.

3. The Court may at any stage of the suit reject any document which it considers irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible recording the grounds of such rejection. [S. 140 para. 2.]

Rejection of irrelevant or inadmissible document

COMMENTARY.

Reject.—It is the duty of the Court to receive and inspect every document tendered returning such as it considers irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible. A document may be inadmissible under the Evidence Act or for non-compliance with the provisions of the Stamp Act, or Registration Act, or any other Act.

Questions as to the admissibility of evidence should be decided as they arise, and should not be reserved until the judgment of the case is given.—Rampbux v. Oghore Nath 25 C. 401, Jadu v. Bhabotaran, 17 C. 173.

When a Court is doubtful as to whether a document is admissible or not, and its decision is open to appeal, it is better to admit than to exclude the document, Kalikishore v. Bhusanchandra, 18 C. 201 P. C.

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order rejecting a document under this rule nor can it be interfered with under the Charter Act, In re Erskine, 18 W. R. 511, but the order may be impugned in appeal from any decree that may be passed.

4. (1) Subject to the provisions of the next following sub-rule, there shall be endorsed on every document which has been admitted in evidence in the suit the following particulars namely:—

Endorsements on documents admitted in evidence.

(a) the number and title of the suit,

(b) the name of the person producing the document,

(c) the date on which it was produced, and

(d) a statement of its having been so admitted;

and the endorsement shall be signed or initialled by the Judge.

(2) Where a document so admitted is an entry in a book, account or record, and a copy thereof has been substituted for the original under the next following rule, the particulars aforesaid shall be endorsed on the copy and the endorsement thereon shall be signed or initialled by the Judge. [S. 141.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "or initialled," which occur after the word "signed" in sub-rules 1 and2, are new.

As to admission of secondary evidence, see ss. 65 and 66; as to proof of private documents, ss. 67-73; of public documents, ss. 77 and 78; ancient documents, s. 90; as to presumptions regarding documents, ss. 79-89; as to exclusion of oral by documentary evidence, ss. 91-100, of the Indian Evidence Act.

Provisions of the Rule must be Strictly Complied with.—The provisions of Or. XIII, r. 4 must be strictly complied with. The endorsement should bear the name of the person tendering the document in evidence and the date on which it was so tendered. Merely by stamping the documents with the date on which they were filed in court, they do not ipso facto become evidence in the case without any formal proof; Hari Singh v. Karam Chand Kanshi Ram, A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 115 (A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 548 and 5 Lah. 227, folld.).

"Shall be signed."—The Appellate Court may refuse to read or permit to be used any document not indorsed in the manner required; Sadik Hossain v. Hashim Ali, 43 I. A. 42, 237: 38 A. 627: 36 I. C. 104. Documents admitted on the record without making the indorsement prescribed by this rule cannot be regarded as being legally before the Court; Secretary of State v. Shrimati, 5 Lah 227: A. I R. 1924 Lah. 548: 79 I. C. 74.

"And the endorsement shall be signed or initialled by the Judge."—Where documentary evidence is produced in a case, the Judge is required by Or. XIII, r. 4 of the C. P. Code to endorse with his own hand a statement in each document that it is proved against or admitted by the person against whom it is used, and until this is done, the document should not be filed as part of the record. The mere production of a document and the handing it over to an officer of the Court to put it on the file is not sufficient; Shyamlal v. Ram Charan, 43 I. C. 525.

Endorsements on copies of admitted entries in books, accounts and records.

5. (1) Save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891, where a document admitted in evidence in the suit is an entry in a letter-book or a shop-book or other account in [illegible]

been produced at the first hearing of a suit in accordance with Or XIII, r. 1 may be admitted at a later stage at the discretion of the Court; Imambandi v. Mutsaddi, 45 C 878 P. C. · 22 C. W. Appeal.—The fact that further documentary evidence is admitted after the first hearing is not a good ground of appeal; Goskain v. Ruckmini, 12 W. R. P. C. 32. An Appellate Court also cannot on that ground reject evidence admitted by the Court of first instance; Minakshi v. Velu, 8 M. 373.

Rejection of irrelevant or inadmissible document.

3. The Court may at any stage of the suit reject any document which it considers irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible recording the grounds of such rejection. [S. 140, para. 2.]

COMMENTARY.

Reject.—It is the duty of the Court to receive and inspect every document tendered, returning such as it considers irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible. A document may be inadmissible under the Evidence Act or for non-compliance with the provisions of the Stamp Act, or Registration Act, or any other Act.

Questions as to the admissibility of evidence should be decided as they arise, and should not be reserved until the judgment of the case is given.—Ramjibun v. Oghore Nath, 25 C. 401; Jadu v. Bhabotaran, 17 C. 173.

Endorsements on documents admitted in evidence.

4. (1) Subject to the provisions of the next following sub-rule, there shall be endorsed on every document which has been admitted in evidence in the suit the following particulars namely:—

(a) the number and title of the suit,

(b) the name of the person producing the document,

(c) the date on which it was produced, and

(d) a statement of its having been so admitted;

and the endorsement shall be signed or initialled by the Judge.

(2) Where a document so admitted is an entry in a book, account or record, and a copy thereof has been substituted for the original under the next following rule, the particulars aforesaid shall be endorsed on the copy and the endorsement thereon shall be signed or initialled by the Judge. [S. 141.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "or initialled," which occur after the word "signed" in sub-rules 1 and2, are new.

As to admission of secondary evidence, see ss. 65 and 66; as to proof of private documents, ss. 67-73; of public documents, ss. 77 and 78; ancient documents, s. 90; as to presumptions regarding documents, ss. 79-89; as to exclusion of oral by documentary evidence, ss. 91-100, of the Indian Evidence Act.

Provisions of the Rule must be Strictly Complied with.—The provisions of Or. XIII, r. 4 must be strictly complied with. The endorsement should bear the name of the person tendering the document in evidence and the date on which it was so tendered. Merely by stamping the documents with the date on which they were filed in court, they do not ipso facto become evidence in the case without any formal proof; Hari Singh v. Karam Chand Kanshi Ram, A I R. 1927 Lah. 115 (A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 548 and 5 Lah. 227, folld.)

"Shall be signed."—The Appellate Court may refuse to read or permit to be used any document not indorsed in the manner required; Sadik Hossain v. Hashim Ali, 43 I. A. 42, 237: 38 A. 627: 36 I. C. 104. Documents admitted on the record without making the indorsement prescribed by this rule cannot be regarded as being legally before the Court; Secretary of State v. Shrimati, 5 Lah. 227: A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 548: 79 I. C. 74.

"And the endorsement shall be signed or initialled by the Judge."—Where documentary evidence is produced in a case, the Judge is required by Or. XIII, r 4 of the C. P. Code to endorse with his own hand a statement in each document that it is proved against or admitted by the person against whom it is used, and until this is done, the document should not be filed as part of the record. The mere production of a document and the handing it over to an officer of the Court to put it on the file is not sufficient; Shyamlal v Ram Charan, 43 I. C. 525.

Endorsements on copies of admitted entries in books, accounts and records.

5. (1) Save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891, where a document admitted in evidence in the suit is an entry in a letter-book or a shop-book or other account in current use, the party on whose behalf the book or account is produced may furnish a copy of the entry.

(2) Where such a document is an entry in a public record produced from a public office, or by a public officer, or an entry in a book or account belonging to a person other than a party on whose behalf the book or account is produced, the Court may require a copy of the entry to be furnished—

(a) Where the record, book or account is produced on behalf of a party, then by that party, or

(b) where the record, book or account is produced in obedience to an order of the Court acting of its own motion, then by either or any party.

(3) Where a copy of an entry is furnished under the foregoing provisions of this rule, the Court shall, after causing the copy to be examined, compared and certified in manner mentioned in rule 17 of Order VII, mark the entry and cause the book, account or record in which it occurs to be returned to the person producing it. [S. 141-A.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1921" and "letter-book" are new.

When the original entries in an account-book are not in the handwriting fo the debtor, they are not liable to stamp-duty under Article I, Schedule I, Stamp Act (I of 1879); and therefore the copies of them are not chargeable with any Court-fees under article 8, Schedule I of the Court Fees Act of 1870, Harichand v. Jivna Subhana, 11 B. 520.

A copy or extract from an entry in an account-book, filed under this section requires no stamp; Kastur v. Fakiria, 26 B. 522.

Endorsements on documents rejected as inadmissible in evidence.

6. Where a document relied on as evidence by either party is considered by the Court to be inadmissible in evidence, there shall be endorsed thereon the particulars mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of rule 4 sub-rule (1), together with a statement of its having been rejected, and the endorsement shall be signed or initialled by the Judge. [S. 142.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "or initialled" after the word "signed," are new.

When a Court has doubt as to the admissibility of a document, and its decision is open to appeal, it is better to admit than to exclude doubtful documents.—Kalikishore v. Bhushan Chandra, 18 C. 201, P. C. (203).

An objection as to the inadmissibility of a document and as to the mode of its proof, should be taken at the time when the document is attempted to be put in; Madhabi v. Gayanendra, 9 C. W. N. 111 (28 C. 835 distinguished).

If no objection is taken in the Court of first instance to the reception of a document in evidence, the Appellate Court cannot raise or recognize it in appeal; Chimnaji v. Dinkar, 11 B. 320; Hriday v. Prasanna, 28 C. 142; Miller v. Madho, 19 A. 76 P. C. distd.; Kishori v. Rakhal, 31 C. 152. See also, Shahazadi v. Secy. of State, 34 C. 1059 P. C. and Ramprasad v. Shamnarain, 6 C. L. J, 22.

Recording of admitted and return of rejected documents.

7. (1) Every document which has been admitted in evidence, or a copy thereof where a copy has been substituted for the original under rule 5, shall form part of the record of the suit.

(2) Documents not admited in evidence shall not form part of the record and shall be returned to the persons respectively production them. [S. 142-A.]

COMMENTARY.

Documents which have not been proved, but simply filed in accordance with an usage in the mofussil should not be put up with the record. It is the duty of a Judge to pass over such documents as unproved; but it is also the duty of the pleader of the party against whom they are intended to be used to insist that they should not remain on the record at all.—Kallida Pershad v. Ram Hari, 5 C. 317.

Where a document tendered in evidence in the first Court was rejected as inadmissible, but was nevertheless allowed to remain on the record: Held that the mere fact of the document remaining on the record did not make it evidence in the Appellate Court.—Hargobind v. Noni Babu, 14 A. 356.

For the purpose of being endorsed and filed as part of the record as proved within the meaning of this section, see Cal H. C. Cir. Order No. 28 of 19th July 1879. Rules for the admission, filing, and return of documents; see Cal. H. C. Cir Order No. 7 of the 2nd June 1890.

Court may order any document to be impounded.

8. Nothwithstanding anything contained in rule 5 or rule 7 of this Order or in rule 17 of Order VII, the Court may, if it sees sufficient cause, direct any document or book produced before it in any suit to be impounded and kept in the custody of an officer of the Court, for such period and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks fit. [S. 143.]

Return of admitted documents.

9. (1) Any person, whether a party to the suit or not desirous of receiving back any document produced by him in the suit and placed on the record shall, unless the document is impounded under rule 8, be entitled to receive back the same.—

(a) where the suit is one in which an appeal is not allowed, when the suit has been disposed of, and

(b) where the suit is one in which an appeal is allowed, when the Court is satisfied that the time for preferring an appeal has elapsed and that no appeal has been preferred or, if an appeal has been preferred, when the appeal has been disposed of:

Provided that a document may be returned at any time earlier than that prescribed by this rule if the person applying therefor delivers to the proper officer a certified copy to be substituted for the orginal and undertakes to produce the original if required to do so:

Provided also that no document shall be returned which, by force of the decree, has become wholly void or useless.

(2) On the return of a document admitted in evidence a receipt shall be given by the person receiving it. [S. 144.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—The words "receipt book kept for that purpose" have been omitted. The words "the Court is satisfied that" and "and that no appeal has been preferred" have been added to clause (b). The words "earlier than that prescribed by this rule" have been substituted for "before either of such events," and the words, "undertakes to produce the original if required to do so" have been added in the first proviso. The word "wholly" has been added before the word "void" in the second proviso.

The copy substituted for the original under this rule must be a certified copy; Kustur v Fakina, 26 B 522 (525)

Return of Documents.—Proceedings for return of documents are purely ministerial. No question can arise therein which would necessiate the taking of evidence on oath—Girijananda v Emperor, 26 C. W. N. 660.

Court may send for papers from its own records or from other Courts.

10. (1) The Court may, of its own motion, and may in its discretion upon the application of any of the parties to a suit, send for, either from its own records or from any other Court the record of any other suit or proceeding, and inspect the same.

(2) Every application made under this rule shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be supported by an affidavit showing how the record is material to the suit in which the application is made, and that the applicant cannot without unreasonable delay or expense obtain a duly authenticated copy of the record or of such portion thereof as the applicant requires, or that the production of the original is necessary for the purposes of justice.

(3) Nothing contained in this rule shall be deemed to enable the Court to use in evidence any document which, under the law of evidence, would be inadmissible in the suit. [S. 137.]

COMMENTARY.

Object.—The provisions contained in s. 165 of the Evidence Act, and Or. XIII, r. 10 are intended to arm the Court with a power of initiative in getting at the truth. The act of sending for documents under s. 165 or for a record under Or. XIII, r. 10, does not ipso facto make such document or record evidence in the case. Where a record has been inspected under this rule and the Judge finds therein relevant evidence or a guide to relevant evidence to be found somewhere else, proceedings must be adopted, if such evidence may be properly admitted at that stage, to have it brought into the trial according to the provisions of law. The discovery of a record containing admissions in favour of one party is a ground for review and not for additional evidence in appeal; Punja v. Bhadu, 9 N. L. R 11· 18 I. C. 857.

"May."—A Judge is not bound on an application to send for the record; Heeramun v. Tahoour, 7 W. R. 109

It is in the discretion of the Court to send for the record or not; the application must show that the papers are material, and where a proper case is made out the Court should exercise its power; Raghunath v. Oomed Ali W. R. F. B. 177.

A Court is not bound to send for the whole record, but only for such papers as might be specially mentioned in the application —Janokee Beebe v. Habeebul, W. R. (1864), 272

The party should first apply for return of the original from the other Court putting in a copy, and then, if refused, apply under this rule; Coraah v Gooroo Churn, 18 W. R 13.

In all cases in which the parties apply for a summons to produce documents, or apply to have a document sent for under this section, the Court ought not to refuse such application, merely because the documents cannot be produced before the termination of the trial —Krishna v. Pratab, 7 C. 560.

Omission by a Court to send for a document is not sufficient to set aside its decision unless such omission has prejudiced the party who wanted to prove the document; Gopal v. Laloo, 10 C. L. J. 27.

Revision.—Where a plaintiff failed to secure the production of an important document from the records of another Court though he took all reasonable steps for that purpose and the suit was disposed of by both the lower Courts without reference to that document, the High Court on revision set aside the judgment of both the Courts —Gobinda v. Lakhun, 11 C. W. N. 112 In Ram Runjan v. Gopee Ballub, 18 W. R 127 and in Mahammad Abdul Aziz v. Mahommad Abdul Jalil, 43 I. C. 57, the case was remanded Provisions as to documents applied to material objects.

11. The provisions herein contained as to documents shall, so far as may, be apply to all other material objects producible as evidence [S. 145.]

ORDER XIV.

SETTLEMENT OF ISSUES AND DETERMINATION OF SUIT ON ISSUES OF LAW OR ON ISSUES AGREED UPON.

1. (1) Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one party and denied by the other.

Framing of issues.

(2) Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to show a right to sue, or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence.

(3) Each material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other shall form the subject of a distinct issue.

(4) Issues are of two kinds: (a) issues of fact, (b) issues of law.

(5) At the first hearing of the suit the Court shall, after reading the plaint and the written statements, if any, and after such examination of the parties as may appear necessary, ascertain upon what material propositions of fact or of law the parties are at variance, and shall thereupon proceed to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to depend.

(6) Nothing in this rule requires the Court to frame and record issues where the defendant at the first hearing of the suit makes no defence. [S. 146.]

COMMENTARY.

Objects of Framing Issues.—The object of any system of pleading is that each side may be made fully aware of the questions that are about to be argued, in order that each may bring forward evidence appropriate to the issues.—Syed Muhammad v Fatteh Muhammad, 22 C. 324, P. C.

The whole object of framing issues is to keep the various points arising for decision separate and distinct; to lump them all up together in the judgment defeats the object of the law; Rajani v Ram, 17 C. W. N. 55.

Framing and Settling Issues.—Issues are to be framed in respect of those facts only which have been alleged by one party and either denied or not admitted by the other party; Fateh Muhammad v Imamuddin, 2 Lah. L. J. 188 68 I C. 106.

The duty of raising issues rests on the Court, and it would be unsafe to presume, from the failure of the Court to raise the necessary issues, an intention of the defendant to admit the facts which the plaintiff was bound to prove, Ganoo v Shri Dev Sidheswar, 26 B. 360.

It is the duty of the Court to frame proper issues arising from the pleadings in a case It is the duty of a litigant to produce evidence in respect of issues framed by the Court but he cannot be expected to produce evidence with regard to points not covered by the issues; Kasturi Mal v Lajja Ram 60 I C 751.

This rule contemplates that issues may be settled whether there was any written statement or not, though it is not obligatory on the Court to frame issues if the defendant makes no defence Rustum Gazi v. Tara Prasanna 11 C W N 871

It is essential to the right decision of a suit that appropriate issues should be framed and tried —Ahmedabad Advance, S & W. Co. v. Lakshmishanker, 30 B 173 7 Bom. L R. 246.

When framing an issue on the point of fraud, it is advisable, to set forth in the issue itself, a brief statement of the fraud alleged.—Balaji v Gangadhar, 32 B 255

Inconsistent Issues.—In a suit for cancellation of a sale-deed, it was alleged in the plaint that the deed was a forgery, and that, if it was not a forgery, its execution was obtained by fraud, and that it was, moreover, void for want of consideration Held that it was improper to raise the wholly inconsistent issue as to whether the document was executed without any consideration, or that it was executed under coercion.—Iyyappa v. Ramalakshmamma, 13 M 549 See the cases noted under the heading "Alternative and Inconsistent Pleadings" See also cases noted under Or. VII, r 7, and Or VIII, r 2

Issues in Special Cases.—

(a) Suits between landlord and tenant —Where a person who has been sued for arrears of rent sets up the title of a third party, such third party ought not to be made a party to the suit so as to convert a simple suit for rent into one for determination of title Such a suit raises only two issues, viz , (1) Does the relation of landlord and tenant exist between the plaintiff and defendant? (2) Are the alleged arrears due and unpaid?—Lodai Mollah v Kally Dass, 8 C 238 See also, Dayal Chand v. Nabin Chandra, 8 B L R 180 16 W R 235

In a suit by patnidars for rent, where the defendants plead a lakheraj title, the issue to be tried, is, not whether the lakheraj title is valid or not, but whether plaintiffs have at any time received rent for the lands in dispute —Purbooddeen Mullick v Molaem Bibee, 14 W R 49.

(b) In a suit for possession where defendant turns out to be a mortgagee —In a suit for possession of a piece of land, where defendant pleads limitation, and his witness discloses that his possession is that of a mortgagee. Held that it was the duty of the Court to frame an issue, find expressly on the fact of the mortgage, and provide for the rights of the mortgagee —Muzboot Singh v Chunder Mashee, 16 W R 41.

In a suit for possession after foreclosure of mortgage, the landlord as purchaser of the tenure which had been sold in satisfaction of his own rent decree resisted the plaintiff's claim. Held, that the whole question was which of the two parties claiming was entitled to possession; and the issue to be decided was, whether or not the tenure was sold subject to previous incumbrances.—Chunder Monee v. Mohesh Chunder, 12 W. R. 460.

(c) In suit for possession of land.—The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain lands, alleging that it was lakhiraj land, but failed to prove the title he alleged. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to suceed on the strength of his title by adverse possession, although it was not alleged in the plaint, and no express issue was raised on that point — Sundari Dassee v. Modhoo Chunder, 14 C. 592.

In a suit to recover possession based on a deed of sale. Held that the Court should have raised issues as to ownership and possession, as, even if the sale-deed were not proved, the plaintiff might have been able to substantiate a title independently of it —Gobind v. Vithal, 20 B. 753.

(d) In suits to establish easement.—In a suit to establish an easement where limitation is pleaded, the proper issues to frame under section 26, Act XV of 1877, are pointed out; Punja Kuvarji v. Bai Kuvar, 6 B. 20 (6 C. 394, P. C. referred to.).

Where the plaintiffs's eaves had projected over the defendant's roof for more than 30 years, and the plaintiff had thus acquired a right to have the water carried from his roof in the defendant's roof, and the defendant removed the plaintiff's eave by raising a wall. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief either by damages or injunction, to determine which, issues were framed according to the state of the authorities and sent for the findings of the lower Court.—Nasarbhai v. Badrudin, 16 B. 533.

Issues between Co-defendants.—Issues should not generally be raised and tried between co-defendants; Degumber v Khetter, 2 W R. 45: Bhugwan v. Dukhina, 8 W R. 356, Chajju v Umrao, 22 A. 386. But this is to be done where the raising and determination of such issue is necessary to giving the appropriate relief to the plaintiff; Madhavi v. Kalu, 15 M. 264. Where the plaintiff's suit is dismissed, no issue between the co-defendants can be decided; Bevan v. Crawford, 6 C. D 29. See also, notes to s. 11 under the heading, "Co-defendants and Pro-forma Defendants."

Omission to Raise or Decide Issues.—The duty of raising issues rests, under the Code, with the Court, and it would be unsafe to presume from the failure of the Court to raise the necessary issues, an intention of the defendant to admit the facts which the plaintiff was bound to prove.—Ganoo v. Shri Dev, 4 Bom. L. R 58 See, however, Malbhubai v. Mulchand, 3 Bom. L. R. 535, where it has been held that to have proper issues is as much the duty of the parties as of the court.

Where substantial justice had been done in a case, the mere omission to settle issues by the Court of first instance, which was not made a ground of appeal to the first Court of appeal, but was noticed and commented on by that Court, was held not to constitute a fatal mistrial of the cause, so as to render a new trial necessary —Mitna v Syed Fazl, 13 M. I. A. 573. See also, Mahomed Basiroolah v Ahmed Ali 22 W R 418; Kachekalyana v. Kachivijaya, 2 B L R 72, P C 11 W R 33; Chundra

Kumar v Chaudhri Narpat, 29 A 184, P C 11 C. W. N. 321: 5 C. L J 115 17 M L J 103 See, however, Rewun Pershad v. Jankee Pershad, 11 M I A 25 in which the Judicial Committee remanded the case for omission to frame proper issues

Where it appeared that an issue was raised as to ownership and that both parties gave evidence on such issue, and the lower Appellate Court, omitted to find such issue Held that it ought to have found on the issue as to ownership —Ramkor Gopalji v Gangaram, 16 B. 545.

Where a point, on which there is no distinct issue is present to the minds of the parties, the decision on such point cannot be impeached on the ground that there was no issue raised —Muthuraman Chetty v. Krishna Pillai, 29 M 72 15 M L J 478

Where no question of limitation necessarily arises on the pleadings, it is not obligatory on the Judge to direct an issue on that point.—Venkata Narasimha v Bhashya Karlu, 25 M 367 6 C W N 641, P. C. See also, Fischer v Kamala, 8 W R 33, P C

Where the pleading of either party is too vague, the Court may call for a further or fuller written statement, or may frame and record issues until the case raised by the pleadings is ascertained with sufficient clearness —Ali Kadar v Gobind Dass, 17 C 840, (848)

An appellant before the Judicial Committee may be allowed to succeed upon a new case if the issues are sufficiently made to cover that case, if foundation has been laid for it in the Courts below, and if the respondent is not unfairly taken by surprise —Raja Indra v Rani Raghubans, 9 C. W. N. 1000 P C 2 C L J 191 27 A 634 15 M L J 352.

An order by a Judge of a Hight Court at a settlement of issues fixing a distant date for the hearing of the suit is not an order under s. 156, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or XVII, r 1) and is appealable —R v R, 14 M. 88.

Wrong Issue.—When the Court of first instance frames and tries wrong issues, the appellate Court should frame the proper issues and remand the case for retrial, Beer Chunder v Tarinee, 11 W. R. 20.

Variance Between Pleading and Proof.—A plaintiff is only entitled to succeed upon the cause of action alleged in his plaint, Sheo Prasad v. Lalit Kuar, 18 A 403 "It will introduce the greatest amount of uncertainty into judicial proceedings if the final determination of causes is to be founded upon inferences at variance with the case that the plaintiff has pleaded, and, by joining issues in the cause, has undertaken to prove"; Eshan Chunder v Shama Churn, 11 M I A 7, 23 Joytara v. Mahomed, 8 C. 975.

Issues of law and of fact.

2. Where issues both of law and fact arise in the same suit, and the Court is of opinion that the case or any part thereof may be disposed of on the issues of law only, it shall try those issues first, and for that purpose may, if it thinks fit, postpone the settlement of the issues of fact until after the issues of law have been determined. [S. 146, para 6.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "or any part thereof" are new. This rule is analogous to English Or. XXV, r. 3.

"May be disposed of on the issues of law only."—The terms of this rule are perfectly clear. They prescribe that when issues of law going to the root of a case arise, the Court is bound to try those issues first and may, in its discretion, postpone the settlement of the issue of fact until after the issues of law have been determined.—Rangamani Dasi v. Jogendra Nath, 9 C. L J. 128, (131).

The power to order trial on preliminary issues is contained in Or. XIV, r 2 and Or. XV, r. 3 (1), C. P. Code. Or. XIV, r. 2 clearly applies when in a settlement of issues the Court thinks there are issues of law upon which the case or some part thereof may be disposed of In such a case these issues are to be tried first and settlement of issues of fact may be postponed. Or. XV, r. 3 (1) applies after issues have been framed, and allows the Court to determine issues of law if satisfied that no further argument or evidence than the parties can at once adduce is required upon such of the issues as may be sufficient for the decision of the suit. There is no reason to confine the power of the Court to try certain issues as issues of law on the date of first hearing.—Ram Krishna Pillai v. Krishnaswami Pillai, (1922) M. W. N. 521: 15 L. W. 667: 68 I. C. 167 (20 C. L. J. 426: 19 C. W. N. 1193 relied on).

This rule has reference only to the stage of settlement of issues and has no application to the case where the plaintiff applied for trial of certain issues without evidence, long after that stage. An issue as to the validity of a custom should not be tried till the custom itself has been established with precision.—Rai Yatindra v. Haricharan, 20 C. L. J. 426. Relied on in Raja Satya Niranjan v. Dwarka Nath, 2 Pat L. T. 154: 60 I. C. 528.

The trial of a case piecemeal may lead to protracted litigation not conducive to the administration of justice.—Mohipal v. Lalji, 17 C. W. N. 166, p. 168.

This rule is not confined only to cases in which the issues of fact had not been settled It also applies to cases where the Court has not postponed the settlement of the issues of fact.—Kaurmoni v. Wasig Ali, 19 C. W. N. 1193.

Materials from which issues may be framed.

3. The Court may frame issues from all or any of the following materials :—

(a) allegations made on oath by the parties, or by any persons present on their behalf, or made by the pleaders of such parties;

(b) allegations made in the pleadings or in answers to interrogatories delivered in the suit:

(c) the contents of documents produced by either party.

COMMENTARY.

Materials from which Issues may be Framed.—Order XIV, r. 3, mentions the various materials in addition to the plaint on which the issues may be framed The obvious intention is to provide against failure of justice upon technical rules of pleading, and with that intention the Legislature makes it incumbent on the Court to frame issues on which the right decision of the case depends, and adds to the plaint other materials on which those issues may be framed —Giyana v. Kandasami, 10 M. 375, p. 502.

A Court, in framing issues, is not bound down to the language of the pleadings, but may frame them not only from the pleadings but also from the statement of the parties made before the Court.—Mohamed Mahmood v. Sofar Ali, 11 C 407 See also, Kousullya Dassee v. Ram Juggurnath, 8 W. R. 162, Man Gobind v Umbika Monee, 16 W. R. 218; and Shahebzadi Begum v. Himmat Bahadur, 4 B. L R. 103; 12 W. R. 512.

This rule authorizes a Court to frame issues on allegations collected from the oral examination of parties or their pleaders, notwithstanding discrepancy between these allegations and the written pleadings.—Kobeeroodden Ahmed v. Nyam Bibee, 8 W R 354

The Courts should confine themselves to the dispute between the parties and not go out of their way to raise fanciful points which are not raised by the parties themselves —Lala Lachman Prasad v. Majju, A. I. R. 1923 A. 167.

The sole guides to a Court in framing issues for trial in a case are not the pleadings of the parties The Court has got to settle the issues on the pleadings and after hearing the pleaders; Srimati Basini Dasi v. Krishna-Lal, 51 I C 1007

The Court may frame issues from objections taken orally, though not taken in the written statement —Secretary of State v. Dip Chand, 24 C. 806.

To ascertain the truth, a Court is competent to raise issues not raised by the pleadings of the parties —Nistarini Dasi v. Makham Lal Dutt, 9 B. L R 17 W R 432 See also Nundo Lall v Prosonno Moye, 19 W. R. 333

A defendant is not precluded from setting up a defence which does not appear in the written statement where the plaint does not set forth the true facts, the Court will allow an issue to be raised on it; Soonder v. Namdar, 21 W R 407; Doorg Narain v. Brojo Kishore, 23 W. R. 172.

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order refusing to frame an issue asked for by a party to a suit, Tuljaram v. Alagappa, 35 M. 1: 8 I. C. 340; Ebrahim v Fukhrunnissa, 4 C 531.

Court may examine witnesses or documents before framing issues.

4. Where the Court is of opinion that the issues cannot be correctly framed without the examination of some person not before the Court or without the inspection of some document not produced in the suit, it may adjourn the framing of the issues to a future day, and may (subject to any law for the time being in force) compel the attendance of any person or the production of any document by the person in whose possession or power it is, by summons or other process. [S. 148.]

Power to amend, and strike out issues.

5. (1) The Court may at any time before passing a decree amend the issues or frame additional issues on such terms as it thinks fit, and all such amendments or additional issues as may be necessary for determining the matters in controversy between the parties shall be so made or framed.

(2) The Court may also, at any time before passing a decree strike out any issues that appear to it to be wrongly framed or introduced. [S. 149.]

COMMENTARY.

Scope.—The first part of this rule leaves it in the discretion of the Court to frame such additional issues as it thinks fit, whilst the latter part makes it imperative on the judge to frame such additional issues as may be necessary to determine the controversy between the parties; Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir, 35 M. 607 P. C: 39 I. A. 218; 16 I. C. 250.

Power of Original Court to Amend Issues or Frame Additional Issues.—Although a Court is competent to raise issues not raised by the pleadings, yet it is highly inconvenient, and may lead to the most direct injustice, to enter into enquiry if the issue has not been presented by the pleadings.—Fischer v. Kamala Naikar, 3 W. R. 33, P. C.

The Courts should not, as a general rule, frame additional issues from materials other than those specified in rule 3; Dodbasappa v. Pradhanappa, 27 Bom. L. R. 318. But where no injustice is likely to be caused to either party, the Court may under special circumstances allow issues to be raised upon matters which do not come within the proper scope of the pleadings; Neora v. Radha, 5 C. 64.

After the close of the plaintiff's case, the defendant applied for leave to raise a new issue, which if raised, would re-open the whole case; and it was not suggested that the facts relied on had newly come to the knowledge of the defendant. Held that the application could not be entertained.—Haji Sahoo v. Aycsahabai, 7 C. W. N. 665, P. C. · 27 B. 485, P. C.

A Judge is not bound to make any amendment in the issues of a case except for the purpose of more effectively putting in issue and trying the real question in controversy as disclosed by the pleadings on either side But where no injustice would be done to either party, the Courts under special circumstances may allow issues to be raised upon matter which does not strictly come within the proper scope of the pleadings —Neora v. Radha, 5 C. 64: 4 C. L. R. 353. See also Ramdyal v. Ajodhya Ram, 2 C. 1: 25 W. R. 435; and Bizji Bebee v. Monohur, 2 Ind Jur. N. S 118.

The Courts are not to raise an important and serious issue in a case for the parties when they have not raised it themselves by their own pleadings in the cause.—Waliullah Khan v. Muhammed Isarullah, 10 A. 627.

A Court is not authorized by this rule to frame new issues which have the effect of altering the nature of the suit. A Court's power of raising additional issues is co-extensive with its power of amending plaints and is subject to the same restrictions, Narayan v. Hari, 13 B. 664; followed in Jhari v. Pirthi, 2 Pat. L. J. 69.

Although a Court has power under this rule to add any issue before judgment is pronounced, yet, in exercising that power, it ought not to allow a new plea to be put forward. Sohan Bibi v. Hiran Bibi, 10 I. C. 230.

When a Judge at the settlement of the issues has refused to raise a certain issue, the Judge at the trial ought not to re-open that question and modify the issues.—Bolye Chand v. Maulard, 4 C. 572.

It is competent to a Court, at any time before passing a decree, to frame an additional issue embracing a matter not included in the plaint or written statement, but which may appear upon the allegations made on oath by the parties or by any persons present on their behalf or made by their pleaders; Mohde v. Dongre, 5 B. 609.

The Original Court has power to frame an additional issue to decide whether a lawful compromise has been effected between the parties subsequent to the institution of the suit; Appasami v. Varadachari, 19 M. 419.

In a declaratory suit it appeared on the evidence for the defendant that he was in possession of a part of the property, but no issue had been framed as to the maintainability of the suit under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. Held that the first Court should take evidence and try an issue on this point.—Abdul Kader v. Mahomed, 15 M. 16.

In a suit to enforce a mortgage after arguments had been heard and judgment reserved, it appeared from the evidence of the witnesses to the mortgage-deed that they were not present at the execution but had put their names on the document at the acknowledgment of the mortgagors. Held, that the Court had power under this rule to frame and try the additional issue as to whether the deed was valid and properly attested although no such defence had been set up in the written statement; Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir, 35 M. 607 P. C.: 16 C. W. N. 1009: 14 Bom. L. R. 1034: 10 A. L. J. 259.

Power of Appellate Court to Amend, Add or Strike Out Issues.—Duty of Appellate Court, when addition or amendment of issues is necessary, pointed out.—Kelu Mulacheri v. Chendu, 10 M. 157.

An Appellate Court cannot raise an issue which was not raised in the Court below, the functions of the Appellate Court being not to interfere upon mere points of form but to rectify a judgment, where there has been error on the merits.—Brojo v. Futick, 17 W. R. 407; Ram Narain v. Nilmonee, 23 W. R. 169; Makintosh v. Lal Chand, 23 W. R. 332.

An Appellate Court cannot declare a right in favour of the parties, where no issue has been fixed on the point, and the right has not been set up in the lower Court.—Official Trustee v. Krishna, 12 C. 239, P. C.

Where a quite new and different issue is raised in the Appellate Court, it ought to be done in such a way as to give the parties the fullest opportunity of producing evidence upon it.—Latoo v. Bhuban, 17 W. R. 361; Eshan v. Dhonay, 11 W. R. 61.

Where no objection was taken in the grounds of appeal to the issues as framed in the first Court, nor was there any such contention in those grounds as that the High Court ought to direct the Subordinate Court to raise the proper issues, the Court refused to remand the case with a view to other issues being raised and tried Jowadunissa v Jhaman Lal, 23 W. R. 158

Where the lower Appellate Court framed a wrong issue, but it appeared from its judgment that there was a finding on the point which would have been raised, if the correct issue had been framed, the High Court refused to remand the case for a new finding on that issue —Ram v Ganesh, 21 B. 325.

A party cannot be permitted to change in special appeal the allegations on which he went to trial in the Courts below, and to raise altogether a new issue.—Shivdas v Bhagwan, 2 B. L. R. Ap 15 · 11 W. R. 10; Khodeeram v. Kishen, 25 W R. 145. See also Indur v. Radhakishore, 19 C. 507, P. C.

"At any time before passing a decree."—An additional issue may be raised even after the close of the arguments on the case; Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir, 35 M. 607; 39 I A. 218: 16 I. C. 250.

Questions of fact or law may by agreement be stated in form of issues.

6. Where the parties to a suit are agreed as to the question of fact or of law to be decided between them, they may state the same in the form of an issue, and enter into an agreement in writing that, upon the finding of the Court in the affirmative or the negative of such issue:—

(a) a sum of money specified in the agreement or to be ascertained by the Court, or in such manner as the Court may direct, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them, or that one of them be declared entitled to some right or subject to some liability specified in the agreement;

(b) some property specified in the agreement and in dispute in the suit shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them, or as that other may direct; or

(c) one or more of the parties shall do or abstain from doing some particular act specified in the agreement and relating to the matter in dispute. (S. 150)

Court, if satisfied that agreement was executed in good faith, may pronounce judgment.

7. Where the Court is satisfied, after making such inquiry as it deems proper:—

(a) that the agreement was duly executed by the parties,

(b) that they have a substantial interest in the decision of such question as aforesaid, and

(c) that the same is fit to be tried and decided, it shall proceed to record and try the issue and state its finding or decision thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by the Court; and shall, upon the finding or decision on such issue, pronounce judgment according to the terms of the agreement; and upon the judgment so pronounced, a decree shall follow. [S. 151.]

COMMENTARY.

These two rules should be compared with Or. XXIII, r. 3. They provide for the adjustment of a suit, contingently on the opinion of the Court on certain issues of fact or law, submitted to it, whereas, Or. XXIII, r. 3 deals with the adjustment of a suit absolutely Under these rules the adjustment becomes absolute when the Court gives its opinion on the issues submitted to it and it is the duty of the Court to pronounce judgment accordingly Even under the old Code where the word "may" was used it was held that the Court was bound to give judgment according to the agreement, Goculdas v Scott, 16 B 202 To give effect to this decision the word "shall" has now been substituted.

Where the parties agree to refer certain issues of fact to a Commissioner and to abide by his decision, they impliedly agree not to appeal against the decree passed in accordance with the Commissioner's report, and hence they are estopped from impugning that decree; and the order of remand passed on appeal therefrom, and the subsequent proceedings in pursuance thereof are all null and void The principles laid down in Or. XIV, rr. 6, 7, are applicable in this case.—Bahir Das v. Nobin Chandra, 6 C. W. N. 121 29 C 306 (8 C. 455 referred to).

ORDER XV.

DISPOSAL OF THE SUIT AT THE FIRST HEARING.

1. Where, at the first hearing of a suit it appears that the parties are not at issue on any question of law or fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment. [S. 152.]

Parties not at issue.

COMMENTARY.

The Judge has discretion, when the parties have come to a mutual agreement, or when the defendant has confessed judgment, to decide the suit at once in accordance with such agreement or confession. He is not bound to do so till the date fixed for hearing; and he cannot exercise that discretion where there is any doubt as to the good faith or identity of the parties.—Bank of Bengal v. Currie, 3 B. L. R. A. C 396: 12 W. R. 432.

2. Where there are more defendants than one, and any one of the defendants is not at issue with the plaintiff on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment for or against such defendant and the suit shall proceed only against the other defendants. [S. 153.]

One of several defendants not at issue.

COMMENTARY.

In an action against several joint-debtors, judgment recovered against one of them, who admits the claim, does not bar the further prosecution of the suit against the others.—Dick v. Dhunji, 25 B 378.

3. (1) Where the parties are at issue on some question of law or of fact, and issues have been framed by the Court as hereinbefore provided, if the Court is satisfied that no further argument or evidence than the parties can at once adduce is required upon such of the issues as may be sufficient for the decision of the suit, and that no injustice will result from proceeding with the suit forthwith, the Court may proceed to determine such issues, and, if the finding thereon is sufficient for the decision, may pronounce judgment accordingly, whether the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit :—

Parties at issue.

Provided that, where the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, the parties or their pleaders are present and none of them objects.

(2) Where the finding is not sufficient for the decision, the Court shall postpone the further hearing of the suit, and shall fix a day for the production of such further evidence, or for such, further argument as the case requires. [S 154.]

COMMENTARY.

" May pronounce judgment."—It is competent to a Judge to determine a case at settlement of issues, if he is satisfied that the evidence then before him is decisive of the matter in dispute, unless objected to by any of the parties —Soorendro Pershad v Jugobundhoo, 22 W. R. 426.

A Judge cannot dispose of a suit at the first hearing if the party appears and objects to the adoption of that procedure —Krishnabhupati v. Rama Murti, 16 M 198

Where summons was issued for settlement of issues only and the vakil objected to the disposal of the suit at the first hearing. Held that the Court could not dispose of the suit on that day —Varadachariar v. Parthasarathy, (1914) M W N 501 27 M L 58

Order XV, r 3 (1) provides for the disposal of the suit at the first hearing and has no application where the plaintiff made his application for trial of some issues, without evidence, long after the date fixed for the first hearing —Rai Yatindra v Haricharan, 20 C L. J 426.

Failure to produce evidence.

4. Where the summons has been issued for the final disposal of the suit, and either party fails without sufficient cause to produce the evidence on which he relies, the Court may at once pronounce judgment, or may, if it thinks fit, after framing and recording issues, adjourn the suit for the production of such evidence as may be necessary for its decision upon such issues. [S. 155.]

COMMENTARY.

Although a case may have been set down for final disposal, if it be a case in which further evidence is required, the Judge is bound to adjourn the case, unless he is satisfied that the plaintiff has, without sufficient cause, failed to produce his evidence —Ameer Ali v Ram Bahadoor, 7 W. R. 84

The great object of the Civil Procedure Code in requiring a day to be fixed for the hearing of a case, and all the evidence to be adduced on that day is that parties may thus be confronted with each other, and the whole evidence on either side be at one and the same time before the Court Where a party fails to produce his documents at the proper time, a Court is justified in refusing to send for them subsequently, if not satisfied that they are necessary for the ends of justice.—Sobhee Jha v. Soshee Nath Jha, 15 W R. 150

In a mortgage suit, the first summons issued was for final disposal On the day of hearing the Court raised issues and dismissed the suit as not proved as the plaintiff was not ready with witnesses. Held that there was a miscarriage of justice, for the Code required that in cases of such a nature the parties should have an opportunity to produce evidence and that summons should have been issued only for settlement of issues and not for final disposal which should be done only in simple case —Tuljaram v. Sitaram, 38 B. 377: 16 Bom. L. R. 39.

Remedy.—Where a suit is dismissed under this rule, the proper course is to appeal against the dismissal and not to apply for restoration under Or. IX, r. 9. Hinga v. Munna, 31 C. 150: 8 C. W. N. 97.

ORDER XVI.

SUMMONING AND ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES.

Summons to attend to give evidence or produce documents

1. At any time after the suit is instituted, the parties may obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence, or to produce documents.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 159, C P Code, 1882, with some additions and alterations The words "at any time after the suit is instituted" have been substituted for the sentence "after the summons has been delivered or sent for service on the defendant, whether it be for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit," which occurred in the old Code

"At any time."—These words are significant Application for summons may now be made any time after suit, and they should as a general rule be allowed If the application is made at a late stage and without any excuse for it, summons should be issued at the applicant's risk, and no adjournment should be allowed on failure of the witnesses to attend, unless very good cause exists See cases noted below.

Party's Right to Summon—Duty and Discretion of Court.—A litigant's privilege of summoning witnesses, is subject to the control of the Court though such control will be exercised sparingly and only in exceptional cases to prevent abuse of its process —Veerabadran Chetty v Nataraja Desikar, 28 M 28.

Every Court is bound to render all reasonable assistance to enforce the attendance of his witnesses —Nilmonee Banerjee v. Shurbo Mangola, 6 W. R 14 A party is entitled at any stage before hearing to apply for a summons to cite witnesses without reference to the number of such applications previously made, and it is the duty of the Court to comply with such application if any time be left before the hearing of the cause.—Anurup Chandra v Heera Monee, 3 Bom L. R Ap. 38: 11 W. R. 418, Haridas v Moazam Hossein, 8 Bom L R Ap 16: 15 W. R. 447. Followed in Tara Chand v Chandra, 11 C L. J 99 5 I. C. 181.

Where on the day before the case had been fixed for final hearing, a party applied to the Court to send a Court-peon with an order to the Collector either to send his servant with the Chaukidari Register to be admitted in evidence, or to deliver it over to the Court-peon, held that there was no reason why even at a late stage the application should not have been complied with, Raghu Nandan v Mahabir, 7 Pat. L. T. 775. 96 I. C 418: A. I R 1926 Pat. 545.

Under Or. XVI, r. 1, a party has an absolute right to summon witnesses, and, so long as he pays the necessary expenses, to insist that their attendance shall be enforced. The only case in which the Court has power to refuse to issue summons is where the application is not made bona fide or where in the exercise of its inherent powers to prevent the abuse of its own process it is necessary to refuse to issue summons. The fact that the party originally undertook to bring the witnesses or applied late for issues of summons does not affect the duty of the Court.—Pritam Singh v. Sobha Singh, 75 I. C. 866.

A party to a suit is entitled as of right to obtain summonses for his witnesses at any time before the final hearing, though the Court may properly refuse to adjourn the hearing.—Bhagwat Das v. Debi Din, 16 A. 218; Saibai v. Balkrishna, 27 Bom. L. R. 471: 87 I. C. 702: A. I. R. 1925 B. 368; Baikali v. Alarakh, 15 B. 86, Kaji Ahmed v. Kaji Mahamad, 9 B. 308; Krishna v. Protab, 7 C. 560; Moni Lal v. Khiroda, 20 C. 740; R. 569; Firm of Bal Mukund Arjundas v. Firm of Dayaram, 63 I. C. 736.

So long as the hearing of a case stands adjourned, and so long as the party who wishes to summon witnesses has not closed his case, the Court is bound to summon them, unless the application is made so late that the witnesses cannot be expected to attend in time before that party's case closes.—Indro Chunder v. Dunlop, 9 W. R. 530. See also, Brojonath v. Protap Chunder, 22 W. R. 296, Upendra v. Chairman of Calcutta Corporation, 16 C. W. N. 116, Mahomed Hayat v. Gulam Mahommad, 60 I. C. 656; Bhag Chand v. Musaji, 68 I. C. 272.

Where certain witnesses are not present on the day of hearing owing to non-service of summons upon them without fault of a party, the Court ought to issue fresh summons and is not justified in depriving the party, who wishes to produce them, of his right to have the evidence of those witnesses taken, Gopi Chand v. Kripa Ram, A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 26

Where a party delayed in giving the names of his witnesses, but would yet have been within reasonable time to secure their attendance on the day of hearing, if summonses had been sent through different peons by the railway. Held that the Court was bound to direct the issue of the summonses also, all additional expenses being paid by such party.—Pearee Mohun v. Madhub Chunder, 9 W. R. 489. Followed in 11 C. L. J. 29

Where a party hims[illegible] esses fails to bring them, the Court is not [illegible] mmonses to his witnesses, although it may [illegible] v. Keshavji, 6 B. 742

Where in the first Court the defendant applied for a witness to be examined, but no order was made on the subject. Held that the lower Appellate Court was justified in remanding the case to entertain the application.—Bonomalee Churn v. Hafizuddeen, 13 Bom. L. R. 274-note. 12 W. R. 317.

Responsibility for Non-service of Process.—After the payment of the process fees, the officer of the Court, and not the applicant, is responsible for service and return.—Mussitee Kanum v. Hookoom Bibi, 15 W. R. 88.

Issue of Fresh Summons—Parties to Move in the Matter.—An application for a fresh summons to appear, etc., should be issued on petition showing that a fruitless endeavour had been made by plaintiff to serve the first summons, and that it was not by any default of his that he had failed.—Urquhart v. Gilbert, 1 Ind Jur N S. 224.

A Judge has discretion as to granting a second summons, and is bound to enquire into the circumstances under which it is applied for; and when there has been great and unexplained laches, he should refuse it.—Gour Churn v. Peary Lal, 15 Bom L R. Ap 12

Where witnesses do not appear after service of summons, it is the duty of the party requiring their evidence, and not of the Court, to move for further measures to be taken to secure their attendance.—Nund Mohun v Goluck Nath, 11 W. R 99 See also Bachman v. Lal Beharee, 13 W. R. 324.

The Court has also discretion to take stronger measures than issue of summons again See rules 10-12, 17, 18 of this Order.

Application to be Made Within Reasonable Time.—An application for summons must as a rule be granted, and the question whether it is made within reasonable time is only to be decided when, afterwards owing to the failure of the witness to attend, an adjournment is prayed for; Amir Ali v. Kulsum 8 I C 418 See also Moti v Kanhya, 4 I. C. 797.

Refusal of Summons.—When Court is convinced that a vexatious desire to obstruct justice is the guiding motive, Moti v Kanhya, 4 I. C. 797. See also Ram Phul v Wahed, 14 W R 66, Ramdhan v. Rajballav, 6 Bom. L. R Ap 10 Where witnesses are described vaguely; Amir v. Kulsum, 8 I C 418 When application is not made bona fide; Veerabadran v. Nataraja, 28 M 28

Remedy When Summons Refused.—No appeal lies simply for refusal to issue summons The ground can be urged when appealing from the decree The Appellate Court may order a re-hearing and direct the lower Court to issue summons if it is of opinion that the refusal has caused substantial injustice affecting the merits of the case, otherwise there will be no interference; Upendra v Chairman of Calcutta Corporation, 16 C. W. N. 116; Bhagwat v Debi, 16 A 218, Gopi Chand v Kripa Ram, A. I. R. 1926 Lah 26.

An exercise of the discretion of the Court in refusing to grant a fresh summons on account of delay in applying for it cannot be interfered with, in special appeal —Brojo Lall v Aughore Lall, 25 W. R 71.

If the Court wrongly refuses summons, the High Court may interfere in revision; Kazi Ahmad v. Kazi Ahmad, 9 B 308

Persons Competent to be Witnesses.—A wife can be examined as to non-access of her husband during the married life, without independent evidence being first offered to prove the illegitimacy of her children.—Bazario v. Inglis, 18 B 468.

Where a Judge is the sole judge of law and fact in a case tried before himself, he cannot give evidence before himself, or import matters into his judgment not stated on oath before the Court in the presence of the accused —Queen-Empress v. Manikam, 19 M. 263.

A Munsif ought not to be called on to depose as to what took place before him in the course of a trial which he was conducting as munsif, and he is entitled to exemption.—Anonymous, 6 Mad. H. C. Ap. 42.

A boy, who is not prevented from understanding the questions put to him, or from giving rational answers to those questions by reason of tender years, is a competent witness.—Queen-Empress v. Ramsewak, 23 A. 90.

Mode of examining a child witness—Competency to be tested before examination.—Sheik Fakir v. The Emperor, 11 C. W. N. 51. See Nafar v. King-Emp., 18 C. W. N. 147. As to the value of the statement of a boy, see Chandrasang v. Mohansang, 4 C. L. J. 181, P. C., 30 B. 523.

(1) The party applying for a summons shall, before the summons is granted and within a period to be fixed, pay into Court such a sum of money as appears to the Court to be sufficient to defray the travelling and other expenses of the person summoned in passing to and from the Court in which he is required to attend and for one day's attendance.

(2) In fixing such an amount the Court may, in the case of any person summoned to give evidence as an expert, allow reasonable remuneration for the time occupied both in giving evidence and in performing any work of an expert character necessary for the case." (P 1177)

This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction. (See Or. XLIX, r. 3, cl. 3.)

A suit is maintainable to recover the expenses paid to a witness, who failed to appear in pursuance of a summons served in time.—Nataraja Desikar v. Veerabadran Chetty, 17 M L J 143

Non-payment of witnesses' expense at the time of issuing summons—The Court has power to order payment before passing the decree and may levy the amount summarily —Chenchuramayya v. Narsimhayya, 17 M. L J. 435. See rule 4.

Expenses of Witnesses in Government, Municipal or Private Service. —Government servants and persons in Municipal or Private Service cited as witnesses in Civil suits are not entitled as part of their expenses to the payment of the salary which they would earn in their ordinary employment for the time which they spend in attending Court. As to the servants of Municipal bodies and private employees, Held that Court below was right in supposing that the question depends on the provisions of Rules 2, 3 and 4 of Or XVI, and on the rules made by the High Court under cl. (3) of r. 2, In the matter of Reference under r 1, Or. XLVI, C P. Code, 38 C. L J. 149

Non-service of Summons owing to Process-server's Default.—Where plaintiff pays process fee and witnesses' expenses in time, but the summons is not served owing to default on the part of the process-server, it is illegal to dismiss the suit; Mati Ram v. Kishori Lal, 6 Lah. L. J. 418: 85 I. C. 321: A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 296

Tender of expenses to witness.

3. The sum so paid into Court shall be tendered to the person summoned, at the time of serving the summons, if it can be served personally.

X. Cancel Clause (1) of Rule 4, Order XVI, and substitute therefor the following:—

" (1) Where it appears to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf that the sum so fixed is not sufficient to cover such expenses or reasonable remuneration, the Court may direct such further sum to be paid to the person summoned as appears to be necessary on that account, and in case of default in payment, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the moveable property of the party obtaining the summons; or the Court may discharge the person summoned, without requiring him to give evidence; or may both order such levy and discharge such person as aforesaid " (P. 1178) and discharge such person as aforesaid.

Expenses of witnesses detained more than one day.

(2) Where it is necessary to detain the person summoned for a longer period than one day, the Court may, from time to time, order the party at whose instance he was summoned to pay into Court such sum as is sufficient to defray the expenses of his detention for such further period, and, in default of such deposit being made, may order such sum to be levied by attachment, and sale of the moveable property of such party; or the Court may discharge the person summoned without requiring him to give evidence; or may both order such levy and discharge such person as aforesaid.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to 162, C. P Code, 1882 The words " reasonable remuneration " have been added after the word ' expenses ' in sub-rule (1) It has been made in consequence of the insertion of sub-rule (2) in rule 2

Where there was no proof that a defaulting witness s expenses were tendered by the party, the Court on appeal declined that witness's evidence to be taken —Ishan Chunder v. Onath Nath, 18 W R 16

When a witness has been summoned to give evidence in a case which is adjourned, it is not necessary to issue a fresh summons to the witness He need only be warned that his attendance will be required on the day to which the hearing may be postponed —Subbarayadu v. Chenchuramayya, 21 M. 200.

An order in a suit that plaintiff should pay a certain sum as expenses for one of his witnesses, cannot be executed by sale of plaintiff's immovable property but the amount must be levied only in the manner prescribed in r. 4; Md Warish Sadagar v. Rahman Ali Miah, 26 C W. N. 877.

" Sale of moveable property."—Where witnesses' expenses are not deposited by any party, only his moveable property may be attached under sub-rules (1) and (2) of this rule; Muhammad Warish v. Rahaman, 26 C. W. N. 877; 70 I. C. 123.

Appeal.—An order of attachment and sale under this rule was formerly appealable (Bijoy v Joykishen, 12 W. R 430), but not now; see Or. XLIII, r. 1.

Time, place and purpose of attendance to be specified in summons.

5. Every summons for the attendance of a person to give evidence or to produce a document shall specify the time and place at which he is required to attend, and also whether his attendance is required for the purpose of giving evidence or to produce a document, or for both purposes; and any particular document, which the person summoned is called on to produce, shall be described in the summons with reasonable accuracy. [S. 163.]

COMMENTARY.

A written summons distinctly describing the nature of the document required must be issued on a party to a suit required to produce a document. A verbal order to his pleader is not sufficient.—Doorga Monee v. Binode Monee, W. R (1864), 164.

Punishment for Non-attendance.—Where summons did not mention the place at which, or the time of the day when, the attendance was required: Held that such person could not lawfully be punished for non-attendance in obedience to such summons.—Empress of India v. Rami Saran, 5 A. 7. See also, Anonymous, 7 M H C Ap. 14 and 43. Before convicting a person under s. 174, I P Code, it must be proved that he had notice to appear at a certain time and place, and that he did not do so.—In the matter of Shib Pershad, 17 W R Cr 38

Where a public servant was absent on the date fixed in a summons: Held that the person summoned could not be convicted though he failed to attend, having the intention to disobey the summons.—Queen-Empress v. Krishtappa, 20 M. 81

A conviction for non-attendance cannot be had, unless the person summoned was legally bound to attend, and refused or intentionally omitted to attend.—In the matter of Sree Nath Ghose, 10 W. R. Cr. 83.

A witness cannot be convicted for non-attendance on a Sunday or other recognised holiday, Q v Hargobind, 8 B L. R. Ap 12.

Summons to produce document.

6. Any person may be summoned to produce a document, without being summoned to give evidence; and any person summoned merely to produce a document shall be deemed to have complied with the summons if he causes such document to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same. [S. 164.]

COMMENTARY.

A person summoned to produce a document cannot be cross-examined unless and until called as a witness; see s. 139 of the Evidence Act.

Omission to produce a document when ordered by a Court is an offence under s. 175, C. P. Code.—Queen v. Seshayya, 13 M. 24.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

XI. Insert the following after Rule 7, Order XVI:—

"Rule 7 (a) (i) Except where it appears to the Court that a summons under this Order should be served by the Court in the same manner as a summons to a defendant, the Court shall make over for service all summonses under this Order to the party applying therefor. The service shall be effected by or on behalf of such party by delivering or tendering to the witness in person a copy thereof signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf and sealed with the seal of the Court

(ii) Rules 16 and 18 of Order V shall apply to summons personally served under this rule, as though the person effecting service were a serving officer

(iii) If such summons, when tendered, is refused or if the person served refuses to sign an acknowledgment of service or if for any reason such summons cannot be served personally, the Court shall, on the application of the party, re-issue such summons to be served by the Court in like manner as a summons to a defendant" (P. 1181.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

XII Cancel Rule 8, Order XVI, and substitute therefor the following —

"8 (1) Every summons under this Order not being a summons made over to a party for service under Rule 7 (a) (i) of this Order, shall be served as nearly as may be in the same manner as a summons to a defendant, and the rules in Order V as to proof of service shall apply thereto.

(2) The party applying for a summons to be served under this rule shall, before the summons is granted and within a period to be fixed, pay into Court the sum fixed by the Court under Rule 2 of this Order." (P. 1181.)

mons. .... compliance with such summons, the Court shall, if the certificate of the serving-officer has not been verified by affidavit, and may, if it has been so verified, examine the serving-officer on oath, or cause him to be so examined by another Court, touching the service or non-service of the summons.

(2) Where the Court sees reason to believe that such evidence or production is material, and that such person has without lawful excuse, failed to attend or to produce the document in compliance with such summons or has intentionally avoided service, it may issue a proclamation requiring him to attend to give evidence or to produce the document at a time and place to be named therein; and a copy of such proclamation shall be affixed on the outer door or other conspicuous part of the house in which he ordinarily resides.

(3) In lieu of or at the time of issuing such proclamation or at any time afterwards, the Court may, in its discretion, issue a warrant, either with or without bail, for the arrest of such person, and may make an order for the attachment of his property to such amount as it thinks fit not exceeding the amount of the costs of attachment and of any fine which may be imposed under rule 12.

Provided that no Court of Small Causes shall make an order for the attachment of immoveable property. [S. 168.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to 168 of the C P Code, 1882. Some additions and alterations have been made but there has been no substantial change in the meaning The power to issue warrant under sub-rule (3) with bail is new The Court may not in all cases put the defaulting person to the humiliation of appearance in person before release

Before action is taken under this rule and proclamation issued, the Court must be satisfied that the evidence or production is material and that the offender is wilfully keeping himself away and has really absconded for avoiding attendance, Bhubun Moyee v Kishore Dasee, 6 W. R. 235; Kalee Das v Eshan, 13 W R 116, Rajoo v Balgobind, 1 W. R. 26; Ajoodhya v Biber Misrun, 15 W R 176 Some time should be given to prove that the evidence is material and that the witness is keeping away, Prem Chand v Becharam, 6 W R 126

Or XVI, r 10, does not make it obligatory on the part of the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses served except where an application has been made by one of the parties to that effect, Manalal v. Sukhlal, 57 I. C. 311.

The Court has a discretion as to the issue of proclamation and subsequent orders for attachment; but it should be exercised in a reasonable manner.—Porun Chunder v Gopee Nath, 8 W. R. 505.

It is the duty of the party requiring the evidence, and not of the Court, to move for further measures to be taken to secure their attendance when witness do not appear after summons.—Nund Mohun v. Goluk Nath, 11 W. R. 99; Bachman v. Lall Beharee, 13 W. R. 321.

If the party does not apply under this rule, and the Court believes that the witness is material, it would exercise a sound discretion by itself putting in force the provisions of this rule; Ramnarayan v Jagdeo, 33 A. 690.

Duty of Civil Courts and Settlement Officers to Follow the Provisions of Law Strictly as regards Summoning Documents Before Them.—Or. XVI, r. 10 of the C. P. Code does not apply where there has been no summons upon any body to produce the documents, and no order under r. 12 can be made until the procedure laid down in r. 10 has been followed where that rule applies. The civil Court, and particularly the peripatetic settlement Courts which cause a large amount of disturbance to local interests, cannot be too careful to follow the provisions of law strictly as regards summoning persons and documents before them; Nabodip Chandra v. Secy. of State, 20 C. W. N. 511.

"The Court may in its discretion issue a warrant."—A Court has no power to order the issue of warrant against a witness and to direct the party at whose instance the witness has been summoned, to pay the expenses for issuing a warrant for the appearance of a witness simply on the report of the process-server that the witness was absent and the summons had been affixed to his door but without complying with the prosions of Or. XVI, r. 10, C. P. Code. Such an order is wholly unjustifiable and is not binding on the party directed to pay the necessary process fees for issue of the warrant; Naghaia v. Udkam, 18 P. W. R. 1919: 39 I. C 592.

Where a person was summoned to produce a document and on his failure to do so, a warrant was issued first, and a proclamation was directed immediately after, and then his house was attached. Held, that after issuing a warrant, the Subordinate Judge had no right to issue a proclamation at a later stage. Where a witness appeared and stated that he had not the document in his possession, it is an illegal exercise of his power for the Judge to order an attachment; Rangaswami Reddi v Konda Reddi, 29 M L T. 95 61 I. C. 967.

Appeal.—An order of attachment under this rule is appealable, see Or. XLIII, r 1 cl (g).

If witness appears, attachment may be withdrawn.

11. Where, at any time after the attachment of his property, such person appears and satisfies the Court :—

(a) that he did not, without lawful excuse, fail to comply with the summons or intentionally avoid service, and,

(b) where he has failed to attend at the time and place named in a proclamation issued under the last preceding rule, that he had no notice of such proclamation in time to attend, the Court shall direct that the property be released from attachment, and shall make such order as to the costs of the attachment as it thinks fit.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to 169 C P Code, 1882, with some minor alterations in the language

Or XVI, r 11 provides for a case where the person appears and satisfies the Court that he has not intentionally failed to carry out the order. R 12 applies to the case of a person who does not appear and also fails to satisfy the Court. Sib Kumari v Secy of State, 31 C. L. J 363: 55 I C 425

12. The Court may, where such person does not appear, or appears but fails so to satisfy the Court, impose upon him such fine not exceeding five hundred rupees as it thinks fit, having regard to his condition in life and all the circumstances of the case, and may order his property, or any part thereof, to be attached and sold or, if already attached under rule 10, to be sold for the purpose of satisfying all costs of such attachment, together with the amount of the said fine, if any

Procedure if witness fails to appear

Provided that, if the person whose attendance is required pays into Court the costs and fine aforesaid, the Court shall order the property to be released from attachment.

[S. 170.]

COMMENTARY.

A suit was held not maintainable against Government for sale of property for an absconding witness —Bukhooree Singh v. Government, 8 W. R. 207.

"Impose upon him such fine."—There can be no order under this rule until the procedure laid down in r. 10 has been followed; Nabadwip v Secy. of State, 20 C W N 511 But see In re Magayya, 48 M. 941, in which it has been held that neither the issue of a proclamation nor an order for attachment under r 10 is a condition precedent to the imposition of a fine under this rule

Where summons was affixed to his door and a witness was fined for non-compliance, the omission to record under Or. V, r. 20, express declaration of service of process did not invalidate the order; In re Srikrishna Das, 19 M. L J 31

An order imposing a fine on a person under Or. XVI, r. 12, for failing to appear in obedience to a summons is without jurisdiction unless it is made after attachment of the property of that person under r. 10; Ram Gopal v. Secy. of State, 55 I. C 425.

Appeal.—By rule 13 which has been newly inserted, the provisions of attachment and sale in execution of a decree have been made applicable to attachments and sales under this Order. So in matters of appeal against orders relating to attachments and sales under this Order, the applicability or otherwise of the provisions of appeal against orders of attachment and sale in execution of decrees should be considered. See Or. XXI, rr. 89, 90, 92 In Badri v Tej Singh, 33 A. 68, it was held that no appeal lies from an order releasing property from attachment under the proviso to this rule. But this was a decision under the old Code.

The refusal of a Court to inflict upon recusant witnesses is no ground for special appeal.—Prankisto v. Kalee Dass, 7 W. R. 460.

Mode of attachment.

13. The provisions with regard to the attachment and sale of property in the execution of a decree shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to any attachment and sale under this Order as if the person whose property is so attached were a judgment-debtor. [New.]

Court may of its own accord summon as witnesses strangers to suit.

14. Subject to the provisions of this Code as to attendance and appearance and to any law for the time being in force, where the Court at any time thinks it necessary to examine any person other than a party to the suit and not called as a witness by a party to the suit, the Court may, of its own motion, cause such person to be summoned as a witness to give evidence, or to produce any document in his possession, on a day to be appointed, and may examine him as a witness or require him to produce such document. [S. 171.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to 171, C. P. Code, 1882, with some alterations. Similar provisions is to be found in Or X, rr. 2, 4

Where a Court desires to have evidence of one whom the defendant does not want to call, the proper procedure is to take action under this rule and not to insist on him to pay the costs necessary to call the witness and on his refusal to do so to decline to grant summons to his witnesses, Billa v. Chhuta, 10 I C 35 159 P L R. 1911.

In boundary disputes when the evidence is unsatisfactory, the Court ought to exercise its powers under this rule.—Po Gyi v Mg Paw, 5 L. B. R. 1

Cross-examination of Witness Called by Court.—A witness called by the Court is liable to be cross-examined by any of the parties to a suit — Tarini Charan v. Saroda Sundari, 3 B L R A C 115 11 W R 468. There is nothing in s 165 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) debarring or disqualifying a party to a proceeding from cross-examining any witness summoned by the Court.—Gopal Lall v. Manick Lall, 24 C. 288. See, however, Queen-Empress v. Stanton, 14 A. 521.

15. Subject as last aforesaid, whoever is summoned to appear and give evidence in a suit shall attend at the time and place named in the summons for that purpose, and whoever is summoned to produce a document shall either attend to produce it, or cause it to be produced, at such time and place. [S. 172.]

Duty of persons summoned to give evidence or produce document.

COMMENTARY.

A witness summoned to produce a document shall, if it is in his possession and power, bring it to Court, notwithstanding any objection which there may be to its production or to its admissibility. The Court is to decide the validity of the objection. See s. 162 of the Evidence Act.

The chief officer of Karachi Municipality was summoned to cause the production of certain entries from a record which were not specified, and for which a search was made by him and the search-fee was claimed. Held, there is no provision under which such fee could be claimed. If the document is not duly specified the witness might apply for specification.—Rewa Chand v. Laloo, 5 S. L. R. 44.

16. (1) A person so summoned and attending shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, attend at each hearing until the suit has been disposed of. [S. 173.]

When they may depart.

(2) On the application of either party and the payment through the Court of all necessary expenses (if any), the Court may require any person so summoned and attending to furnish security to attend at the next or any other hearing or until the suit is disposed of and, in default of his furnishing such security, may order him to be detained in the civil prison. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Sub-rule (1) corresponds to s. 173, C. P. Code, 1882, with some material alterations. Sub-rule (2) is new and has been added for the interest of the parties, who are sometimes put to great difficulty for non-attendance of witnesses at subsequent hearings.

Where a suit is adjourned, but the Court omits to bind the witnesses to be present, and they do not attend afterwards, an opportunity ought to be allowed to enforce their attendance by summons.—Drakshampa v. In Re, 16 I. C. 996.

17. The provisions of rules 10 to 13 shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to any person who, having attended in compliance with a summons, departs, without lawful excuse, in contravention of rule 16. [S. 174, para. 1 and S. 176.]

Application of rules 10 to 13.

COMMENTARY.

This rule lays down in a modified form the provisions of para. 1 of s. 174 and s. 175 of the C P. Code, 1882. The wordings of the old sections have been materially changed.

This rule is of a highly penal nature, and its provisions, in order to give validity to anything purporting to be done under them, must be strictly complied with. Under it, a witness, who has failed to appear on his summons, can only be fined after he has been arrested and brought before the Court. Where a witness being served with summons applied for time to appear Held that the fact of his applying for time would not preclude him from saying that there had been no such service of the summons as could warrant action under this rule.—Kali Narain v. Shaik v Sheik Bajoo, 3 C. W. N 307.

There is no obligation in a civil Court to issue a warrant for non-obedience to a summons, when the absence is due to the non-payment of the necessary expenses.—Todar Mal v. Said Muhammad, 17 A. 277.

The jurisdiction to punish under this rule exists only when a witness who, not having attended on summons, has been arrested and brought before the Court —In re Prem Chand Dawlatram, 12 B. 63; Kali Narain v. Sheik Bajoo, 3 C. W. N. 307.

There should be satisfactory ground for believing that the default is without lawful excuse, before issuing a warrant for his arrest.—Periyanna Chetty v. Govind Gounden, 5 M. H. C. 104. What is or what is not a lawful excuse must depend on the circumstances of each case.—Doorga Dutt v. Jheengoor Jha, 18 W. R. 63.

A verbal order of the Court requiring a witness to attend on a future day would not justify warrant for his arrest in case of non-obedience — Venkatappah v. Papammah, 5 M. H. C. 132; Anonymous case, 6 M. H. C. Ap. 10 See, however, Anonymous case, 5 M. H. C. Ap. 15.

The non-attendance must be in the nature of wilful disobedience to attend. Where a witness was summoned for a certain day, and, being absent from home, did not receive the summons till after the day had passed, he could not be fined for non-attendance.—Queen v. Ungun Lall, 1 N. W. P. (Ed. 1873), 303.

15. Subject as last aforesaid, whoever is summoned to appear and give evidence in a suit shall attend at the time and place named in the summons for that purpose, and whoever is summoned to produce a document shall either attend to produce it, or cause it to be produced, at such time and place. Where a caveator refuses to answer a question, this rule will not justify the Judge in dispensing with the proof of the will set up, and passing a decree in favour of the petitioner.— Ravji Ranchod v. Vishnu Ranchod, 9 B. 241 (Refd. to in Monmohini v. Banga, 31 C. 357: 8 C. W. N. 197).

In a suit to recover the balance due on a partnership transaction, the defendant who was examined as a witness for the plaintiff, refused to produce certain accounts relating to the partnership and relevant to the suit. Held that the Court below was justified in passing judgment against the defendant for refusing to produce documents.—Katakam v. Bhupalam, 4 M. Consequence of refusal to exhibit document in party's possession or power as evidence.—Order XX, r. 16 authorizes the Court to pronounce judgment against a person who, without lawful excuse, declines to produce the document then and there in his possession or power: if the document is produced, the requirement of the law is fulfilled Where the plaintiff who was present in Court, on being asked by Court, produced a certified copy of a judgment in his possession, but declined to exhibit it as evidence in in the case. Held that the Court could not pass an order for dismissal of the suit under Or. Rules as to witnesses to apply to parties summoned.

COMMENTARY.

By this rule a party to a suit required to give evidence is bound by the rules applicable to witnesses.—Emp. v Mayadeb, 6 C. 762. 8 C. L. R. 292.

A Court is justified in passing a decree against a party who being cited as a witness fails to attend. Brahmamoyee v. Kristo, 2 C. 222; or does not produce the document summoned to produce —Tara Chand v Baistub, 16 W. R. 196.

Judgment ought not in ordinary circumstances to be passed against a defendant who bona fide requires the evidence of the plaintiff to be taken unless such evidence is given.—Roy Dhunput v. Prem Bibee, 24 W. R 72

If a party wishes to call his adversary as a witness, every possible effort should be made to compel his attendance.—Subbaji v. Shiddappa, 26 B. 392.

If a plaintiff calls the defendant as a witness to establish a given fact, the evidence of the defendant, so far as his credit is concerned, must be judged in the same way and on the same principles, as the evidence of any other witness, and the plaintiff must stand or fail, as regards the proof of that fact, according as the evidence of the defendant, on whom he relies, is worthy of credit or the reverse.—Mathura Das v. Jetha Jai Chand, 2 C. W. N. (S. N.) xcix (99).

It is one of the artifices of a weak and somewhat paltry kind of advocacy for each litigant to cause his opponent to be summoned as a witness, with the design that each party shall be forced to produce the opponent so summoned as a witness, and thus give the counsel for each litigant the opportunity of cross-examining his client. It is a practice which all judicial tribunals should set themselves to render as abortive, as it is objectionable. It should never be permitted in the result to embarrass judicial investigation.—Keshori Lal v. Chuni Lal, 9 C. L. J. 172, P. C. 13 C. W. N. 370, P. C. This practice was also condemned in Lal Kunwar v. Chiranji, 14 C. W. N. 285 P. C., as a "vicious practice, unworthy of a high-toned or respectable system of advocacy," where the Privy Council pointed out the usefulness and necessity of the examination of the parties to the suit by themselves in support of their cases. In Ram Singh v. Tursa, 17 C. W. N. 1085, some brothers had executed separate mortgages in respect of their shares, and did not come to the witness box to explain how these transactions were consistent with their plea of jointness. It was held that the inference from the act of the brothers was only consistent with the hypothesis of separation.

ORDER XVII.

ADJOURNMENTS.

Court may grant time and adjourn hearing.

1. (1) The Court may, if sufficient cause is shown, at any stage of the suit grant time to the parties or to any of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing of the suit.

Costs of adjournment.

(2) In every such case the Court shall fix a day for the further hearing of the suit, and may make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the costs occasioned by the adjournment:

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded. [S. 156.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 156, C P Code, 1882, with some variations In sub-rule (2), the word "every" has been substituted for the words "in all such cases," and the words "beyond the following day" have been added after the word "hearing" in the proviso.

"May adjourn."—Parties cannot obtain adjournment by consent as a matter of course To regulate its own procedure is entirely the business of Court.—Madhow v Ajudya, 10 I. C 748 13 Bom. L. R. 161 The question of granting or refusing adjournment on the ground that a party is not ready with evidence is one essentially for the discretion of the Court, a discretion to be used judicially It is impossible for a Court of second appeal to interfere with its exercise —Parsottam v. Kesho, 21 I. C 206

For granting adjournments, the Courts ought not to be too technical as if one is anxious to find excuse for cutting the work of Courts, but should give reasonable opportunity to parties to adduce evidence; Raghava Ayyar v. Ramasami, (1926) M. W N 434 96 I C 536. A. I. R. 1926 M 859

This rule gives a discretion to the Court to grant time to the parties and to adjourn the hearing of a case No adjournment should be granted if sufficient case is not shown; Bindubashini v. Secy. of State, 51 C. 70: 79 I C. 745· A I R 1924 C. 774; but no adjournment should be refused if sufficient cause is shown; Maharaja v Harihar, 5 Pat. L. J. 390. 57 I. C. 250.

Discretion in Adjourning must be Exercised by the Trying Court and the Superior Court must Not Interfere.—Where a suit is once begun, the trying Court is bound to go on from day to day unless for special reasons it is necessary to adjourn it. Where a suit was part heard by the Sub-judge he was the proper officer to decide when the case was to be adjourned, and the District Judge had no voice in the matter. Where a Sub-Judge adjourned a part-heard case in obedience to the order of the District Judge Held that the order of the Sub-Judge must be set aside. —Sivagami v Louis Gnana, 16 M L. T 501

Rule Applies to Adjournments at Instance of Parties.—Order XVII, rules 1 and 2, do not apply to an adjournment which is not made at the instance of the parties, but which is necessitated by the rules of Court, which regulate the disposition of its own business —Sreemutty Toolsy Money v Sreemutty Prosad Money, 2 C W N 490

" Sufficient cause "—What is.—In an appeal before a District Judge, the respondent engaged two pleaders On the day of hearing the senior being ill had transferred his brief to another pleader, whom the Judge declined to hear as his name did not appear in the vakalatnama The junior not being instructed to argue applied for a day's adjournment to get himself ready This was refused and the appeal was decreed ex parte Held that the Judge had erroneously exercised his discretion. He ought either to have allowed the pleader, who appeared, to argue the case or allowed an adjournment, making if necessary, an order for costs in favour of the appellant —Hare Krishna v Bishnu Chandra, 7 C. L. J. 426.

On the day fixed for hearing, the defendant asked for an adjournment to obtain attendance of his witness, the application was refused and the case was proceeded with and adjourned for judgment Before delivery of judgment, the defendant produced certain witnesses, and asked for their examination; but his prayer was refused, and the judgment was subsequently delivered in favour of the plaintiff Held that the omission to examine defendant's witnesses was a substantial error in procedure.—Monilal v. Khiroda Dasi, 20 C. 749, Taylor v Sarat Chunder, 20 C. 745-note.

The question of the proper exercise of discretion of lower Courts to grant time to parties to produce further evidence discussed.—Surjyamoni Dasi v. Kali Kanta, 28 C. 37, 5 C W N. 195 See Kaveriamma v. Lingappa, 33 B. 96, p. 99.

Although a case may have been set down for final disposal, if it be a case in which further evidence is required, the Judge is bound to adjourn the case, unless he is satisfied that the plaintiff has without sufficient cause failed to produce his witnesses —Ameer Ali v Ram Bahadoor, 7 W. R. 84.

The rule of practice when applying for adjournment on the ground of producing document indicated.—Saminatha v Sundara, 2 M. W. N. 166.

Sufficient Cause—What is Not.—Where a defendant had known for some time previously that his case was coming on, and what evidence was necessary, a medical certificate to the effect that he was confined to his bed by lumbago was held to be no sufficient ground for adjournment.—Ellas v. Jorawar Mull, 24 W. R. 202.

After settlement of issues the case was fixed for final hearing, when the plaintiff applied for summons on a witness, and asked for adjournment, but the Judge dismissed the suit. Held that the Judge was justified in dismissing the suit.—Comalammal v. Rangasawmy, 4 M. H. C. 56.

Where a summons for production of documents did not specify them, an adjournment for their production was rightly refused—Aludomal v. Alu, 10 I C. 554

When a party files process fee only two days before the hearing date any order passed for issue of processes must be understood to have been issued at the risk of the party in fault, and adjournment should not be granted when the case comes for hearing.—Jagabandhu v. Goorey, 1 Pat L. J. 173.

Order, with Respect to Costs of Adjournment.—Court has ample discretion as to the direction to be given in the matter of costs occasioned by adjournment. It can make the hearing on the adjourned date conditional on the payment of costs before that date—Dhani Ram v. Murlilal, 13 C. W. N. 525. 36 C 566. 11 C L. J 150. If no conditional order is passed, it is wrong to dismiss a case for non-payment of costs.—Feru v. Biseswar, 14 C. W. N. 40-n.

Where payment of costs is made a condition precedent to adjournment granted to the defendants, it is open to the Court to strike off the defence and proceed ex parte, when the costs are not paid as aforesaid; East Indian Railway v Jit Mal, 47 A. 538: 86 I C. 862 A. I. R. 1925 A. 280. But it is not open to the Court to strike off the defence unless payment of costs is made a condition precedent to the granting of the adjournment; Veerabhadrappa v. Chinnamma, 21 M 403: 8 M. L. J. 189.

When an order for adjournment is obtained by a party to an appeal on the condition that the costs of the adjournment will be paid to the other party and that condition is not performed, the appeal may be dismissed; Nagendranath v Umacharan, 49 I C 272

When the date fixed for hearing happens to be a holiday, the Court is in no way justified in taking up the case on the following day and in passing any order to the prejudice of any of the absent parties without duly serving upon them a fresh notice of hearing.—Umatul Begum v. Saligram, 29 I. C 137: 126 P. L. R 1915

The order for directing payment of costs under this rule may be executed under section 36 as a decree.

Appeal.—Under Or. XVII, r 1 (1), a Court may at any time grant an adjournment if sufficient cause is shown, but no appeal is allowed from an order refusing adjournment, and even when the refusal is impeached in an appeal from the decree, an appellate Court is generally disinclined to interfere with the trial Judge's exercise of the discretion; Laxman Rao v. Vithoba, 45 I. C. 898.

2. Where, on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the parties or any of them fail to appear, the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by Order IX or make such other order as it thinks fit.

Procedure if parties fail to appear on the day fixed.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 157, C P. Code, 1882 with some verbal changes only.

Rules 2 and 3 differ materially from each other, and the remedies against orders under these rules are also different Care should be taken to find out whether an order was passed under rule 2 or rule 3 If a suit is dismissed under rule 2 coupled with Or IX, r. 8, the remedy is by an application to the same court under Or. IX, r. 9, for revival. If the order is under rule 3 the remedy is by way of appeal. It does not infrequently happen that the Court's order dismissing a suit does not mention the section or rule under which it was made (see 34 C. 97, p 100). It also happens that the Court while dismissing a suit sometimes purports to act under one rule although the order would have been really under the other rule (Chandramathi v Narayansami, 33 M 241). In order that the proper remedy may be chosen it must first be ascertained from the facts, under which rule an order was really passed.

Order IX, Rule 8 and This Rule.—Order IX, r. 8 describes the consequences of the appearance of the defendant and non-appearance of the plaintiff The effect of Or XVII, r 2 is to make Or. IX, r. 8 applicable to adjourned hearings of cases —Janardan v Ramdhone, 23 C 738

Distinction between Rules 2 and 3.—The scope of r. 2 is quite distinct from that of rule 3. Rule 3 appears to contemplate a case in which the Court has materials before it to enable it to proceed to a decision of the suit. The words " notwithstanding such default " in rule 3 clearly imply that the Court is to proceed with the disposal of the suit in spite of the default, upon such materials as are before it Rule 2, on the other hand, speaks of the disposal of the suits and undoubtedly includes cases in which there might not be materials to enable to pronounce a decision on the merits. It is clear, however, that the contingency contemplated in rule 2 may happen in a case which falls within the letter of rule 3 It may well happen, for instance, that a plaintiff to whom time has been granted to produce evidence not only fails to do so, but also fails to appear. In such a case if there are no materials on the record the appropriate procedure to follow would be that laid down in rule 2, but if there are materials, the Court ought to proceed under rule 3; Marianissa v. Ramkalpa, 34 C. 235, pp. 237, 238; see also Ramaya v. Rangaya, 7 M 41, Enautlla v. Jiban, 41 C. 956: 19 C L J 535. Rule 2 speaks of the procedure to be followed when parties fail to appear on the adjourned day of hearing If the plaintiff is in default the suit may be dismissed under this rule and Or. IX, r. 8, and it may be revived again under Or IX, r.

9 (Ryall v. Sherman, 1 M. 287; Nagendra v. Nabin, 36 C. 189). If the defendant is in default, the suit may be decreed ex parte under this rule and Or. IX, r. 6, and it may be set aside by an application under Or. IX, r. 13 (see Jonardon v. Ramdhone, 23 C. 738 and other cases noted below). Rule 3 lays down the procedure to be adopted when time has been allowed to a party to do some act in furtherance of the suit and he fails to perform it The remedy of an order under rule 3 is to review or appeal, but there can be no restoration or revival of the suit.—Kader Khan v. Juggeswar, 35 C. 1023.

There is no conflict at all between rr. 2 and 3 and each may be fully applied to the proper stage of the case. The decision in 33 M. 241, in so far as it laid down that the two rules must be read as mutually exclusive, went too far; Pichamma v Sreeramulu, 41 M. 286 F. B.: 34 M L. J. 24 (1918) M. W. N. 92.

The distinction between rules 2 and 3 is that the former applies to hearings adjourned at the instance of the Court, while the latter applies to hearings adjourned at the instance of a party to whom time has been allowed to do some act to further the progress of the suit but who has defaulted; Enatulla v Jiban, 41 C. 956, Usto Sahebdino v. Gulam, 27 I. C. 924; 8 S. L. R 241

In order to apply Or XVII, r 3 to a case it must be shown that there was something upon which the Court could bring its judicial mind to bear in the shape of either evidence or pleadings and that the Court did before making its decision duly apply its mind Unless the facts clearly indicate that there was an adjudication, an order of dismissal whether it be for want of evidence or not, should be treated as an order under Or. IX. Whether in consequence of the plaintiff not adducing any evidence in support of his case, his suit is dismissed for default, and there is no indication that he was either willing to have the suit decided on the merits or that the Court in any way applied its mind to the rights and liabilities of the parties, the order must be treated as one under Or. XVII, r 2 and is not open to second appeal, S K. Mahomed Baker Ali v. Chulhai, 1 Pat L J 712

"Any day."—This rule does not apply to a case where no day has been fixed for the hearing; Seetaram v Golam, 18 W R 325.

"Hearing of the suit."—Or. XVII, rr. 2 and 3 apply only to a case where the actual hearing of the suit has been adjourned By the hearing of the suit is meant the hearing at which the judge would be either taking evidence or hearing arguments or would have to consider question relating to the determination of the suit which would enable him finally to come to an adjudication upon it, Balmukund v Lachmi Narain, 57 I. C. 718.

"Adjourned."—In this rule means adjourned at the instance of the parties and not by Court of its own motion —Toolseymoni v Prosadmony, 2 C. W. N. 490; Pannalal v Bull, 82 P L R 1906 30 P R 1906

"Failure to appear."—For the meaning of these words, see Soonder Lal v. Goor Prasad, 23 B 411 and Lalta v Nand, 22 A 66 The mere physical presence of a pleader not instructed to proceed with the suit is not appearance.—Bejoy Chand v Satish, 9 I. C. 842.

As to what is appearance, see notes to Or. IX, r. 9, under the heading "APPEAR."

Applicability of this Rule—Instance.—Non-appearance of plaintiff on adjourned date—Dismissal of suit for default under Or. IX, r. 8, read with this rule Held, that suit should not have been dismissed for default, but ought to have proceeded under Or. XVII, r. 3—Badam v. Nathu Singh, 25 A. 104.

Where a defendant required to attend Court in person, failed to be present on the date of hearing, the only course open to the Court is to proceed under this rule In the absence of anything to show that the defendant had expressly asked for time and then made a default, the Court cannot pass an order to decide the case forthwith under r. 3.—Panna Lal v. Bull, 30 P R 1906 82 P. L R. (1906)

Order XVII, r 2 applies to the case where the hearing of a suit has been adjourned and on the adjourned date the parties or any of them fail to appear. In such a case, Or XVII, r. 2 enables the Court, if it so chooses to deal with the case as being one under Or. IX, or to make such other order as it thinks fit, Ram Charan Lal v. Raghubar, 45 A. 618: 21 A. L. J 495.

Order IX, r 13 applies to every case in which a decree is passed ex parte against the defendant, either under Or. IX, r. 6 by reason of his non-appearance at the first hearing, or under this rule by reason of his non-appearance at an adjourned hearing—Jonardon Dobey v. Ramdhone Singh, 23 C 738, F B (21 C 269 overruled 2 A. 67 distinguished). See also, Hildreth v Sayaji Piraji, 20 B 380, Shankar Dat v. Radha Krishna, 20 A. 195, Srimant Sagajirao v Smith, 20 B 736; Ardha Chandra v. Matangini, 23 C. 325 (p. 327), Lalta Prasad v. Nand Kishore, 22 A. 66; Ramthal Ram v. Rameshar Ram, 8 A 140; Hira Dai v. Hira Lal. 7 A. 538; Pichamma v. Sreeramulu, 41 M 286 F B : 34 M. L. J. 24: 23 M. L. T. 1.

At an adjourned hearing, the plaintiff's witnesses not being present, he applied for issue of warrant against one of his witnesses, This was refused, and the plaintiff's pleader retired intimating that he had not further instructions to appear, and the suit was dismissed. Held that the dismissal was under Or IX, r 8 read with this rule and not under rule 3.—Mariannissa v. Ram Kalpa, 34 C 235. 5 C. L J 260. See also, Gopala Row v. Maria Susaya, 30 M 274. 17 M. L. J. 225; Maung Pway v. Saya Pe, A I. R. 1927 Rang. 46. See, however, Kader Khan v. Juggeswar Prosad, 35 C. 1023.

The plaintiffs not being present, and the pleader having said he had no instructions to do anything further in the case, left the Court, a point had been reached at which it was literally true that the plaintiffs were absent, neither appearing in person nor by counsel authorized to act on their behalf. The dismissal was under Or. XVII, r. 2 and an application for restoration lay; Lal Jangpal Singh v. Raja Khusalpat Singh, 20 A. L. J. 97; Syed Shah Muhammad Maudood v. Maharajah Sir Rameshwar, 1 Pat. L. R. 281: 74 I. C. 693.

Where a suit is dismissed by the following order: " The plaintiff had failed to prove his case and has failed to prosecute his case; it is ordered that his case be dismissed for default." Held that the Court had not taken action under this rule and an appeal lay; Chuttan v. Kanhaya, 10 A. L. J. 478.

" May make such other order."—It has been held that these words do not entitle the Court to proceed with the suit on the merits. If neither the plaintiff nor his pleader appears on the day to which the hearing has been adjourned, it must make an order under Or. IX r. 8 dismissing the suit for " default of appearance " and ought not to decide it on merits; Phul Kuar v. Hashmatullah 37 A. 460. Even where a party has taken time to produce evidence, and on the date fixed for the hearing of that evidence, he is absent, the proper course to follow is to pass an ex parte decree under this rule and not to proceed under rule 3. The words " make such other order as it thinks fit " in rule 2 do not include an order under rule 3; Ram Adhin v. Ram Bharose, 47 A. 181: 85 I. C. 27: A. I. R. 1925 A. 182; Ram Charan v. Raghubir, 45 A. 618: 21 A. L. J. 495. Where the Court refuses a further adjournment, and passes another, but omits to state whether the order was made under this rule or r. 3, it must be taken that the order was made under this rule; Ganeshi Lal v. Devidas, 47 A 140: 85 I. C. 470: A. I. R. 1925 A. 267.

Appeal.—Order of dismissal under this rule is not appealable.—Alwar v. Seshammal, 10 M. 270.

Duty of Pleaders to Make themselves Acquainted with the Orders Passed.—It is not the duty of the officers of the Court to call upon the pleaders to sign the orders issued, or to inform them of the nature of the orders passed. It is for the pleaders to be present at the proceedings and to make themselves acquainted with the orders passed.—Robert Watson & Co. v. Srimati Ambika Dasi, 4 C. W. N. 237 (p. 238)

If the pleader engaged in a case is unable to attend on account of illness, the Court ought to allow another pleader to whom he transfers the brief, to conduct the case, although his name does not appear in the vakalatnama.—Hare Krishna v. Bishnu Chundra, 7 C. L. J 426

Execution Proceedings.—This rule does not apply to execution proceedings.—Dhonkal v. Phakkar, 15 A 81, Tirthasami v Annapayya, 1[illegible] M. 131.

Court may proceed notwithstanding either party fails to produce evidence, etc.

3. Where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith.

COMMENTARY.

As to the distinction between this rule and rule 2, [illegible]

The adjournment must be at the instance of the parties and not by the Court of its own motion. Otherwise this rule will have no application. Where after plaintiff closed his case, the defence began, and at the end of the day the suit stood adjourned to the next day when neither the defendant nor his pleader appeared and the Court passed judgment on the materials before it.—Held, that it could not act under this rule as the other element was wanting, viz., the adjournment was not at the instance of the party; Reajuddin v. Jiban, 18 C. W. N. 775; Karam Chand v. Jindaram 71 I C 862

Scope.—In order that this rule may apply the following elements must be present, viz , (1) The adjournment must have been at the instance of a party (as distinguished from adjournment by Court of its own motion); (2) There must be materials on the record to proceed to decide the suit (Enatulla v Jiban, 41 C. 956: 19 C L. J. 535· 23 I. C. 760; (3) The adjournment is granted to enable the party to produce his evidence or to cause the attendance of his witnesses or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit; (4) The party fails to perform the act for which adjournment was granted. The presence of one without the other does not justify the application of this rule. Of course the Court may grant further adjournment if there is any justification for it, instead of proceeding under this rule. The word used is " may."

This rule is applicable to only two cases where any party to whom time has been granted on his own application fails to do certain specified acts for which time was allowed, Panna Lall v. Bull, 30 P. R. 1906; 82 P. L. R. 1906; Murlidhar v Narain, 19 I C, 472, Najeti v. Pachigolla, 27 I. C. 882; Mahant Damodar Das v. Raj Kumar, 1 Pat. L. T. 188 The stringent provision of this rule cannot be invoked unless time was granted specifically for an act, Harjas v Narain, 23 I. C. 938: 51 P. R. 1915.

Where the plaintiff fails to appear on an adjourned date before the hearing of a suit has commenced, the Courts should proceed not under this rule, but under r. 2, and dismiss the suit under Or. IX, r. 8, so as to give the plaintiff an opportunity of setting aside the dismissal under Or. IX, r. 9; Ratanbai v Shankar, 46 B. 1020 · 69 I C 514: A I. R 1923 B. 27; Mahant Damodar v Raj Kumar, 1 Pat. 188: 69 I C. 837· A I. R. 1922 P. 485, Basayya v Alayya, 27 Bom. L. R. 477. 87 I. C. 710: A I. R 1925 B 328

Rule 3 applies only to cases where the parties are present and have not satisfied the Court as to the existence of any adequate reason for their not having done what they were directed to do (33 M. 241 folld.) Pichamma v. Sreeramulu, 41 M 286 · 34 M. L. J. 24: 23 M L T. 1

Default under Both Rules 2 and 3—Which Rule to Apply.—A case may well arise where there is default under both rules, e g., a plaintiff who took time to produce evidence not only fails to do so, but fails to appear on the adjourned day of hearing. The question arises under which of the rules is the Court to act. The Bombay High Court, in Srimant Sagaji v. Smith, 20 B 736 and in Basayya v. Suayya, 27 Bom. L. R 477: A. I R. 1925 B 328, held that in such a case r. 2 applies. In Chandramathi v. Narayanaswami, 33 M 241, the Madras High Court, held that if there be default in appearance on the adjourned date of hearing r. 2 alone should be applied no matter whether there has not been default of the kind mentioned in r. 3. In Badam v. Nathu, 25 A. 194, the Allahabad High Court, held that the Court should act under r. 3. The Calcutta High Court, in Marianissa v. Ramkalpa, 34 C. 235, took the same view as the Madras High Court, and held that r. 2 applies.

In recent cases the Bombay and Calcutta High Courts have held that where an adjournment is granted at the instance of a party for any of the purposes mentioned in r 3, and either party fails to appear at the adjourned hearing, the Court should proceed under this rule, and not under r. 2, if there are materials for a decision on the record; Enatulla v. Jiban, 41 C. 956; Naigappa v. Gowdappa, 7 Bom. L. R. 261. See also, Har Gopal v. Harish, 48 P. R. 120: 47 I. C. 596.

"Notwithstanding such default."—These words clearly imply that the Court is to proceed with the disposal of the suit inspite of the default upon materials as are before it. If, in the case of the plaintiff, such materials fail to substantiate the claim, the suit shall be dismissed for this reason, and not for default; Pazhaniandi v. Naku, 51 M L. J. 684: A. I. R. 1927 M. 109. 99 I C. 32.

"Proceed to decide the suit forthwith."—A decision passed " forthwith " under Or XVII, r. 3, is a decision passed on the merits on the materials, then before the Court; Chidipatu Somayya, In re 2 L. W. 1067· 31 I C 307.

Instances where this Rule was Held Applicable.—The plaintiff put in all the evidence, oral and documentary, that he wished to adduce. The hearing of the case was then adjourned to some other day. On that day no appearance was made on behalf of the plaintiff, and the Court dismissed the suit " for default of prosecution " acting apparently under Or. IX, r. 8, read with Or XVII, r 2. Held that the Court should have proceeded under this rule and ought not to have dismissed it for default. Badam v. Nathu, 25 A. 194

A Court has no power to dismiss a plaintiff's suit merely because the plaintiff has omitted to comply with an order of the Court directing him within a certain time to pay the costs of preparation of a map considered by the Court to be necessary to the decision of the suit. If an order of this kind is not complied with, it is the duty of the Court to go on and decide the suit on such materials as it has before it.—Sitara Begam v. Tulshi Singh, 23 A 462 Followed in Mariannissa v. Ram Kalpa, 34 C. 235 5 C L. J 260, see also Nagendra Kumar v. Nabin Mandal, 36 C. 189 (34 C. 235· 8 C W N 621 followed; 23 A. 462 distinguished)

Where on the day fixed for hearing, the plaintiff appeared by a pleader who asked for an adjournment which was refused Held that the proper procedure for the Court was not to dismiss the suit for default but to proceed with the case and write a judgment Order XVII, r. 2 was not applicable to the case but Or XVII, r 3 did apply; Viswanatha v. Sami, 18 L. W 209. (1923) M W N 802 (41 M. 256 refd to)

A holiday was fixed for hearing of a case by arrangement with both parties and so as to suit the convenience of plaintiff's pleader, but plaintiffs' pleader declined to appear on that day Held that the Court was justified in proceeding under this rule.—Bhagwan Das v. Har Pershad 11 P. R 1906.

Where time was allowed to the appellants to take further steps, bu no steps were taken within time. Held that the Court could proceed t decide the appeal under this rule —Jaisari v. Jaisari, 17 I. C. 294

After adducing of all evidence, suit was adjourned for production o succession certificate as to part of plaintiff's claim. Held that the sui ought not to be dismissed under r. 2, but decided on merits under thi rule.—Draupati v S I. Ry. Co., 24 I C. 353.

"Any other act necessary for the further progress of the suit."—Where in a suit for recovery of possession of certain lands, the defendant raised the contention that the suit was not properly valued, and the Court thereupon, on the application of the plaintiff, appointed a Commissioner to value the land and directed the plaintiff to deposit in Court the Commissioner's fee within a specified date Held that, on failure of the plaintiff to deposit the fee within the prescribed time, the Court had power to proceed under this rule, because payment of the Commissioner's fee is an act necessary to the further progress of the suit within the meaning of this rule, Shaik Shaheb v. Mahomed, 13 M. 519; Virabhadrappa v. Chinnamma, 21 M 403, see also Tulshi Ram v. Daya Ram, 23 A. L. J. 573: 88 I. C 448: A. I R 1925 A 604

Instances where this Rule was Held Not Applicable.—After settlement of issues, the final hearing was adjourned to a fixed date. On that date the plaintiff did not appear, and the suit was dismissed. Held that this rule did not apply, as the case was not adjourned, in favour of either party to enable him to produce his evidence.—Ryall v. Sherman, 1 M. 287. See also Venkata Ramaya v Anumukonda, 7 M. 41; and Srimant Sagajirao v Smith, 20 B 736

Where adjournments are made by a Court to give effect to its processes for compelling the attendance of witnesses Held that the case cannot be said to come under this rule, which contemplates a case where a party has obtained time to produce his witnesses, and has failed to do so.—Pearee Mohun v. Shama Churn, 19 W R. 34.

The first Court refused to grant plantiff's application to examine a defendant as a witness on his behalf On the adjourned date of hearing the plaintiff failed to produce any other witness, and the suit was dismissed under this rule Held that as the plaintiff had been prevented from examining the defendant on sufficient grounds, he had not committed default under this rule; Latchman Rau v Raghunatha Rau, 6 M. H C. 299

Where at an adjourned hearing, the witnesses on behalf of a party were not in attendance, and he applied for warrants against them, but the Court refused the application, and the pleader thereupon intimated that he had no further instructions and the suit was dismissed. Held that the order was not under this rule, Ganga v. Gudar, 5 I. C. 490 (34 C 235: 5 C. L. J. 260 relied on)

Where the plaintiff's case was opened, and his witnesses being absent, a day's adjournment was allowed, and on the adjourned date a fresh adjournment was applied for and refused, and the Court recorded the depositions of defendant's witnesses and dismissed the suit on the merits. Held that the dismissal under Or. XVII, r. 3, was without jurisdiction, and Or. XVII, r. 2 was applicable to the case; Sashi Bhusan v. Dwarka Prasad, 3 Pat. L. T. 64.

At the first hearing of a suit certain defendants had not been served and the Court passed orders adjourning the case and directing issue of summons to absent defendants on receipt of process-fees. The plaintiff took no action whatever in respect of the order, and on the date of hearing gave no reason for his default but asked for indulgence. The Court dismissed the suit under Or. XVII, r 3 of the Code Held that under the circumstances r. 3, Or XVII, was inapplicable and should not have been applied; Sher Ali v Mangu, 150 P. R. 1919: 52 I. C. 292.

Adjournment for Non-service of Summons.—When process-fee has been paid, and an adjournment is caused by non-attendance of witness for want of service, it does not amount to an adjournment granted to a party within the meaning of this rule; Harjas v. Narain, 29 I. C. 938: 51 P. R. 1915; Lila Ram v. Ramzan, 69 I. C. 665.

Dismissal, for Non-payment of Court-fee, etc.—Dismissal of a suit for non-payment of Court-fees or commission-fees is not an order under this rule.—Muhammad Sadik v. Muhammad Jan, 11 A 91 · Nagathal v. Ponnusami, 13 M. 44 Shaik Saheb v. Mahomed, 13 M. 510; Ragava Chariar v. Vedanta Chariar, 3 M 259. Neither is a dismissal for failure to amend plaint and pay costs of adjournment; Rahman v. Ahmaddin. 96 I. C. 312: A. I. R 1926 L 571. Nor does the dismissal of a suit for want of heirship certificate come under this rule.—Petha Perumal Chetti v. Murugandi, 18 M 466.

An interval of two hours for the payment of process-fees directed by the Court in the absence of a party is not reasonable time within which to make such payment, Rampati v. Sachinandan, 55 I. C. 650.

Non-payment of Adjournment Cost.—In the absence of a specific order making the payment of costs of adjournment a condition precedent to the hearing of the evidence of the party in default, this rule is not applicable.—Virabhadrappa Chetti v Chinnammal, 21 M. 493.

Where defendant was not aware that he was ordered to pay adjournment cost, and the further hearing of the case was not made conditional upon defendant's paying the cost, held that reasonable time should be allowed to pay the costs and his defence should not be struck out; Kalu Sarang v. Abedannessa, 97 I. C 172 A. I R 1926 C. 1221.

Force of an Order under this Rule.—The plea of res judicata ordinarily presupposes an adjudication on the merits, and the decision pronounced under this rule shall have the force of a decree on the merits, and bars a fresh suit notwithstanding the default on the part of plaintiff.—Venkata Chalam v Mahalakshma, 10 M 272. See also Muhammad v. Imam Khatun, 25 P. L. R 1912 37 P W R 1912

Execution Proceedings.—The dismissal of an application for execution for default does not bar a fresh application This rule does not apply to execution proceedings.—Tirthasami v. Annappayya, 18 M. 131. See Remedy.—Where a case is declined under this rule, the decision is a decree and is therefore appealable; Lalta Prasad v. Nand Kishore, 22 A. 66; Gaura Bibi v Ghasita, 34 A. 123; Pichamma v. Sriramulu, 41 M. 286: 43 I C 566, Sukkhu v Ram Lotan, 41 A. 663: 51 I. ORDER XVIII.

HEARING OF THE SUIT AND EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

Right to begin.

1. The plaintiff has the right to begin unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin. [S. 179 Expl.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds with the Explanation to s. 179, C P. Code, 1882. The remainder has been transferred to r. 2.

" Right to begin."—Means the privilege of opening the case. The principles which govern the question as to who has the privilege or duty of the " right to begin " are difficult of application The first general rule as to the right to begin is, that the party on whom the onus probandi lies, as developed on the record, must begin. But this rule is subject to some exceptions —See Taylor on Evidence, 10th Ed , Vol I, p. 293 Sections 101 to 114 of the Evidence Act deal with the burden of proof The burden lies on him who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side (s 102)

" Facts."—Of course means all material facts or allegations. If only a portion is admitted, there is no right to begin In a suit for partition, the defendants admitted a nucleus of joint property and claimed the right to begin on the ground that the onus was on them to prove that the whole property was not joint Held the plaintiff had the right to begin; Aghore v Prem Chand, 7 C L R 274

Right to Begin—Instances.—Where a preliminary objection is raised by defendant that a suit is barred by res judicata, he has right to begin. Fatmabai v Aishabai, 12 B 454

Where an appeal had been filed, the respondent objected that no appeal lay and by agreement of the parties, the case was set down for argument of this preliminary point Held that the appellant had the right to begin —Rustomji Burjorji v Kessowji 8 B 287

Upon the hearing of an application for review of judgment, upon which the opposite party was directed to show cause why the application should not be granted, counsel for opposite party should begin —Ghansam Singh v Lal Singh, 9 A 61

Where a claim is preferred to or any objection is made to the attachment of any property made in execution claimant must begin The onus is on him Nga Tha v Burn, 2 B L R 91 F B 11 W R 8 F. B. (8 W. R. 358 and 362 over-ruled)

In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights by husband, the wife admitted marriage but pleaded coercion and non-consent; held the defendant had the right to begin, Tuvunammal v. Santiago, 23 I. C. 242: 7 Bur. L. T. 129

Statement and production of evidence.

2. (1) On the day fixed for the hearing of the suit or on any other day to which the hearing is adjourned, the party having the right to begin shall state his case and produce his evidence in support of the issues which he is bound to prove.

[Para 1, S. 179.]

(2) The other party shall then state his case and produce his evidence (if any) and may then address the Court generally on the whole case.

(3) The party beginning may then reply generally on the whole case. [Paras 1, 2, S. 180.]

COMMENTARY.

Where there are several defendants, and some of them support the plaintiff's case, the plaintiff and such of the defendants as support his case wholly or in part, must address the Court and call their evidence in the first place and then the other party, namely, the persons opposed to the plaintiff's case and that of the other defendants supporting the plaintiff, must address the Court and call their evidence.—Haji Bibee v. Sultan Mahomed, 32 B 599.

Where the burden of proving some issues is laid on the plaintiff and of others on the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to reserve his case and produce rebutting evidence after defendant's evidence has been recorded only upon issues the burden of proving which has been laid on the defendant —Karm Baksh v. Churagh Din, 66 P R. 1911: 190 P. W. R 1911.

Hearing of Arguments.—That the Court delivered judgment without hearing arguments is no ground for setting aside the judgment when the party having the opportunity to address the Court did not do so; Harji v. Devi Ditta, 4 Lah 364: A. I R. 1924 Lah. 107: 77 I. C. 398.

The Counsel for appellant having cited new cases in reply, the respondent's Counsel was allowed to address the Court on the new cases cited, and on the points on which he had not addressed the Court before —Kernot v. Walton, 9 C. 14 (22).

Evidence where several issues.

3. Where there are several issues, the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party; and, in the latter case, the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues after the other party has produced all his evidence and the other party may then reply specially on the evidence so produced by the party beginning; but the party beginning will then be entitled to reply generally on the whole case.

[Para 3, S. 180.]

COMMENTARY.

Sometimes the burden of proof of some one or more issues lies upon the plaintiff, while that of proving others lies upon the defendant. Under such circumstances the plaintiff may (at his own option) either go into the whole case in the first instance, or else elect to only give evidence with regard to those issues which he is himself bound to prove reserving the right of rebutting his adversary's proofs, in the event of the latter establishing a prima facie case in support of the issues which lie upon him. The last named course is, in practice most usually adopted; and if it is followed, the defendant may have special reply on the plaintiff's fresh evidence, while the plaintiff will be entitled to the general reply on the whole case. If, however, the plaintiff at the outset thinks fit to call any evidence to repel the defendant's case, he will not be permitted to give further evidence by way of reply, in other words, he "cannot split his case;" since if such a privilege were allowed to a plaintiff, the defendant, in common justice, might claim the same, and the proceedings would run the risk of being extended to a very inconvenient length.—See Taylor on Evidence, 10th Ed., Vol. I, p. 298.

Witnesses to be examined in open Court.

4. The evidence of the witnesses in attendance shall be taken orally in open Court in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendance of the Judge. [S. 18.]

COMMENTARY.

As to the order of production and examination of witnesses, see s. 135, Evidence Act.

In the absence of any (a) agreement to take evidence by affidavit, (b) order to prove particular facts by affidavit; (c) order for examination by interrogatories, or before a Commissioner, the witnesses will be examined viva voce and in open Court, Warner v Mosses, 16 C D, p 101 As to affidavit evidence, see next Order

Examination of Witnesses—Duty of Court.—It is not the business of a Court to determine what witnesses shall be examined The parties must select their own witnesses, and call upon the Court to examine such of them as they may offer for examination Every party is entitled to have all witnesses ready at the trial to be examined.—Morno Moyee v. Bheem Koomar, 6 W R 231, Deen Dyal v Danee Roy, 13 W R 185; Looloo Singh v Rajendur Laha, 8 W R 361, Paran Chunder v Gopeenath, 8 W R. 505; Chowdhry Khoorgo Roy v Shib Tohul, 17 W. R. 172; 9 B. 146 (149).

In order to establish the plea that a party was not allowed opportunity to adduce evidence, he must show that he tendered witnesses or other evidence, and his tender was rejected.—Buksh Ali v. Joynat Khan, 11 W. R. 248, Chunder Nath v. Anund Moyee, 11 W. R. 289, see also Queen v. Totaram, 11 W. R. Cr. 15.

The fact of a witness not having been named in the plaintiff's list of witnesses is no ground for refusing to examine him when produced at the proper time.—Rakhal Dass v. Protap Chunder, 12 W. R. 455.

Where a lower Appellate Court's refusal to examine witnesses is made a ground of special appeal, it is not sufficient to put in an affidavit to the effect that a verbal request of the vakil to examine witnesses was refused by the Judge.—Ramessur v. Shib Narain, 14 W. R. 419.

Where the lower Court omitted to examine certain witnesses it ought to be shown that the evidence of those witnesses would have been material to the case.—Nilkanth v. Soosila, 6 W. R. 324.

Witness tendered but refused by the lower Court may be examined in the Appellate Court, Parmeshari v. Mohamed Syud, 6 C. 608 (611); 7 C. L. R. 504.

The Courts in India had refused to examine 28 out of 54 witnesses produced by the party on the ground that as they were going to prove the facts deposed to by those already examined, it was unnecessary to take their depositions. The Judicial Committee remanded the case, being of opinion that the refusal by Court to permit the examination of witnesses was irregular.—Jeswunt Singjee v. Jet Singjee, 6 W. R. 46, P. C.; 2 M. I. A. 424. See also, Gopee Ojha v. Hurgobind, 12 W. R. 229, Brij Soondur v. Kaimonnissa, 24 W. R. 63.

It is the bounden duty of the Judge to receive all the evidence tendered, unles the object of summoning a large number of witnesses clearly appears to be to impede the adjudication of the case or otherwise to obstruct the ends of justice.—Ram Dhan v. Rajballab, 6 B. L. R. Ap. 10.

Where the first Court, considering it unnecessary of examine certain witnesses for the defence, dismissed the suit, and the Appellate Court, upon the recorded evidence, reversed the decree, and allowed the plaintiff's claim. Held that the lower Appellate Court ought to have allowed the defendant an opportunity to give the evidence which the first Court declined to take before reversion of the decree.—Arjun v. Shankar, 22 B. 253; and Khuda Buksh v. Imam Ali, 9 A. 339. Durga Dayal v. Anoraji, 17 A. 29 (32). See also Pabitra Kunwar v. Maharaja of Beneras, 30 A. 367.

It is in the discretion of the Court of first instance, after the plaintiff's case is closed, to allow him to call further witness. There is no right of special appeal upon the point.—Rakhal Doss v. Protap Chunder, 12 W. R. 455.

An objection that the Court of first instance had refused to examine witnesses, if not raised before the lower Appellate Court, cannot be raised on special appeal.—Gooroodass v. Poran Mundle, 12 W. R. 363; Osman Singh v. Chummun Mahtoo, 15 W. R. 87; Somashekhara v. Subhadramaji, 6 B. 524; Lalla Debeedin v. Sheogolam, 2 N. W. P. 206.

Interference by Court. Courts should in all cases exercise the power with which they have been entrusted by law in the examination of witnesses, if they see that they are not properly examined through the incompetency of those who have the management of the suits.—Ramgati v. Imitari Banee 1 B. L. R. (S. N.) 20; 10 W. R. 280.

As to Courts power to put questions, see s. 165, Evidence Act.

Open Court. The parties have a right to insist upon having all the advantages which attach to a public hearing of the whole case and the examination of all the witnesses in open Court.—Soorendro Pershad v. Nundun Misser, 21 W. R. 196.

As to the privileges of pardanashin women, see s. 132. Special arrangements may be made by the Court for the examination of pardanashin ladies in private. In the matter of Din Tarini Debi, 15 C. 775; 12 A. 69 (72); 109 P. L. R. 1903; 19 P. R. 1903 (Cr. 52).

Examination on Oath or Affirmation.—Section 6 of the Oaths Act (X of 1873) imperatively requires that no person shall testify as a witn except on oath or affirmation.—Q.-E. v. Maru, 10 A. 207; Q.-E.

ture of witnesses after the evidence is read over. It is however generally the practice in mofussil Courts to get the depositions signed by them.

The description of a witness in the heading of the deposition is not a part of the evidence given on solemn affirmation.—Maqbulan v Ahmad Hussain, 26 A. 108, P C. 8 C W N 241

" Shall be read over."—Failure to comply with the provisions of this rule and r. 6, is an informality which renders the deposition of an accused inadmissible in evidence on the charge of giving false evidence and under s. 91 of Evidence Act no other evidence is admissible —Empress v Mayadeb, 6 C 762. 8 C L R. 292, Kamatchi v Emperor, 28 M. 308; Mohendra Nath v Emperor, 12 C W N 845, Emperor v Jogendra, 42 C. 210, Emperor v Nabab Ali, 51 C 236 81 I C 803 A I R. 1924 C. 704. The objection that the depositions of the witnesses were not taken down in the manner prescribed by the Code, but only notes of the evidence, cannot be taken in special appeal.—Lalla Mahomed v Peer Nazur, 18 W. R. 112.

A case cannot be remanded, on the ground that the depositions of witnesses do not bear the usual certificate that they had been read over to the witnesses —Ram Gopal v Raghu Nath, 62 C. L J. 496.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts (vide Or. XLIX, r 3, cl 4) or Punjab Chief Court [vide s. 16 (2), Act XVIII of 1884] in their ordinary or extraordinary original Civil jurisdiction. As to Central Provinces, see ss. 2, 3 of Act II of 1870; as regards Lower Burma, see s. 16, Lower Burma Act XI of 1889; as to Oudh, see s. 19 of Act XVIII of 1876

Witnesses Whether Bound to Sign or Thumb-mark Their Deposition.—There is no obligation upon witnesses in Civil cases to sign or thumb-mark their depositions. Courts cannot order but can doubtless ask them to do so, and if they refuse, they cannot be compelled and are not liable to prosecution for an offence under s 180, I. P. C.—Emperor v. Fatih Ali, 37 P. W. R 1912 Cr.: 245 P. L. R 1912: 16 I. C. 521.

Signature of Judge.—A prosecution for perjury can be sustained if the deposition is not signed by the Judge.—Emperor v. Mayadeb, 6 C. 762.

" Shall be read over in the presence of the witness."—The provisions of Or. XVIII, r. 5 would be sufficiently complied with if the depositions were read over in a place within sight of the presiding Judge and from which the witness could draw the attention of the Judge to any mistakes or omissions discovered by him. Held further that even if a deposition was not read over in the manner and circumstances specified by Or. XVIII, r. 5, it would not be altogether inadmissible in evidence; Meango v. Baviah 24 M. L. T. 242: (1918) M. W. N. 239.

COMMENTARY.

The rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts, etc. See notes to r. 5.

The failure of the Civil Court in a case of perjury to make a memorandum of the evidence of the accused, when examined before it, does not vitiate the depositions if the evidence itself was duly recorded in the language in which it was delivered in such Court —In the matter of Behary Lal Bose, 9 W R Cr. 69.

In order to enable an insolvent to appeal from an order passed in the matter of his petition, notes of the evidence must be taken at the hearing by an officer of the Court —In re Lakhmidas Hansraj, 5 Bom. H. C. 63. See also Kallian Das Kirparam v. Trikam Lal, 9 Bom H. C. 307.

Where there is a conflict between a Judge's memoranda of evidence and the recorded depositions of witnesses, the Court must be guided by the latter.—Heera Nath Kooeree v. Burm Narain, 15 W. R. 375; 9 B. L. R. 274.

When evidence may be taken in English.

9. Where English is not the language of the Court, but all the parties to the suit who appear in person, and the pleaders of such as appear by pleaders, do not object to have such evidence as is given in English taken down in English, the Judge may so take it down. [S. 185.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule has been practically rendered useless by the notifications of the Local Governments under 138 to record depositions in English.

This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts, etc See notes to r. 5.

Any particular question and answer may be taken down.

10. The Court may, of its own motion or on the application of any party or his pleader, take down any particular question and answer, or any objection to any question, if there appears to be any special reason for so doing. [S. 186.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts, etc. See notes to r. 5.

Question objected to and allowed by Court.

11. Where any question put to a witness is objected to by a party or his pleader, and the Court allows the same to be put, the Judge shall take down the question, the answer, the objection and the name of the person making it, together with the decision of the court thereon. [S. 187.]

Remarks on demeanour of witnesses.

12. The Court may record such remarks as it thinks material respecting the demeanour of any witness while under examination.

COMMENTARY.

A witness who was examined stated his age to be 24 but the Judge made a note on his deposition that his age appeared to be 18 or 19 years Held that the Appellate Court could not come to a finding as to the age of the witness on the note of the Munsif which was not evidence in the case; Mahomed Hasan Mia v. Abdul Hamid, 50 I. C. 431.

13. In cases in which an appeal is not allowed, it shall not be necessary to take down the evidence of the witnesses in writing at length; but the Judge, as the examination of each witness proceeds, shall make a memorandum of the substance of what he deposes, and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge and shall form part of the record. [S. 189.]

Memorandum of evidence in unappealable cases

COMMENTARY.

Under this section, a Judge is bound to take down the substance of what each witness deposes; he cannot record in his own words merely a short abstract of the whole evidence.—Amrit Shaha v. Panchkari Shaha, 9 C W. N. 418 Followed in Chethrugope v Sri Charun, 9 C. W. N. 420. Followed in Ratna v Para, (1915) M W. N. 768, where in a S. C C. case the memorandum of evidence was held to be incomplete in as much as the evidence of defendant's witness was not at all found.

Under s. 148 (f), Bengal Tenancy Act (VII of 1885), the evidence of the witnesses in suits for recovery of rent is to be recorded under the provisions of this section, whether an appeal is allowed or not.

COMMENTARY.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High courts, etc. See notes to r 5.

14. (1) Where the Judge is unable to make a memorandum as required by this Order, he shall cause the reason of such inability to be recorded, and shall cause the memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court.

Judge unable to make such memorandum to record reasons of his inability.

(2) Every memorandum so made shall form part of the record. [S. 190.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "is unable" are substituted for "rendered unable in the old section. It does not appear what sort of inability is contemplated. This rule applies to rent suits under the Bengal Tenancy Act [see s. 143 (2)].

Chartered High Courts.—It does not apply to Chartered High Courts, etc. See notes to r. 5.

15. Where a Judge is prevented by death, transfer or other cause from concluding the trial of a suit, his successor may deal with any evidence or memorandum taken down or made under the foregoing rules as if such evidence or memorandum had been taken down or made by him or under his direction under the said rules and may proceed with the suit from the stage at which his predecessor left it.

(2) The provisions of sub-rule (1) shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to evidence taken in a suit transferred under section 24. [S. 191.]

COMMENTARY.

The proviso to s. 191 of the old Code has been omitted, probably in view of s. 150 of this Code, which has rendered it unnecessary. As to Chartered High Courts, see Or. XLIX, r. 4.

" May deal with any evidence."—This rule corresponds with s. 191, C. P. Code, 1882. That section was substituted for the original by s. 18, C. P. Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), in view of the decisions in Afzaunnissa v. Ali Ali, 8 A. 35, and Jogram v. Narain, 7 A. 857, where it was held that where a Judge after having recorded the evidence was removed and a new Judge came, the trial before the first Judge was abortive. These cases were discussed in the Full Bench Case of Jadu Rai v. Kanezak, 8 A. 576, and it was ruled that the new Judge had jurisdiction to deliver judgment after hearing arguments on both sides on the evidence taken by his predecessor. See also Kummoory v Kasa, (1912) M. W. N. 999.

Sub-rule (2) clearly contemplates the transfer after the case has been heard in part.—Palanisami v. Thondma, 26 M. 595. Referred to in Mahadeo v. Gajadhar, 10 C. W. N. 12.

The parties may, either expressly or impliedly, consent to the suit being determined by a Judge who has not been present throughout the trial, and to his taking into consideration evidence which has not been given before him Soorendro Pershad v. Nundun Misser, 21 W. R. 196. See also Syud Mahomed v. Oomdah, 13 W. R 184.

De Novo Trial After Remand.—A suit was tried by the munsif though objection was taken to plaintiff's maintaining it On appeal it was remanded for disposal after substitution of new plaintiff. Defendant asked the successor of the original munsif for a de novo trial which was refused. Held this rule did not apply and the prayer should have been granted; Krishnabai v. Collector of Tanjore, 21 M L J. 808: 9 I. C. 254.

If after remand of a case for disposal on the merits, the lower Court allows one of the parties to adduce further evidence, it ought to allow the other party also to do so whether or not it acted properly in letting in further evidence at all; Krishna Mills Ld v. Sundar Singh, 14 P. R. 1917: 39 I C 651.

Judgment by One Judge After Hearing of Evidence and Arguments by Another.—Where evidence and arguments were heard by one Judge, his successor can deliver judgment under this rule wihout hearing the vakils But his omission to give notice of delivery of judgment is a serious irregularity; Kamoory v. Kasa Subbiah, 12 M. L T. 332: 1912 M. W. N. 999: 17 I. C. 278.

A Judge who has not himself taken any portion of the evidence in a case ought not to decide it without hearing full arguments; Krishna Mills Ld. v. Sundar Singh, 14 P R 1917 39 I. C. 651.

A case was adjourned to a certain date for arguments, but the parties were not ready and the Judge gave them liberty to put in return arguments. By that time a new Judge came in and after a local inspection, he delivered judgment Held that the parties had sufficient opportunity to argue the case and the judgment was not vitiated; Harji Mal v. Devi Ditta Mal, 4 Lah 364

16. (1) Where a witness is about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or other sufficient cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court why his evidence should be taken immediately, the Court may, upon the application of any party or of the witness, at any time after the institution of the suit, take the evidence of such witness in manner hereinbefore provided.

Power to examine witness immediately.

(2) Where such evidence is not taken forthwith and in the presence of the parties, such notice as the Court thinks sufficient, of the day fixed for the examination, shall be given to the parties.

(3) The evidence so taken shall be read over to the witness, and, if he admits it to be correct, shall be signed by him, and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same and shall sign it, and it may then be read at any hearing of the suit. [S. 192.]

COMMENTARY.

This is known as examination de bene esse The words "and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same, and shall sign it," are new and have been added to sub-rule (3)

As to Chartered High Courts, see Or XLIX, r 4

A de bene esse examination of a witness about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court must be taken by the Court, unless the parties consent to the evidence being taken under a commission, Edwards v. Muller, 5 B L R 252

The Court has jurisdiction on a proper occasion when it is "necessary for the purposes of justice" to make an order for an examination de bene esse of witness upon an ex parte application, the order being taken by the applicant at his peril and subject to the risk of being discharged on sufficient grounds, Bidder v Bridges, 26 C D 1

Where witnesses are going abroad, or where from age, illness, infirmity or some other cause they are likely to be unable to attend at the trial, when they will be examined de bene esse and only in an extreme case will an order be made for examination ex parte; Warner v. Moses, 16 C. D. 100.

17. The Court may at any any stage of a suit recall any witness who has been examined and may (subject to the law of evidence for the time being in force) put such questions to him as the Court thinks fit. [S. 193.]

Court may recall and examine witness.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 193, C P Code, 1882, with some material changes The omission of the words "who has not departed" which occurred in the old section has enlarged the Court's power to recall witnesses.

The substitution of the words "law of evidence" for the words "Indian Evidence Act, 1872" has also enlarged its scope

The last para of the old section has been omitted in view of s. 150 of the present Code.

When a witness has been examined on behalf of the plaintiff, he cannot be recalled as witness for the defendant without leave obtained at the end of the first examination.—Mackintosh v Nobinmoney, 2 Ind. Jur. N. S. 160.

In five analogous suits certain witnesses were examined in four of the cases in which the plaintiff in one of the suits was not a party, and at his request the evidence taken in those cases was allowed to be used as evidence in this case, and then the witnesses were discharged Two days after this, he applied to have the witnesses recalled and re-examined, and his application was refused Held that the refusal was justified —Sreenath Roy v Goluck Chunder, 15 W R 348

18. The Court may at any stage of a suit inspect any property or thing, concerning which any question may arise. [New.]

Power of Court to inspect.

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new and the addition is an improvement Proviso 2 to s 60 of Evidence Act contains provision for production and inspection of a material thing and this rule should be read along with that

This rule vests an absolute discretion in the Munsif to make an inspection and the sanction of the District Judge is not necessary if he wishes to make an inspection without charges, Bodi Naidu v Chengama. 26 M. L J 9 32 I C. 297

Where at the instance of the plaintiff, the Munsif held a local inspection and in the course thereof at the instance of both the parties he examined a man whose statements he used as confirming his impression formed independently of them Held that it was not open, to any of the parties afterwards to turn round and say that the Munsif ought not to have taken those statements; Narain Singh v Gaburail Uraon, (1918) P. 131: 4 Pat. L. W. 189.

Under Or XVIII, r. 18, a Judge has power to visit a locality and to use the result of his local inspection for certain purposes, e g., for the purpose of enabling him to understand the questions that are being raised to follow the evidence, to apply it to test it. Although it is desirable that he should place the result of his local inspection on the record, yet the omission to do so is a purely formal defect and would not necessarily vitiate his judgment, Ram Chandra Rao v Babu Narayan Lal, 58 I C 909; Hari Charan v. Jitendra Nath, 65 I. C. 601.

A judgment should not be based solely on the result of a personal local inspection made by the Judge, Tirath Ram v. Md. Abdul Rahim, 73 I. C. 616 A I. R. 1923 Lah. 546

ORDER XIX.

AFFIDAVITS.

Power to order any point to be proved by affidavit.

1. Any Court may at any time for sufficient reason order that any particular fact or facts may be proved by affidavit, or that the affidavit of any witness may be read at the hearing, on such conditions as the Court thinks reasonable.

Provided that where it appears to the Court that either party bona fide desires the production of a witness for cross-examination, and that such witness can be produced, an order shall not be made authorizing the evidence of such witness to be given by affidavit. [S. 194.]

COMMENTARY.

Affidavit includes affirmation and declaration It is a declaration in writing before a person having authority to administer an oath. (As to this, see s. 189). The Court may order particular facts to be proved by affidavit unless the opposite party desires the production, of the deponent for cross-examination and he can be produced. The proviso is of general application, and the Court has no power to order an affidavit used on a previous application to be read at the hearing when the other party desires the witness to be produced; Blackburn Union v. Brooks, 7 C. D. 68; Elias Griffiths, 46 L. J. Ch. 806. An application for leave to read the fidavit of a witness at the trial should be made before the trial; Drewitt Drewitt, 58 L T. 684.

Where application is made to a Court to declare certain persons to touts, it is desirable that the Court should hear oral evidence, though is open to a Court under this rule and r. 2 to act upon affidavits filed, support.—Banu Sahib v. D. J. of Madura, 26 M. 596.

When a petition to the High Court states facts which are matters f records and which are supported by copies of the order passed by the ourt below, such a petition need not be supported by an affidavit.—amiran v. Fateh Ali, 32 C. 146

Service of summons or notice on the defendant, or notice on the espondent may be proved by affidavit —See Calcutta High Court C O. f 6th April, 1871. Instructions regarding the reception of affidavit.—ee Calcutta High Court C O. No. 32 of 10th September, 1880. Rules or the guidance of officers administering oath to declarants in the case f affidavits under the C. P. Code.—See Calcutta High Court Circular Order No. 32 of 10th September, 1880. Fee for administering oath to eclarant in an affidavit.—See Calcutta High Court Circular Order No. 2 of 20th September, 1878. In uncontested probate and certificate proceedings, the Court may direct that the facts may be proved by affidavit. —See Calcutta High Court's Rule No. 2 of March, 1907

Affidavit When Admissible in Evidence.—An affidavit is ordinarily not evidence unless person seeking to use it complies with the requirements of Or XIX, C. P Code, Krishna Ayyar v. Madhava Panikkar, 63 I. C. 258.

Affidavit Evidence by Agreement.—Parties may agree to take evidence by affidavit But unless the agreement specifies that the evidence is to be upon affidavit alone it may be supplemented by oral evidence, Glossop v. Heston & Isleworth Local Board, 47 L. J Ch. 536 If the affidavit evidence is unsatisfactory the Court has power to order oral examination of the witnesses notwithstanding the agreement; Lovell v. Wallis, 53 L J Ch 494

Cross-examination upon Affidavit.—When an affidavit has once been filed, the opposite party is entitled to cross-examine the deponent (except that on interolcutory applications there is a discretion, see next rule), whether a pary or a mere witness and whether the affidavit has been withdrawn without being used or not, Clark v Law, 2 K. & J. 28; Re Quartz Hill & Co., 21 C D. 642 The Court may refuse to act upon an affidavit when the deponent cannot be examined; Shea v. Green, 2 Times Rep. 533, The Parisian, 18 P. D 16

2. (1) Upon any application, evidence may be given by affidavit, but the Court may, at the instance of either party, order the attendance for cross-examination of the deponent.

Power to order attendance of deponent for cross-examination

(2) Such attendance shall be in Court, unless the deponent is exempt from personal appearance in Court, or the Court otherwise directs. [S. 195.]

COMMENTARY.

When a party makes any interlocutory application, in the course of a suit, he may file affidavit in support of his allegations; and it is in the discretion of the Court to order attendance of the deponent for cross-examination The opposite party may file counter-affidavits.

Compare R S C, Or XXXVIII, r. 1. The words used in the English rule are "upon any motion, petition or summons." The words used here "upon any application" are comprehensive enough to include them. This rule deals with affidavits on summary or interlocutory applications. In England [illegible] affidavit witness for cross- [illegible] as well as by notice to the [illegible] nder R. S. C., Or. XXXVIII, [illegible] As to persons exempted, see ss. 133, 13[illegible].

Affidavits on Interlocutory Applications and Cross-examination.—There is a discretion to order cross-examination in such cases There is no obligation on the Court to order cross-examination upon an affidavit filed on a motion; La Trinidad v. Brown, 36 W. R. 138 (Eng.). There can be no cross-examination on an affidavit disclosing names of the partners of a firm under Or. XXX, rr. 1, 2; Abrahams v. Dunlop Tyre Co., (1905) 1 K. B. 46 (C. A.).

Matters to which affidavits shall be confined.

3. (1) Affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the deponent is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications, on which statements of his belief may be admitted: provided that the grounds thereof are stated.

(2) The costs of every affidavit which shall unnecessarily set forth matters of hearsay or argumentative matter, or copies of or extracts from documents, shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid by the party filing the same. [S. 196.]

COMMENTARY.

Compare R. S. C., Or. XXXVIII, r. 3. The words used in the English rule are "interlocutory motions," and it was held by JESSEL, M. R., that these words apply to all interlocutory applications and not merely motions; In re New Callao Co., 30 W. R. (Eng.) 647.

Every affidavit shall be instituted in the suit or matter in which it is sworn. Affidavits in suits must be confined to facts within the knowledge of the deponent. Statements of belief are only allowed in affidavits on interlocutory orders provided the grounds thereof are stated Meaning of Affidavit.—A statement which merely recites facts to the "best of the information and belief" of the deponent, but does not state the source of his information is not an affidavit within the meaning of this rule and cannot be used as evidence in any judicial proceeding; Doraisami v. Govinda, 15 M. L. T. 377: 23 I. C. 877.

Affidavits, What to Contain.—Every affidavit should clearly express how much is a statement of the deponent's knowledge and how much a statement of belief, in which case the grounds of belief must be stated. Failure to distinguish between the two would be taken to mean they are swearing to facts within their own knowledge, which will entail all its necessary consequences, Chandrika Prasad v. Hira Lal, 73 I. C. 721.

Statements as to Belief must Contain the Grounds Thereof.—Evidence on information and belief though generally admissible on interlocutory applications as a matter of necessity, is not admissible on a proceeding, which though interlocutory in form, finally decides the rights of the parties.—Per WOOD, V.-C., in Bird v. Lake, 1 H. & M. 118; Gilbert v. Endean, 9 C. D. 259.

In practice, the grounds of information and belief are frequently not stated. But the opposite party is entitled to object; Bidder v. Bridges, 26 C. D. 1. In Quartz & Co. v. Beall, 20 C. D. 508, JESSEL, M. R., impressed on the necessity and importance of the statement of the grounds of information and belief. The practice was strongly condemned by the Court of Appeal in In re J L Young Man Co., (1909) 2 Ch 753: see Lumley v. Osborne, (1901) 1 K. B. 582. In Gobind v. Kunj, 10 C. L. J 414, the High Court commented on the considerable laxity in these matters and pointed out the necessity of the strict enforcement of this rule.

The provisions of this rule should be strictly observed. Every affidavit should clearly express how much is a statement of deponent's knowledge and how much a statement of his belief, and the grounds of belief must be stated with sufficient particularly, Padmabati v. Rasik, 37 C 259. 6 I. C. 666 See also, Damodar v Panalal, 9 Bom. L. R. 540.

Offensive and Scandalous Matters.—Affidavits should be confined to matters pertinent and relevant, and they may be ordered to be taken of the file if scandalous and irrelevant matters are inserted; Cracknall v Janson, 11 C. D 12, Kernick v Kernick, 12 W. R. 835 (Eng.), or they may be expunged, Warner v Mossee, W. N. (1881) 69. See also In re Jessop, W. N (1910) 128 Court may strike out scandalous matters from pleading, see Or VI, r 16. Allegations of dishonesty are scandalous, but " nothing can be scandalous which is relevant;" per COTTON, L J, in Fisher v. Owen, (1878) 8 Ch D. 653 The sole question is, as SELBOURNE, L. C., said in Christie v Christie, L. R. 8 Ch. 503, whether the matters alleged to be scandalous would be admissible in evidence to show the truth of any allegation in the pleading which is material with reference to the relief prayed. Quoted with approval in Gobind v Kunj, 10 C. L. J. 414: 14 C. W. N. 153 37 C. 259

Defective Affidavit.—Affidavits with defect by misdescription of parties or otherwise in the title of jurat may be received by the Court (see English Or. XXXVIII, r 14) Affidavits with the omission of the words " before me," Eddowes v. Argentine Mercantile Agency Co., 38 W. R. 629, (Eng), or with interlineation not initialled by the Notary before whom it was sworn were received, In re Cloake, 61 L. J. Ch. 69.

As to the duty of solicitors in preparing affidavits to see to their accuracy, see Rummens v Cecil, 129 L. T. J. 263.

ORDER XX.

JUDGMENT AND DECREE.

Judgment when pronounced.

1. The Court after the case has been heard, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders. [S. 198.]

COMMENTARY.

"After the case has been heard."—The meaning of this rule is that the judgment is to be given upon the examination of witnesses by the Judge himself and not upon perusal of depositions taken before another officer, except where such evidence is expressly allowed by the Code to be taken (e.g., in Or. XVIII, r. 15 or in Or. XXVI).—Naranbhai v. Naroshankar, 4 Bom. H. C. 98.

A Judge may at the close of the hearing, state at once orally the judgment which he intends to record and deliver —Anonymous, 5 Mad. H. C. Ap. 8.

Or. XX, r. 1, C. P. Code contemplates that all arguments should be heard before the case can be regarded as ripe for judgment. Where a party to a suit died after arguments were partly heard but not completed and the Court pronounced judgment without bringing his legal representative on record, the judgment is a nullity; The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society v Ammalanadhurni, 48 I. C. 859.

Delivery of judgment in a S. C. C. case seven months after the hearing, is an illegality; Rajab Khan v. Langdaji, 8 N. L. R. 91. 15 I. C. 938.

Pronounce.—Pronouncing a judgment within the meaning of Or. XX, does not require a reading out of the whole judgment by the Court, Kutuabuddin v. Gulam Rabbani, 94 I. C. 121

Judgment in Open Court.—This rule should be strictly followed. The practice not uncommon of omitting to pronounce judgment in open Court is not only in direct opposition to this rule, but is highly inconvenient and deprives the Court and the litigants of a valuable safeguard against error Such delivery enables immediate rectification of slips or errors that may occur and which may be pointed out by the pleaders This saves trouble, expense, and delay of rectification by review or appeal; Bai Dahi v Hargovandas, 30 B. 455· 8 Bom L R 229 Pronouncing of judgment out of Court, though an irregularity was held to be no ground of appeal, Nilmoney Singh v. Bhoobany, Marsh 1864, 327

The posting of a notice on the board of the Court announcing the result of an appeal is not a sufficient compliance with Or. XX, r. 1, C. P.

Code, as to the pronouncement of judgments in open Courts; Nagiah v. Seshamma, 41 M L J 385 14 L. W. 514.

Judgment on Holiday.—This is not illegal. The English rule with regard to Sundays being dies non does not apply in India; Venkatesa v. Kolammal, (1912) M W N 65, referring to Sheo Ram v. Thakur, 30 A. 186, where it was held that disposal of a suit on a Sunday is no irregularity.

Due Notice.—Omission to give notice of delivery of judgment is a serious irregularity, Kamoory v Kasa Subbiah, 17 I C. 278: (1912) M W. N. 999, Ma Hla Dun v. Moung Shwe Ya, 9 Bur. L. T. 250; 38 I C 575. A judgment delivered without notice to parties is not a judgment pronounced within the meaning of this rule; Kharak v. Lachman, 47 A 332: 86 I. C 869 A I R 1925 A 293 If an appeal is filed beyond time through the negligence of the Judge in not giving notice of the date fixed for delivery of judgment, the appellant cannot be held responsible, and the appeal should be admitted under s 5, Limitation Act; Ma Me Thin v. Mg San, 27 I C 784, 8 Bur L T. 99. Absence of plaintiff to hear judgment, does not justify dismissal of suit; Nundlal v. Shankru, 165 P. W. R. 1911

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original Civil jurisdiction [Or XLIX, r 3, cl (5)]

Power to pronounce judgment written by Judge's predecessor.

2. A Judge may pronounce a judgment written but not pronounced by his predecessor. [S. 199.]

COMMENTARY.

Predecessor's Judgment.—A judgment written by a Judge, and pronounced by his successor in open Court, was held to be a valid judgment Parbutti v. Bhukun, 8 B L R Ap 98: 17 W. R. 475. See also, Dulal Chandra v. Ram Narain, 31 C. 1057 (1060); Sheikh Ala Bux v Sheikh Kadir Ahmed, 29 C L J 568, Abdul Majid v. Nur Mahomed, 50 I. C 641. A Full Bench of Calcutta High Court held that a judgment written ten months after the Judge was transferred and had ceased to have jurisdiction in the particular division fulfilled the conditions of this rule, Satyendra v. Kastura, 35 C. 756 F B 12 C. W. N. 682: 7 C. L J. 666 (9 W R. 1 not applicable, 17 W R 475 followed). Followed in Basant v. Secy. of State, 35 A. 368: 11 A. L J. 411: 19 I. Where the arguments in a suit were heard by an officiating Subordinate Judge who then reverted as Munsif and the judgment written by him was pronounced by his successor in office, held that even if he wrote the judgment after he ceased to be a Subordinate Judge and reverted as Munsif, the judgment would not thereby be vitiated in any way; Lilawathi Kuar v Chootey Singh, 42 A. 362: 18 A. L. J. 356 (35 A. 368 and 35 C 756 F B. refd. to); see also, Musst. Kishin Bai v. Budhuram, 35 P. W. R 1919: 49 I. C. 724.

Where the Judge who had heard the evidence and arguments in a case was then succeeded by another Judge and subsequently wrote out and signed judgment in the case which was pronounced by his successor after notice to the parties, held that the judgment was valid; Lakhiama Jin v. Lok Nath, 5 Pat. L. J. 147: 1 Pat. L. T. 77.

Separate Judgment by Successor.—Where a Judge wrote out a judgment placed it upon record and was transferred before the date of delivery, his successor took a different view and delivered his own judgment.—Held that he was competent to do so. The words "may pronounce" are not mandatory; Lachman v. Ram Kishan, 33 A. 236: 7 A. L. J. 1189; [Nicholas v. Baker, (1899) 44 Ch. D. 262 referred to].

Legality of Judgment Recorded and Dated by Predecessor but Pronounced by Successor.—See Bhalla v Fazal Muhammad, 58 I. C. 143: 97 P. L. R. 1920.

One Judge Ceasing to be Judge from a Bench of Five.—Where after hearing a case, one Judge from out of a Bench of five Judges ceased to be a Judge before he could deliver the judgment which he had already written, held that his judgment will not be a legal judgment; Chinnu Pillia v. Kalimuthu, 21 M. L J. 216: 9 I. C. 596. Quære: Whether the judgment of a Bench consisting of four Judges where the question was referred to the decision of a Bench of five Judges would be valid?

An appeal was heard by a Bench of two Judges one of whom subsequently went on temporary leave. In his absence the judgment signed by him was read out by his colleague who delivered a separate dissenting judgment. Held that the judgments were valid in law, Adwaita v. Saroj, 23 C. L. J. 592.

Order XX, Rule 2, If Mandatory.—Or. XX, r. 2 is not mandatory, and a Judge may, if he sees reason to do so, refuse to pronounce a judgment written by his predecessor. The pronouncement of a judgment is the last act of the trial of a suit and is a material part of the trial. It is not an act which can be performed by any other person than a Judge of the Court in which the suit was tried. Where, however, the predecessor in office has ceased to exercise judicial function, his order is a nullity; Maung Ba v. Maung Ye, 76 I. C. 170.

Rule Applies to Order.—A written order deciding one of several issues in a case is a judgment within the meaning of s 2 and can under this rule be pronounced by the successor of a Judge who passed it; Narpat v. Devi Das, 14 I. C. 371.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original Civil Jurisdiction [Or XLIX, r 3, cl (5)]

Judgment to be signed.

3. The judgment shall be dated and signed by the Judge in open Court at the time of pronouncing it and, when once signed, shall not afterwards be altered or added to, save as provided by section 152 or on review. [S. 202.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is distinct prohibition against any alteration of a signed judgment save as provided by s. 152 or on review; Mt. Husaina v. Sahib Nur, 20 I. C. 3. 159 P W. R 1913. The Court has inherent power to amend a decree even when s. 152 has no application; Mohabir v. Chandra Sekhar, 19 C. W. N 1021. 28 I C 304 Sec. 152 relates to amendment of judgments, decrees or orders All the rulings regarding alteration or amendment of decree, etc , are noted there. " Dated and signed."—The judgment is to be signed at the time of pronouncing it.—Dulal v Ram Narain, 31 C 1057, p. 1064.

Interpretation of the terms " date of judgment " and " judgment shall be dated by the Judge in open Court at the time of pronouncing it "—Mamtazal Huq v. Nirbhai Singh, 9 C. 711, F. B. 12 C. L. R. 318 (7 C. 127: 8 C. L R. 409 dissented from).

" Shall not afterwards be altered."—It is irregular to add to a judgment once delivered when the effect of the addition is to alter the grounds on which the judgment proceeded A Judge may append to his judgment additional reasons, merely to show more fully the correctness of the decision at which he has arrived, although such a course is not strictly warranted by the C. P. Code.—Snadden v Todd Finalay & Co , 7 W. R. 286.

Immediately after the judgment was pronounced, the plaintiff's pleader stated that there were errors in the judgment The Judge at once corrected two errors and came to a final conclusion Held, there was no error of procedure vitiating the judgment —Ram Prosad v. Sham Narain, 6 C. L. J. 22 (24-25). The provision for delivery of judgment in open Court (r. 1) is intended as a safe guard against errors which may be pointed out by the pleaders or parties, Bai Dahi v. Hargovan, 30 B. 455.

Where a judgment is dictated to a shorthand writer, the revision contemplated cannot be of the effective part of the judgment and must be of the nature referred to in s. 152 and one relating to " clerical and arithmetical mistakes arising from any accidental slip or omission "; Hari Krishna v. Arur Pandither, 18 L. W. 105: (1923) M. W N. 354.

Where a judge delivered a judgment but deferred passing a decree pending the production of succession certificate, it was not competent to cancel that judgment and to pronounce a second judgment inconsistent therewith; Kishan v. Ganga, 31 A 153: 6 A. L J. 54: 1 I. C. 810

Where a Court records findings on some out of several issues it cannot afterwards add to his judgment further findings on the remaining issues although they lead to the same conclusions as before; Shedaya v. Shivaya, 4 Bom L. R. 129.

A Judge sitting on the Original Side may revise his judgment after delivery, and in so doing may add to it —Per WOODROFFE & COX, JJ, Weston v. Peary Mohan, 40 C. 89. 18 C W. N. 185

Loss of Judgment.—Where a judgment has been lost, it is open to the Judge to re-write from memory the substance of it. It cannot be expected that the C. P. Code would provide for such a contingency.—Narsingh v. Harkhan, 8 C. L. J. 521. A Court has inherent power to reconstruct its records when destroyed; Raj Gir v. Iswardhari, 11 C. L. J. 243.

Effect of Contravention of Provisions of Rules 1, 2 & 3.—The infringement of a procedure prescribed by Or. XX, rr. 1, 2 and 3 of the C. P. Code constitutes an irregularity which may be waived by the parties; Fort Gloster Jute Manufg. Co. v. Chandra Kumar, 46 C 979: 29 C. L. J. 438.

Judgments of Small Cause Courts.

4. (1) Judgments of a Court of Small Causes need not contain more than the points for determination and the decision thereon.

Judgments of other Courts.

(2) Judgments of other Courts shall contain a concise statement of the case, the points for determination, the decision thereon, and the reasons for such decision. [S. 203.]

COMMENTARY.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Court, see Or XLIX, r. 3, cl. (5).

Contents of Judgment of S. C. Courts.—This section does not relieve the Judge of Small Cause Court from the necessity of giving some indication in his judgment that he has understood the facts of the case in which such judgment is given. Where a judgment in a Small Cause Court suit was in the following words· "It is not proved that the defendant paid the debt to the plaintiff. Ordered the claim be decreed with costs." Held that this was no judgment at all.—Malik Rahmat v. Siva Prasad, 13 A. 533. See also Bai Jasoda v. Bamansha, 23 B. 334 (13 A. 277 folld.); Shah Jahan v Jahande, 18 I. C 216: 109 P. L. R. 1913; Kandaswami v Ramalinga, 12 L. W. 285. But see Denonath v. Ram Kumar, 6 C. L. J. 527, where it has been held that a Small Cause Court Judge is no bound to fully set out the reasons for his findings and Ahmed v. Asiatic Petroleum Co 7 I C. 591: 4 S. L R. 17, Protap Chandra v. Abhimani, 48 I C. 752.

No judgment of a S C Court which does not specifically set out the points for determination is a legal decision, Hasan v Jasraj, 7 N L. R 146 Where a Judge in a judgment of a Small Cause Court clubs together all points for determination and makes a statement merely to the effect that he finds all the issues in favour of the plaintiffs, it cannot be regarded as a compliance with the provisions of Or. XX, r 4; Moideen Koya v. Moideen Kutti, 49 M. L J 354: 90 I C. 968. A I. R. 1925 M 1229.

Para. 1 of the rule applies also to Courts invested with S. C. Court powers, Narayan v Bhagu, 31 B. 314: 4 Bom. L. R. 327.

Although under the law, a Small Cause Court is not required to frame issues, yet where the matter in dispute is not very simple and various questions arise for decision, the Court should indicate to the parties what the points are on which evidence has to be adduced and give them an opportunity to produce their evidence thereon; Pir Muhammad Sadr-ud-din v. Khair-ud-din, 59 I. C. 703

Under Or XX, r 4, a Judge in a Small Cause suit may reduce his remarks to a minimum and they need not contain more than the points for determination and the decision thereon, but this minimum must be intelligible; Srimati Suradhani v Hari Charan, 3 Pat L. T. 122: 64 I. C. 226. See also, Baul Chandra v Sheikh Abdul, 67 I C 851: Koppa Kurup v. Velavi Chettichiar, 42 M L J 583 15 L W. 642: 31 M. L. T. 124 (H. C).

"Need not contain."—As a matter of practice, however, it is usual, except in comparatively unimportant cases of every day occurrence such as those for the recovery of petty debts, to set out the particulars of the suit and to give reason, for the decision, arrived at, thus enabling the High Court, in revision, to satisfy itself that the decree or order was according to law without the necessity of perusing the whole record. This practice should be followed. The words "need not" were not meant to be read as shall not in Or XX, r 4, C P Code The matter is largely within the discretion of Judges of Small Cause Courts, but their discretion should be exercised with due regard to the circumstances of each case; Maung Sa v. Ma U Ma, 1 Rang 274 A I R. 1923 Rang. 252: 2 Bur. L. J. 108

Judgment of Appellate Courts.—See s 96 and Or. XLI, rr. 4, 32 and notes. In reversing a decision, the Appellate Court should state the facts, and also the points which are raised before it, and then its decision on such points and the reasons, Basarat v Roshan, 7 I. C. 421.

Contents of Judgments of Other Courts—Grounds to be Stated.—There must be a distinct finding one way or other on all material issues.—Shumo-Moyee v. Joy Narain, 8 W R 481 The reasons for their decisions must in all cases be recorded by the Judges of the High Courts in India.—Kachekalyana Rungappa v Kachivigajaya, 2 Bom L. R. 72, P. C.: 11 W. R 33 P C Judgment unsupported by reasons cannot be accepted as legal findings of fact.—Nigappa v Shivappa, 19 B 323.

A Judge ought not to import his own private knowledge or opinion into a case, but ought simply to decide the issues before him and on the evidence before him —Mehcroonissa v Bhashaye Merdha, 2 W. R., Act X, 29; Lalla Mewa Lall v Sree Mahota, 25 W. R. 152; Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal, 26 W. R. 55, L R. 3 I A 259 See also Meethun Bibee v. Busheer Khan, 7 W. R 27: 11 M. I A. 213; Vallabha v. Madhusudanan, 12 M 495, and Durga v Ramdoyal, 39 C. 153

Where a judicial officer decides a dispute solely on knowledge gained by him on personal inspection and without any reference to the evidence in the case, the judgment is liable to be set aside on revision; Abhul Huq v. Mahamed Din, 67 I. C. 302: A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 311.

A Court is not precluded from basing its decision upon a ground not specifically pleaded by either of the parties.—Thakuri v. Kundun, 17 A. 280.

Where specific issues were not framed, but the points had in fact been determined the judgment was not defective; Hussan v. Asiatic Petroleum Co., 5 M. L. T. 215.

There is nothing uncommon for the Court to arrive at a conclusion that the truth is not what either party says, but that it is something else; In re Gopala Aiyar, 2 M W N. 197

Where Court Omits to Give Reasons for Decision.—Where the lower Court omitted to record a decision on material points; the case was sent back to state the points for decision on those points consecutively.—Tatur Khawas v. Jagannath, 7 Bom L. R. App. 14: 15 W. R. 131.

A Deputy Collector having died before giving his reasons for a decree, the whole of the subsequent proceedings was held to be bad, and the case was remanded to the Collector to be tried de novo upon the evidence on the record; Golam Hossein v. Ram Doyal, 12 W. R 152.

Written Opinions are Not Judgments.—Written opinions sent to the Registrar by Judge who had retired or died before the judgment are not judgments, but merely memoranda of the opinions and arguments of such Judges.—Mahomed Akil v. Asadunnissa Bibee, Bom. L. R. Sup. Vol. 774: 9 W. R. 1. See also Rohilkhand and Kumaon Bank v. Row, 6 A. 468.

One Judgment in Several Cases.—A Judge should not allow his judgment in one case to govern his decision in another, even if the subject of dispute is of a similar nature, and the evidence similar in character, when the parties are not the same, and the subject-matter of the suit is different. —Surenrdanath v Purmanund, 15 W R. 342.

In analogous cases, where the parties applied to have them all tried together, and that the evidence in one case shall be made use of in the trial of others, the Judge should try all the cases together.—Nehal Singh v. Ali Ahmed, 15 W R. 10 See also, Enayetoollah v. Radha Charan, 15 W. R. 395.

Where a judgment in one case governed other cases. Held that the filing of that judgment was a substantial compliance with the requirements of the law, and that the filing of a short judgment referring to the other judgment was merely formal, and the delay excusable —Mothoora v. Kishen, W R 1864 Mis 9, and Bhyrab Nath v Huro Soondaree, W. R (1864), 28.

Full Bench Decision.—A decision of a Full Bench is binding on all Division Courts, unless it is by Special Bench or unless a contrary rule is laid down by the Privy Council; Kishen v Tipan, 5 C L. J. 569.

Construction of Judgment.—In construing a judgment, if difficulty is found in reconciling the conclusion ultimately arrived at with the previous part, such part must be rejected; Byhunt v Dhunput, 19 W R 104

Where the final sentence in a judgment of the High Court made no mention of a matter specified in the previous words, the District Judge was held entitled to follow the effect of previous judgments delivered by the same Judge of the High Court.—Tarachand v. Ramjeeban, 22 W. R. 202.

Every judgment must be read as applicable to the particular facts proved or assumed to be proved, since the generality of expressions which may be found there are not intended to be expositions of the whole law, but are governed and qualified by the particular facts of the case in which such expressions are to be found.—Kishen Pershad v. Tipan Pershad, 5 C. L. J. 569.

"Unintelligible judgment."—Where a judgment is meagre, unsatisfactory [illegible] and the case to the lower Co[illegible] hearing arguments afresh; [illegible] R. 1922 Lah. 122.

Mode of Considering the Weight and Value of Evidence.—Evidence of relatives—Ground for discrediting evidence—Mode of dealing with evidence—Credibility of witnesses.—Debi Pershad v. Radha Chowdhrani, 62 C. 81 P. C.

Where the witnesses cited on either side directly contradict each other and it is impossible to reconcile these conflicting statements the only safe guide to follow in such a case is that afforded by the action and conduct of the parties and the contents of the documents produced—Kishori Lal v. Chunni Lal, 13 C. W. N. 370, P. C.: 9 C. L. J. 172.

The testimony of a person who swears that a certain conversation took place, is of more value than that of one who says that it did not.—Chowdhry Deby v. Chowdhry Dowlut, 6 W. R. 55, P. C.: 3 M. I. A. 347.

Although it may be a legitimate objection to the credibility of a witness, yet to state broadly and generally that because a witness had given evidence in other cases therefore he is unworthy of credit, would only tend to increase the indisposition of respectable persons to come into Court as witnesses.—Lall Beharee v. Gopee Beebee, 18 W. R. 285, P. C.

Admissibility of Judgments Inter Partes.—See notes to s. 11.

Court to state its decision on each issue.

5. In suits in which issues have been framed, the court shall state its finding or decision, with the reasons therefor, upon each separate issue, unless the finding upon any one or more of issues is sufficient for the decision of the suit. [S. 204.]

COMMENTARY.

"Shall state its finding or decision."—Where the finding upon any one or more of the issues is sufficient to dispose of the case, it is unnecessary to determine the other issues.—Barham Deo Narain v. Mackenzie, 10 C. 1095. See, however, Tarakunt v. Puddo Monee, 5 W. R. 63, P. C.: 10 M. I. A. 476. Followed in Esmail Khan v. Hari Charan, 9 C. W. N. 60, where it has been held that this rule makes it imperative upon the Court to pronounce its opinion upon such issues as may be necessary for the disposal of the suit, but it does not disable it from determining the other issues also. See also, Devara Konda v. Devara Konda, 4 M. 194 (2 A. 497 and 6 C. 919 dissented from). See also, 1 L. W. 416: 24 I. C. 87, where it has held that in appealable cases the Courts below should pronounce judgment on all points raised so as to obviate any necessity for remand.

A finding unaccompanied by the reasons for it, as required by this rule is not a conclusive finding of fact binding on a Court of second appeal. —Kamat v. Kamat, 8 B. 368 (370). See also, Purshotam Sakharam v. Durgoji, 14 B. 452, and Ningappa v. Shirappa, 19 B 323 [9 B. 452 (454) referred to].

Where a suit is dismissed on a preliminary objection, the Judge should not record any findings on the merits, and if he does so, such findings will, on appeal be expunged from record.—Nanda v. Banamali, 11 C. 544. See also Baldev v. Dharam, 26 A. 204 (5 W. R. 63, P. C., explained).

Findings in Judgment to be Definite and Precise.—The findings of fact should be specifically and precisely stated, whatever reasons therefor may be contained in the judgment; Balak v. Aly Husain, 87 I. C. 304.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original Civil jurisdiction [Or. XLIX, r. 3, cl. (5)].

Contents of decree.

6. (1) The decree shall agree with the judgment: it shall contain the number of the suit, the names and descriptions of the parties, and particulars of the claim, and shall specify clearly the relief granted or other determination of the suit. [Para. 1, s. 206.]

(2) The decree shall also state the amount of costs incurred in the suit and by whom or out of what property and in what proportions such costs are to be paid. [Para 2, s. 206.]

(3) The Court may direct that the costs payable to one party by the other shall be set off against any sum which is admitted or found to be due from the former to the latter. [S. 221.]

COMMENTARY.

In sub-rule (1) the words "as stated in the register," which followed the word "claims" in the old Code, have been omitted. The contents of the decree therefore are not prepared by reference to register but by reference to the pleadings, so that they may be clear and unambiguous.

In sub-rule (2) the words "by whom or out of what property" are new. The addition is no doubt an improvement. The other changes are only verbal. Sub-rule (2) also includes the provisions contained in 219 of the old Code. Cf. s. 33.

(g) In suits to set aside deeds —In a suit to set aside a deed of sale, if it be found that a portion of its consideration was valid, it is a correct principle to uphold the deed as to that portion of the land, which bears same proportion to the whole quantity conveyed, as the amount of the valid consideration bore to the whole amount of the consideration — Rajaram v Luchmun, 4 B L R A C 118 · 12 W. R. 478

In a suit by the heirs of a purdanashin lady to set aside a deed of sale executed by her whilst living in the house of the purchaser Held that where the substantial relief prayed for is that the deeds should be set aside, the Court is not justified in substituting therefor a mere declaration of the plaintiff's title —Thakoordeen v Ali Hossein, 13 B L R. 427, P. C.: 21 W. R 340, P C (8 W R, 311 modified).

(h) In suits for ejectment.—The decree for ejectment passed under s 66 (2) of the B. T. Act (VIII of 1885), need not incorporate the terms as to the ejectment being avoided by payment within 15 days from the date of the decree These terms are rather in the nature of a direction to the Court of execution.—Bodh Narain v. Mahomed Moosa, 26 C. 689: 3 C W. N. 628.

In a suit for ejectment, where no notice to quit was served, a decree directing to vacate the land at the expiry of six months from the date of the decree cannot be passed.—Abu Bakar v. Venkataramana, 18 B. 107. But see Ram Narain v. Fatema Sogra, 23 W. R. 399.

(i) Endowment —Form of decree in a suit for management of charitable trust for account and for drawing up a scheme for future management of the temple and its funds.—Chota Lal v. Monahar, 24 B. 50, P. C . 4 C. W. N. 23, P. C.

(j) Against heirs —In a decree in a suit upon a bond against the heir of the deceased obligor, the decree should direct that the debt is to be realised from the assets of the deceased in the hands of the heir.—Anund v. Munarut, Marsh. 611 See also Girdar v Bai Shiv, 8 B. 809 (2 M 336 followed).

(k) Against a Hindu widow —In a decree against a Hindu widow it should be stated whether the decree is a personal decree or one against her as representing her deceased husband —Ram Kishore v. Kally Kant, 6 C. 479. 8 C L R. 1.

In a suit by a reversioner against a Hindu widow to set aside her alienation, the Court cannot direct possession to be given to the reversioner but can only declare the sale invalid.—Goluck v. Gopal, W. R (1864), 250.

(l) For removal and worship of idol.—In a suit by the plaintiffs for a declaration of their right to remove an idol to their house, and keep it there for the period of their turn of worship. Held that the Court should define the precise period for which the plaintiffs were entitled to worship the idol.—Ram Soondar v. Taruck Chunder, 19 W. R. 28.

(m) Value of improvements.—In a suit for possession of immoveable property, enquiries as to the value of improvements must be held before decree, and cannot be reserved for determination in the execution department; Nellaya Variyath v Vadikapat Manakeal, 3 M. 382.

(n) Against a Mahomedan widow —Where a woman is in possession of her husband's estate as security for unpaid dower, the proper decree in a suit against her for possession by the heir is a decree for possession subject to the amount due, with a direction for an account as to mesne profits received by her.—Mahomed Ameerodeen v. Mozuffer Hossein, 5 B. L. R. 570; 14 W. R. 5, P. C

(o) For maintenance.—In a decree for maintenance, Courts should insert words which would enable them on application to set aside or modify their orders, by altering the rate fixed in the decree, as circumstances might require.—Gopikabai v. Dattatraya, 24 B. 386.

A prospective decree for contingent arrears of maintenance is quite irregular; the non-payment of any arear due would be fresh cause of action, consisting a basis for a suit.—Julobai Chitta Kooer v. Bhagee

Kooer, 6 N.W. P. 41. But in Bishnoo Shambhog v. Manjamma, 9 B. 108, it has been held that decree declaring a right to maintenance, and directing payment of arrears should contain an order directing future maintenance. See also Ashutosh Bannerjee v. Lukhimoni, 19 C. 139, F. B.

To avoid any difficulty in executing a decree for maintenance out of property charged with payment of the allowance, and make a fresh suit unnecessary in case of default in payment, a receiver should be appointed by the decree itself with directions to take possession of the estate out of the sale-proceeds to pay the allowance for maintenance.—Hemanginee v. Kumode, 26 C. 441: 3 C. W. N. 139 (8 C. 703: 14 C, 661; 15 C. 667; 17 C. 699; 21 C. 31; 22 C. 813 and 903; 16 M. 436, and 16 A. 415 referred to).

(q) In Partition suits.—In a suit for partition, the Court shall determine whether the plaintiff is entitled to a partition, and shall ascertain who the several persons entitled to the property are, and shall direct by a preliminary decree that commissioners be appointed to make the partition.—Gyan Chunder v. Durga, 7 C. 318; 8 C. L. R. 418. See also, Bhoobun Moyi v. Shurut Sundery, 12 C. 275; and Krishnasami v. Rajagopala, 18 M. 73.

In a suit for partition, by a purchaser from a co-sharer, the decree need not be for a general partition of the entire property. In the absence of any request, the Court is not bound to determine what is the share of each co-sharers to compel him to take that share by making a general partition.—Murarrao v. Sitaram, 23 B. 184 and 188.

(r) In suits for possession.—If a plaintiff in joint possession has been illegally ousted from possession of any portion of the property by a co-owner, he is entitled to be restored to such joint possession.—Bhairon Rai v. Saran Rai, 26 A. 588, F. B. Followed in Ram Charan v. Kauleshar Rai, 27 A. 153, and distinguished in Jagarnath v. Jainath, 27 A. 88.

In a suit for exclusive possession of immoveable property, if the Court finds that the property belongs to the parties jointly, the Court is competent to give the plaintiff a decree for joint possession.—Wahid Alam v. Safat Alam, 12 A. 556 (10 A 627 distinguished). See, however, Antu Singh v. Mandil Singh, 15 A. 412; and Parashram v Miraji, 20 B. 569; and Nana v Appa, 20 B 627.

A purchaser at a Court sale ought not to be put in exclusive possession of the whole undivided land by virtue of a decree against one coparcener only —Kallapa v Venkatesh, 2 B. 676

In a suit by a purchaser of undivided property, the plaintiff's remedy is in a suit by partition .He cannot be put in joint possession with the other members of the family.—Balaji Anant v. Ganesh Janardan, 5 B 499. But see Indrasa v Sadu, 5 B. 505 (note), and Antaji v. Duttaji, 19 B. 36.

In a suit by a member of an undivided Hindu family for a declaration of his right to a portion of the joint estate sold in execution of a decree against another member, the plaintiff should have a decree declaring that he is entitled to joint possession along with the execution purchaser.—Babaji Lakshman v. Vasudeb, 1 B. 95 (12 B. 188 followed); see also Ramchandra Kashi v. Damodhar, 20 B. 467.

In a decree for possession under a mokarrari lease a condition as to the payment of rent should be omitted.—Imambandi v. Kamleswari, 14 C. 109, P. C.

Where a Court in a suit for possession and mesne profits passes a decree for possession, and directs inquiry into the amount of mesne profits the direction for inquiry as to mesne profits need not necessarily be contained in the decree.—Fatima Bibi v. Abdul Majid, 14 A. 531 (19 C. 182 referred to).

If a stranger builds on the land of another, although believing it to be his own, the owner is entitled to recover the land with the building on it, unless there is delay and laches of owner in suing for possession. The decree in such a case should be that the plaintiff should recover the land with liberty to the defendant forthwith to commence to remove his building and to restore the property to its former condition, the same to be completed within a fixed period from the date of the decree, and in default the plaintiff to be at liberty to remove the building at the expense of the defendant.—Premji Jivan v. Cassum Juma, 20 B. 298.

(s) Under the Specific Relief Act.—In a suit for specific performance of contract, where insufficient Court-fee was paid, the procedure to be adopted in preparing the decree and directing payment of Court-fees.—Krishnasami v. Sundarappayyar, 18 M. 415.

Suit to recover specific goods in hands of third parties—Alternative claim for value as compensation—Form of decree—Murugesa v. Jotharam, 22 M. 478.

Where a decree was passed under s. 9 of Act I of 1877, giving the plaintiff possession, and directing that the costs of removing huts and filling up excavations should be paid by the defendant; held that the latter portion of the decree was beyond the scope of a possessory decree under the above Act.—Tilak Chandra v. Fatik Chandra, 25 C. 803.

Construction of Decree.—(a) General cases.—In execution, a decree must be construed by its own terms, and not by the plaint.—Nubo Kishore v. Anund Mohun, 17 W. R. 19. A decree cannot be extended beyond the real meaning of its terms.—Budun v. Ram Chandra, 11 B. 537. See also Muhammad Sulaiman v. Muhammad Yar, 6 A. 80. But in Lachmi Narain v. Jwala Nath, 18 A. 344, it has been held that where the decree is ambiguous in its terms, it is competent to the Court executing it to refer to the pleadings to ascertain its precise meaning. In construing a decree the terms of which are ambiguous, the Court should put such a construction upon it as would make it in accordance with law.—Bakur Sajjad v. Udit Narain, 21 A. 361, see also Jirbhu Narain v. Rup Singh, 20 A. 397; Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain, 19 A. 174 and Jawahir Mal v. Kastur Chand, 13 A. 343. It is open to an execution Court to construe the decree in the light of the plaint and judgment.—Yagnarayana v. Makyya, (1915) M. W. N. 914.

Directions to pay money by instalments and in default the property on which decree-holder had a lien to be sold. Held that the defendants were made personally liable; Aruna Chelam v. Atmakumar, 10 M. L. T. 218.

The principle of construction applies equally whether the decree is declaratory or executory.—Thayamalachi v. Seru, 10 M. L. T. 326: 2 M. W. N. 827.

In interpreting a decree the pleadings and recorded judgment may be referred to.—Balbhaddar v. Jagpal, 14 I C. 130; Promoda v. Alamgir, 13 I. C. 82.

Courts are not bound to construe a decree in the mode in which the parties intended it to operate. It is the duty of the executing Court to execute it as it finds and not as understood by the parties; Lodd Govinda v. Raja of Karvetnagar, 29 M. L. J. 219 (19 C 312, P C.: 26 M. L. J. 474 referred to).

Where the terms of the decree are uncertain, it is not competent to the Court in execution to make any enquiries, by taking oral or documentary evidence, to ascertain the meaning of such terms.—Nuddyar Chand v. Gobind Chunder, 10 C 1092, Dwarka Nath v. Kamala Kanth, 8 B. L. R. Ap. 128 12 W R. 99; and Kalee Debee v Mudoosoodun, 16 W. R. 171.

A decree is to be understood as referring to the claim as stated in the plaint, and not as described in the paper-book.—Soude Shrinivasapa v. Krishnapa, 11 B. 177

A note of the judgment of the Court taken by the Deputy Registrar cannot be consulted for the purpose of explaining or adding in the construction of a decree.—Sumar Ahmed v Haji Ismail, 1 B 158

Where there is discrepancy between the decree and judgment, the decree is to be construed by reference to judgment.—Medhee Bey v. Zellal, 15 W R 530; Chunder Mohun v Amrita Chunder, 19 W R 343.

The order of the Judicial Committee was that a decree-holder should recover what was demarcated by the " the thakbust map and proceeding of 1889 " Held that the above words did not include survey map, which differed from it.—Radha Pershad v Torap Ali, 18 C 108.

Where the first Court puts upon its own decree a construction which to the Appellate Court appears to be erroneous, and the decree on the face of it admits of another construction, which to the Appellate Court appears to render the decree correct, the Appellate Court will adopt the latter construction.—Hirji Jina v Naram Mulji, 1 B 1.

(b) Account—Decree for.—A decree for an account is not a mere direction to enquire and report It must always proceed upon the assumption that the party calling for it is entiled to the sum found due It is a decree affirming his rights only, leaving it to be enquired into how much is due to him from the party accounting.—Janokey Das v. Bindabun, 3 M. I. A. 175

(c) Ejectment.—A consent decree provided that the defendant should retain possession of certain land in perpetuity on payment of a fixed annual rent to the plaintiff, but the plaintiff might re-enter in case the defendant failed to pay the rent. The rent was not paid, and in a suit for possession it was contended that the above clause was a penal stipulation which the Court would not enforce. Held that the doctrine of penalties was not applicable to stipulations contained in decrees, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover.—Shirkuli Timappa v. Mohablya, 10 B 435

(d) Endowment —Construction of a decree as to the appointment of a manager of the property of a religious institution where the decree directs the appointment of a fit man to fill the vacant office.—Ponnambala Tambirdu v Sivagnana Desika, 17 M 343.

(e) Instalments —Decree for payment of money by instalments—Provisions for default in payment—Right to take out execution for the whole decretal money in default of payment of two consecutive instalments—Construction of the decree —Balkishen Das v. Runbahadur, 10 C 305, P C 13 C L R 418, P C

Construction of a decree for money payable by instalments—Term making the entire sum payable in default in payment of some of the instalments at certain dates—Default in payment—Right to take out execution for the entire amount —Shamkishen v. Ram Bahadur, 15 C 751

See notes to r 11.

(f) Mesne profits —A decree stated that mesne profits were to be recovered "with interest from the date of their ascertainment" Held that the Court executing the decree had no authority to allow interest year by year upon the collections which ought to have been received—Hurro Durga v Surut Sundari, 8 C. 332

Where a decree is silent as to the time down to which mesne profits were given Held that the decree could not be construed as giving mesne profits for a period longer than 3 years from the date of the decree—Uttamram v. Kishoredas, 24 B 149 and 345.

A decree for possession of land with mesne profits from a date named directed that "the amount thereof to be ascertained in local enquiry, and to bear interest from the date of ascertainment until payment" Held that the decree-holder was entitled to mesne profits until the date of delivery of possession to him —Fakharuddin Mahomed v. Official Trustee, 8 C. 178, P C . 10 C L R 176. See also Bijai Bahadur v Bhup Indar, 19 A 296 (19 C 132 referred to). (g) Mortgage —See notes to Or XXXIV.

(h) Possession.—Where a decree in a suit for possession declared that the defendant had a right of occupancy, and was liable for rent from the date of suit, without defining the date of rent Held that the decree was imperfect and that the rent could not be ascertained in execution—Kalee Narain v. Chunder Narain, 23 W, R. 228,

A decree for possession of a village passes with it the village account-books and other documents relating to the management of the village.—Bhavani Devi v. Devnao, 11 B. 485.

In the execution of a decree for possession of land, it was held that evidence of witnesses could be taken to ascertain the boundaries and the subject on which the decree operates.—Kalee Dabee v. Modhoo Soodun, 16 W. R. 171; and Bhugobat v. Ramadhin, 22 W. R. 330.

(i) Pre-emption.—A decree for pre-emption, conditional on payment within a fixed time, omitted to state consequence of non-payment. Held that the plaintiff, unless he had paid the pre-emptive price before the expiry of the fixed time, could not enforce his decree for pre-emption.—Jai Kishen v. Bholanath, 14 A. 529 (13 A. 376 referred to).

A Court granting a decree in a pre-emption suit is competent to grant the decree subject to the payment of the purchase-money within a fixed period, and if the decree-holder fails to comply with the condition, he loses the benefit of the decree.—Ewaz v. Mokuna Bibi, 1 A. 32. Followed in Ram Sahia v. Gaya, 7 A. 107. See also Hingan Khan v. Ganga Pershad, 1 A. 293; and Narain Das v. Lachman Singh, 5 A. 185. See notes to r. 14, post.

Amendment of decree.—See notes to s. 152

Sub-rule (2). "Decree shall state costs, and by whom and in what proportion to be paid."—It is the duty of the Court to draw up after the decision, a decree showing the amount of costs incurred. An application to add to the decree the costs which were omitted, lies in the Court which passed the decree; Sagar v. Digambar, 38 C. 25 · 10 I. C. 858.

The mere specification of costs in a decree without any allotment of responsibility is not sufficient.—Janokee Nath v. Joykishen, 15 W. R 4.

A copy of the judgment, with the schedule of costs appended, does not constitute a proper decree.—Purmessuree Dutt v Joynauth, 15 W. R. 326.

When an Appellate Court decrees an appeal, and gives costs of its own Court, the costs of the first Court should be included in the decree. —Mahomed Bussecroollah v. Ramkant, 16 W. R. 266 See Raghunandan v. Rajendra, 14 C. W N 556: 11 C L J. 207.

A decree which ordered the defendants, speaking of them, collectively, to be paid their costs by the plaintiff, was held to mean that each defendant who appeared in the suit as a separate party, was to be paid his separate costs.—Gunesh Dutt v Mungay Ram, 21 W R. 288.

Where a decree of the High Court directed that the plaintiff (respondent) should pay to defendants (appellants) the costs incurred by them in the lower Court. Held that the costs referred to were those which were specified in the decree appealed against —Ram Chunder v. Doorganath, 2 C. L. R. 152.

Where a mortgage-decree contained a clause to the effect "that the defendant aforesaid do pay to the plaintiffs aforesaid the sum of Rs. 876-8, the amount of costs incurred by them in this Court." Held that the clause was not intended to be a direction for the recovery of costs personally from the judgment-debtor.—Maqbul Fatima v. Lalta Prasad, 20 A. 523, F. B.

In a suit against a minor, if the Court considers that the guardian should be personally ordered to pay the costs, it should be so stated in the decree order.—Komul Chunder v. Surbessur, 21 W. R. 298; and Brijessuree Dassia v. Kishore Doss, 25 W. R. 316.

If the Official Assignee defends a suit, he is liable, in the event of failure, to pay the plaintiffs, costs in the same way as any other defendant: and if the estate be insufficient to pay the costs, he will have to bear them personally.—Bevis v. Turner, 7 B. 484.

Costs by Third Persons.—As to this and all other questions relating to costs, see notes to s. 35.

Costs may be Set off Against Sum Admitted or Found Due.—The decree in a redemption suit directed the plaintiff (mortgagor) to pay the mortgage-money and interest to the defendant, and directed the defendant to pay the plaintiff the costs of the suit. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to set-off the amount of his taxed costs against the mortgage-money which he was liable to pay under the decree.—Brij Nath v. Juggernath, 4 C. 742: 4 C. L. R. 122; see Sidu v. Bali, 17 B. 32.

A prior decree having given the costs incurred on the disposal of a preliminary point to the party successfully raising it, a latter decree, without expressly referring to the former, gave the costs of the suit, generally to the opposite party. Held that the costs due under a prior decree should be set-off against those due under the latter.—Radha Pershad v. Ram Parmeswar, 9 C. 797: 13 C. L. R. 22.

Where one party to a suit was entitled to recover certain costs by sale of hypothecated property, and the other party under the same decree was entitled to recover a smaller sum as costs from his opponent personally. Held that the costs recoverable personally could be set-off against the costs recoverable by sale of the hypothecated property.—Bhagwan Singh v. Ratan, 16 A. 395 (5 A. 275 dissented from).

Remedy.—Proceedings under this rule terminate in an order and can be dealt with in revision under s. 115, e. g., an order making addition to the decree not warranted by the judgment; Bai Shri Vaktuba v. Agar Sangji, 31 B. 447. See also Nalinakshya v. Mafakshar, 28 C. 177; Hasan Shah v. Sheo Prasad, 15 A. 121.

7. The decree shall bear date the day on which the judgment was pronounced, and when the Judge has satisfied himself that the decree has been drawn up in accordance with the judgment, he shall sign the decree. [S. 205.]

Date of decree.

COMMENTARY.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts, see Or. XLIX, 3, cl. (5)

Object of the Rule.—The object of Or XX, r. 7, which provides that the decree shall bear the date of judgment, is that the decree should take effect from the date of judgment —Muthiah Chetti v. Suppan Servai, 38 M. 291: 14 M. L. T. 160

Date of Decree.—The date of the decree does not mean the date on which the decree is reduced in writing and signed by the Court, but the date on which the Court delivered judgment and expressed what the decree is.—The Owners of the ship " Brenhilda " v. British India Steam Navigation Company, 7 C. 547 (551); Narayanaswamy v Krishnasami, 25 I. C. 67; Narain v Ram Dulare, 66 I C. 7

Whatever may be the day on which the actual signature is made, the date of the decree for all purposes is to be the date on which the judgment is pronounced. Where a suitor is unable to obtain a copy of the decree by reason of its being unsigned he is entitled to deduct the time between delivery of judgment and that of signing of the decree in computing the time take in presenting his appeal.—Bani Madav v Matungini, 13 C. 104, F. B (18 W. R 512 followed, 10 C 652 impliedly overruled). Referred to in 12 A 81, and 18 M 374 (376). See also Golam Goffar v. Goljan Bibi, 25 C 109. For purposes of limitation for appeal, time should be calculated from the date on which the judgment was actually pronounced in Court —Sagarmall v Lachmi Saran, 1 Pat 771 But see Yamaji v. Antaji, 23 B. 442, and Beche v Ashanulla Khan, 12 A. 561, and 1 C W N. 93

A decree takes priority over other decrees in respect of the date on which it was passed; and not in respect of the priority of the date which it enforces —Gherau v Kunj Behari, 9 A. 413

For the purposes of s 77 of the Registration Act (1908) it is desirable that the Judge should put after his signature the date on which he signs the decree; Muthia v Suppan, 20 I C 914 14 M L T 160 38 M. 291.

Date of Decree of High Court.—The decree of Original Side should bear the same date as the judgment, and limitation should not be calculated from the date when it was signed by the Registrar —Hajoo Aboobuckor v. Official Assignee, 25 M. L. J. 560: 1913 M W. N 868.

"Satisfied himself."—It is the duty of the Judges as well as the pleaders to see that decrees are drawn up properly and according to the judgments. The pleaders do not perform their duty simply by arguing their cases.—Ram Lochan v. Munsoor, 10 W. R. 96. See also Taru Ram v. Mari, 7 A 492, 495, Goluk v. Gunga, 20 W. R. 111; Rahimuddin v. Beer Protap, 18 W. R. 303.

"Sign."—Decree cannot be added to or altered after signature, save under s. 152 (see notes to that section) or on review (see Or. XX r. 3).

Duty to Draw Up Decree.—Although the statutory obligation lay on the Court to draw up a preliminary decree to entitle the plaintiffs to appeal, yet it was equally their duty to ask the Court to draw that up. This duty they failed to discharge, and reasonable inference is that they waived the right to appeal against the preliminary decree.—Govind v. Vithal, 36 B 536 16 I C. 159: 14 Bom. L. R. 560.

Procedure where Judge has vacated office before signing decree.

8. Where a Judge has vacated office after pronouncing judgment, but without signing the decree, a decree drawn up in accordance with such judgment may be signed by his successor or, if the Court has ceased to exist, by the Judge of any Court to which such Court was subordinate. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts, see Or. XLIX, r 3, cl. (5).

Decree for recovery of immoveable property.

9. Where the subject-matter of the suit is immoveable property, the decree shall contain a description of such property sufficient to identify the same, and where such property can be identified by boundaries or by numbers in a record of settlement or survey, the decree shall specify such boundaries or numbers. [S. 207.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "the decree shall contain a description of such property sufficient to identify the same," have been added after the words "immoveable property;" and the words "can be" have been substituted for the words "is identified" in the old section. This rule is similar to rule 3 of Order VII.

"Where such property can be identified by boundaries."—A decree which was passed for a specified quantity of land contiguous to the plaintiff's estate, but which gave no boundaries of such land, was held to be indefinite and incapable of execution.—Dwarkanath v. Jannobee, 19 W. R. 81; Darbaree v. Fatu, 23 W. R. 285; Sristeedhur v. Kalee Dat, 24 W. R. 479. See Ismail v. Lalla Dhundur, 25 W. R. 30; Karasji v. Hormasji, 29 B. 73.

A decree which did not specify the particular lands decreed, and directed them to be ascertained in execution, was held bad.—Kangal Chandra v. Kanye Lal, 4 C. 69.

In the execution of a decree for possession of land, it was held the evidence of witnesses could be taken to ascertain the boundaries.—Kalee Dabee v. Modhoosoodun, 16 W. R. 171. See also Bhugbat Singh v. Ramadhin, 22 W. R. 330; Doyal v. Kanri, 25 I. C. 531.

Where a decree is so uncertain that it is impossible to ascertain what is decreed, a plaintiff cannot be put into possession of any other thing by execution than that which the decree describes. Evidence cannot be given in the execution department to amend any uncertainty in the decree.—Dwarkanath v. Kamalanath, 8 Bom. L. R. Ap. 128: 12 W. R. 99.

In a suit for possession of lands after partition, where the boundaries have been confused and cannot be identified specifically, the principle upon which remedy is to be given to the plaintiff pointed out.—Robert Watson & Co v. Judistir Bauri, 8 C. W. N. cclxxxvii (287-n) See also Khemamoyee v. Shoshee Bhusan, 9 W. R. 94.

Discrepancy in Decreed Area and Decreed Boundaries.—For the procedure to be followed in identifying land in execution proceedings where the decreed area happens to be larger than the area according to the decreed boundaries of the land, see Haji Abdul v. Khanumal, 8 I. C. 941.

Decree for delivery of moveable property.

10. Where the suit is for moveable property, and the decree is for the delivery of such property, the decree shall also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had.

COMMENTARY.

"Moveable property" in this rule means specific moveable property.

Decree for Delivery of Moveable Property.—Where a decree is for delivery of moveable property, and states the amount to be paid as an alternative, if delivery cannot be had, the goods must be delivered if capable of delivery; otherwise the assessed damages should be paid.—Kasheenath v. Debkristo, 16 W. R. 240.

The Courts should fix the price of moveables as the alternative damages in cases of non-delivery.—Bombay Burmah Trading Corporation v. Mahomed Ali, 10 Bom. L. R. 345. 19 W. R. 123.

Decree in terms of an award ordering delivery of moveable property.—Loss of part of such moveable property and consequent failure to deliver—Application to insert in decree an order to pay the value of such moveable property in the event of failure to deliver. Held that the award could not be modified by the Court, nor could the decree, which must be in accordance with the award.—Ahmed Bin v. Shaik Essa Bin, 17 B. 657.

In a suit for recovery of certain goods or their value as compensation. Held that the alternative prayer for the value of the goods as compensation must be read as ancillary to the main relief asked for, with reference to this rule.—Murugesa Mudali v Jotharam, 22 M. 478.

Decree may direct payment by instalments.

11. (1). Where and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may for any sufficient reason at the time of passing the decree order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments, with or without interest, notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable.

Order, after decree, for payment by instalment

(2) After the passing of any such decree the Court may, on the application of the judgment-debtor and with the consent of the decree-holder, order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments, on such terms as to the payment of interest, the attachment of the property of the judgment-debtor, or the taking of security from him, or otherwise, as it thinks fit. [S. 210.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 210, C P Code, 1882, but material changes have been introduced in it. The words "shall be postponed" in sub-rules (1) and (2) are new The words "notwithstanding anything contained etc., payable" in sub-rule (1) are also new.

This rule not only authorizes the Court to direct the amount of a money decree to be paid by instalments, but it also authorizes the Court to make an order postponing the payment of the decretal amount for a specified time.

"Decree for payment of money."—The provisions of this rule are not applicable in a suit for the recovery of money by the sale of the property mortgaged in the bond.—Hardeo Das v. Hukam Singh, 2 A. 320, Bachchu v Madad Ali, 2 M. 649; Tata Charlu v. Konadula, 7 M. 152 But in Karvalho v. Nurbibi, 3 B 202, the Court passed an instalment decree in a suit on a mortgage-bond, reducing the contract rate of interest; and the decision was upheld by the High Court. See also, Abir Pramanik v. Jahor Mahomed, 34 C. 886: 11 C. W. N 879: 6 C. L. J. 95, where it has been held that an instalment decree in a mortgage suit on the basis of a solenama was a valid decree and can be enforced by sale of the mortgaged properties.

"With or without interest."—Where one of the conditions of the granting of time to pay the decretal amount was that the amount of interest should be increased from 6 per cent. to 12 per cent. per annum, and although it received the sanction of the Court, yet as the increase in the rate of interest seemed to be a penalty, the High Court disallowed the increased rate of interest; Rai Brnode Behary v. Hira Singh, (1918) Pat. 76: 44 I. C. 726.

"Notwithstanding anything in the contract."—These words have been added to override the ruling of the Bombay High Court in Ragho Gobind Paranjpe v. Dip Chand, 4 B 96, as the practice inculcated by that ruling seems to prevail only in the Presidency of Bombay and not in the rest of India. It was held there, that an agreement by the debtor to pay by instalments with an undertaking that, on default, the creditor may demand immediate payment of the whole balance due with interest cannot be relieved against, and on default by the debtor the Court cannot lay aside the express contract of the parties as to the consequences of such default.

"Court."—This means the Court passing the decree; Gandharap v. Sheodarshan, 12 A. 571 If it is not competent for the original Court to pass an instalment decree, much less can the execution Court give any such relief; Mahadaji v. Hari, 7 B 332 Under this rule the High Court has the power to make its money decrees payable by instalments; Poma Dongra v. Gillespie, 31 B. 318: 9 Bom L R 143

"Shall be postponed."—The introduction of these words now enables the Court to direct that the decretal amount should be paid within a particular period, and no execution can be taken out before that time. The Court has inherent power to stay execution at the time of decree, Palaniappa v. Velayutha, 7 M L T. 151 · 5 I. C. 421 A judgment-debtor who had the benefit of delay in execution which was sanctioned by Court cannot resile from it; Subbaraya v. Ramasamy, 22 M. L J 166 (14 M. L. J. 359; 18 M. L. J 548 overruled).

"For sufficient reason."—The discretion vested under this rule to allow instalments is a judicial discretion and cannot be arbitrarily exercised; Mohessur v Jhubboo, 2 Hay 68; Subatullah v Thompson, 1 Hyde 98; Ramgopal v. Ram Tonoo, 6 W R 89; Balgobind v Chhedilal, 11 C. L .J. 431.

The trial Court has the power under this rule to postpone payment of the amount decreed, but it must be exercised judicially. The pendency of an independent litigation between the same parties, in which the present judgment-debtor may possibly obtain a decree against the decree-holder so as to enable the decree to be set off one against another, will not constitute " sufficient reason " within the meaning of this rule so as to postpone payment, Chuniram Kanhaiya Lal v. Bhagwan Das, 7 Lah 393: 97 I. C. 769: A I R 1926 Lah 604

Where a Court, on the ground that defendant was " hard pressed," directed the amount to be paid by instalments extending over ten years, and allowed only one-half of the usual rate of interest Held that there was no " sufficient reason " for directing payment of the amount by instalments —Binda v Madho, 2 A 129 Followed in 11 C. L J. 431.

The fact that the estate of the defendants has been brought under the management of the Court of Wards, is not a reason for allowing instalments; Walidad Khan v. Mani Ram, 73 I. C. 800: A I R 1923 Lah. 256.

Where principal sum lent was Rs 40 and a sum of Rs. 74-10 had already been paid as principal and interest, instalment was allowed; Govindjee v. Ko Po Vee, 11 I. C. 891.

Payment by Instalments—Grounds for Lenient Treatment.—The burden of proving that the defendant is entitled to the indulgence of a decree in instalments rests upon him. Where he has resisted the suit on frivolous grounds and has subsequently to the institution fraudulently disposed of the property and the interest agreed upon between the parties was moderate, held, that there was no ground for passing a decree for payment of the amount by instalments; Gelaram v. Jhangi Ram, 71 I. C. 803.

Rule Applies to Decrees under XXXIV, Rule 6.—A decree under Or XXXIV, r. 6 is not directed against the mortgaged property, but in virtue of the contract it binds the judgment-debtors personally. The Court in passing such a decree may under this rule direct the payment of the decretal amount in instalments, Bidhusekhar v. Sudhury, 15 C W. N 1083. 11 I C 736.

Order for Payment by Instalments After Decree.—By this rule the Court may, after the passing of a decree in money-suits, with the consent of the decree-holder, order the amount to be paid by instalments.—Shankarapa v Davapa, 5 B. 604, Hurdeo Das v. Hukum Singh, 2 A 320. But not without his consent; Ram Chand v. Moti Lal, 4 Bom. H C 77.

After the decree, a kistibundi was filed by the parties agreeing that the decretal amount should be paid by instalments with interest, and the judgment-debtor had for several years treated the kistibundi as if it were a decree. Held that the decree-holder was entitled to take out execution on the kistibundi as if it were a part of the original decree.—Dinonath Sen v. Guru Churn Pal, 14 Bom L R 287: 21 W. R. 310; Jankee v Sreenath, 5 W. R. Mis 19; Tarif Biswas v Kalidas, 2 Bom. L. R. A. C. 223: 11 W. R. 86. But in Madhub Chunder v. Madhab Lal, 14 Bom. L. R. 288-n: 15 W R. 542, it has been held that execution cannot be taken out upon a kistibundi filed in Court after decree which has not been incorporated with the decree The same view appears to have been taken in Kanhyalal v Collector of Cuttack, 14 Bom. L R. 291-n 16 W. R. 275; and Dwarka Nath v Doorga Churn, 6 W. R. S. C C. Ref. I.

An arrangement by the parties to pay the decretal amount by instalments, unle[illegible] by order of Court, does not amount [illegible] by instalments within the meaning [illegible] will therefore run from the date of [illegible] v. Dullaram, 14 C. 348 But see Jati Sahu v. Bhugun Gir, 11 C. 143.

In execution of a decree the parties presented a petition to the Court making certain arrangement for payment of the decretal amount by instalments. Held that the decree-holder's remedy was by execution of the decree and not by a fresh suit to enforce the terms of the agreement.—Dharbha Venkama v. Rama Subbarayadu, 1 M. 387; Debi Rai v. Gokul Prasad, 3 A. 585; Ganga v. Murlidhar, 4 A. 240; Champat Rai v. Pitambar Das, 6 A. 16; Makund Ram v. Makund Ram, 6 A. 228 (3 A. 781 distinguished); Ameerunnissa v. Meer Mahomed, 2 C. L. R. 143.

See, however, Ramlakhan Rai v. Bakhtam Rai, 6 A. 623 (3 A. 585 followed), in which it has been held that the agreement could not be treated as an instalment decree, and was therefore incapable of execution.

An arrangement to pay by instalments the amount of a decree obtained upon a bond does not effect an extinction of the original debt or the mortgagee's lien upon property mortgaged to him by the bond.—Ram Churn Lall v. Koondun, 14 Bom. L. R. 423-n; 11 W. R. 481.

Where, on the application of the judgment-debtor and his surety, a decree for money was ordered to be paid by instalments in proceedings in which the decree-holder was not a party. Held that the liability could not be enforced against the surety in execution of the decree under s. 253, C. P. Code, 1882 (cf. s. 145)—Chandan Kuar v. Tirtha Ram, 3 A. 809.

An instalment-bond by a judgment-debtor acknowledging a balance to be due under the decree, but executed without consideration, and after the decree is barred by limitation, and cannot either revive a decree, or be legally binding on his representative —Heera Lall v. Roy Dhunput Singh, 24 W. R. 282.

A judgment-debtor, on being arrested, presented a petition asking for 15 days' time to pay the decretal amount, and the decree-holder consenting, the Court made an order in the terms· "Let the petition be filed." Held that the order did not amount to one directing payment of money to be paid at a certain date.—Jagobundhoo v. Hari Rowoat, 16 C. 16 (4 A. 155 folld.).

Decree Awarding Payment by Instalments—Limitation.—Where a decree awards payment by instalments, the limitation is six months from the date of the decree. See Art. 175 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908).

A decree which directs payment to be made annually to the decree-holder creates a periodically recurring right and should be executed as an instalment-decree on default of payment of each year's annuity.—Lakshmibai Bapuji v. Madhabraj Bapuji, 12 B 65 (3 B 193 followed). See also, Kuppu Ammal v Saminath, 18 M 282. But see, Subba Natha v Subba Lakshmi, 7 M. 80; and Yusaf Khan v Sirdar Khan, 7 M. 83, where it has been held that the decree should be executed within three years from the date of the decree, or from the date of the last preceding application for execution.

On the application of the judgment-debtor under this rule, an ex parte order was passed granting him two years' time to pay the decretal money but the decree was not altered Three years after the date of the decree, the decree-holder applied for execution Held that the application was not barred by limitation —Tata Charlu v. Konadala Ram Chandra, 7 M. 152. Distinguished in Perumal Naicker v. Davood Rowther, 34 I. C. 393.

A decree directing payment of a certain sum every month for life by way of maintenance is more than a declaration of right, and is a decree for payment of money by instalments; and the decree-holder can obtain the amount ordered in execution of the decree —Mansadebi v. Jiwanlal, 9 A. 33 (15 W. R. 128 referred to).

If it can be gathered from a decree that payments are directed to be made on dates or at periods which are sufficiently indicated by the terms of the decree, the requirements of the Limitation Act, 1877, Art 179 (b) are satisfied —Kaveri v. Venkamma, 14 M. 306

Where after the judgment was passed, an arrangement by the parties to pay the decretal amount by instalments was filed, but no formal order was passed under this rule and decree was drawn up according to the original judgment, but the judgment-debtor paid the instalments regularly Held an application by the decree-holder for execution, for the balance after three years from the date of the decree was not barred — Kedar Nath v Kulman Sardar, 5 C L J 25

The Court cannot recognize any arrangement between the parties enlarging the period of limitation, allowed by law for the execution of decrees, or which alters the terms of the decree —Krishna Kamal v Hira Sirdar, 4 Bom L R (F B) 101 18 W R 44 See also, Meheroonnissa v Raushan Jehan 17 W R 396; and Ram Runjan v. Jowharujumah Khan, 23 W R 129

Rent-decree Payable by Instalments—Limitation.—The period of limitation for execution of decree for arrears of rent payable by instalments runs from the date of the decree, and not from the date fixed for payment.—Ramsadoy v Dwarkanath, 22 C 644. See also, Mamtazul Huq v. Nirbhai Singh, 9 C 711 F B (7 C 127: 8 C. L. R. 49 dissented from)

A decree for rent under the B T Act cannot be made payable by instalments, this rule not applying to such a decree.—Shib Narain v. Bykuntha Nath 11 C W N 857

Where Decree Provides that in Default of One Instalment Whole Amount shall be Payable—Limitation.—Where a decree is payable by instalments, with a proviso that in default of payment of any one instalment the whole amount shall become payable at once, limitation runs from the date of the first default —Bholanand v. Padmanand, 6 C. W N 348 See also, Dulsook v Chugon, 2 B 356; Gumma Bhiku, 1 B. 356; Zahur Khan v. Baktawar, 7 A 327, Sham Lal v. Kanahia Lal, 4 A 316, Radha Prasad v Bhugwan Rai, 5 A. 289, Asmutulla v. Kally Churn, 7 C 56, and Shib Dat v Kalka Prasad, 2 A. 443

The decree provided that, in default of two instalments in succession, the whole amount will be recoverable The decree-holder applied for execution, alleging default of 9th and 10th instalments Held that the application, being made within three years from the default of 9th and 10th instalments, was within time, and that whether former instalments had been paid or not was immaterial —Kanthan Singh v. Sheo Prasad, 2 A 291.

Where an instalment decree contains a proviso as to execution of entire decree on default in payment of instalments, the decree-holder may execute it on the happening of the first, second or any subsequent default, and limitation will run in respect of each instalment separately from the time when such instalment may become due.—Shankar Prasad v. Jalpa Prasad, 16 A. 371. See also, Ajudhia v. Kunj Lal, 30 A, 123 (31 C. 297:

21 C. 542 dissented from); Maharaja of Benares v. Nand Ram, 29 A. 431, and Girindra Mohan v. Bocha Das, 9 C. L. J. 220: 36 C. 894: 83 C. W. N. 1004.

Taking of Security.—Security given by a judgment-debtor in execution for due performance of the decree can be enforced, and the property covered by the bond can be sold in execution by the decree-holder, without being compelled to file a regular suit for the purpose. The fact that the security bond is taken under Or. XX, r. 11, makes no difference; Official Receiver v. Nagaratna, 49 M. L. J 648 · 92 I C. 497: A. I. R. 1926 M. 194.

Right of Waiver of Default.—The waiver contemplated by the provisions of the limitation Act must be either an agreement between the parties or such conduct as will itself afford clear evidence of a legal waiver.—Khankuchand v. Rustomji, 20 B 109. Mere acceptance of overdue instalments does not amount to waiver without proof that it was for any specific instalment.—Balaji Ganesh v. Sakharam, 17 B. 555; see also, Mohesh Chandra v. Prosanna Lal, 31 C. 83; 8 C. W. N. 66; Srinivasa v. Sheo Gobind, 20 I. C. 156, and Kashiram v. Pandu, 27 B. 1, F. B., where it has been held that it is a fundamental proposition of law that payment and acceptance of overdue instalments cannot by themselves prove a waiver. The point has to be determined on the circumstances of each suit. In this case all the rulings on the point have been considered and discussed. Followed in 15 C. W. N. 10 where the true test of waiver has been explained. The mere fact that plaintiff waited for a long period after the last instalment had fallen due did not indicate waiver; Baburam v. Jodua, 11 A. L J. 89: 18 I. C 690. As to meaning of default, see Sitarama v Colta, 25 M. L. J 264: 21 I C. 24.

Held that proof of a part-payment towards an instalment due, accepted by the decree-holder would be material as evidence of waiver.—Rajeswara v. Hari Babandhu, 19 M 162

Where a decree provides that, in default of payment of any one instalment, the whole amount of the decree shall be payable, the decree-holder is entitled to exercise his right of waiver, and may execute his decree within three years from the date of default of each instalment.—Nilmadhub v. Ramsodoy, 9 C. 857, KaraLavalasa v Karanam, 3 M 256. But see Judhistir v Nobin Chandra, 13 C 73, and Radha Prosad v. Bhagwan Rai, 5 A. 289 Followed in Sakhawat Hussain v Gajadhar Prasad, 28 A 622

A proviso in a decree made payable by instalments, by which the whole amount is to become due on default of any one instalment, is a proviso enuring for the benefit of the decree-holder alone, and he is at liberty to take advantage of it, or to waive it as he thinks fit —Ram Culpo v Ram Chunder, 14 C 352. See also, Budhu Lal v Rekkhav, 11 A. 482 (2 A. 857, and 7 C 56 distd), Sitab Chand v Hyder Mulla, 24 C. 281 1 C W. N 229.

When a decree payable by instalments on certain dates provides that, in default in payment of any instalment the whole of the money shall become due and recoverable in execution, limitation begins to run from the date of the first default, unless the right to enforce payment in default has been waived by subsequent payment of the overdue instalments on the one hand and a receipt on the other.—Monmohun v. Durga Churn, 15 C. 502 (2 B. 356; 2 A. 443; 5 C. 97; 7 C. 56; 9 C. 857, 14 C. 352; and 13 C. L. R. 243, referred to). Followed in 13 C. W. N. 1010. Referred to in Bir Narain v. Darpa Narain, 20 C. 74. See also, Hurri Pershad v Nasib Singh, 21 C. 542 (13 C. L R. 243 dissented from), and Jadub Chundra v Bhairab Chandro, 31 C. 297 (13 C. L. R. 243, dissented from). See also Rup Narain v. Gopinath, 11 C. W. N. 903. Not followed in Girindra Mohan v. Bocha Das, 9 C. L. J. 226: 36 C. 394: 13 C. W. N 1004 and in 13 C. W. N. 1010.

For the meaning of the word " waiver " and its effect, see notes to section 11.

Consent Instalment Decree—Penalty Clause.—In a consent instalment decree it was provided that on failure to pay two instalments, the plaintiff was to recover possession of certain lands. Held that on default, the penalty clause could be enforced. A consent decree can only be varied by consent —Lachiram v Jana Yesu, 16 Bom. L R. 668.

Appeal.—There is no appeal from an order refusing to allow the decretal amount to be paid by instalments; Md. Ibrahim v. Subbiah, 20 I. C 673. 6 Bur L. T 133. An appeal lies from an order directing payment of decretal amount by instalments. But whether or not the Court exercised a sound judicial direction in making the order cannot be reviewed in second appeal; Bidhusekhar v Sudhury, 15 C. W. N. 1083 (Balgobindram v.Cheddilal, 11 C. L. J 431 distinguished). The appellate Court is slow to interfere with the exercise of a discretion by the lower Court; Ahmed Musaji v. Mamooji, 22 C L. J. 293.

Court-fee.—As to Court-fee in an appeal from a decree fixing instalments; see Gobind v. Bardeo, 24 I. C 931: 226 P. L. R. 1914

Decree for possession and mesne profits.

12. (1) Where a suit is for the recovery of possession of immoveable property and for rent or mesne profits, the Court may pass a decree—

(a) for the possession of the property;

(b) for the rent or mesne profits which have accrued on the property during a period prior to the institution of the suit or directing an inquiry as to such rent or mesne profits;

(c) directing an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits from the institution of the suit until—

(i) the delivery of possession to the decree-holder,

(ii) the relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor with notice to the decree-holder through the Court, or

(iii) the expiration of three years from the date of the decree, whichever event first occurs.

(2) Where an inquiry is directed under clause (b) or clause (c), a final decree in respect of the rent or mesne profits shall be passed in accordance with the result of such inquiry.

[Ss. 211 and 212.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration—Effect and Scope.—This rule corresponds to ss. 211, 212 of the old Code with several additions and alterations and introduces a change of an important character. Formerly, mesne profits were ascertained in execution proceedings, but under this rule mesne profits shall be ascertained under the decree itself, by an enquiry, and not in execution. The intention is to make a substantial saving of time, trouble, and expense. That portion of the decree directing an enquiry as to mesne profits will be of a preliminary nature, after which a final decree will follow in accordance with the result of the enquiry. Order XXVI, r 9 provides for the issue of a commission for ascertaining mesne profits or damages The Court may of course pass a final decree for rents or mesne profits, if it can do so without directing an enquiry.

Clause (ii) of sub-rule 1 (c) is new. It has been inserted for the benefit of the judgment-debtor whose liability for mesne profits will cease after giving notice through Court of his relinquishment of possession. Sub-rule (2) is also new.

Difference between Old Section and this Rule.—Under the old Code (s. 211) the grant of future mesne profits was purely discretionary with the Court and could not be claimed as of right and no cause of action would accrue in respect of them But under the new rule, the Court's power to direct an enquiry into future mesne profits is put on a par with its power to pass a decree for possession or past mesne profits and there is nothing in the latter to indicate that the one relief is more a matter of discretion and less of right than the other; Ramasawmi v Srirangaraja, 26 I. C. 622 · 2 L W 8

The effect of the new rule is to make the decree so far as mesne profits are concerned complete only when the amount has been ascertained while not making the rest of the decree incomplete till then, Ramana v. Babu, 37 M 186.

Applicability—Mesne Profits in Partition Suits.—The provisions relating to mesne profits are applicable to suits for land or other property in which the plaintiff has a specific interest and not to a suit for declaration of right or to a suit for partition of joint family property where he has no specific interest until decree, Pirthipal v. Jowahir, 14 C 489, 509 P. C But where the members of the family live under the most distinct agreement that they are entitled, not as ordinary joint family, but in specific and definite shares, if the enjoyment of those shares is in any way disturbed, the right to sue for mesne profits as well as partition will arise;

Shankar v Hardeo, 16 C. 397, P. C. Mesne profits may be allowed on partition when one member has been entirely excluded from the enjoyment of the property, or where it has been held by a member of the family who claimed a right to treat it as impartible and therefore exclusively his own, Bhurrar v Sitaram, 19 B 532.

Where a preliminary decree in a partition suit has either intentionally or inadvertently omitted to direct an enquiry into mesne profits, the final decree cannot award mesne profits or direct an enquiry regarding the same; Ghulzam Bibi v Ahamadsa Rowther, 42 M. 296: (1919) M. W. N. 284

There is nothing in this rule to suggest, that it applies between co-defendants Surendra v Dijendra, 29 I. C 464

Inquiry as to Mesne Profits Not a Proceeding in Execution.—A decree directing the ascertainment of mesne profits continues the suit Proceedings for the ascertainment of mesne profits are in continuation of the original suit So the mesne profits must be determinable in the suit itself and not by way of execution Lis pendens applies to mesne profits: Midnapur Zemindary Co v Naresh Narain, 16 C. W. N. 109; Rudra Partap v Sarda, 47 A 543 87 I C 322 A. I R 1925 A. 588

Order XX, r 12 directs that mesne profits should be assessed by an enquiry in the suit itself and not in execution, and mesne profits so assessed from part of the money recoverable under the decree. Under the new C. P. Code a Court, therefore, acts in excess of its powers, if it passes a decree directing that mesne profits should be ascertained in execution.—Ganga Prasad v Hemangini 37 I. C. 997. See also, Muhammed Abdul Ghafoor v Mahsab Choudhry, 2 Pat L. J. 394: 41 I. C. 231

Mesne Profits.—As defined in s (2), cl. (12), mean "those profits which the person in wrongful possession of property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits, but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession." Wrongful possession by the defendant being the very essence of a claim for mesne profits and the very foundation of a decree therefor, a defendant cannot be made liable for mesne profits during the period the property was under attachment by virtue of an order made under s. 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code; Chhagmull v. Amanatulla, 51 C 853: 83 I. C. 529: A. I. R 1924 C 1010, Kali Charan v Ashutosh, 25 C. L. J. 140: 38 I C. 600 Mesne profits are in the nature of damages which the Court may mould according to justice of the case. Hence in calculating mesne profits, payment of revenue and cesses made by the defendant should be deducted, Dakina v. Sarada, 21 C. 142. 20 I. A. 160: Kachar v. Oghadbhai, 17 B 35 But unless the defendant entered on the property in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right, the costs of collecting the rents and profits should not be deducted; Dungar v. Jairam, 24 A. 376; Raja Sashi Kanta v. Raja Sarat Chundra, 34 C. L. J. 415 70 I. C. 6.

Decree for Mesne Profits—When operates.—A decree for mesne profits in general terms does not become operative till after the amount has been ascertained by the Court and the Court-fee prescribed by s 11 of the Court-fees Act has been paid.—Jitendra v. Rasik, 27 I. C. 300 (24 C. 173, 1 C. W. N. 243 referred to).

" Delivery of possession."—The mere filing of a petition stating that the plaintiff might take possession, of which no notice went to the plaintiff, would not be tantamount to delivery of possession and the defendant would continue to be liable for mesne profits till actual delivery; Malladi v. Brundavanam, 2 M. W. N 258.

" Relinquishment of possession."—If the notice of relinquishment is given at a time when it is too late to cultivate, a party does not escape liability to pay mesne profits, Naina v. Arumuga, 2 L W 1129.

Second Application for Assessment of Mesne Profits if maintainable.—An application for assessment of mesne profits is an application in the suit; so where such an application is dismissed for default, it is equivalent to a dismissal of the claim for mesne profits, and fresh application is not maintainable.—Upendra Chandra v. Sakhi, 16 C. L. J. 8 (followed in Ganga Prasad v. Hemangini, 27 I. C. 997.) On the dismissal of the former application for ascertainment of mesne profits under Or. IX, r. 2, the only available remedy open to the plaintiff against the order was that provided by Or. IX, r. 4, and as the plaintiff did not apply to set aside the order of dismissal his second application for assessment of mesne profits was not entertainable —Kapilman Misser v. Kokilman Misser, (1921) Pat. 25 · 62 I. C 747

Suit for Mesne Profits Without Declaratory Suit Not Maintainable.—If a person dispossessed from immoveable property brings a suit for recovery of mesne profits, it is not maintainable The proper remedy is to institute a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession with mesne profits The symbolical possession by plaintiff is effective as against the judgment-debtor though it may not be operative as against strangers —Giri Narain v. Modhusudan, 17 C W. N. 324 . 18 I. C. 751 Although one may perhaps recover mesne profits, though out of possession, still, in order to recover damages in a case where he was out of possession, he must show that he has a right to immediate possession —Elahi v Ram Narain, 16 C W. N. 288.

Mesne Profits Against Co-sharers.—A co-sharer is not entitled to get mesne profits from his co-sharers on account of their cultivating lands in excess of their shares.—Debnarayan v Kali Das, 6 B. L R. Ap 70: 14 W. R 397 (affirming 13 W R 412)

Mesne profits may be awarded to a co-sharer suing another for recovery of possession when there is ouster. Mere excess of enjoyment is not ouster.—Gora Chand v Keshab, 23 I C. 122

Right to and Liability for Mesne Profits.—A decree-holder, after obtaining possession, is not at liberty to sue the tenants for rents falling due before the date of his taking possession His proper course is to sue the wrongful possessor for mesne profits —Woomesh Chunder v. Markuna, 12 W. R 34 · 3 Bom. L. R. Ap 99

A lessor preventing ryots from paying rent to the lessee, when the latter comes to take possession, is liable for mesne profits, even though he may not himself collect the rents.—Bheekumbur v. Raj Chunder, 15 W. R. 196. See, however, Churn Singh v. Rungoo, 15 W. R. 221, where it has been held that obstruction to possession may be a good ground for a claim for damages, but it cannot support a claim for mesne profits unless there has been dispossession

Possession in execution of decree subsequently set aside is lawful The right to mesne profits accrued from the time when the decree has been set aside —Holloway v Guneshur, 3 C L J. 182.

A party who has been active in wrongfully keeping another out of possession is liable for damages, whether he derived any profits himself from the possession of the land or not —Ghoogly v. Chundee, 21 W. R. 246 They should only be calculated for any period during which the defendant was active in keeping the plaintiff out of possession —Indurjeet v. Radhey, 21 W. R. 269

Where possession was taken by a third party after suit in satisfaction of some other claims against the defendant Held that under the circumstances the defendant could not be held liable for the mesne profits. Haradhun v. Joykisto, 11 W R 444

As a general rule, a suit for mesne profits will lie against persons who have been found to be in wrongful possession. If the plaintiff has obtained a decree against several joint wrong-doers, he cannot single out one or more of them only as defendants in a suit for mesne profits.—Suttya Nundo v. Suroop Chunder, 14 W R 76

Where lands are wrongfully withheld, the actual occupiers, as well as the person who leased the lands to them, are jointly liable for the damages caused by such trespass —Muddun Mohun v. Ram Dass, 6 C. L. R. 357.

Where intermediate holders combine wrongfully to keep an auction-purchaser out of possession, they must all be held liable for mesne profits; the Court need not apportion their liability in proportion to the extent of the property respectively held by them —Ram Chunder v. Ram Chunder, 23 W. R 226.

In a suit for mesne profits against a number of defendants who have taken possession of distinct portions of lands forming parts of newly-formed chur, to which they have no title, it is fair and equitable in such a case that they (defendants) should be severally liable for mesne-profits in respect of the parcels occupied by them respectively.—Krishan v Kunjo, 9 C. L R. 1.

In a suit for mesne profits, where there are several defendants, their liability should be assessed in proportion to the amount of profits which each had derived from his wrongful possession.—Nawab Nazim of Bengal v. Raj Coomaree, 6 W. R 113; and Collector of Bogra v. Shama Sunkur, 6 W. R. 230. See also Ramratan v Aswini, 14 C. W. N. 849; 11 C. L J. 503; 6 I. C 69.

Unless the landlords combine with the tenure holders in dispossessing the plaintiff, they cannot be made jointly and severally liable for the mesne profits; Salimulla v. Sibsundari, 8 I. C 707 · 37 C. 559; 11 C L J. 603.

An ijaradar taking an ijara lease from a party in wrongful possession pending litigation is liable for mesne profits in a decree against his landlord —Bidyamayi Debia v. Ram Lall, 8 Bom. L. R. Ap. 80; 17 W. R 148.

Where, in a suit for partition, it appeared that the vendor of the portion sued for had kept the vendee out of possession, the vendor, though liable for mesne profits, was not in the position of trustee of the rents for the party kept out of possession.—Nilkamal v. Gunomani, 7 Bom. L. R. 113: 15 W. R. 38, P. C.

Where, upon the expiry of the term of a lease, but without a notice of ejectment having been given by the lessor, possession was taken and rents were collected by a person claiming under a subsequent lease. Held that second lessess were wrong-doers, and were liable for damages by way of mesne profits.—Sitab Dei v. Ajudhya Prasad, 10 A. 18.

A minor who had been adopted by a widow was not made a party to an appeal, preferred by her after the adoption, from a decree made against her when she represented the estate. Held that the minor by his adoptive mother, as his guardian, was liable to a suit for mesne profits brought after the decree upon title, it being made clear that the suit for mesne profits was substantially brought against the minor.—Hari Saran v. Bhubaneswari, 16 C. 40, P. C. (8 M. I. A. 229, and 14 C. 201, referred to).

A purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue, who enters into possession of the purchased property is bound to account for mesne profits to the person in whose favour the decree is subsequently reversed.—Perumal Udayar v Krishnama, 17 M 251 (21 C. 142, P C. followed).

A plaintiff may perhaps recover mesne profits even though he be out of possession. But to recover damages for fish said to have been caught, he must at least show that he has an immediate right of possession, if he were claiming it.—Elahi Baksh v Ramnarayan, 10 I C. 117.

A benamidar can apply for ascertainment of mesne profits.—Prasanno v. Ashutosh, 18 C. W. N. 451.

Decree for Mesne Profits Without Mention of Period.—Where the decree does not state from which period, and up to what period, the plaintiff was entitled to mesne profits, he was entitled to mesne profits up to the date of delivery of possession.—Beni Prosad v. Ramchandra, 13 C. W. N. 43-n (8 C. 178, P. C. folld).

Where a decree awarded mesne profits without mentioning whether it was future or past, the reasonable construction would be that the Court intended to award mesne profits up to the time of possession.—Kishan v. Suraj, 16 I. C. 866.

A decree for possession and mesne profits must to be held to mean mesne profits down to the date of delivery of possession —Dhurm Narain v. Bundhoo, 12 W. R. 75, and Hurcchur v Mollah Abdoolbur, 17 W. R. 209

Mode of Assessment and Calculation of Mesne Profits.—The Court should take into consideration what the defendant made and not what the plaintiff lost; Anukul v. Nabin, 15 I. C. 1.

Cultivating expenses ought to be deducted.—Sankara v. Venkalaratnam, 21 M. L. J. 30: 18 I. C. 615.

A decree-holder is entitled, as mesne profits, to whatever the wrong-doer has collected, though it be more than what the decree-holder himself might have ordinarily collected.—Chunder Coomer v. Kashee Nauth, 5 W. R. Mis. 37.

When a person in wrongful possession of land has himself occupied and cultivated it, the proper principle on which the amount of mesne-profits is to be calculated is to ascertain what would have been fair and reasonable rent for the land if the same had been let to a tenant during the period of unlawful occupation of the wrong-doer.—Raghu Nandan v Jalpa Patap, 3 C. W N. 748. See also Luckmeswar Singh v. Chairman of the Durbhanga Municipality, 18 C. 99, P. C. (107); Bindabun Chunder v. Roberts, Bom L R. Sup Vol. 1004-n; Chardon v Ajeet Singh, 12 W. R. 52, Tripoora Soonduree v Pramotho Nath, 11 W. R. 533; Bisheswree v. Mohun, 5 W. R. Mis. 35, Madhub v. Haradhun, 14 W. R. 294; Promotho v Tripoora Soonduree, 10 W. R. 463. Where the decree-holder was in constructive possession by letting out the lands to tenants, before dispossession, the mesne profits should be measured by what would be a fair and reasonable rent for the lands if the same had been let out to tenants during the period of unlawful occupation of the wrong-doer. The principle of assessing mesne-profits in such cases will depend upon the character of the possession held by the decree-holder before ouster.—Surja Pershad v Reid, 29 C. 622: 6 C. W. N. 409 (3 C W N. 748 distinguished)

The character of possession before trespass should be ascertained, because such possession is a fair index of intention as to the mode of occupation if there were no trespass. The character of the land and its use for a long series of years indicating that the plaintiff, if he had been in possession, would have used the land for cultivating it himself with ordinary food crops Held that the mesne profits should be assessed on the basis of the produce and not rent—Lachmi Naran v. Jotindra Mohan, 35 C. 1000 12 C W N 650. See also 30 C. 536.

A landlord who dispossesses a ryot is liable, not merely for the profit which he makes by letting the land, but to make good the loss which the ryot sustains by being dispossessed.—Hurruck Lall v. Sreenibash 15 W R. 428, Bhero Chandra v. Bamundas, 3 B. L R. 88: 12 W. R 481; and Mahomed Azmul v Chedee Lall, 12 W. R. 104 But when the position of the plaintiff is that of landlord and tenant combined and the defendant a sub-tenant, the mesne profits must be assessed on the value of the crops raised by the defendant, and not upon the basis of the rent.—Gopal Chunder v Bhuboon Mohun, 30 C. 536.

In determining the mesne profits of khamar land, 5 per cent on the value of the actual produce is sufficient allowance to meet the costs of supervision and any other incidental charges—Ejatulla Bhuyan v. Chandra Mohan, 12 C W. N 285 7 C L J 197.

In determining the amount payable to the decree-holder for mesne profits, the Court is bound to consider, not what has been, or what, with good management, might have been, realized by the party in wrongful possession but what the decree-holder would have realized if he had not been wrongfully dispossessed—Luckhy Narain v Kally Puddo, 4 C. 882 4 C L. R. 60.

The use which the trespasser actually made is not a determining factor. The question is, what would the plaintiff have made out of it but, for defendant's trespass. The nature of plaintiff's possession before dispossession is ordinarily the determining factor.—Maharaja of Vizianagaram v. Alam, 9 A. L. J. 774: 16 I. C. 126.

Mesne profits liable in execution of a decree are the rents of an estate, minus costs of collection, Government revenue, losses by desertion, and death of ryots, by drought, etc. The onus of proving the actual amount of mesne profits lies with the wrong-doer, who must produce his accounts of collection.—Dinobondhoo v. Keshub Chunder, 8 W. R. Mis. 25; Ram Nath v. Digumbar, 8 W. R Mis 30.

On failure of decree-holder to prove the rates at which the rents were realized the judgment-debtor was held liable for the amount stated in [illegible] minus the cost of collection.—Palmer v. [illegible]

The rule for the assessment of mesne profits is, that the right of the true owners is to all the profits of the land, and the trespasser must be held responsible for all that he had realized, and receive credit for everything for which he is entitled to credit, such as the rents paid and charges for collection. He does not lessen his responsibility by remitting rent or neglecting to make collection.—Kalee Debee v Modhoo Soodun, 16 W. R. 171.

Mesne profits should not be estimated on the gross produce of an estate except when all other means of ascertaining them failed —Khemon Kuree v. Modhoo Mutty, 4 W. R Mis. 23

When a ryot, himself an actual cultivator, is dispossessed, the measure of damages should be the value of crops The mode of assessment of mesne-profits of zerait lands pointed out.—Laljee Shahay v. Walker, 6 C W N. 732.

In executing a decree for mesne-profits, a Court is justified in excluding from the account unprofitable lands —Becharam v Brojonath; 9 W. R. 369.

In assessing mesne profits of julkar, the nearest approximate value of the produce indicated by the evidence and plaintiff's statement should be allowed —Enaet Ali v. Sobhnath Misser, 15 W R. 258.

Ordinarily in the case of a decree for mesne profits against a trespasser in possession of immoveable property, the collection expenses incurred by him during the period of his possession will be allowed, it is only when the trespass is of a very aggravated character, that the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, may refuse such expenses —Abdul Ghafur v. Raja Ram, 23 A. 252. See also Dungar Mal v Jairam, 24 A. 376 (1 A. 518 F B. followed). In the absence, of evidence, collection charges were allowed 10 per cent.—Girish Chunder v Soshi Shikhareswar, 27 C. 951, P. C.: 4 C. W. N 631, P C, Vidyaram v Mohan, 6 A L J 827; Kishen v. Suraj, 16 I. C 866 But collection charges should be allowed upon the amount actually collected and not upon the net proceeds coming to the zemindar.—Erfoonissa v. Rukeehoonissa, 9 W. R, 457.

Duty of Appellate Court When Mesne Profits Not Ascertained.—In cases falling within Or. XX, r. 12, C. P. Code, the proper course for the Appellate Court to take is, not to remand the suit where it finds that a person is entitled to possession, but to pass a preliminary decree so far as possession is concerned and direct an enquiry as to the mesne profits in cases where the lower Court has not dealt with the question.—Subba Goundan v. Krishnamachari, 45 M. 419: 42 M. L. J. 372: (1922) M. W. N. 269.

Award of Larger Amount of Mesne Profits Than Claimed.—The Court cannot give a larger amount of mesne profits than is claimed, although more is proved.—Sooriah Row v. Cota Jhery, 5 W. R. 127, P. C., Gooroo Dass v. Bunshee Dhur, 15 W. R. 61, and Karoo Lall v. Forbes, 7 W. R. 140. In Baboo Janjha v. Byjnath Dutt, 6 C. 474: 7 C. L. R. 530, it has been held that the amount of mesne profits recoverable by a plaintiff must be limited to the amount claimed in the plaint. But in Jadoomoney v. Hafez Mahomed, 8 C. 205, and in Gouri Prasad v. Reily, 9 C. 112: 12 C. L. R. 41, it has been held that a plaintiff is not limited to the amount or rate stated in the plaint, but he is entitled to recover the larger amount found due on payment of further Court-fees. See also Peary Soonduree v. Eshan Chunder, 16 W. R. 302; and Hurro Gobind v. Digumburee, 9 W. R. 219.

As to awarding mesne profits in excess of the Court's pecuniary jurisdiction, see post.

Interest on mesne profits.—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 211, C. P. Code, 1882, the Court has discretion to give or refuse interest at it chooses. A decree which merely grants mesne profits, and is silent as to interest, must be taken to mean that mesne profits shall carry interest on them. Where the Court does not intend to give interest, it should expressly refuse it.—Grish Chunder v. Soshi Sikhareswar, 27 C. 951, P. C.: 4 C. W. N. 631. Followed in Hurmonoje Narain v. Ram Prasad, 6 C. L. J. 462, in Grish Chunder v. Sasi Sekhereswar, 33 C. 329; and in Vidya v. Mohan, 6 A. L. J. 327: 2 I. C. 464. See also Aruna Chelam v. Aruna Chelam, 15 M. 203, Banwari v. Rama, 10 A. L. J. 533. But see Abdool Ghafur v. Raja Ram, 22 A. 262; and Huroo Durga v. Surut Sundari, 8 C. 332, P. C. (reversing 4 C. 674: 3 C. L. R. 517), in which it has been held that where interest on mesne profits is not given by a decree, it is not obtainable in execution. In Kishnanand v. Partab Narain, 10 C. 785, P. C., it has been held that there is no rule of law obliging the Court to allow interest on mesne profits, it is a matter for the discretion of the Court to allow interest or not. Interest on mesne profits ought to be allowed.—Ram Charan v. Annada Moyee, 18 C. W. N. 76-n.

Interest should ordinarily be allowed on mesne profits, though, inasmuch as the interest forms an integral part of mesne profits, the interest is as much in the discretion of the Court as the mesne profits themselves.—Raja Sashi Kanta v. Raja Sarat Chandra, 31 C. L. J. 415.

A claim for mesne profits includes interest on such profits. Interest as forming a part of the mesne profits or damages cannot be allowed for any period subsequent to that limited by this section. Interest at 6 per cent. should be allowed after delivery of possession, and 12 per cent. to continue till the obtaining of possession.—Ijjutulla v. Chandra Mohan, 7 C. L. J. 197: 12 C. W. N. 285

It is discretionary with the Court to allow interest on mesne profits beyond three years, Nama v. Arumuga, 2 L. W. 1129.

Interest on mesne profits may be allowed year by year, on the amount found to be due, during the period of dispossession.—Radharaman v. Surnomoyi, 30 C. 506, 7 C. W. N. 437 (8 C. 332, P. C., explained and distinguished) Interest on mesne profits may be allowed from the commencement of the suit at the usual rate allowed by the Court.—Hurropershad v. Shamapershad, 3 C. 654, P. C. 1 C. L. R. 499. Followed in Mudun Mohun v. Ram Dass, 6 C. L. R. 357.

A Court of Revenue is competent, in a suit for profits under section 93, Act XVIII of 1873, to award the interest claimed on such profits.—Totaram v. Sher Singh, 1 A. 261

Where the lower Court did not award interest, the Appellate Court cannot add interest; Subramania v. Varadarajulu, 8 M. L. T. 356

The Court may reduce the Court-rate of 6 per cent. under reasonable circumstances; Mahaju v. Narayanasami, 22 M. L. J. 253: 14 I. C. 396

Three years from decree.—The plaintiffs, having obtained a decree for possession with mesne profits till delivery of possession, applied for execution. An obstruction having been caused, they applied under Or. XXI, r. 99 and thereupon their application for execution was dismissed. After the disposal of their application under Or. XXI, r. 99, they applied for execution more than three years after dismissal of the first application for execution. Held that mesne profits for more than three years from the date of the decree should not be awarded, even though possession was not delivered during that period; Narayan v. Sono, 24 B. 345. Followed in Trailokhya Nath v. Jogendra Nath, 35 C. 1017.

The period of three years for payment of mesne profits should be calculated from the date of the ultimate decree which is the only decree capable of and brought in execution. In no case can the plaintiff claim mesne profits for any period subsequent to an offer by the defendant to restore him possession.—Raja Sashi Kanta v. Raja Sarat Chandra, 34 C. L. J. 415

Mesne profits cannot be given for more than three years after decree.—Grish Chunder v. Soshi Shikhareswar, 27 C. 951, P. C.: 4 C. W. N. 631, P. C. See also, Uttamram v. Kishordas, 24 B. 149. In Basantakumari v. Kamikshyakumari, 33 C. 23, P. C.: 2 C. L. J. 238: 10 C. W. N. 1, mesne profits for more than three years before suit were allowed. See 35 C. 1017.

If there has been an appeal from a decree for mesne profits, and has been confirmed, in executing the decree the three years is to be completed from the date of the appellate decree.—Radhanath v. Chandi Charan 30 C. 660; see also Bhup Indar v. Bijai, 23 A. 152.

Limitation for Ascertainment of Mesne Profits.—Applications to determine mesne profits are to be treated as applications for execution of the decree in which the mesne profits have been allowed, and their striking off does not prevent the decree-holders from making a further application of the same nature.—Ram Kishore v. Gopi Kant, 28 C. 242. Followed in Upendra Chandra v. Sakhi Chand, 7 C L J. 301: 13 C. W. N. 4. See also, Mantina Ramachandra v. Sri Raja Mantripagoda, 46 M. L. J. 46: 19 L. W. 69: (1921) M. W N. 115.

Where a decree for possession is given, and an enquiry as to the amount of mesne profits is reserved, the decree for possession is only a partial decree in the suit, and there is to be a further enquiry and further decree in respect of mesne profits. Limitation for execution of such decree runs from the date of the final decree, that is, from the ascertainment of mesne profits.—Dildar Hossein v. Mujeedunnissa, 4 C. 629; Krishnan v. Nilakandan, 8 M. 137, Anando Kishore Dass v. Anando Kishore Bose, 14 C. 50; Puran Chand v. Roy Radha Kishen, 19 C. 132 F. Mesne profits can be recovered only for a period preceding three years next before the institution of the suit.—Kishnanund v. Partab Narain, 10 C. 785, P. C ; Peary Mohan v. Khelaram, 8 C. L. J. 181: 35 C. 996: 13 C. W N 15. See also, Appa Rao v Court of Wards, 5 M. 236.

Under Art. 109, of the Limitation Act, a defendant is liable for the mesne profits received by him, or which he might have, with due diligence, received during the three years before the date of suit and not before. The period of three years fixed, has no reference to the time when rents fall due —Abbas v. Fassihuddin, 24 C. 413. See also Hays v. Padmanund, 32 C. 118, (24 C 413, referred to, 22 W. R. 126, distd.)

See Art 109 of Act IX of 1908

The fact that a particular year for which mesne profits were awarded by the decree is more than three years before the date of the execution application, which is itself in time, will not render the decree for that year time-barred; Malladi v. Brundavanam, 2 M. W. N. 258.

Burden of Proof.—The burden of proving the amount of mesne profits actually received, is on the person who received them, but the burden of proving the profits that the person in occupation might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, is on the person claiming them, Ramakka v. Nagesan, 47 M. 800 92 I C 133 A I R 1925 M 145, Muhammad Abdul Gaffar v. Muhammad Samsuddin, 47 M L J 730: 92 I C 139 A. Jurisdiction in Suits for Mesne Profits Antecedent and Pendente Lite.—Where in a suit for possession and mesne profits or in execution the amount assessed together with the value of the suit exceeds the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court held that the Munsif had jurisdiction to ascertain the mesne profits, and give effect to the order made in his decree.—Rameswar v Dilu, 21 C 550 (doubted in Ijjatulla v Chandra, 34 C. 954: 11 C. W. N 1133, distd in 13 C. W. N. 493.

a decree for possession and mesne profits the mesne profits ascertained was more than Rs. 1,000: held the Munsif had jurisdiction to award the sum; Panchoram v Kinu, 40 C 56. 15 I. C 252 (21 C. 550 folld; 8 I C. 34, 13 C L. J. 132, 15 C. W. N. 500, distd.). But see Golap Singh v Indra, 9 C. L J 367· 13 C. W N. 493. Mesne profits antecedent to the suit and mesne profits pendente lite stand on very different grounds A munsif cannot entertain the application for mesne profits pendente lite when the claim is laid at over Rs. 1,000 and the proper course is to return the plaint for presentation to the Sub-Judge's Court But mesne profits antecedent to the suit can be mentioned approximately and if a plaintiff brings a suit for possession and mesne profits in a Court of limited pecuniary jurisdiction, he may be deemed to have limited his claim with his eyes open and cannot afterwards put forward a claim in excess of the jurisdiction of the Court; Bhupendra v. Purna, 13 C. L. J 132 8 I C 34 (13 C W. N 493 folld.; 7 I. C. 385 dissented from).

Proceedings for ascertainment of mesne profits pendente lite are proceedings in the suit, and under Or XX, r. 12, C. P. Code, the Munsif's Court which passed the decree for possession is quite competent to entertain the application for ascertainment of mesne profits pendente lite, although the amount of such mesne profits be estimated at over Rs 5,000 beyond the maximum pecuniary limit of Munsif The jurisdiction limited under ss 18 and 19 of Act XII of 1887 does not curtail the special power conferred under Or XX, r 12 of the C P. Code, under which the trial Court competent to pass a decree for possession, is also competent to pass a decree for mesne profits irrespective of the amount claimed by the decree-holder, Dina Nath v Musst. Mayavati, 2 Pat L T. 143. A I R 1921 Pat 69 6 Pat. L. J. 54. See also Suraj Prasad Panday v Somra Mahton, 2 Pat. L T 648

Held by the Full Bench (Ghose and Bannerjee, JJ, dissenting) that suit for mesne profits is cognizable by Small Causes Courts —Kunjo Behary v Madhub Chundra, 23 C 881, F B (18 C. 316 overruled; 17 C. 541 and 707, and 15 M. 298 referred to by Ghose, J.); followed in Seshagiri Ayyar v Marakathammall, 22 M. 196; and Subba Rao v Sitaram Ayyar, 24 M 118 But see Antone v. Mahadev, 25 B. 85

A suit by mortgagor against the mortgagee for mesne profits for the period he was in wrongful possession is maintainable in a S. C. Court. Art. 31 of Sch II of Prov S C C Act does not apply, see 14 C. W. N. 1001

A suit for mesne profits was within jurisdiction at the time of institution, but subsequent mesne profits increased its value beyond the jurisdiction of the munsif. Objection was not taken in lower Court, but was urged in appeal; held that it was not tenable; Jamiruddin v. Aswini, 14 I. C. 34.

A munsif has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for mesne profits in excess of the limits of his pecuniary jurisdiction; Bhupendra v. Purna, 21 I. C. 232.

Court-fee in respect of Future Mesne Profits.—Where a decree directs that mesne profits accruing subsequent to the institution till delivery of possession should be ascertained, no further Court-fee is leviable on such future mesne profits.—Rama Krishna v. Bhimabai, 15 B. 416. But it has been recently held by a Full Bench of the Patna High Court that Court-fee is payable in respect of a claim for future mesne profits, that is to say, mesne profits from the date of the institution of the suit up to the date of realization. The Court has no jurisdiction to require the plaintiff to pay additional Court-fee upon his claim for future mesne profits as a condition for proceeding with the investigation of the claim, and has no jurisdiction to dismiss the proceedings if the additional Court-fee is not paid; Golam Sahu v. Chintaman Singh, 5 Pat. 301: 93 I. C. 939: A. I. R 1926 Pat. 218 F B (15 B. 416 not followed; 33 C. 1232 followed).

Where the Court executing the decree has assessed the mesne profits, but the necessary Court-fees have not been deposited within the time fixed as provided by section 11 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), the claim in respect to those mesne profits must be dismissed; after such dismissal, no application for execution of the decree for mesne profits can be entertained, as no such decree is in existence.—Kewal Kishan v. Sookhari, 24 C. 173 · 1 C W N 243 approved in Dwarkanath v. Debendra Nath, 33 C 1232 See, however, Periannan Chetty v. Nagappa, 30 M. 32: 16 M L J 513

In a suit for possession and mesne profits, the value of the original suit for the purpose of section 21, Act XIII of 1887, depends not merely upon the value of the property sought to be recovered, but also upon the value or amount of the profits recoverable —Mohini Mohan v. Satis Chandra, 17 C. 704

When Separate Suit for Mesne Profits Lies.—In a suit for possession and mesne profits, the Court has power either to award mesne profits up to the date of institution of the suit, or up to the date of delivery of possession; but where a decree for possession is silent as regards mesne profits which have accrued between the date of the institution and delivery of possession a separate suit will lie for such subsequent mesne profits.—Mon Mohun v The Secretary of State, 17 C 698 Followed in Ram Doyal v. Madan Mohan, 21 A. 425, F B, and in Hays v. Padmanund Singh, 32 C. 118; applied in Lalessor Babui v Janki Bibi, 19 C. 615; distinguished in Jiban Das v Durga Pershad, 21 C 252, and approved in Bhivrav v. Sitaram, 19 B. 308 See also Rama Bahadra v. Jagannatha, 14 M. 328. 41 M 188: 33 M. L J. 699 · 42 I. C. 929. But see Kachu v Lakshman Singh, 25 B 115

Where a decree declares plaintiff's right to receive mesne profits, they cannot be assessed in execution, but by a seperate suit.—Vinayak Amrit v. Abaji, 12 B 416

Where a plaintiff in 1907 sued for possession and future mesne profits till delivery of possession and possession was only decreed and no mesne profits were awarded, subsequent suit for mesne profits of the same period is barred by res judicata, Ramaswami v. Srirangaraja, 26 I. C. 622 Where the decree is silent as to future mesne profits though asked, a fresh suit is not res judicata.—Misau v. Nga Meik, U. B. R. (1915), 2nd. Qr., 81.

to in clause (a), the defendant shall deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff, whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment, but that if the purchase-money and the costs (if any) are not so paid, the suit shall be dismissed with costs.

(2) Where the Court has adjudicated upon rival claims to pre-emption, the decree shall direct—

(a) if and in so far as the claims decreed are equal in degree, that the claim of each pre-emptor complying with provisions of sub-rule (1) shall take effect in respect of a proportionate share of the property including any proportionate share in respect of which the claim of any pre-emptor failing to comply with the said provisions would, but for such default, have taken effect; and,

(b) if and in so far as the claims decreed are different in degree, that the claim of the inferior pre-emptor shall not take effect unless and until the superior pre-emptor has failed to comply with the said provisions. [S. 214.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations and Their Effect.—Sub-rule (1) is somewhat similar to s. 214 of the Code of 1882, but material changes have been introduced The words "whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment" are new, and have been added to supersede the ruling in Ramasami v Chinnan, 24 M. 449, where it was held that title to pre-empted property could not vest without an instrument of transfer as required by the Transfer of Property Act.

Sub-rule (2) and its clauses (a) and (b) are altogether new.

"These amendments are based on the rulings contained in the decisions of the High Court of Allahabad at 6 A. 370, 455 and 11 A. 164 Having regard to the opinion expressed in 24 M. at p. 463, we have thought it right to make it clear that title vests without an instrument of transfer. To require a transfer now might throw a cloud over a numberless titles rest on the assumption by long practice that no instrument of transfer was necessary"—See Notes on Clauses.

In the Madras case above referred to, BHASHYAM AYYANGAR, J., observed as follows: "I may here observe that the form of decree prescribed by s. 214, C P. Code, in a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption is based on the decision of the Allahabad High Court (1 A. 132), which was passed prior to the Transfer of Property Act and which followed an earlier decision (3 Agra 231). In cases in which the right of pre-emption has to be enforced subsequent to the T. P. Act, the form of decree prescribed by s. 214 has to be supplemented by directing the execution of a registered instrument of sale by the defendant. Though the contract for sale may have been entered into prior to the T. P. Act, yet if the sale itself had not been effected prior thereto, no subsequent sale can be effected unless it complies with the provisions of s 54 of the T. P. Act IV of 1882."—Ramasami v. Chinnan, 24 M 449 (463).

In 6 A. 370, MAHMOOD, J., observed as follows: " The decree in cases where two rival pre-emptors of the same degree seek to enforce pre-emption, as each of them necessarily must do, in respect of the whole property conveyed by one transfer, are defective if they dismiss the suit for any portion of the property, without providing for the contingency of the rival pre-emptor decree-holder omitting to enforce his decree in respect of the share decreed to him And it follows, a fortiori, that when the rival pre-emptors possess different degrees of pre-emption, the decree, at least in one of the rival suits, must be essentially defective if no provision is made for the contingency of the superior pre-emptor never enforcing his right."

The provisions of s. 214, C. P. Code, fall short of lying down any rules as to the form of decree in cases where rival pre-emptors, possessing equal rights of pre-emption come forward to enforce the right in respect of the same sale, and the section is equally silent in respect of cases like the present, where one of the rival pre-emptors possesses superior right of pre-emption to the other. The question is being left unprovided for by the Legislature, the Courts have to fall back upon the general principles of equity in passing decrees such as would suit the exigencies of each case " Clauses (a) and (b) of sub-rule (2) have been added in accordance with the observations of MAHMOOD, J., in the above Allahabad cases.

Applicability of Order XX, Rule 14.—Where the vendee is not entitled to present possession, the provisions of Or XX, r. 14 are not applicable; Raghubir Singh v Jodha Singh, 45 A. 482. 21 A. L J. 417: 73 I C 646.

Decree in Pre-emption Suit.—The decree in pre-emption suit should direct that the amount awarded as well as the costs decreed against plaintiffs if any, should be paid within a specified time Where the Court omitted from the decree any mention of the sum awarded as costs the payment into Court of the decretal amount only was excusable, Baghela v. Musst. Sallo, 18 I C 994 · 3 P R 1913

Jurisdiction in Pre-emption Suit.—In a pre-emption suit jurisdiction of the Court is to be decided by the valuation set forth in the plaint, and not by the price set out in the sale deed upon which the suit is based; Baldeo v Har Ratan, 9 I C 414

Conditional Decree in a Pre-emption Suit for Payment of Money—Compliance.—The terms of the decree must be strictly complied with. In decreeing a right of pre-emption civil Court has no power to make the decree-holder's right depend on payment of the purchase-money within a specified time.—Ashan Aly v. Subokhee Bibee, 10 W. R. 53. Contra in Ewaz v. Mokuna Bibi, 1 A 132, where it was held that the Court was competent to make such a condition, and if the decree-holder fails to comply with such condition, he loses the benefit of the decree. See also Mahabir Parshad v Debi Dial, 1 A. 291.

A decree in a pre-emption suit directed that the purchase-money should be paid within a certain period from the date the decree became ' final ' The period of limitation prescribed from an appeal from this decree expired on a day when the Court was closed. held that the decree did not become final before the day the Court re-opened.—Ram Sahai v. Gaya, 7 A. 107 (1 A 132 followed)

When a direction contained in a decree referred to the time at which such decree should become final held that such decree became final on being affirmed by the lower Appellate Court, where, although a special appeal was preferred by the plaintiff against the decree of the lower Appellate Court, the same was subsequently allowed to be withdrawn.—Hingan Khan v Ganga Pershad, 1 A. 293. See also Narain Das v. Lachman Singh, 3 A. 135

A decree in a pre-emption suit directed the plaintiff to pay the purchase-money within 30 days, and in default the suit should stand dismissed The last day for payment being Sunday, the plaintiff paid the money into Court on the next day held this was a sufficient compliance with the condition imposed by the decree.—Dabi Din v. Muhammad Ali, 3 A 850 Where the amount of the price was paid out of Court by the plaintiff and the vendees came into Court and certified within the 30 days that they had received payment of the amount due from the plaintiff: held that the plaintiff had fully complied with the decree and was therefore entitled to possession; Sukhpal Singh v. Abdul Rahman, 19 A. L J 493 63 I C. 889 Where money was tendered on the last day of payment and was not deposited through mistake of Court officers, and the next day was a holiday and payment was made on the first opening day, held it was sufficient compliance, Prabhu v Nihala, (1916) 3 P. W. R. 12: 36 I. C 183, Gaya Baksh v Tilak Singh, 2 O. L. J. 151: 28 I. C. 379.

A conditional decree in a pre-emption suit for payment of a certain sum of money with costs was modified in appeal, and within the period specified in the Appellate Court's decree, the pre-emptor paid the sum into Court held that this was a sufficient compliance with the terms of the decree —Balmukund v Pancham, 10 A. 400; followed in Bhagwana v. Goru, 56 P. R. 1910 6 I C 954.

Plaintiff obtained a decree for pre-emption on condition of paying the amount of the decree into Court within a certain period and he raised the amount by simple mortgage of the decreed property itself and paid it into Court Held that it was sufficient compliance with the terms of the decree; Lakhpat Singh v Babu Ram, 40 I. C. 35.

Where a decree in a pre-emption suit was conditional upon payment of the purchase-money within one month from its date: held that the period allowed for payment of the purchase-money must be calculated from the date of the Appellate Court's decree.—Rup Chand v. Sham Shul Jehan, 11 A. 346, F. B ; see also Nanachand v. Vithu, 19 B. 258; Sakhal

Chand v. Velchand, 18 B. 203; Bhup Indar v. Bejay, L. R. 27, I. A. 209; and Satwaji v. Sakharlal, 39 B. 175 (4 A. 370; 8 C. 218; 7 A. 866; 13 C. 13, and 11 B. 172, referred to). See, however, Jaggar Nath v. Jokhu Tewari, 18 A. 223, and Ramaswami v. Sundara, 31 M. 28.

A decree for pre-emption conditioned on payment of the pre-emptive price within a fixed time omitted to mention the consequence of non-payment. Held that the plaintiff unless he had paid the pre-emptive price before the expiry of the fixed time, could not enforce his right of pre-emption.—Jaikishan v. Bholanath, 14 A 529 (13 A. 370 referred to).

In a pre-emption decree on payment of Rs. 324-12 the plaintiff paid Rs. 324 within time. Held that he was entitled to set off the balance, As. 12, against the cost payable to him; Becha v. Shami, 10 I. C. 454.

Deposit of decretal amount excepting costs of suit is a sufficient compliance; Ali Husain v. Aminullah, 34 A. 596: 10 A. L. J. 153: 15 I. C. 337; Nil Kanth v. Mahabir Singh, 26 O. C. 345· 74 I. C. 558.

Money was deposited within time—Decree set aside in appeal—A decree-holder of pre-emptor takes out portion of the money—Decree restored in second appeal. Held that the full money having been deposited originally, the pre-emptor is entitled to possession, Najib v Shiva Gopal, 11 A. L. J. 668: 21 I. C. 67.

The question as to whether the purchase-money under a conditional decree in pre-emption suit has been paid into Court within time is not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 47, but is one which should be decided in the suit itself.—Muhammed Ali v. Debi Din, 4 A. 420.

In depositing the purchase-money under a conditional pre-emption decree the plaintiff is entitled to deduct therefrom the sum awarded to him as costs, and therefore the decree does not become null and void by reason of his not depositing the full amount of the purchase-money within time —Ishri v. Gopal Saran, 6 A. 351; folld in Parmanand v. Gobardhan, 28 A. 676. See also Abdus Salam v. Wilayat Ali, 19 A. 256, in which after the payment of the pre-emptive price into Court by the pre-emptor a portion of the money was attached and withdrawn by his creditor.

Where a plaintiff in a pre-emption suit obtained a decree, and paid into Court the pre-emptive price as stated in that decree: held that he is entitled to a refund of the money with interest after reversal of that decree on appeal —Bhagwan Singh v. Ummatul Husain, 18 A 262. Contra in Chaudhuri Bahal v Nait, 19 I C. 1.

"Whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment."—These words have been added to supersede the ruling in Ramasami v Chinnan, 24 M. 449, in which it was held that the title to a pre-empted property could not vest in the plaintiff without an instrument of transfer as required by the Transfer of Property Act. The addition of these words makes it clear that the title to the property vests in the plaintiff on payment of the purchase money. The plaintiff's title accrues on payment of the purchase-money and not from the date of sale; Nadir v. Wali, 5 L 486· 85 I C. 182. A I R 1925 L 202 The plain-tiff's title is also complete from the date of payment; Raghubir Singh v. Jadha Singh, 45 A 482; 73 I C. 646; A. I. R. 1923 A. 507.

Extension of Time for Payment.—It has been held in Ramlal v. Har Narain, 18 A 400, and in other decisions under the old Code, as also in some cases under the new Code that the Court has no power to extend the time for payment after the period mentioned in the decree has elapsed (see the cases noted under s 148) It seems however that s. 148 of the new Code is no bar to extension of time The recent case of Abu Muhammad v. Muchut, 20 C. W N. 860; 1 Pat L J. 92 supports the view. See also Naba v Pathana, 18 I C 86 60 P. R 1913; Girdhari Singh v. Bhupal Singh, 45 A 456 74 I C. 745

An Appellate Court is competent to extend the time for making the deposit where the time fixed by the decree of the lower Court expired without any deposit having been made owing to the pendency of the appeal, Parshadi Lal v Ram Dial, 2 A 744 (3 Agra 254 folld.). When the Appellate Court has, in the exercise of its judicial discretion, extended the time for payment, the High Court will not interefere in second appeal; Girdhari Singh v Bhupal Singh, 45 A 456 74 I. C. 145: A. I. R. 1923 A. 516.

Where the decree directed payment of money within a specified time but the Court omitted from it any mention of the sum awarded against the plaintiff as costs, the Court can allow further time under s 151 for payment of the sum due as costs, Baghela v Mt. Sallo, 18 I. C 994: 8 P. R. 1913

Pre-emption Under the Mahomedan Law.—The Mahomedan Law is the only system which provides substantive rules relating to the rights of pre-emption, Zamir v Daulat, 5 A. 110, 113

Under the Mahomedan law, if a co-sharer alienates his interests to a co-sharer and stranger, the purchasing sharer, by joining an outsider in the purchase, forfeits his right as a sharer, and another co-sharer has the right of pre-emption —Saligram v Rhubardyal, 15 C. 224.

A suit for pre-emption brought by a Sunni claimant against a Shia vendor and Hindu purchasers is governed by the Sunni Hanafi law—Formalities to be observed—Purchasers, if must all be named.—Jug Deo Singh v. Kazi Sayed Mahomed, 9 C. W. N. 826; 32 C. 982.

Under the Muhammadan law of pre-emption, the owner of the dominant tenement has in respect of a sale of the servient tenement a right of pre-emption as a Shafi-i-khalit which is preferable to the right of one who is merely a neighbour as regards the property sold —Karim v. Priyo Lal, 28 A 127 (3 Bom L R. 396 referred to).

Where an estate, originally one, has been divided into two separate mahals, no right of pre-emption under the Mahomedan law will subsist on behalf of one of such mahals in respect of the other, merely by reason of vicinage.—Abdul Rahim v. Kharag Singh, 15 A. 104.

No right of pre-emption arises upon a sale which, according to Mahomedan law, is invalid, for instance, as by reason of uncertainty in the price, or the time for delivery of the thing sold —Najmunnissa v. Ajaib Ali, 22 A. 343.

A Mahomedan of the Shia sect cannot maintain a claim for pre-emption on the ground of vicinage under the Mahomedan law, when both the vendors and the vendee are Sunnis.—Qurban Husain v. Chote, 22 A. 102.

The prevalent doctrine of the Mahomedan law governing the Shia sect is that no right of pre-emption exists in the case of property owned by more than two co-sharers.—Abbas Ali v. Moga Ram, 12 A. 229.

The rights of pre-emption under the Mahomedan law is not recognized in the Madras Presidency as it imposes a restriction on the free disposition of property; Ibrahim v. Mum Mir, (1870) 6 M. H. C. 26.

As to Punjab and Oudh, see Punjab Laws Act IV of 1872, Punjab Pre-emption Act II of 1905, Oudh Laws Act XVIII of 1876.

Ceremonies under Muhammadan Law.—A pre-emptor claiming pre-emption under the Muhammadan law is bound at the time when he makes his talab-i-ishtishhad, to state distinctly that he has already made talab-i-mawasibat.—Abbasi Begum v. Afzal Husen, 20 A. 457; folld. in Abid Husen v. Bashir Ahmed, 20 A. 499. On this point see Rujjub Ali v. Chundi Churn, 17 C. 543 (10 C. 1008 overruled). Followed in Mubarak Husain v. Kaniz Bano, 27 A. 160.

The manner in which talab-i-ishtishhad is to be performed according to Muhammadan law, pointed out.—Ganga Prosad v. Ajudhya Prasad, 28 A. 24 (W. R. 1864, p. 351 followed).

The ceremony of talab-i-ishtishhad must be duly performed with the utmost promptitude—Withdrawal from Court by pre-emptors of money paid by purchaser to redeem mortgage on property sold—Waiver of right of pre-emption.—Baijnath v. Ramdhari, 35 C. 402, P. C See also Jadu Lal v. Janki Koer, 35 C. 575 (8 W. R. 255; 17 C. 543 referred to; 16 W. R. 13, F. B., followed; 27 A. 160 not followed).

Rival Claims to Pre-emption.—Held that decrees in cases where two rival pre-emptors of the same degree seek to enforce pre-emption in respect of the whole property conveyed by one transfer are defective if they dismiss the suit for any portion of the property without providing for the contingency of the rival pre-emptor decree-holder omitting to enforce his decree in respect of the share decreed to him.—Kashinath v. Mukta Prasad, 6 A 370; Hulasi v. Sheo Prosad, 6 A 455; and Arjun Singh v. Sarfaraz Singh, 10 A. 182. But see Abdulla v. Amanatulla, 21 A. 292.

Where, pending a suit brought by one co-sharer for pre-emption another co-sharer having equal rights with the first, filed a similar suit for pre-emption of the same sale. held that the second plaintiff was entitled to a decree for pre-emption in respect of one half of the property sold.—Salig Ram v. Kali Shankar, 27 A. 465 (7 A. 720 followed).

In the case of two rival pre-emptors, each having an equal right to claim pre-emption, the Court must provide in the decree that the whole share must be purchased by both pre-emptors, or, on the default of one by the other, or that neither of them should obtain any interest in the property in respect of which the suits are brought. The decree should not allow either claimant to pre-empt part only of the property over which he has a pre-emptive right. The rule of law is that a pre-emptor must buy the whole, and not part only of the property.—Arjun Singh v. Sarfaraz Singh, 10 A. 182. The above rule has also been laid down in Muhammad Wilayat Ali v. Abdul Rab, 11 A. 108. Followed in Mujibullah v. Umed Bibi, 21 A. 119.

Custom of Pre-emption.—The law of pre-emption was introduced by the Muhammadan Government. In the province of Behar, which was an integral part of the Muhammadan Empire, the right to pre-emption is enforceable irrespective of the persuasion of the parties concerned, and exists among the Hindus of Behar, Jadu Lal v. Janki Koer, 16 C. W. N. 554, P. C : 39 C. 915: 15 C. L J. 483: 15 I. C. 657.

Though there may be a custom of pre-emption amongst the Hindus of Behar, it cannot be availed of by persons who are neither natives of, nor domiciled in, the district in which the property is situate. Where the sale is not a bona fide one but a sham transaction no right of pre-emption arises.—Dhanai Ojha v Dewkinundan Misser, 9 C. W. N. 874: 32 C. 988.

The existence of the custom in the Champaran district has been judicially recognized —Jadu Lal v. Janki Koer, 35 C. 575 (1863) W. R., F. B, 143 followed) Affirmed in 39 C 915 P. C

In order to establish a custom of pre-emption, it is not necessary to prove that the custom was immemorial, but the Courts can give effect to it, if it is proved that the custom existed for a sufficiently long period —Lakhraj Bharthi v Anrud Tiwari, 28 A 484 (17 A. 87 and 23 B 666, referred to).

In the absence of allegation or proof as to any custom different from, or not co-extensive with the Muhammadan Law of pre-emption, that law must be applied between Hindus—Statement of claim—Meaning and not form of the statement to be considered.—Chakauri Devi v. Sundari Devi, 28 A. 590 (28 A 60 referred to).

A Hindu widow in possession of the property of her husband, but not as his heir, there being a son living, has no right of pre-emption as a co-charer, even though she may be recorded as co-sharer in the village papers —Bhupal Singh v Mohun Singh, 19 A. 324. See also 6 A. 17: 17 A 860 See, however, 1 A. 452 and 20 A. 148.

There is nothing to prevent a person having his claim in the alternative on contract, custom or Mahomedan Law. But where there is an established custom of pre-emption and pre-emptor fails to bring himself within it he cannot fall back on Mahomedan Law; Ashanullah v. Shamsunnissa, 36 A. 456 (7 A. L J. 660 distinguished)

Pre-emption under Contract.—Pre-emption can be claimed on the basis of a contract between parties See Kalimoddin v. Reazuddin, 10 C. L. J. 626: 14 C. W. N 295. Such an agreement gives a right of pre-emption in case of private and voluntary sales, and does not apply against a third person who purchases at a court sale; Vithal v. Maruti, 34 B. 567.

Miscellaneous Cases on Pre-emption.—Where a co-proprietor does not part with his entire interest in land by an absolute sale, but merely grants a perpetual lease, the doctrine of pre-emption will not apply.—Dewanutulla v. Kazem Molla, 15 C. 181 (8 W. R. 106, and 25 W. R. 43 followed).

Acquiescence in a mortgage by conditional sale does not involve relinquishment of the right of pre-emption upon the conditional sale eventually becoming absolute.—Ajaib Nath v. Mathura Prasad, 11 A. 164 (4 Bom. L. R. A. C 219: 6 A. 314 distinguished; 8 A. 388, referred to).

A secret purchase of benami shares in a village does not constitute the purchaser a co-sharer for the purposes of pre-emption, so as to enable him, upon the strength of the interest so acquired, to defeat an otherwise unquestionable pre-emptive right preferred by a recorded shareholder.—Beni Shankar v. Maphal Bahadur, 9 A. 480

Conditional sale—Right of pre-emption among co-sharers—Private partition of puttidari estate—Effect of such private partition on the right of pre-emption.—Digambar v. Ram Lal, 14 C. 761.

A co-sharer of an estate, who has a right of pre-emption, does not, merely by joining with himself members of his family, who are not co-sharers in such estate, in a suit to enforce such right, defeat such right.—Bhurey Mal v. Nawal Singh, 4 A. 259 (4 A. 252 distinguished). See also Ram Nath v. Badri Narain, 19 A. 148; Mustaq Ahmad v. Amjad Ali, 19 A. 311 and 324.

Where a pre-emptor joins with himself a stranger in suing to enforce a right of pre-emption, he thereby forfeits such right.—Bhawani Prasad v. Damru, 5 A. 197.

An agreement by the mortgagor to give the mortgagee a preference or pre-emption in case of sale may be enforced against a purchaser with notice of covenant —Haris Paik v Jahuruddi Gazi, 2 C W. N 575.

Where a pre-emptor tranfers his right to a stranger by mortgage, he thereby forfeits such rights.—Bhajjo v Lalman, 5 A 180 See, however, Ujagar Lal v. Jai Lal, 18 A. 382.

Sale of mortgaged property—Suit by purchaser for redemption—Mortgagee entitled to pre-empt—Claim to pre-empt not put forward in redemption suit—Subsequent suit for pre-emption by mortgagee not barred by res judicata.—Ram Chand v Durga Prasad, 26 A. 61 F. B (1 A 75 and 316, 3 A 189 and 20 A. 516 overruled; 12 A. 234 and 11 M I. A. referred to). Referred to in Idarat Khan v. Ilahi Baksh, 27 A 78.

In suits for pre-emption, when the Court has come to the conclusion that the price alleged in the deed of sale is not the true contract price, and where both the vendor and the vendee conceal the real price, the Court should ascertain the market price of the disputed property at the time of the sale.—Agar Singh v. Raghuraj Singh, 9 A. 471.

Where in pursuance of orders passed by the Civil Court in the exercise of insolvency jurisdiction certain revenue-paying property of the insolvent was sold by the Collector, but by private contract and not at public auction, it was held, that such a sale did not oust the pre-emptive rights of such persons as were otherwise entitled to claim pre-emption.—Kanhai Lal v. Kalka Prasad, 27 A. 670 (13 A. 224 at 228 referred to).

The holder of a decree enforcing a right of pre-emption by selling the property to a stranger after the decree does not debar himself from obtaining the property in execution of the decree.—Ram Sahai v. Gaya, 7 A. 107

Neither s. 214, C P. Code, 1882 (Or. XX, r. 14) nor section 28 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), is applicable to persons who being in possession of the property, assert the right of pre-emption —Krishna Menon v Kesavan, 20 M. 805.

In order that a suit for pre-emption may be successfully maintained, it is necessary not only that a cause of action should arise in favour of the pre-emptor at the time of the sale on which the suit is based but that such cause of action should subsist at the time when the suit is brought —Janki Prasad v Ishar Das, 21 A 374.

No right of pre-emption arises where land is assigned without consideration as shankalp —Harnarain v Ram Prasad, 14 A. 333.

No suit for pre-emption will lie, the basis of which is a decree for pre-emption in another suit.—Abdur Razzaq v Mumtaz Husain, 25 A. 334.

Appeal.—The plaintiff who had obtained a decree conditional on payment of pre-emptive price within a fixed period, could appeal after the expiry of such period, Wazir v. Kale, 16 A A 126, see also Kadai v. Jai Sri, 13 A 189 and 376

A pre-emption decree ordered payment within one month and plaintiff appealed against the condition The month expired during the pendency of the appeal and the amount was not deposited. The condition itself being the subject of appeal, the suit should not be dismissed for non-payment within time, Kurshed-un-nissa v Alim-un-nessa, 10 A. L. J. 421.

Decree in suit for dissolution of partnership.

15. Where a suit is for the dissolution of a partnership, or the taking of partnership accounts, the Court, before passing a final decree, may pass a preliminary decree declaring the proportionate shares of the parties, fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved or be deemed to have been dissolved, and directing such accounts to be taken, and other acts to be done as it thinks fit. [S. 215.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 215, C P. Code, with several additions and alterations. The phrases, "or the taking of partnership accounts; before passing a final decree, a preliminary decree declaring the proportionate shares of the parties," and the words, "or be deemed to have been dissolved," have been added.

The amendments seem to have been made in accordance with the observations in Ram Chandra v. Manick Chunder, 7 C. 428, in which it was said: "The Subordinate Judge should have followed the course pointed out in Forms 132 and 133 of Schedule IV, C. P. Code, 1882, (App. D., Forms 21 and 22), and at the first hearing should have determined whether there had been a partnership; what were its conditions; was it dissolved or ought to be dissolved; and who were the parties interested and in what shares; and upon determining these questions, should have directed accounts to be taken; and after the accounts had been taken, should have made a final decree."

"May pass."—It is within the discretion of the Court either to pass or not to pass a preliminary decree, and a preliminary decree for determination of points on which the parties had already agreed would be an improper use of the discretion; Merha Musst. v. Kundan, 17 O. 193.

"Fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved."—The discretion given to a Court by Or. XX, r. 15 of the C. P. Code to fix a date from which a partnership, is to be declared dissolved is a judicial and not an arbitrary exercise of discretion. Ordinarily the Court should direct dissolution from the date of any notice given in that behalf by one of the partners from the date of the plaint and where the parties have been at arm's length since the filing of the plaint, it should not declare that the partnership should stand dissolved from the date of the judgment; Sambasiva Aiyer v. Ganapathy Aiyar, 45 I. C. 727.

"Directing such accounts to be taken."—In a suit for an account of a dissolved partnership, a decree should be passed under this rule in accordance with form No. 21, Sch. I, App. D, and it should direct an account to be taken of the dealings and transactions between the parties, and of the credits, property, and effects due and belonging to the late partnership, and it should direct the appointment of a Receiver of the outstanding debts and effects. Observations on the procedure to be adopted and the burden of proof on the taking of account —Thirukumaresan v. Subbaraya, 20 M. 313. In Ram Chunder v. Manick Chunder, 7 C 428: 9 C. L. R. 137, the procedure to be followed in a suit for an account of partnership transactions has been pointed out.

In a suit for dissolution of a partnership and for accounts sufficient time should be given to the parties to produce accounts and a final decree should be passed on evidence taken by the Court. It will not do to pass an ex parte final decree on the mere statements of the plaintiff, Radha Kishen v. Tirathram, 41 P. L R 1918. 31 P. W R. 1918.

In a suit for an account of a dissolved partnership and for recovery of Rs. 200 from the defendant, it was found that nothing was due to plaintiff, but something was due to defendant Held that no decree should be made in favour of the defendant but the suit should be dismissed —Misri Lal v. Benrasi Lal, 3 A L J. 233. A W N (1905), 111. See, however, Surendra Nath v Atul Chandra, 7 C. L J. 87: 34 C. 892.

A provisional decree is allowed to be passed in a partition suit, which is similar to a suit for a dissolution of partnership, under sec 215, C. P. Code, 1882.—Krishna Sami v Raja Gopala, 18 M 73, p. 87.

As to the form of final decree, see Sch. I, App. C., for No. 22.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from preliminary decree under s. 96; see also s. 97.

16. In a suit for an account of pecuniary transactions between a principal and an agent, and in any other suit not hereinbefore provided for, where it is necessary, in order to ascertain the amount of money due to or from any party, that an account should be taken, the Court shall, before passing its final decree, pass a preliminary decree directing such accounts to be taken as it thinks fit.

Decree in suit for account between principal and agent.

COMMENTARY.

Applicability of the Rule.—The applicability of Or. XX, r. 16, is not restricted to suits for an account between a principal and an agent but applies also to suits on an account The words of the rule are wide enough to embrace all cases where the Court, instead of itself settling the account, considers it necessary to stay its hand in order to ascertain the amount of money due to or from any party by having an account taken before a commissioner; Harjimall & Sons v. Dhanpat Lal Dewanchand, 15 S. L R. 16 62 I C 537

Nature of Account Decree.—A decree for accounts is not a mere direction to enquire and report the proceeds and must always proceed upon the assumption that the party calling for it is entitled to the sum found due. It is a decree affirming his rights only leaving it to be enquired into how much is due, and such a decree directing the defendant to account is a final decree and one which is appealable to the Privy Council; Jasada Dassi v. Rameshari, 14 C L J 603

"Where it is necessary."—A preliminary decree is not necessary in every suit for account. It is only to be passed where it is necessary in order to ascertain the amount due, Seosaran v. Harihar, 28 I. C. 452.

Order XX Not Exhaustive as to Cases of Preliminary Decrees.—It is not essential that an adjudication should be covered by one of the specific cases of preliminary decrees mentioned in Or. XX of the C. P Code in order that it may form the basis of a final decree, Raja Peary Mohan v. Manohar Mukejee, 27 C. W N. 989: 38 C. L. J. 255

"The Court shall pass a preliminary decree directing accounts to be taken."—In a suit for an account by a principal against his agent, if the defendant is found liable to render accounts, the Court should make an interlocutory decree, declaring that he is so liable and direct him to file an account within a fixed period. After an account has been filed, the plaintiff should be allowed to examine it. If the objections are numerous, the procedure laid down in Or. XXVI, rr. 11, 12 and Or. XX, r. 17 to be followed —Degambar v. Kallynath, 7 C. 654: 9 C L. R. 265. See also Annoda Persad v. Dwarka Nath, 6 C. 754: 8 C. L. R. 32. But before directing an inquiry into accounts, the Court must be satisfied about the factum of liability of the agent and that the taking of accounts is necessary; Bharat Chandra v. Kiran Chandra, 52 C. 766: 90 I. C. 944: A. I R. 1925 C. 1060.

In a suit by a principal against his agent for account, the Court should order an account to be taken of the defendant's dealings with the plaintiff's money.—Hurrinath v. Krishna Kumar, 14 C. 147, P. C.

In a suit by a principal against an agent for an account, on the fact of agency being established, it is the duty of the Court to direct an account to be taken of the defendant's dealings as agent. When once the plaintiff has shown that the defendant is an accounting party, it is then for the defendant to prove the amount of his receipts and disbursements.—Raghunath v. Ganapatji, 27 A. 374 (14 C. 147, P. C., referred to).

In a suit against a gomasta to obtain accounts of moneys which had come into his hands. Held that it was the business of the Court to have these papers brought before it and examined, and to determine whether they were correct and fair accounts between the parties.—Sushee Shekhur v. Suleem Biswas, 22 W. R. 101.

Stay of Proceedings.—When an appeal against the preliminary decree is pending the Appellate Court may make an order under Or. XLI, r. 5, staying the enquiry into accounts pending the disposal of the appeal; Balkishen v. Khugnu, 31 C. 722: 8 C. W. N. 572 F B. See notes to Or. XLI, r. 5.

Section 10 has no application to suit for account against agent and cross suit by agent; Chandra Kmar v. Pramatho, 15 C. W. N. 930.

Jurisdiction in Accounts Suits.—In a suit for account, the plaintiff cannot get a decree in excess of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court. In a suit for account the claim was valued at Rs. 150 and after the preliminary decree the amount due was ascertained to be Rs. 8,424. Held that the plaintiff cannot obtain a decree in excess of Rs 1,000, the jurisdiction of the Munsif, Golap v. Indra, 13 C. W. N 493, 9 C L. J. 367 (folld. in Bhupendra v. Purna, 8 I. C. 39) Contra in Gopikisan v. Padamraj, 12 N. L. R. 174.

A S. C. Court has no jurisdiction to entertain suits for account, and consent of parties does not give jurisdiction, Abdul Kareem v Burry Saib, 27 I. C 803; 8 Bur L T. 96; Mariappa v Arunachalam, 143 (1916) M. W. N. 169.

Decree in Account Suits.—A suit for accounts by a principal against an agent involves an undertaking by the plaintiff to pay to the defendant any sum that may be found due to him and a decree to the agent may be granted although he does not specifically pray for it; Parmanand v. Jagat, 7 A. In a suit for account by a principal against his agent if it be found that nothing was due to the principal but something was due to the agent, a decree can be passed in favour of the agent.—Surendra Nath v. Atul Chandar, 7 C. A final decree settling the amount due, if passed in the absence of the defendant is a decree passed ex parte; Jasad Dasi v. Rameshwari, 14 C. L. J. 603.

Whether Decree can be Passed in Favour of Defendant.—In a suit for account between principal and agent, a decree can, if necessary, be passed in favour of the defendant on payment of the necessary Court-fees; Parmanand v. Jagat, 32 A. 525, 6 I. C. 163.

See also notes under r. 19 post.

Appeal.—An appeal lies against a preliminary decree. See ss. 96, 97 ante.

A final decree was passed in an account suit pending appeal against the preliminary decree Held that the passing of the final decree does not take away the jurisdiction of the Appellate Court to hear the appeal against the preliminary decree. And if the preliminary decree is set aside, it supersedes the final decree. Ramnath v. Basanta, 17 C. W. N. 868; 18 C. L. When appealing against the whole decree in a suit for account, the defendant is bound by the valuation in the plaint; Srinivasa v. Perindavenama, 30 M L. J. 402 (F. B.)

Valuation and Court-fee.—In a suit for account and for balance that may be found due, the approximate amount of the claim as stated in the plaint must be taken to be the value of the subject-matter of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction —Khushal Chand v. Nagindas, 12 B. 675 See also Golap Singh v. Indra Kumar, 13 C. W. N. 493; 9 C. L. J. 367. In Bhagvantrai v Mehta, 18 B. 40, it has been held that valuation for the purposes of Court-fees determines the jurisdiction; and in such case the valuation for both purposes is the same

The Court may either by the decree directing an account to be taken or by any subsequent order give special directions with regard to the mode in which the account is to be taken or vouched and in particular may direct that in taking the account, the books of account in which the accounts in question have been kept shall be taken as prima facie evidence of the truth of the matters therein contained with liberty to the parties interested to take such objection thereto as they may be advised. Decree in suit for partition of property or separate possession of a share therein.

18. Where the Court passes a decree for the partition of property or for the separate possession of a share therein, then,—

(1) if and in so far as the decree relates to an estate assessed to the payment of revenue to the Government, the decree shall declare the rights of the several parties interested in the property, but shall direct such partition or separation to be made by the Collector, or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in this behalf, in accordance with such declaration and with the provisions of s. 54.

(2) if and in so far as such decree relates to any other immoveable property, or to moveable property, the Court may, if the partition or separation cannot be conveniently made without further inquiry, pass a preliminary decree declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property and giving such further directions as may be required. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new, it is to be read with s 54 of the Code. From this rule as well as from s. 54, it is clear that a Civil Court is competent to pass a decree for partition of an estate-paying revenue to Government or for separate possession of a share of such an estate by declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property, but the partition and separation must be made by the Collector or by any of his subordinate gazetted officers. Section 54 of this Code evidently contemplates two classes of cases, namely, one for partition of an undivided estate paying revenue to Government, and the other for the separate possession of a share of such an estate. The distinction between the two classes of cases and between the words "partition" and "separate possession of a share" has been clearly explained and pointed out in the judgment of BANERJEE, J., in the Full Bench case of Jogodishury v. Kailash Chandra, 24 C. 725, p. 74: 1 C. W. N. 374 (384).

In the old Code there was no provision prescribing the form of a decree for partition of an estate or the separation of a share The defect has been remedied by this rule.

See notes under s. 54.

Sub-rule (1)—Properties Assessed to Revenue.—In cases of partition of properties assessed to land revenue to Government the Code does not contemplate the passing of final decree by Civil Court. It simply authorises the Civil Court to declare the shares of the parties concerned and to give a direction to the Revenue Courts to give effect to its decree and no further; Somnath v Ram Bailas, 24 I. C. 113; Harun Khan v. Teju Mal, 8 S. L. R. 335· 29 I. C. 58.

The mere passing of a preliminary decree under sub-rule (1) declaring the shares of the parties in the estate, and directing partition of the property other than the agricultural land does not render the Court functus officio; the Court may therefore grant an ad interim injunction restraining a party from interfering with the receivers' possession; Shankar Das v. Behari Lal, 6 L 442: 89 I C. 932: A. I. R. 1925 L. 445.

Preliminary Decree What to Contain.—Preliminary decree should ascertain the property to be divided, the parties interested, and their several rights therein. All questions involving the title of the parties and their rights to any relief within the issues are, judicial in character and must be determined by the Court, such determination must be ordinarily made by the Court and incorporated in the interlocutory decree before any partition is made or directed; Satya Kumar v. Satya Kripal, 10 C. L. J. 503.

Decree Without Direction of Portion.—In a partition suit, the Court gave a decree for possession of one-third share but it was wholly silent as to the manner in which partition was to be effected. Held, it was a preliminary decree.—Dwarka v Ram Pat, 12 A. L. J. 696.

Partition Decree is Pending Litigation—Final Decree or Order to be Engrossed on Stamped Paper.—It is not obligatory, but discretionary with the Court in a partition suit to appoint a commissioner under Or. XXVI, r. 13; and such a decree is not, in all cases, to be considered pending till action is taken under that rule.—Krishnama Chariar v. Kuppammal, 31 M. 540.

A suit for partition is a pending litigation, until the Court signs the final decree. A decree for partition to be operative must be engrossed on non-judicial stamped paper, as required by the Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 2 (15), Sch. I, Art. 45, and until the Judge signs the decree so engrossed, it cannot be said that the suit has terminated; and an order directing a party to be added under Or I, rr 8, 10, 11 can be made in such a suit before it has actually terminated.—Jotindra Mohan v. Bejoy Chand, 32 C. 483.

Where the final order effects actual partition, it is chargeable with duty as an instrument of partition; Tiruvengadathan v. Mangayya, 2 M W. N. 516 (32 C. 483 folld).

A decree for partition must be stamped as an instrument of partition under s. 2 (15) of the Indian Stamp Act (II of 1899).—Balaram v. Ram Krihsna, 29 B 366· 7 Bom. L R. 308

Preliminary Decree in a Partition Suit—Appeal.—The definition of the expression " preliminary decree " is given in the explanation attached to s. 2 An appeal lies against the preliminary decree, but under s 97 no appeal lies against the preliminary decree, after the final decree is passed. See Mackenzie v. Narsingh, 10 C. L J. 113 (Madhu v. Kamini, 32 C 1023, and Baikunta v. Salimulla, 6 C. L. J. 547 folld; Umar Kumari v Jarbandnan, 30 A. 419 expld and distd) even if the final decree is passed after the filing of the appeal no appeal lies; Narain v. Balgobind, 8 A. L. J. 604; 11 I. C. 517. An opposite view has been taken in the following cases. Appeal against preliminary decree—Final decree passed during pendency of appeal—Cross-objections filed against final decree—Appeal against preliminiary decree maintainable. The final decree depends upon the preliminary decree, and if an appeal is taken to the preliminary decree and succeeds, the final decree necessarily falls; Akhtar v. Tasadduk, 34 A 493: 10 A. L. J 19: 16 I. C. 157 (32 A. 225; 8 A. L. J. 604 distd). See also Ramnath v. Basanta, 17 C. W. N. 868; 18 C. L. J. 209; Nistarini v. Raimahan, 18 C. L. J. 214.

An order declaring the rights of parties to a partition suit in certain specific shares is a decree within the meaning of s. 2 of the Code, and is therefore appealable.—Luthin Golab Koer v. Radha Dulari, 19 O. 403; followed in Boloram Dey v. Ram Chandra, 23 C. 279, F. B. See also Bhola Nath v. Sonamoni, 12 C. 273; Bipin Behari v. Lall Mohun, 12 S. 209; Krishna Sami v. Rajgopala, 18 M. 73; and Khadem Hossein v. Emdad Hossein, 5 C. W. N. 617, F. B. · 29 C. 758, F. B.

Where a preliminary decree in a partition suit not followed by action under Or. XXVI, r. 13, is treated by the Court and by the parties as a final decree in execution proceedings, it is not open to a party subsequently to contend that the decree had not become final.—Krishnamachariar v. Kuppammal, 31 M. 540.

Where in a partition suit an order was made in the course of such proceedings by which the position of some of the parties to the suit was determined, but no declaration was made of the exact rights of each of the parties. Held that it was a mere interlocutory order and no appeal would lie from it.—Bhoobun Moyi v. Shurut Sundery, 12 C. 275 See also T. Ramaswami Aiyar v. T. Subramania Aiyar, 48 M. L J 406: 16 L. W. 297.

An order passed in a suit for partition, subsequent to the preliminary decree appointing a commission to make the partition, is an interlocutory order pending the suit which has not been finally decided, and is not an order in execution, and is, therefore, not appealable under s. 244, C. P. Code, 1882 (s. 47). In an appeal against the final decree the appellant can take objection to such an order.—Jogodishury v. Kailash Chundra, 24 C. 725, F. B : 18 C. W. N. 874 (16 C. 208 followed, and 23 C. 679 overruled).

See note to s. 97.

The same view has been taken in the Full Bench case of Bibi Wahidunnessa v. Deepnarain, 20 C. W. N. 1174 F B., where it has been held that where a final decree in a partition suit is passed pending the appeal against preliminary decree, and no appeal has been filed against the preliminary decree the appeal against the preliminary can proceed (36 A. 532, 17 C W. N 868, 18 C. L. J. 209, 18 C. L. J. 214, 18 C. L. J. 223, 22 C. L. J. 90, 37 M. 29 followed; 18 C. L. J 321, 27 I. C. 135, 33 I. C. 137, 33 I. C. 146 distinguished, on the ground that the final decree was passed before the appeal against the preliminary decree was filed).

In a partition suit a preliminary decree was passed and confirmed on appeal. The first court then passed an order directing actual partition with certain directions given by him Held that an appeal lay against that order in as much as no final decree had been made; Bharatendu v. Yaqub, 35 A. 159: 11 A. L. J. 120: 18 I. C 701.

Costs in Partition Suits.—Ordinarily the parties are to bear their own costs up to preliminary decree But where defendant contests plaintiff's right to partition he is liable for cost unnecessarily incurred by reason of unfounded opposition; Satya Kumar v. Satya Kripal, 10 C. L. J. 505. See also Shama Soondari v Jardine Skinner & Co., 5 C L. J. 641.

Limitation for execution of Decree in a Partition Suit.—A decree for partition is a joint declaration of the rights of person interested in the property of which partition is sought, and is in favour of each share holder or set of shareholders having a distinct share. Therefore, execution-proceedings taken by one shareholder or the other are sufficient to keep the decree alive —Sheik Koorshed v Nubee Fatama, 3 551: 2 C. L R, 187.

The action of an Amin appointed under the section, in a partition suit to demarcate the shares assigned to the respective parties to the suit is not the executing of a process for enforcing the judgment within the meaning of Article 164 of the Limitation Act, 1877.—Shah Muhammad Khan v. Hanmant, Singh, 20 A 311 See also Dwarka Nath v. Barinda Nath, 22 C 425, where it has been held that proceedings under this section, for the purpose of effecting partition are proceedings in the suit, itself and not proceedings in execution of a decree. See also Latchmanan v. Ramanathan, 23 M. 127.

Declaratory Decree in a Partion Suit is No Bar to a Subsequent Suit for Partition.—The plaintiffs having obtained a declaration of title to continue to enjoy separate possession of certain land, sued the former defendants again for partition of the same land. Held that the suit was unnecessary, and should be dismissed —Andi v Thatha, 10 M. 347.

See notes under section 11 under the heading " Decree for Partition," where all the cases on the point have been collected.

Order XXVI, Rules 13, 14.—For cases relating to partition, see notes to Or. XXVI, rr 13, 14.

19. (1) When the defendant has been allowed a set-off against the claim of the plaintiff, the decree shall state what amount is due to the plaintiff and what amount is due to the defendant, and shall be for the recovery of any sum which appears to be due to either party.

Decree when set-off is allowed.

(2) Any decree passed in a suit in which a set-off is claim shall be subject to the same provisions in respect of appeal to which it would have been subject if no set-off had been claimed.

(3) The provisions of this rule shall apply whether the set-off is admissible under rule 6 of Order VIII or otherwise.

[S. 216.]

COMMENTARY.

Sub-rule (1) is the same as para 1 of s. 216; but the language of sub-rule (2), which corresponds to para. 2 of the old section, has been changed.

The amendment has been made to give effect to the view that appeals from decrees relating to set-off should lie to the Courts to which appeals in respect of the original claim would lie and not to the Court to which appeals in respect of the amount claimed as a set-off would lie.

Sub-rule (3) corresponds to para. 3 of the old section.

This rule is to be read with Or. VIII, r. 6. See notes to that rule.

This rule covers also claims for equitable set-off.—Vyra Van v. Nataraja, 30 M. L. J. 69.

Appeal from Decree relating to Set-off.—The present rule provides that appeals from decrees relating to set-off shall lie to the Courts to which appeals in respect of the original claim would lie.

A suit for dissolution of partnership, valued at Rs. 2,000, is a suit for money within the meaning of s. 111, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. VIII, r. 6), and a plea of set-off may be raised in such a suit, and if, in consequence of such plea, the first Court decrees in favour of the defendant a sum above Rs. 5,000, then, by reason of s 216, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XX, r. 19) an appeal from that decree will lie to the High Court.—Ramjivan Mal v. Chand Mal, 10 A. 587.

In a suit for account it is unnecessary that the defendant should plead a set-off or counterclaim, and a decree may be granted for the amount that may be found due in his favour; Parmanand v. Jagat, 7 A. L J. 543: 6 I. C. 162.

Certified copies of judgment and decree to be furnished.

ORDER XXI.

EXECUTION OF DECREES AND ORDERS.

Payment under Decree.

Modes of paying money under decree

1. (1) All money payable under a decree shall be paid as follows, namely:—

(a) into the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree; or

(b) out of Court to the decree-holder; or

(c) otherwise as the Court which made the decree directs. [S. 257.]

(2) Where any payment is made under clause (a) of sub-rule (1) notice of such payment shall be given to the decree-holder.

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—Sub-rule (2) is new It has been inserted for the benefit of both the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor and to relieve the Courts from the difficulty which generally arises with regard to decree-holder's claim for costs and interests After service of notice upon the decree-holder, he will not be entitled to claim any costs or interest

Scope of Or. XXI—It applies to Insolvency proceedings.—The rules under this order do not apply to insolvency proceedings under Provincial Insolvency Act 1907 So when in the case of sale by a Receiver, the highest bidder fails to deposit the one fourth of the purchase-money, the Receiver cannot proceed under Or XX r. 71 —Chedee Lall v. Lachman Parshad, 39 A. 267: 15 A. L J. 253: 37 I. C. 830. The provisions of Or. XXI do not apply to a sale of property under administration order; Banarasi Dasi v. Bhushan Das, 40 P L. R. 1922: 69 I. C. 718.

" Money payable under decree."—Where a party was directed by the High Court to pay the costs of the day, and his solicitor paid the money into Court. Held that this rule was not applicable as the order was not a decree.—Shanks v Secretary of State, 12 M. 120.

A decree for mesne profits is a decree for money; Lachman Ojha v. Charitar Ojha, 48 I. C 183. A I. R 1918 Pat. 257.

Decree Directing Payment to decree-holder.—Payment into Court is a valid compliance even though the decree directs, payment to decree-holder, Wana v. Natu, 35 B. 35: 12 Bom. L. R. 818; Sankaran v. Raman, 48 M. L. J. 596: 87 I. C. 560: A. I. R. 1925 M. 743.

Payment by stranger.—Payment by a person who has got a sham sale-deed from judgment-debtor does not satisfy the decree.—Kasturi v. Aruna Chelam, 34 I. C. 390: (1916) 1 M. W. N. 195.

Payment into Court.—A payment to a Receiver appointed by Court is as good and valid as to the Court itself, and falls under clause (c), Muthia v. Orr., 20 M. 224 (231).

If money is brought into Court under process of execution, and the party entitled to it, or his vakil is present to receive it, the Court shall cause it to be paid immediately.—Muttu v. Samu Pillay, 5 M. H. C., Ap. 2.

If under a decree in a pre-emption suit, limiting payment into Court within certain date, only a receipt for payment is put in on the date fixed but confirmed on notice to judgment-debtor later. Held no payment under decree: Abdul Fatteh v. Fatteh Ali, 35 I. C. 363: 73 P. R. 1916.

On the death of decree-holder, debtor should either pay the decretal amount into Court or ask for direction under cl. (c).—Narendra v. Charu, 14 C. W. N. 146.

Where a decree is transferred by assignment by the decree-holder but the judgment-debtor having no notice of the assignment pays the decretal amount in full into the Court, the payment operates as a satisfaction of the decree and the assignee is not entitled to execute the decree; Tata Iron & Steel Works v. Baidy Nath, 2 Pat. 754: 76 I C 55: A. I. R. 1924 Pat. 118.

A payment to one of several joint decree-holders who hold a joint decree is not a discharge of the decree and the certificate given by one cannot bind others in the absence of implied or express authority.—Thimma Reddi v. Subba Reddi, 49 I. C. 141 1918 M. W. N. 507 See notes under Or. XXI, r. 2

Notice—Its Effect.—Notice must be in writing; see s. 142. It is the duty of the Court to give notice to the decree-holder though the judgment-debtor may be bound to pay the process fee. In case no notice is served upon decree-holder, the Court is bound to inform the decree-holder about the payment when he applies for execution; Naryan v. Ganpat Rao, 67 I. C. 242.

When money is paid to a third party without notice of payment to decree-holder and the decree-holder applies for payment of money to him, the Court cannot refer the decree-holder to a regular suit, but it ought to set aside the ex parte order authorising payment to third party.—Bithal Das v. Jiwan Ram, 66 I. C. 744: 20 A. L. J. 353 · 1922 A 190

But Or. XXI, r. 1 (2) has been held inapplicable to mortgage-decree.—Ambi v. Valia Thamberuti, 45 M. L J. 687: 75 I. C 566.

Whether interest on decretal money is payable up to the date of deposit in Court by the judgment-debtor, or up to the date of withdrawal depends on whether the decree-holder had any notice of the deposit.—Kalee Dass v. Puran Kumaree, 16 W. R. 304.

Tender must be Unconditional.—A decree-holder is not bound to him in part satisfaction of this decree; and the refusal to receive a part of what is due to him will not deprive him of his right to interest.—Kunhya Singh v. Tooydun Singh, 7 W. R. 20.

A judgment-debtor must pay the decretal amount to the credit of the decree-holder unconditionally. If he chooses to make a protest, the creditor is not bound to take the money.—Rajendra Kishore v. Pershad Sen, 2 C. L. R. 183.

Payment into Court by the defendant coupled with a request that the money should not be paid until the decision of certain objections made by him is not legal tender.—Goluckmonee v. Nobungo, W. R. F. B. 14, Marsh 45; 1 Hay 76.

For Tender and its effect, see section 38 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) and also notes under Order XXIX, rules 1, 2, 3 and 4.

Limitation.—There is no limitation for application to withdraw money which is in deposit in Court as unclaimed deposit.—Apurba v. Chunder Money, 10 C. W. N. 354.

Payment out of Court to decree-holder

2. (1) Where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court, or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, the decree-holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree, and the Court shall record the same accordingly.

(2) The judgment-debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment, and apply to the Court to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified; and if, after service of such notice, the decree-holder fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly.

(3) A payment or adjustment, which has not been certified or recorded as aforesaid, shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree. [S. 258.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 258 of the C. P. Code of 1882, with some important additions, alterations and omissions.

Alterations and their Effect—Sub-rule (1).—The words "of any kind," have been added after "decree," the words "or of any payment is made in pursuance of an agreement of the nature mentioned in s. 257-A have been omitted; and the words "and the Court shall record the same accordingly" have been added.

The substitution of the words "decree of any kind" for the words "a decree" is material, as it has set at rest the diversity of judicial opinions which hitherto existed. The expression "decree of any kind" includes, money decree mortgage-decree, and all other decrees under which money is payable. The substitution seems to have been made by adopting the principles laid down in 28 M. 473, F. B.; 30 A. 218; 7 C. L. J. 581 and 31 C. 863. In all these cases it was held that this section applies to proceedings in execution of mortgage-decree. It has rendered the cases reported 24 M. 412: 8 C. W. N. 102 and 25 C. 703, obsolete and inoperative.

Sec. 257-A has been omitted from the Code, see note below.

Sub-rule (3).—Some important change has been introduced, as will appear on a comparison with the provisions of para. 3 of the old section, which ran as follows: "Unless such a payment or adjustment has been certified as aforesaid, it shall not be recognized as a payment or adjustment of the decree by any Court executing the decree." The most important change is the omission of the words "as a payment or adjustment of the decree" after the word "recognized." By the above omission it has now become clear that a Court executing a decree cannot recognize a payment or adjustment made out of Court which has not been certified, for any purpose whatsoever,. The above change seems to have been introduced by adopting the principle laid down in Mitthu Lal v. Khairati Lal, 12 A. 509; and although that ruling was subsequently overruled by the Full Bench case of Roshan Singh v. Matadin, 25 A. 36, the Legislature has adopted the law as laid down in 12 A. 509, where it has been held that a Court executing a decree is not competent to take into consideration, payments made out of Court for the purposq of deciding whether or not the application is barred by limitation By the amendment the rulings of the High Courts in which a contrary view was taken have been superseded; and the superseded rulings have been inserted under the heading "uncertified payments may be proved to save limitation." Those rulings are no longer the law and have become obsolete.

The words of the rule are "shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree." There is therefore nothing which prohibits any Court other than a Court executing the decree to take cognizance of uncertified payment. See notes under the heading "uncertified adjustment may be recognised by other Courts."

Effect of this Rule—Remedy for Uncertified Payments.—The words of the rule are that an uncertified payment "shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree." There is therefore nothing which prohibits any Court other than executing Court to take cognizance of uncertified payments of a judgment-debtor where the decree has been adjusted outside the Court without certifying and the decree-holder has inspite of such adjustment applied for execution. The judgment debtor cannot raise the plea of adjustment, as sub-rule (3) expressly prohibits the Court to take cognizance of uncertified payment. It has been held that a suit asking for a declaration that a decree has been adjusted and is not executable and for injunction restraining execution; (Asizan v Mauk, 21 C. 437; Denobandhu v. Hari Maiti, 31 C. 480: 8 C. W. N. 395; Bairaguler v. Bapanna, 15 M. 302) or for setting aside an execution sale on the ground that the decree was already satisfied (Jaikaran v. Raghunath, 20 A. 254; Prasanna v. Kaledas, 19 C. 683; Mathura v. Akshay, 15 C. 557; Vellappa v. Ram Chandra, 21 B. 463) is barred by s. 47. It has been held in numerous cases in Calcutta and Madras that it is not open to the executing Court to enquire into the fact of payment or adjustment of a decree not certified or recorded as provided in this rule even if there is fraud on the part of the decree holder; see Kamini v. Aghore Nath, 11 C. L. J. 91: 14 C W. N. 357; Nistarini v. Kasim, 12 C. L. J. 65; Monmohan v Dwarkanath, 12 C. L. J. 312; Heramoney v. Musa Khan, 7 I. C. 625; Biroo Garain v Msst. Jaimurt, 16 C. W. N. 923; noted under "uncertified payments shall not be recognised by the Court executing the decree" infra A contrary view has been taken in Hansa Godhaji v. Bhawa Jogaji, 40 B 303 where it has been held that it is competent for an executing Court to enquire into uncertified payments under s 47 where the conduct of a decree-holder is fraudulent. See further note under "does this rule restrict the operation of s. 47." The defrauded judgment-debtor's only remedy when the decree-holder applies for execution of the decree inspite of adjustment out of Court, is to sue the decree-holder for damages sustained by him by reason of the breach of the contract represented by the adjustment; Hanmant v. Subbabhat, 23 B. 394; Viraraghava v Subbakka, 5 M. 397 F. B.; Periatambi v. Vellaya, 21 M 409, Krishnasami v Ranga, 20 M. 369; Paramanund v. Khepoo, 10 C 354, Gendo v Nihal Kumdar, 30 A. 464; Krishna v Sabirimuthu, 42 M 338 50 I C 584. To pursue this remedy the judgment-debtor need not wait till the decree is executed because his cause of action arises as soon as the decree-holder files his application for execution; Media Kahani, In the matter of, 30 M 545

Remedy under Criminal Law.—A decree-holder can also be dealt with under the criminal law for such fraudulent execution after adjustment of decree, see, Madhub v Novodeep, 16 C. 126; R v. Bapurji, 10 B. 288; R. v Mathuraman 4 M 325, R. v. Pillala, M. 101; Trimbak v. Hari, 34 B. 374.

Scope and Application of the Rule.—This rule provides that (1) where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court, or (2) where a decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, the decree-holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree, and the Court shall record the same accordingly. Under the Code of 1877, (s. 258), it was held in Baba Mohamed v. Webb, 6 C. 786; 8 C. L. R. 36, that this rule deals with the adjustment of any decree and not merely with the adjustment of money decree. Under s. 258 of the Code of 1882, which is a verbatim copy of the corresponding section of the Code of 1877, it was held in Sankaran v. Kanara Karuf, 22 M. 182: 8 M. L. J. 175, that the rule referred only to the execution of decrees under which money was payable, and was not applicable to decrees for possession of immoveable property. Section 258 of the Code of 1882 was further amended in the present Code by the addition of the words "of any kind," in order to reconcile the views of the different High Courts. In Abdul Latif Sahib v. Bathula Bibi, (1914) M. W. N. 316: 23 I. C. 530, decided under the present Code, it was held by Wallis and Ayling, JJ., that where there was a decree for the delivery of certain immoveable property and for the payment of money, it was not open to the Court to recognize any uncertified adjustment under Or. XX, r 2, cl. (3). This was followed in Sethurama Sahib v. Chhota Raja Sahib, (1917) M. W. N. 327: 40 I. C. 820, where Sadasiva Aiyar, J., held that where the decree provided for payment of money as well as other reliefs, the adjustment of such a decree could not be recognized unless certified to the Court.

In Vaidhinadasamy v. Somasundram, 28 M. 473 F. B.: 15 M. L. J. 126, it was held that this rule applies not only to money decrees but to decrees for the enforcement of a mortgage and other decrees, e.g., a partition decree; Gharry v. Gowrya, 46 B. 226: 64 I. C. 490: A. I. R. 1922 B. 380; Rama Krishna v. Bala Krishna, 43 M. 476: 56 I. C. 289. The addition of the words "of any kind" after the word "decree" in the second line of Or. XXI, r. 2, was intended to set at rest the difference of view between the Calcutta and the Madras High Courts and the conflicting views as regards the meaning of s. 258 of the Code of 1882 By the addition of the words "of any kind," it cannot be said that the Legislature intended that the adjustment of any decree, whatever may be the relief claimed, should be certified to the Court. We are clearly of opinion that Or. XXI, r. 2, refers to a decree under which money is payable whether there are other reliefs or not, and if no money is payable under a decree, then r. 2 cannot be held to apply to such a decree. The words "payable under a decree" do not mean any money which the party may, if he choses, pay, but money which is recoverable by a party in execution against the party liable to pay it"; Narayanaswami v. Rangaswami, 49 M. 716: 50 M. L. J. 547: A. I. R. 1926 M 740: 95 I. C. 731 (per Devadoss and Waller, J.J.).

This rule does not prevent a Court from trying whether a valid tender by money-order has been made.—Kishan Prasad v. Beni Ram, 24 A. 85.

This rule does not apply where the parties agreed that their debts were to be privately adjusted before any decree came into existence; Contra BANERJI, J —Gauri v Gajadhar, 6 A. L. J. 403. 2 I. C. 608

Before an order absolute has been made in a mortgage decree the Court is bound to consider any allegation of payment by defendant after decree nisi and before the application for order absolute. But when an adjustment is alleged to have been made after order absolute in answer to an application for sale by the mortgagee, the executing Court determines the question only under this rule.—Hiranmay v. Musakhan, 7 I. C. 625 (8 C. W. N. 102: 29 C. 651 relied on: 11 C. L. J. 91. 28 M. 473, F. B. folld.).

This rule only authorizes the recognition of payment or adjustment An enquiry into the terms of an alleged compromise and an order on it cannot be made by the executing Court:—Lodd Govind v. Ramdass, 24 M. L. J. 88.

This rule requiring certifying of payment applies only to money payable under a decree, and is not applicable where decree is for the delivery of rice.—Krishna v. Padmanabha, 25 M. L. J 442: 21 I. C. 177.

Uncertified payments made after the preliminary decree in a mortgage suit cannot be proved to oppose passing of a decree absolute.—Piran Bibi v. Jitendra, 21 C. W. N. 920. But see Mangar Sahu v. Bhatoo Singh, 57 I. C. 472: 1 Pat. L. T. 416 where it has been held that such payments can be proved as the Court granting a final decree is not the executing Court; and this seems to be more reasonable view. See also Ramji v. Karam, 40 I. C. 424: 39 A. 532.

"Otherwise adjusted."—The words "otherwise adjusted" in Or. XXI, r 2 (1), are wide enough to cover an oral adjustment of a decree, Anandapriya v Bijoy, A I R. 1926 C. 643: 91 I. C. 705.

Judgment-debtor.—The word "judgment-debtor" in this rule should be construed as including those who claim through him or in his right, e g., an assignee from the judgment-debtor of the equity of redemption after decree —Panduranga v Vithilinaga, 30 M. 537: 17 M. L. J. 417. See also Matharu Suppa Chettiar v. Muthu Chettiar, 50 I. C. 931: 9 L. W. 591, and also his surety So also surety cannot plead uncertified payment —Onkermal v Nitya, A I R 1923 C. 318.

Decree-holder.—Regard being had to the General Clauses Act (I of 1918), the word "decree-holder" in this rule should be read in the plural —Taruck v Dinendro, 9 C. 831: 12 C. L R. 566. An assignee of decree is not a decree-holder until he applies and obtains an order in his favour under Or XXI, r 16, and as such applications are made to the Court which passed the decree, and not to the executing Court, a judgment-debtor can plead that the decree has been already satisfied even though the formalities prescribed by Or. XXI, r. 2 (1) and (2) have not been followed —Raghunath v Ganga Ram, 47 B. 643: A. I. R. 1923 B. 404.

Where there has been an adjustment or certification, as between the judgment-debtor and an assignee who has attained the status of a decree-holder by an order made under Or XXI, r. 16 of the Code, Or. XXI, r. 2 would be clearly applicable Or. XXI, r 2 is not restricted by its terms to the original decree-holder, but extends also to an assignee of the decree who steps into his shoes, as it were, under the assignment; Brajabashi v. Manik, 31 C W N 921 A I R. 1927 C 694.

"Record."—There was no provision in the old Code requiring the Court to record the payment or adjustment The word "recorded" in sub-rule (2) and (3) is new Sub-rule (3) does not require that the payment must be both certified and recorded It is clear that the term "certified" in it refers to sub-rule (1) and the term "recorded" to sub-rule (2). The judgment-debtor does not lose the protection of this rule merely because the Court fails to perform its duty, viz., to record the payment or adjustment It is not necessary that the payment or adjustment should be both recorded and certified—what is necessary is that it should be either recorded or certified.—Tarak Nath v. Natobar, 21 C. L J. 632: 30 I. C. 45 See also Thimma Reddi v. Subba Reddi, 49 I. C. 141: but a casual reference has been held to be insufficient, Mohamed Khan v Nenu Mal, 52 I. C 901

Adjusted.—An "adjustment" is a transaction which extinguishes the decree as such in whole or in part A transaction agreeing to vary the date and mode of execution is not an adjustment but a transaction varying the terms of the decree, so as to constitute a new executable decree. Such variation is against the policy of the Code·—Lodd Govindan v. Ramdon, 28 I. C. 376. 17 M. L. T. 222 (16 Cr. L. J. 451, dissented from). An arrangement with the decree-holder that if the judgment-debtor make two defaults in the payment of an instalment decree the former should sell only a particular estate, and should be debarred from proceeding with the execution of the balance until further default is an adjustment and must be certified. A mere agreement to give time would be an adjustment.—Per Cox, J., Shamlal v. Hazarimal, 15 C. L. J. 451: 13 I. C. 326. An agreement to hold property jointly where the decree directs division by metes and bounds falls within the purview of this rule which bars recognition only by the executing Court but not by any other Court.—Sethu Ram Shahib v. Chhota Raja Sahib, 40 I. C. 820: (1917) M. W. N. 827. But an adjustment prior to decree is superseded by the decree and a decree-holder who obtains a decree cannot when the decree is barred by limitation fall upon prior adjustment.—Hem Raj v. Dost Md., 57 I. C. 153.

The words "adjustment in whole or in part" suggest that the Court is not confined to merely entering the figures supplied by decree-holder. It has power to ascertain to what extent the decree has been satisfied when the manner of adjustment has been notified; Lodd Gobindo v. Raja of Karvetnagar, 20 M. L J. 219.

Purchase by mortgagee holding decree for sale of portion of mortgaged property, subject to mortgage—Petition by mortgagor under this rule claiming that the mortgagee should be called upon to certify satisfaction of his decree. Quaere Whether the subject-matter of the petition was an "adjustment" of the decree within the meaning of this rule.—Erusappa Mudaliar v. Commercial and Land Mortgage Bank, 23 M. 377. Where on a reference to arbitration during the pendency of execution proceedings, an award is made, it is binding upon the parties as an adjustment of the claim; Raj Kumar Lal v. Bulaki Miyan, 3 Pat. L. W. 146: 42 I. C. 467. In order to make it an adjustment, an agreement must be made after the decree; Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vaithiyar, 40 M. 233: 32 M. L. T. 18: 37 I. C. 836 (F. B.). An adjustment prior to decree cannot be said to be an adjustment within this rule and executing Court cannot recognise such an adjustment —Hem Raj v. Dost Muhammad, 57 I C 153 See also 46 I. C 880 and Mallayya v. China Kotayya, (1921) M. W. N. 382 14 L W 317.

Adjustment need Not be in Writing—A Completed Compromise is Sufficient Adjustment.—There is no justification for holding that an adjudgment must be in writing or that the judgment-debter must have carried out all the terms of the arrangements made by him with the decree-holder to satisfy the decree The question really depends upon the intention of the parties at the time when the agreement is entered into, and if they make a final and binding agreement with regard to the decree, then it amounts to an adjustment; Samer Chand v. Chiranji Lal, 102 I. C 753: A. I R. 1927 L. 544

Adjustment in Part.—Where the decree-holder enters into an agreement with some only of the judgment debtors by discharging them from liability it is an adjustment, in part, of the decree and must be certified to the Court under this rule.—Mahomed Khan v. Mahomed Meenamar, 31 M. 467

Wh[illegible] out of Court partly satisfied his decree-holder, [illegible] the decree to another Court for execution, [illegible] has been applied for, he is entitled, on execution in full being demanded, to an order of the Court, to which the decree is transferred, calling upon the decree-holder to certify the fact of such part-payment.—Rajendra Nath Roy v. Cunnoomul, 5 C. 448.

When the decree-holder, entering into adjustment petitioned the Court for release of the judgment-debtor without certifying it: held that the presumption was that the decree had been satisfied in full, and that it would be unjust to allow the decree-holder to take advantage of his own omission —Chango v. Kaluram, 4 B. H. C. 120.

Adjustment of a decree by a guardian without leave of the Court cannot be certified under this rule; Aruna Chellam v. Ramanadhan Chetty, 29 M 309.

It is illegal for a Court to refuse to certify payment made to the transferee of a decree on the ground that the transfer was not recognized by the Court. In execution proceeding by the original decree-holder, the judgment-debtor can plead payment to transferee; Bala Krishna v. Mini Reddi, 14 I. C 702

Effect of Certifying Satisfaction though Amount Not Paid.—If a decree-holder forgives the defendant and certifies satisfaction without receiving payment, a creditor of the decree-holder attaching the satisfied decree cannot prove that it was made fraudulently; Subba Pillai v Alliar, 5 M. L. T 72· 2 I. C 528.

Certificate—Where to be Filed.—Under this rule the certificate of payment or adjustment should be filed in the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree The filing of a compromise petition in the Appellate Court cannot be treated as the filing of a certificate of satisfaction in the Court of first instance, Kalu Nair v. Meenakshi, 25 M. L. J. 586; contra in Biroo Gorain v Jamwati, 16 C. L J. 174. 16 C. W. N. 923, dissented from. A statement in execution petition that payment towards satisfaction of decree was made out of Court, does not amount to an application for certification; Dwarika v. Bepin, 64 I C. 32: A. I. R. 1922 C. 200.

Application for Certificate of Adjustment—How to be Made and What is.—This rule contemplates a definite proceeding with a petition by the decree-holder and a formal act by the Court. A decree-holder must do it in some well defined speech or writing. Where a decree-holder stated in an unusal place in his petition for execution that the defendant, had paid some money as interest. Held this was not certificate; Gokul v. Bhika, 12 A. L J. 387 23 I. C. 753 (referred to in Bhajanlall v. Cheda, 24 I C. 215) But see Eusuffzeman v. Sanchia, 43 C. 207: 20 C. W. N 272. 23 C. L. J. 390, where it has been held that the decree-holder may either apply to certify payment before execution or may do so on his application for execution, and the notification to the Court of the receipt of the sum paid is all that he has to do to certify payment. Notification to Court is enough. The Code does not provide for any special form; Taraknath v. Natabar, 20 C L J 632

A petition signed and filed in Court by a judgment-creditor, certifying payment of the amount due to him is sufficient.—Saadoollah v. Kalee Churn, 12 W. R. 358.

A letter from a decree-holder to his vakil to put in an acknowledgment into Court is not a settlement out of Court certified to the Court.—Thakoor Lall v. Kanye Lall, 7 W. R 510.

Endorsement of payment by decree-holder on the back of an Office copy of the decree is sufficient, and no separate petition is necessary; Lakhi Narain v. Felamani, 20 C L. J 181 · 18 C. W N 196 (n); referred to in 29 M. L. J. 219.

An application stating that the judgment-debtor had paid to the decree-holder a certain sum in different instalments and that he out of kindness agreed to have the execution struck off, is not an application under sub-rule (2) as it did not recite the terms of the adjustment; Jogendra v. Provat, 19 C. L. J. 126. A judgment-debtor's counter-petition alleging adjustment may be treated as an application to certify but it must be within ninety days; Budradden v Gulam, 36 M. 357. The written statement under r. 2 (2) alleging adjustment, should be treated as an application; U. Po. Thaing v. Mg. Ba. V., 11 I. C. 750.

The decree-holder is not bound to certify in writing a payment or adjustment of his decree. It may be done orally either by himself or by a person representing him; Mahabir v. K. E., 20 C. W. N. 520. Mere notifying to the Court that the Judgment-debtor has done a particular act which he was bound to do under the terms of a consent decree is not compliance with the provisions of Or. XXI, r. 2 and decree-holder, if he disputes the allegation, may file a petition for execution Ligraj Patjori v. Mahadev Ram, 30 C. L J. 118: 53 I. C. 882.

Effect of Certifying by One of Several Decree-Holders.—The question whether one of several decree-holders can enter satisfaction on behalf of all, is one of procedure, and a rule of decision must be looked for in the C. P. Code. Or XXI, r. 15, and Or. XXI, r. 2 appear to have shown that it is not the act of joint-decree-holders, but the act of the Court executing the decree that is intended to operate as a valid discharge.—Seshas v. Rajagopala, 13 M. 236.

Satisfaction of entire decree certified by one only of several decree-holders, is not binding on the others.—Moti Ram v. Hannu Prasad, 26 A. 334. See also Sultan Moideen, v. Savalayammal, 15 M. 343; Taruck Chunder v. Divendro Nath, 9 C 831 · 12 C. L R. 566, and Dhanraj v. Ujain Singh, 34 P. R. 1906: 93 P. L R. 1906 Nor can one of several partners or even the manager of a joint Hindu family legally certify so as to bind others unless anything on behalf of others is proved. In the absence of any evidence that they hold any special and definite shares each. Such certificate, if any, has not the legal effect of satisfying or adjusting the decree even in part. Mahomed Silar Sahib & Co. v Nabi Khan Sahib, 31 M L J 93: 35 I. C. 157

One of two joint decree-holders of a mortgage decree cannot alone certify satisfaction of the whole decree, though he may do so in respect of his own interest. The other decree-holder who refuses to recognise the certificate is entitled to obtain an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property in respect of his own share of the mortgaged-debt.—Taman Singh v. Lachhmin Kunwari, 26 A. 318. See also Budhun v. Hafezah, 4 C. L. R. 70; Brojeswari v. Tripoora Soondaree, 3 C. L R. 518; Motiram v.

Honnu Prosad, 26 A. 334 (15 M. 348: 9 C. 831 referred to; 22 W. R. 77 not followed).

A mortgaged property burdened with the payment of an entire debt to two share-holders, is liable to sale at the instance of both creditors separately so long as their claims remain unsatisfied. The act of one cannot destroy the lien of the other on property pledged to both as security for a joint-debt —Inderjeet Koonwar v Brij Bilas, 8 W. R. 190.

Does this Rule Restrict the Operation of S. 47?—Fraud.—This rule lays down a special procedure in cases where money payable under a decree is paid out of Court or the decree is otherwise adjusted, and the judgment-debtor appears as an applicant for praying that the payment or adjustment might be recorded or certified There is nothing in the language of this rule which prevents a judgment-debtor who has not adopted the special procedure laid down in sub-rule (2) from raising the plea of payment or adjustment in answer to a decree-holder's fraudulent application for execution It is only when the judgment-debtor on his own initiative applies under sub-rule (2) for getting the payment recorded, that sub-rule (3) and Art 174 of the Limitation Act come into play. But this rule does not seem to debar a judgment-debtor who did not make any application under sub-rule (2) from appearing as an opponent to contest a fraudulent execution and to ask the Court to enquire into the fact of payment or adjustment This would be in consonance with the provisions and spirit of s 47, otherwise the provisions of this rule and s. 47 would be inconsistent and irreconcilable When a judgment-debtor resists the fraudulent execution by a decree-holder by a plea of adjustment or satisfaction, it is submitted his case ought to fall under s. 47. It may also be noted here the rule 11, cl (e) expressly requires that a judgment-creditor when applying for execution shall state whether any payment or adjustment has been made between the parties subsequent to the decree. And a person who applies for execution over again in spite of payment or adjustment of the decree out of Court alleging that there has been no adjustment makes a false statement under rule 11, cl. (e). There is no reason whatever why the fact of payment or adjustment should not be enquired into under s. 47. To hold otherwise would be simply lending support to the carrying out of fraud. The view expressed seems to have the support of Gadhadhar v Shyam Charan, 12 C. W. N. 485, where the judgment-debtors complained that the decree-holder had by fraud kept them in ignorance, till within a month of their application, of the fact that satisfaction of the decree had not been certified, and it has held that the matter could be investigated under s. 47.

This view was also taken in Ramayyar v. Ramayyar, 21 M 356, where it has been held that if a decree-holder falsely representing to the judgment-debtor that an adjustment out of Court has been duly certified by him fraudulently proceeds with the execution, the judgment-debtor may rely on the uncertified adjustment, and may prove it in the execution proceedings. The Court proceeded on the ground of a fraud having been practised upon the Court and judgment-debtor. This case had not the support of the later decisions in Ganapathy v. Chenga, 30 M. 312; Veerappa v. Ponnyya, 17 M. L. J. 527; Budruddin v. Galans, 36 M. 357, and has been adversely commented on in Trimbak v. Hari Laxman, 34 B. 579, HEATON, J., discussed the question and expressed himself thus: "It is however supposed that the Court is debarred from recognising in any way any payment unless it is certified by the decree-holder or proved by the judgment-debtor in accordance with the special procedure provided by s. 285 (the present rule). To so suppose is to run counter to the provisions of s. 244 (s. 47) which provide that the Court executing the decree shall determine any question between the parties relating to the discharge or satisfaction of the decree, and if what is supposed to be the effect of the law be in truth its effect, it leads to a very singular result; for it means that a decree-holder may fraudulently apply to execute a decree twice over; and the Court is prohibited from enquiring whether there is or there is not fraud; and this inspite of the fact that the decree-holder seeks to debar the Court from enquiring into the fraud, by the device of refusing to do what the law says he must do If that be the effect of the law, then all that I have to say is that the law intends the Court to be used, in this kind of matter, not as an instrument of justice but as an aid to fraud. It is to me abundantly clear that the legislature never intended such a result as an encouragement of fraud. Do the words of the law compel it? I think not, though s. 258 is doubtless worded in such a way as to invite misunderstanding To state the result briefly the final clause of s. 258 raises a presumption but does not limit the jurisdiction of the Court. This result appears to me to be inevitable if s 258 be read not by itself as an isolated enactment containing a complete statement of the law on the matter it deals with, but as a part of a whole and with reference to its place in the scheme of the code and its relation to other parts of the scheme. It is a matter which nearly affects the reputation of our Courts, and very closely affects the administration of justice, for to read the law as it often is read is it seems to me, to reverse the principles of justice and to convert the instruments of justice into instruments of fraud" In Deno Bandhu v. Hari Maiti, 21 C 437 it was observed that this rule did not restrict the operation of s. 47

The recent decision in Hansa Godhaji v Bhawa Jogaji, 40 B. 303: 18 Bom. L R 22, adopts the view that where fraud has been committed the executing Court should enquire into the question of adjustment or payment out of Court although it has not been certified In this case plaintiff obtained a decree for Rs 2,508. The next day the parties effected a compromise for Rs 2,000 in full satisfaction, the money was paid and a formal receipt passed but the payment was not certified to the Court The plaintiff notwithstanding applied for execution of the decree The lower Courts held that although the application for execution was fraudulent, they could not under this rule recognise the uncertified payment and execution should proceed. The High Court held that the question of payment or adjustment should be gone into. The judgment of HEATON, J., in 34 B 575 (ante) was followed and STOTT C. J observed: "that the Court should not in the exercise of its duty under s 47 allow a clear case of fraud to be covered and condoned by the provision of Or XXI, r. 2." The above decisions have, however, been overruled by a Full Bench of the same Court in Mehbunnissa v. Mehmedunnissa, 49 B. 548: A. I. R. 1925 B. 300 and Ganesh v. Yeshwant, 25 Bom. L. R. 247: A. I. R.

1923 B. 253, where it has been held that a Court executing a decree can in no case recognize a payment or adjustment not certified as required by this rule. The Calcutta High Court has also held in several cases that in no case can an executing Court inquire into uncertified payment or adjustment even if fraud is imputed to the decree-holder; Binoo Gordain v. Jaimurat, 16 C W N 923; Jogendra v. Ashutosh, 24 C. L. J. 462. The same view has been taken by the Patna High Court in Imamuddin v Bindubasini, 5 Pat. L. J. 70: 55 I. C 890, and by the Lahore High Court in Parma Ram v Lehna Singh, (1919) 135 P. R. 349: 53 I. C. 443.

"Uncertified payments shall not be recognised by the Court executing the decree"—Section 47.—Under this rule any payment or adjustment made out of Court and not certified cannot be taken into account in execution proceedings, Trilochun v Rakkaswar, 15 C. L. J. 423; Janki Prasad v. Thakur Das, 13 I C 21, Prosanna v. Lal Mia, 55 I. C. 669, Radhakanta Lal v Mussammat Parbati Koeri, 63 I. C. 535; 6 Pat. L J. 337; Taj Sing v. Jagan Lal, 14 A. L J. 370, Jogendra v. Ashutosh, 24 C. L. J. 462. It has been further held that the Rule is applicable where, in answer to an application for execution, an uncertified adjustment is set up and the executing Court is bound not to recognise and to enquire under s 47 notwithstanding fraud on the part of the decree-holder; Badrudden v Gulam, 36 M 357. (Veerappa v. Armugam, 17 M. L. J. 527; Ganapathi v Chenga, 29 M 312, Periatambi v. Vellaya, 21 M. 409, followed, Ramiayyar v Ramayyar, 21 M 346, commented on and disapproved); see also Biroo Gorain v Jainwati, 16 C. W. N. 929: 16 C. L J. 174; Shamlal v Hazarimal, 15 C L J 451. The provisions of this rule are express and no payment or adjustment which is not certified shall be recognised. It is no answer under s 47 to an application for execution of a decree. In this case the judgment-debtor pleaded that by fraud he was prevented from learning that the adjustment had not been certified by the decree-holder in accordance with his promise; Bajrang v. Lachmi, 15 C. L. J. 38; Sojhro v Changomal, 63 I. C. 238; P. Chetty firm v. G. Lon Pon; A. I. R. 1923 R. 103. 1 Bur. L. J. 226. See, however, Gadadhar v. Shyam Churn, 12 C W. N 485, which lays down that where the judgment-debtor complained that the decree-holder had by fraud kept them in ignorance till within a month of their application, of the fact that the satisfaction of the decree had not been certified, the matter could be investigated under s 47 But see Taj Singh v. Jaganlal, 38 A. 281: 35 I. C. 234. Such uncertified payment or adjustment cannot be recognised by Court even to guard against the end of giving an opportunity to dishonest decree-holder to commit fraud by denying adjustments which are not certified; 40 I. C. 889 In re M. D S. Elanitai Co. Ltd., omission on the part of the decree-holder to certify does not amount to fraud and executing Court can on no account entertain directly or indirectly an objection regarding uncertified adjustment of decree; Imamuddin Khan v. Bindu Bashini Prasad, 55 I. C. 899: 5 Pat. L. J. 70; Ellis E. P. Charry v. Kittar P. Gowrya, 46 B. 226 · 23 Bom. L. R. 981.

The weight of authority is decidedly against the contention that such uncertified payments may be investigated and recognised when the decree-holder is guilty of fraud in suppressing or omitting to certify such payment but there are some cases in which executing Courts have allowed the judgment-debtor to raise such plea in execution on the principle that decree-holder cannot be permitted to obtain an unjust order from Court by false statements. See the case of Hansa v. Bhawa, 40 B. 333: 18 Bom. L R. 22; 33 I. C. 232; Ghasi Ram v. Dalel Singh, 45 I. C. 222, where an execution sale was held to be a nullity as the decree was satisfied and decree-holder, in failing to certify payment, had committed fraud on Court.

Uncertified payments cannot be proved under s 47 when the time for application under Art 173-A, Limitation Act, has passed away, Kamini v. Agore, 14 C. W N. 357 11 C L J 91, (Ram Doyal v Ramhari, 20 C. 32; Bairagulu v. Bapana 15 M 302 relied on), Nistarini v Kasim, 12 C. L. J. 65; Manmohan v. Dwarkanath, 12 C L J 312, Golam Majafar v. Goloke, 25 I. C. 884 and even if decree-holder certifies, the judgment-debtor can show that no such payment was made, or that such payment did not extend period of limitation; Hender Mirza v Kailash, 17 I C 177.

An uncertified payment or adjustment is not effective to save limitation, Bisseswar Mukerjee v Ambicacharan Bhattacharjee, 45 C 630: 42 I. C. 472

The decisions on this point are not harmonious It has been held in some cases that an uncertified payment may be enquired into under s. 47, if there is fraud on the part of the decree-holder See notes under "DOES THIS RULE RESTRICT THE OPERATION OF s 47"

Uncertified Payments.—A sum paid under a void agreement cannot be acknowledged or recognised in execution of a decree under this section, unless it has been certified within the proper time —Durga Prasad v. Lalit Mohon, 25 C 86. See also Chedambara Pillai v Ratna Ammal, 3 M. 113.

In the course of execution proceedings, the parties entered into an agreement which was registered and filed in Court and the decree-holder filed a petition stating that as the judgment-debtor had made over to him a bond he could realize his debt by bringing a suit upon it On this the execution case was struck off Afterwards the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, alleging that the judgment-debtor had failed to make over the bond to him Held that the decree was not superseded by the agreement, and was, therefore, capable of execution —Fateh Muhammad v. Gopal Das, 7 A. 424

A kistibondi or instalment bond was executed by way of adjustment of decree, and thus was not certified. Held that a Court executing the decree was not competent to take cognizance of the kistibondi under s 47 and the decree must be executed notwithstanding the adjustment.—Ram Doyal v Ram Hari, 20 C 32 But see Gadadhar v Shyam Churn, 12 C W N. 485.

If the adjustment or payment pleaded by judgment-debtor be admitted by decree-holder, then the executing Court cannot proceed to execute the decree, though such payment or adjustment be not certified, as the jurisdiction to execute the decree ceases as soon as the Court is informed by the decree-holder that the decree has been adjusted. The intention of this Rule is to avoid enquiry into uncertified and disputed adjustment or payment, but there is no time limit for the decree-holder to certify, and if a decree-holder admits satisfaction, the Court should not proceed in execution any further So it was held that a Court should not confirm sale, if the decree-holder admits satisfaction of decree, as confirmation of sale is a proceeding in execution.—Nilkanta v. Yeshwant, 65 I. C. 331.

The Court is not bound to take account of an adjustment out of Court by agreement to receive a smaller sum in satisfaction of the decree unless such adjustment is certified under this section —Veerappa v. Arumugam, 17 M. L J 527

A decree-holder was opposed by the judgment-debtor on the ground that the decree had been sold by the Deputy Collector in execution of a decree of his Court, and that he (judgment-debtor) had become the purchaser thereof. Held that these proceedings amounted to an adjustment out of Court, which could not be recognized by the Court, unless certified by the judgment-creditor himself —Bharat Chunder v. Nazir Ali, 10 W. R 354.

A decree being attached as directed by s. 273, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r 53), its adjustment subsequent to such attachment cannot be recognized by the Court —Gopal Nanashit v Jaharimal, 16 B. 522

Agreement between Judgment-debtor and Proposed Assignee of Decree Before Assignment can be Pleaded in Bar of Execution Without Certification.—See Brajabashi v Manik, 31 C W N. 921: A. I. R 1927 C. 694

Uncertified Payments and Limitation.—The omission of the words "as a payment or adjustment of the decree" from the last para of the old section has made it clear that the Court cannot recognize a payment or adjustment which has not been certified, for any purpose whatsoever. It follows that an uncertified payment or adjustment cannot operate to prolong the period of limitation for applying for execution under the Limitation Act

As the section stood before it provided that an uncertified payment could not be recognized as a payment or adjustment of the decree so it was formerly held that if a decree-holder sought execution of a decree and was resisted by the judgment-debtor by the plea of limitation, in deciding the question whether it has become time barred or not it was competent to the Court to take evidence about an uncertified payment made out of Court and to take it into consideration as every payment gives a fresh starting point for limitation (as Tukaram v. Babaji, 21 B 122; Roshan v Matadin, 26 A. 36. 23 A W N 179, Hurri v Nasib, 21 C. 542).

Under the present rule uncertified payments cannot be recognized for the purpose of limitation or for any purpose whatsoever, e g., extending the limitation; see Kutabullah v Durga, 16 C. W. N. 396. 13 I C. 424, Bhajan v. Cheda, 12 A. L. J. 85 · 24 I C 215; Seth Narsoomal v. Tiraltmal, 30 I. C. 51; Amir Singh v Chattar, 13 A. L. J. 666. 29 I. C. 274; Bireswar v. Ambika Charan, 45 C. 630: 42 I. C. 472; or for deciding whether the application for execution is within time; Ram Sarup v. Jaggannath; 15 I. C. 523: 15 O. C. 234, or for shewing that the decree has been satisfied; Romes Ch. Shaha v. Kala Ganji, 50 I. C. 331.

The omission of the words has rendered the following decisions nugatory:—Kishan v. Aman, 17 A. 42; Bhubonesuari v Dina Nath, 2 B. L. R 320; 11 W. R. 232, Bishto v. Uma, 15 W. R. 459; Fakir v. Madan, 4 B L. R. 130, F. B., 13 W. R. 40; Juggut Mohinee v. Madhub, 15 W. R. 66; Purnanand v. Vallab, 11 Bom. H C 506; Tukaram v. Babaji, 21 B. 122; Hurri v. Nasib, 21 C 542, Rajeswara v Hari Babandhu, 19 M. 162; Roshan v Matadin, 26 A 36 (12 A 569 overruled); Zahar Khan v. Bakhtwar, 7 A. 327.

"Show cause."—It does not mean merely to allege causes, nor even to make out that there is room for argument, but both to allege causes and to prove it to the satisfaction of the Court In such an investigation the evidence may be given either orally or by affidavit.—Rung Lall v. Hem Narain, 11 C. 166, referred to in Shaik Davud v Paramasami, 31 M. L. J. 207.

Suit by Judgment-debtor Based on Uncertified Payments Is Barred.—Where a decree is alleged to be satisfied by an agreement out of Court, but satisfaction is not certified a subsequent suit on the agreement is not maintainable for a declaration that the amount payable under the decree has been paid and satisfied and for an injunction restraining the decree-holder from executing the decree. S 47 is a bar to such suit, Deno'bundhu v. Hari Malti, 81 C. 480 8 C W N 395 See also Azizan v. Matuk Lal, 21 C. 437; Bairagulu v Bapanna, 15 M 302; Palaneappa v. Somasundaram, 28 I. C. 468. But see Iswar Chandra v Haris Chandra, 25 C. 718: 2 C. W. N. 247; Mukund v Hari Das, 17 B 23. See also 50 I. No separate suit will lie to set aside a sale held in execution of a decree on the ground that the decree had been adjusted out of Court, when, in fact, no such adjustment of the decree had been certified in the manner provided by this section —Jaikaram Bharti v Raghunath, 20 A 254

Where an application for recording adjustment out of Court has been rejected, the decision cannot be attacked by a regular suit —Hafiz Abdulla v. Kanhya, 14 I C 751 92 P W R. 1912

Suit Lies by Decree-holder on Uncertified Adjustment.—In execution of a decree a compromise was effected and the judgment-debtor executed a bond in favour of the decree-holder in satisfaction of the judgment-debt. The compromise was not certified to the Court Held that the bond was not void, but was binding on the obligor: and a suit upon the bond was therefore, maintainable.—Ramghulam v Janki Rai, 7 A 124 (5 B L. R. 223: 20 W. R. 150: 3 C L R. 414 4 B. 295 3 A 533 and 538, followed; 6 B. 146, and 8 B 300, dissented from) See also Hukum Chand v. Tahorrunnessa, 16 C. 504; Sellamayyan v Muthan, 12 M. 61; Hara Gobind Das v Issuri Dasi, 15 C 187; Swamirao Narain v. Kashi Nath Krishna, 15 B. 419; and Tukaram v. Anant Bhat, 25 B. 252. See, however, Thirumalai v. Sundara, 11 M. 469; Abdul Rahiman v. Khoja Khaki, 11 B. 6, and Heranema v. Pestonji, 22 B. 693, F. if a decree-holder admits satisfaction, the Court should not proceed in execution any further So it was held that a Court should not confirm sale, if the decree-holder admits satisfaction of decree, as confirmation of sale is a proceeding in execution —Nilkanta v Yeshwant, 65 I C. 331.

The Court is not bound to take account of an adjustment out of Court by agreement to receive a smaller sum in satisfaction of the decree unless such adjustment is certified under this section —Veerappa v Arumugam, 17 M L J. 527.

A decree-holder was opposed by the judgment-debtor on the ground that the decree had been sold by the Deputy Collector in execution of a decree of his Court, and that he (judgment-debtor) had become the purchaser thereof Held that these proceedings amounted to an adjustment out of Court, which could not be recognized by the Court, unless certified by the judgment-creditor himself —Bharat Chunder v. Nasir Ali, 10 W R 354.

A decree being attached as directed by s 273, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r 53), its adjustment subsequent to such attachment cannot be recognized by the Court —Gopal Nanashit v Jaharimal, 16 B. 522.

Uncertified Payments and Limitation.—The omission of the words "as a payment or adjustment of the decree" from the last para of the old section has made it clear that the Court cannot recognize a payment or adjustment which has not been certified, for any purpose whatsoever. It follows that an uncertified payment or adjustment cannot operate to prolong the period of limitation for applying for execution under the Limitation Act

As the section stood before it provided that an uncertified payment could not be recognized as a payment or adjustment of the decree so it was formerly held that if a decree-holder sought execution of a decree and was resisted by the judgment-debtor by the plea of limitation, in deciding the question whether it has become time barred or not it was competent to the Court to take evidence about an uncertified payment made out of Court and to take it into consideration as every payment gives a fresh starting point for limitation (as Tukaram v Babaji, 21 B. 122; Roshan v. Matadin, 26 A 36 23 A W N 179, Hurri v. Nasib, 21 C. 542)

Under the present rule uncertified payments cannot be recognized for the purpose of limitation or for any purpose whatsoever, e.g., extending the limitation; see Kutabullah v Durga, 16 C. W. Where a decree has been satisfied out of Court, and the payment has not been certified, it is nevertheless open to the quondam judgment-debtor, when suing, to have a sale made by the quondam decree-holder, after satisfaction of the decree set aside, to prove the payment of the decretal money otherwise than by a certificate under this rule.—Pat Dasi v Sharup Chand, 14 C 376 See also Ramayyar v Ramayyar, 20 M. 356; and Tegh Singh v Amin Chand, 5 A 269 But see Mathura Mohun v. Akhoy Kumar, 15 C. 557

Criminal Proceedings.—This rule does not debar a Criminal Court from recognizing uncertified payment, where the decree-holder is charged with fraudulently executing a satisfied decree —Q.-E. v. Pillala, 9 M. 101: Q.-E v. Bapuji, 10 B 288, Q v Moturaman, 4 M 325, and Madhub v. Nobodeep, 16 C. 126

Mere application for execution is not an offence under s. 210, I. P. C. The decree must have been caused to be executed —Shama Churn v. Kashi, 23 C 971

Appeal.—An order under this rule, allowing or refusing an application to record an adjustment of a decree falls within the terms of s 47 being made on a question arising between the parties to the suit such an order falls within the definition of " decree " and is appealable under s 96.—Guruvayya v Vudayappa, 18 M 26, Lingayya v Narasimha, 14 M. 99; Jamna Prasad v Mathura Prasad, 16 A 129, Rangji v Bhaiji Harjivan, 11 B 57; Raja Kamlessuri Persad v Sukhan Singh, 7 C W N 172, Biroo v Jawati, 16 C. Limitation.—The judgment-debtor must apply within ninety days from the payment or adjustment, for the issue of a notice to the decree-holder to show cause why payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified See Art 174, Limitation Act, 1908

Time Within Which Decree-holder shall Certify.—No time is fixed within which decree-holder is bound to certify a payment out of Court.—Tukaram v Babaji, 21 B 122 He can certify part payments at any time —Lakhi Narain v Falamani, 20 C L J 131 But a payment cannot be certified after the decree has become time barred —Bhajan v Cheda, 24 I C 215

But the decree-holder must certify before the decree is barred by limitation and an uncertified payment cannot be taken notice of to save limitation; Bahu Bulla v. Jogesh Chandra, 23 C W N 320 50 I. Part payment, made within time but certified after time saves limitation.—Rajan Aiyar v Ananthavathnam, 29 M L. J. 669 (20 C L J 138 referred to).

Jurisdiction of Executing Court.—When one of several debtors had paid the decretal amount to decree-holder and got the payment certified under Or. XXI, r 2, and another judgment-debtor in ignorance of the satisfaction of the decree paid money into Court and it was withdrawn by decree-holder and having discovered that the decree had been previously satisfied, the judgment-debtor made an application to the executing Court for refund of the money Held that executing Court had jurisdiction to entertain such application —Gopal v Rambhanjan, 65 I. C. 307.

Reversal of Decree and Refund of Uncertified Payment.—If a decree is reversed on appeal the judgment-debtor is entitled to get back what he had paid to the plaintiff under the decree whether certified by the Court or not.—Vasudeb v Vishnu, 11 B 724.

Limitation and Step-in-aid of Execution.—An application by some of the judgment-debtors, signed by the decree-holders, to have certain payments made out of Court certified under this rule and that time be allowed to pay the balance of the decree, is a "step-in-aid of execution," such as will keep the decree alive within the meaning of Art. 179 of the Limitation Act, 1877.—Wasi Imam v Ponit Singh, 20 C 696; Surjan Singh v. Hira Singh, 12 A 399; Muhammad Husan v Ram Sarup, 9 A. 9; Tarini Das v Bishtoo Lal, 12 C 608, Akbar Jamadar v Kali Krishna, 4 C W. N. (S N.) clii (152); Kasumri v Beni Prasad, 26 A. 19.

The payment of part of the judgment-debt by the judgment-debtor with the acknowledgment of liability by his pleader, is sufficient, under s. 19 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), to give a fresh period of limitation.—Trimbak v Kashi Nath, 22 B 722 See also Muhamad Said v Payag Sahu, 16 A. 228, where the acknowledgment was made in the presence of the collector and it was held to be a valid acknowledgement for all purposes and sufficient under ss 19 and 20 of the Indian Limitation Act to save limitation in respect of the execution of the decree. An application by decree-holder to certify payment made out of Court is a step-in-aid of execution; Hari Charan v. Hari Charan, 6 I. C. 43 (10 C. L. J. 467 followed).

Omission of Section 257-A from the C. P. Code.—Section 257-A, which had a place in the Code of 1882, has now been omitted. It ran as follows:—

"257-A. Every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt shall be void, unless it is made for consideration, and with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree, and such Court deems the consideration to be under the circumstances reasonable. Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt, which provides for the payment directly, or indirectly of any sum in excess of the sum due or to accrue due under the decree, shall be void, unless it is made with the like sanction. Any sum paid in contravention of the provisions of this section shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment-debt; and the surplus (if any) shall be recoverable by the judgment-debtor."

The section was first enacted by Act XII of 1879, with a view to protect the interests of judgment-debtors against the exercise of undue pressure by decree-holders. It gave rise to conflicting decisions and as interpreted by the majority of the High Courts was found in practice to be of little service to the judgment-debtors Section 16 of the Indian Contract Act as amended, appeared to the Special Committee to afford to adequate protection where it was required

The reason for the omission will be clearly understood on reading the Full Bench Case of Atma Singh v Banke Rai, reported in 61 P L R. (1907), 71 P W R 1907, where all the cases decided by the High Courts under the old section have been referred to, discussed and explained. The Full Bench said —

"A contract under undue influence as under fraud, coercion or misrepresentation is only voidable, and it is left to the Courts to decide the question upon evidence aided by certain presumptions in particular cases. But here simply because the debt has been the subject of a decree, a contract between a debtor and his creditor relating to the liquidation of the debt by which any time is given for its payment, or any sum however small, is agreed to be paid in excess of the decree, is by inflexible fiat of the Legislature pronounced as nullity unless made with the sanction of the Court that passed the decree The effects of such a rule in the substantive law of Contract is far-reaching indeed"

"The first part of s 257-A is however, clearly and admittedly an invasion of ordinary Contract Law Such an agreement without consideration would clearly be void under s 25 of the Contract Act But if for any reason, poverty, misfortune, illness, or so on, the judgment-debtor can induce the decree-holder to give him time, and the Court which passed the decree endorses the indulgence, the contract which under substantive law would be void, becomes valid under this special enactment"

"Under the ordinary law, Contract Act, s 25, an agreement for the satisfaction of the decree, which provides for the payment of a sum in excess of the decree, but does not extinguish the decree, is clearly void in the immense majority of cases, as it is absolutely without consideration

The decree remains in force and executable and the judgment-debtor gains nothing whatever Such an agreement is void without the intervention of s. 257-A "

The effect of the omission of s 257-A. from the present Code, is, that now no agreement to give time to the judgment-debtor without any consideration and without the sanction of the Court, or any agreement which provides for the payment of any sum in excess of the sum due or to be due under the decree, would be void except in so far as such agreements may be affected by the provisions of the Indian Contract Act

For contracts induced by undue influences, see notes to s. 9.

COURTS EXECUTING DECREES.

Lands situate in more than one jurisdiction.

3. Where immoveable property forms one estate or tenure situate within the local limits of the jurisdiction of two or more Courts, any one of such Courts may attach and sell the entire estate or tenure. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

The introduction of this rule settles a point on which decisions were not harmonious It provides for cases where estates are situate within the jurisdiction of two or more Courts and definitely lays down that any of such Courts may attach and sell the entire estate. The principle was acted upon in various cases and they are noted below

Sale of Property Situate in More than One Jurisdiction.—A suit was instituted, on a mortgage of a single revenue-paying estate, part of which lies in Bakherganj and part in Fareedpore, in the Sub-Judge's Court at Bakherganj under s 17, and a decree was obtained for sale of the mortgaged property, held that the Court was competent to order a sale of the whole of mortgaged property, though only a portion of it was situated in the district of Bakherganj —Shuroop Chunder v. Ameerunnissa, 8 C. 703, Shama Charan v. Kasi Nath, 23 C 971 See also Ram Lall v. Bama Sundari, 12 C. 307 (11 B L R 56, 19 W R 134 followed), Shib Narain v. Gobin Das, 23 W R 154; and Ganga Narain v. Annada Moyee, 12 C L. R. 404. See, however, Unnocool Chunder v Hurry Nath, 2 C. L R 334.

In execution of a mortgage decree in a suit brought under the provisions of s 17 in the Court of the Sub-Judge of Rajshaye, properties situated in the districts of Rajshahye and Nyadumka were sold by the Rajshahye Court.—Maseyk v. Steel & Co., 14 C. 661. Referred to in Gopi Mohun v. Doybaki Nundun, 19 C 13. The latter case has been followed in Tin Couuri Debya v. Shib Chandra, 21 C. 639, and also in Jagernath Sahai v. Dip Rani Koer, 22 C 871 See, however, Prem Chand v. Mokhoda Debi, 17 C. 699 (F B)

Change of Territorial Jurisdiction.—When during the pendency of execution proceedings, there was a change of territorial jurisdiction of the executing Court, pending proceedings are by operation of law transferred to the Court having jurisdiction and if in spite of such change, property is sold by a Court which initially had jurisdiction, but subsequently had ceased to have jurisdiction owing to such change; held, sale invalid.—Kasi v. Murugappa, 33 M. L. J 750 13 I. C. 70.

Transfer to Court of Small Causes.

4. Where a decree has been passed in a suit of which the value as set forth in the plaint did not exceed two thousand rupees and which, as regards its subject-matter, is not excepted by the law for the time being in force from the cognizance of either a Presidency or a Provincial Court of Small Causes, and the Court which passed it wishes to be executed in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon, such Court may send to the Court of Small Causes in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon, as the case may be, the Copies and certificates mentioned in rule 6; and such Court of Small Causes shall thereupon execute the decree as if it had been passed by itself. [S. 223, para. 5.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to para. 5 of s. 223 of the C P Code, 1882, with some verbal changes only

A S. C. Court executing the decree of another Court has the same powers as it possesses in regard to its own decrees, Gunapatty v Thakurdye, 34 C. 823.

Mode of transfer.

5. Where the Court to which a decree is to be sent for execution is situate within the same district as the Court which passed such decree, such Court shall send the same directly to the former Court. But, where the Court to which the decree is to be sent for execution is situate in a different district, the Court which passed it shall send it to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed. [S. 223, para. 6.]

COMMENTARY.

Transfer Within District.—District transfer of decrees within the same district is not illegal, Kelu v Vikrusha, 15 M 345

Direct Transfer Outside District.—A decree for money passed by a Munsif in one district was sent for execution to a Munsif in another district directly Held that the latter Court had no jurisdiction to execute it without an express order of the District Judge —Debi Dial v Moharaj Singh, 22 C. 764.

The Judge of Gaya sent a decree direct to the Sub-Judge of Palamau another district for execution who dismissed the application Held, that he should have returned the papers to Gaya for retransmission t proper Court instead of dismissal, Prakash v Baldeo, 22 I C 682

As to the power of the Court to which a decree is transferre execution to determine the question of limitation, see notes under s

Procedure where Court desires that its own decree shall be executed by another Court.

6. The Court sending a decree for execution shall se

(a) a copy of the decree;

(b) a certificate setting forth that s faction of the decree has not been obta by the execution within the jusrisdictio the Court by which it was passed, or, w the decree has been executed in part, the e to which satisfaction has been obtained and part of the decree remains unsatisfied; and

(c) a copy of any order for the execution of the de or, if no such order has been made, a certifi to that effect. [S. 2

COMMENTARY.

The documents required to be transmitted for the purpose of ob ing execution are a copy of the decree and a certificate of any sum rem ing due under it, together with a copy of any order for execution may be passed —Venkata Subba v Sivaramappa, 4 M. 331.

The words "a copy of any order for the execution of the dec mean a copy of any subsisting order —Hathibhai v Patel, 13 B 3

The omission to transmit to the Court executing the decree the c ficate required by this rule is a mere irregularity, which would not v the sale —Abbubaker v Mohidin, 20 M 10.

Court receiving copies of decree etc to file same without proof.

7. The Court to which a decree is so sent shall cause copies and certificates to be filed, wit any further proof of the decree or order execution, or of the copies thereof, unless Court, for any special reasons to be reco under the hand of the Judge, requires such proof. [S. 2

COMMENTARY.

Alteration and Effect—Enquiry into Jurisdiction.—The word " the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it " which occurred after " co thereof " have been omitted, on the ground that an executing C ought not to go into any question as to the jurisdiction of the Court w passed it The result is that the judgment-debtor cannot now raise such objection as to jurisdiction in the executing Court.—Bhagwanti

v. Vishwanath, 28 B. 371; Haji Mura v. Permanand, 15 B. 216; Imdad v. Jagun, 17 A. 478 (7 B. 481 not followed).

The executing Court has no power to question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree under execution, Hari Govind v. Narsing, 38 B. 194: 16 Bom L. R 23 I C. 123 See also Kasturseti v. Ram Kanhoji, 10 B. 65.

As to Court's power to question the validity of decree, see notes to r. 10.

It has been held that before issuing execution, the jurisdiction of foreign Court, e.g., Cochin, to pass the decree sought to be executed can be questioned; Veeraraghava v. Muga Seit, 27 M. L. J. 535; Jivappa v. Jeerji, 18 Bom L. R. 486.

Execution of decree or order by Court to which it is sent.

8. Where such copies are so filed, the decree or order may, if the Court to which it is sent is the District Court, be executed by such Court or be transferred for execution to any subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction. [S. 226.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s 226, C. P. Code, with some modifications. The words "be transferred for execution to any subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction," have been substituted for the words "by any subordinate Court which it directs to execute the same"

As to the powers of the Court to which a decree is sent for execution, under this section, see Manorath Das v Ambika Kant, 13 C W. N 533, and notes to s 42 The Court to which a decree is sent for execution may not be competent to execute it before a copy of the decree is received, but once an order is made sending a decree to another Court for execution, that by itself is sufficient to entitle the decree-holder to apply for rateable distribution under s 73, C. P Code, to the Court to whom the decree has been ordered to be sent; Arimuthu Chetty v Vegapiri Pandaram, 8 I. C 852; and it is not necessary for the decree-holder to apply afresh to the Court to which decree is transferred, for execution, if he had already applied for execution and transfer to the Court which passed the decree; Dutt v. Taraprasanna, A I R. 1923 P 280· 2 P 909 74 I C 753

Jurisdiction of Executing Court to Execute Decree Beyond its Pecuniary Limits.—The Code does not make any distinct provision as to whether a decree which is sent for execution to another Court, and which is for an amount beyond its pecuniary jurisdiction can be executed by the latter Court The Calcutta and Bombay High Courts have held, in view of s 6, that a Court having no jurisdiction to try a suit, can have no jurisdiction to execute a decree passed therein, see Gokul Kristo v. Akhil, 16 C 457; Durga Charan v. Umatara, 16 C 465; Sidheswar v Harihar, 12 B. 155. The Madras High Court has taken a contrary view and held that the jurisdiction of a Munsif in regard to execution of a decree transferred to him for execution is not subject to any pecuniary limit, Vasorath v.

Syed Ghulam, 5 I. C. 155; 7 M. L. T. 182 (Narasayya v. Venkatakrishnayaya, 7 M. 397, Shanmuga v. Ramanathan, 17 M. 309, followed; 16 C. 457, 16 C. 465, 12 B. 155, not followed). See also Kelu v. Vikilua, 15 M. 345. A similar view seems to have been taken in Punjab; Ganga Ram v. Gursaram, 31 P. R. 1887 (F. B.)

Executing Court can Not Extend Time of Payment.—Where a High Court decree is sent to a Munsif for execution, he has no power to extend the time of payment allowed in the decree. The Court which passed the decree can only grant such extension; Mohideen v. Manam, 21 M. L. J. 1018.

Execution by High Court of decree transferred by other Court.

9. Where the Court to which the decree is sent for execution is a High Court, the decree shall be executed by such Court in the same manner as if it had been passed by such Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction. [S. 227.]

COMMENTARY.

The functions of the High Court in respect of the execution of decrees of other Courts are limited to effecting execution, and to matters arising out of the proceedings in execution.—Jadu Ray v. Farrell, 6 B. L. R. Ap. 66.

APPLICATION FOR EXECUTION.

Application for execution.

10. Where the holder of a decree desires to execute it, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree or to the officer (if any) appointed in this behalf, or if the decree has been sent under the provisions hereinbefore contained to another Court then, to such Court or to the proper officer thereof. [S. 230, para. 1.]

COMMENTARY.

Decree-holder.—A "decree-holder," is the person in whose name the decree was made, or some person whom the Court has by order recognised as the decree-holder from the original plaintiff or his representatives.—Paupayya v. Narasannah, 2 M. 216. A decree-holder, includes any person to whom the decree has been transferred.—Dwar Bux v. Fatil. Jah, 3 C. W. N. 22. See also Vishnu Sakharam v. Krishnarao, 11 B. 153 and Chalhoth v. Saidindavide, 26 M. 258. See, however, 27 C. 488 and 25 A. 443.

But a person who is a stranger and not a party to the suit, cannot apply for execution of the decree merely because he has got certain rights under the decree; he may bring a separate suit; Dil Afza Begum v. Deputy Commissioner, Bahraich, 37 I. C. 133.

If the Decree has been sent to Another Court.—Where the decree of a District Court has been sent to the Court of a Munsif for execution, and has not been returned to the District Court, the proper Court within the meaning of the Limitation Act, 1908, Art. 182 (5), in which to apply for execution of the decree, is the Court of the Munsif; Maharajah of Bobbili v. Narasaraju, 43 I A 238 39 M 640 36 I C 682

Oral applications.

11. (1) Where a decree is for the payment of money the Court may, on the oral application of the decree-holder at the time of the passing of the decree, order immediate execution thereof by the arrest of the judgment-debtor, prior to the preparation of a warrant if he is within the precincts of the Court. [S. 256.]

Written application.

(2) Save as otherwise provided by sub-rule (1), every application for the execution of a decree shall be in writing, signed and verified by the applicant or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and shall contain in a tabular form the following particulars, namely :—

(a) the number of the suit;

(b) the names of the parties;

(c) the date of the decree;

(d) whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree;

(e) whether any, and (if any) what, payment or other adjustment of the matter in controversy has been made between the parties subsequently to the decree;

(f) whether any, and (if any) what, previous applications have been made for the execution of the decree, the dates of such applications and their results;

(g) the amount with interest (if any) due upon the decree, or other relief granted thereby, together with particulars of any cross-decree, whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed;

(h) the amount of the costs (if any) awarded;

(i) the name of the person against whom execution of the decree is sought; and

(j) the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, whether—

(i) by the delivery of any property specifically decreed;

(ii) by the attachment and sale, or by the sale without attachment, of any property ;

(iii) by the arrest and detention in prison of any person;

(iv) by the appointment of a receiver;

(v) otherwise, as the nature of the relief granted may require. [S. 235.]

(3) The Court to which an application is made under sub-rule (2) may require the applicant to produce a certified copy of the decree. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

The old section has been re-cast, and some material changes have been introduced The important changes are given below and they should be noted

Alterations—Sub-rule (1).—The words "for the payment of money" have been substituted for "passed for a sum of money only;" (2) the words "and the amount decreed does not exceed the sum of one thousand rupees," and the sentence "issue of a warrant directed either against the person of the judgment-debtor if he is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court or against his moveable property within the same limits", and (3) the words "arrest of the judgment-debtor prior to the preparation of a warrant if he is within the precincts of the Court" have been added

Sub-rule (2).—The words "save as otherwise provided by sub-rule (1) every" have been added in the beginning

Cl. (e).—In cl (e), the words "payment or other," have been added and the word "controversy" has been substituted for the word "dispute."

"The Committee have not given effect to the suggestion that this should be limited to payments and adjustments which the creditor executing the decree is bound by law to recognize, as this would remove a valuable incentive to state truly what payments have been made (see 10 B. 288)."—See also the Report of the Special Committee

In the case of Queen-Empress v. Bapuji Dayaram, 10 B. 288, referred to in the Report of the Special Committee, it has been held that under s. 235, C. P Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r 11), the decree-holder or the party who applies for execution, is bound to state in his application any adjustment between the parties after decree, whether such adjustment has or has not been previously certified to the Court. Intentional omission to make such statement amounts to an offence under s 193 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860).

Cl. (f).—In cl. (f), the words "dates of such applications" have been added.

Omission to specify all the previous applications with their dates and their results is not a material irregularity, such as would render the whole of the execution proceeding illegal —Saudamini v Jessore Registered Loan Co. Ltd, 96 I C 554 A I R 1926 C. 1146

Cl. (g).—In cl (g), the words " together with particulars of any cross-decree whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed" have been added By the changes this clause, has been rendered more general The change seems to have introduced in adoption of the principle laid down in Damodar v Vyanku, 31 B. 244 (249), where it has been held that a debt or compensation cannot be attached until ascertained

Cl. (j).—Sub-clause (ii) of clause (j) has been substituted for the words " by the attachment of his property "

Sub-clause (iii) of clause (j) has been substituted for the words " by the arrest and imprisonment of the person named in the application." The omission of the words " named in the application " seems material, inasmuch as the decree-holder, under the provisions of the old Code, was bound to name the person to be arrested in his application for execution, and thus giving sufficient opportunity to the person named to evade the process But under the present Code the decree-holder is not bound to disclose the name of the person to be arrested in his petition for execution He can give the name of the person to be arrested, at any subsequent stage of the proceedings, when he may find the opportunity for arresting the judgment-debtor This is for the benefit of the decree-holder.

Sub-clause (iv) of clause (j) is new Decrees may be executed by appointment of Receivers in cases where such appointment is just and convenient as for instance in Administration Suits —Maung Powin v. Mat Tin, 36 I C 385. 10 Bom L T 206 Receiver may be appointed in execution of money or other decrees. See other cases under Or. XL, r. 1, C. P Code.

In sub-clause (v) of clause (j) the words " relief granted " have been substituted for the words " relief sought," which occurred in the old Code

Sub-rule (3) —This is new Under the old Code, it was optional with the decree-holder to file a copy of the decree with his application for execution. But under the present Code, it would depend entirely upon the discretion of the Court

For the mode of execution of mortgage-decree and limitation, see notes under Order XXIV

Sub-rule (1).—The Court has a discretion, see r 21 and r. 37.

Form.—See Appendix E. No 6

Date of Decree for Purposes of Execution.—This must be taken to be the date of the judgment for the purpose of Art 179, Limitation Act. Time runs therefore not from the date where the decree was actually signed but from the date of judgment; Rakhal v. Jagendra, 10 C. L. J. 467; Afzal v. Umda, 1 C. W. N. 93; Golam v. Goljan, 25 C. 109; Yamaji v. Antaji, 23 B. 442. See Or. XX, r. 7.

Verification.—An application for execution verified by general attorney of decree-holder is a proper verification, notwithstanding that his principal may be residing within the jurisdiction of the Court; Bakar v. Udit Narain, 26 A. 154 (23 A. 490 distinguished). One of several decree-holders may verify.—Bhagwat v. Dwarka, 74 I. C. 174. Verification by a person other than the decree-holder, but who is well acquainted with the facts of the case is valid. It is not necessary that the verification should be made in open Court or after obtaining permission of the Court.—Kharana Majazilla Zemindari Syndicate Ltd v. Omed Sheikh, 28 C. W. N. 687: A. I. R. 1924 C. 811

As to the mode of verification, see notes to Or. VI, r 15.

Arrest.—In authorizing immediate execution of a Small Cause Court decree by the issue of a warrant either against the person or the moveable property of a judgment-debtor, the Legislature never intended that the debtor should be protected from arrest until he had a reasonable time for returning home.—De Penning v. Debendro Nath, 9 W. R 549.

As to privilege from arrest, see notes under sec 115

Sub-rule (3)—Copy of Decree.—Formerly applications for execution need not have been accompanied with the copy of decree (see Gunga v. Makhum, 9 W R. 362; Khettur v Ishur, 11 W R. 271; Modhoo v. Nobin, 16 W R. 25 Dhunput v Lalanund, 2 Bom L R Ap. 18: 11 W. R 28; Rajkumar v Raj-Lakhi, 12 C 441, Rajaram v Banaji, 23 B. 311 Now under the new sub-clause (3) the discretion to dispense with the copy of the decree rests with the Court It is perfectly clear that the Code does not require that a copy of the decree is to be attached to the application.—Raj Gir v Iswardhari, 11 C L J 241 As the Code does not require copy to be attached decree-holder cannot get cost of copy, Raghubar v Jadunadan, 14 C W N 736

Before a decree-holder can obtain execution of a decree affirmed by the Privy Council, he must produce, on the application for execution, a certified copy of the order passed by the Council.—Juggernath v Jadoo, 5 C. 329 4 C L R 387 See also Joy Narain v Goluck Chunder, 20 W. R. 444

Where the original order of Her Majesty in Council (given to the successful party) had not been filed in the High Court, so as to enable the proper officer to supply a certified copy held that a copy, though not certified by him, might accompany a petition for execution.—Hurrish v Kali Sundari, 9 C. 482 12 C L. R. 511.

Lost or Destroyed Decree.—A Court has inherent powers to restore its record when it has been lost or destroyed and application for execution may be made before reconstruction of the decree The contents of the lost record may be passed by secondary evidence under s 65 (c) of the Evidence Act Raj Gir v Iswardhari, 11 C. L J 243 See also 8 C. L. J. 521.

Applications for Execution not containing the Particulars Mentioned in Sub-rule (2).—An application for execution not containing the necessary particulars required by this rule, is a mere scrap of paper and does not amount to an execution application.—Ramdhun Ray v. Abdool Gunee,

9 W. R. 390, Oodey Chand v Nobo Coomar, 10 W. R. 428; and Gouree Sunkur v. Aman Ali, 21 W. R. 309; Bhubendra Narain v. Janeswar, 7 P. L. T. 350. A I R 1926 Pat 533. But every omission in an application for execution is not necessarily a material irregularity, such as would vitiate the execution proceeding Whether an omission is or is not material, will depend on the particular circumstances of the case; Saudamini v. Jessore Registered Loan Co Ltd, 96 I C. 554 · A. I. R. 1926 C. 1146

If it does not specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court is sought the application is defective, Karam Chand v. Ghela Bai, 19 B. 34; Pratap v Peary, 8 C 174; and should be dismissed without deciding whether the decree is capable of execution, Satish v. Purna, 11 I. C. 696

Where an application for execution omits to give the names of all the parties, even if it shall appear from the other parts of the proceedings who those parties are, the parties named must be understood to be the parties defendants against whom the execution is sought.—Abdool Kureem v. Jaun Ali, 18 W R 58

Where an application for execution is not complete in itself, so as to show in what manner execution is to be taken out, still it is capable of being acted upon, for it refers to the former application in which the mortgaged properties were set out, and prays that the decree may be executed by sale of those properties —Wajihan alias Alijan v Bishwanath, 18 C. 462. See also Asgar Ali v Troilokya Nath, 17 C. 631. Application to amend petition for execution though not in the form required by law, but which when read with the original application supplies all the information, should be treated as a first application and allowed to proceed.—Haridas v. Raj Kumar, 53 I C 111 (C)

Where decree gives reliefs of different character separate and successive applications in respect of each relief may be made —Radhakishen v Radha Pershad, 18 C 515, Sadho v Hawal, 10 A. 98; see also Fulchand v. Bai Ichha, 12 B 98

A decree-holder who has attached before judgment, and who is desirous of sharing in the distribution of sale-proceeds under s. 73 must make an application for execution under this rule —Pallonji v. Jordan, 12 B. 400.

As to the right of the decree-holder's representatives to execute the decree without a certificate of heirship, see notes under Or. VII, r. 4.

A decree declared null and void against one of the parties to it, is susceptible of execution against others —Pasupati Nath v. Nando Lal, 30 C. 718 (10 B. 338 and 25 M 426 referred to).

Continuance of Execution Proceedings After Death of Judgment-debtor—Execution proceedings already commenced continues after the death of the judgment-debtor by substitution of the name of the legal representative and no fresh application under this rule is necessary — Puroshottam v. Rajbai, 34 B. 142.

Execution Against Benamidar.—A decree cannot be executed against any one not a party to it, nor a representative of judgment-debtor, on the ground that he is a benamidar.—Jadunath v Premmoni, 14 C. W. N. 774.

The decree-holder is bound to state any adjustment between the parties after decree, whether such adjustment has or has not been previously certified to the Court. Intentional omission to make such statement amounts to an offence under s. 193, I. P. Code.—Queen-Empress v. Bapuji, 10 B. 288 (2 M. 216 followed). See, however, Shama Charan v. Kasi Naik, 23 C. 971.

Upon an application for execution of a decree for removal of a building the mode in which the assistance of the Court was required was stated to be by giving the decree-holder possession of his wall by pulling down the wall. Held that the decree-holder's application could not be granted in that form, and that he should have asked the assistance of the Court in the way provided by s. 260, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 32).—Protap v. Peary, 8 C. 174: 9 C. L. R. 453.

Execution in Part.—See notes to rule 15 under "Execution of Part of Decree."

Conditional Decree—Mode of Execution.—The Code does not seem to provide for the execution of conditional judgment. It deals with the case of absolute decrees. When a conditional decree is made, the plaintiff, on the default of the defendant, should apply to the Court, which passed the decree, on notice to the defendant for an order absolute. Then, if and when such an order is obtained after determination of any objection of the defendant, application may be made in the usual way for execution of the order.—Sudevi v. Sobaram, 10 C. W N 306.

A conditional decree directed that if the defendant deposited the amount within three months he would be liable to pay interest at 12 per cent. (the claim was at 30 per cent.) and would be exempted from further liability. It was affirmed by the High Court and Privy Council Held that the time for payment must be calculated from the date of the decree of the first Court and not from date of the Privy Council decree—Ghanshyam v Ram Narain, 31 A 379

Who may Apply for Execution.—A decree was passed in favour of a firm with the name of an agent. The application for execution was made by an agent other than the agent named Such proceedings, however irregular, were not invalid —Lachman Bibi v Patni Ram, 1 A 510

The person appearing on the face of the decree as the decree-holder is entitled to execution, unless it be shown by some other person that he has taken the decree-holder's place —Jasoda Deye v. Kirtibash, 18 C. 639.

What Applications are "in accordance with law."—The following applications for execution have been held to be "in accordance with law" within the meaning of Art 182 (5) of the Limitation Act.

By legal representative of decree-holder without a certificate under Act VII of 1889 —Balkishan v. Wagar, 20 B 76, see Hafizuddin v. Abdool, 20 C. 755 and Adhar v. Lal Mohan, 24 C 778 So an application without probate.—Hari Badani v Gobinda, 9 C. As to the right of the decree-holder's representatives to execute the decree without a certificate of heirship, see notes under Or. VII, r. 4.

A decree declared null and void against one of the parties to it, is susceptible of execution against others.—Pasupati Nath v. Nando Lal, 30 C 718 (10 B 338 and 25 M. 426 referred to).

Continuance of Execution Proceedings After Death of Judgment-debtor—Execution proceedings already commenced continues after the death of the judgment-debtor by substitution of the name of the legal representative and no fresh application under this rule is necessary.—Puroshottam v. Rajbai, 34 B. 142.

The decree-holder is bound to state any adjustment between the parties after decree, whether such adjustment has or has not been previously certified to the Court. Intentional omission to make such statement amounts to an offence under s. 193, I. P. Code.—Queen-Empress v. Bapuji, 10 B. 288 (2 M. 216 followed) See, however, Shama Charan v. Kasi Naik, 23 C. 971.

Upon an application for execution of a decree for removal of a building the mode in which the assistance of the Court was required was stated to be by giving the decree-holder possession of his wall by pulling down the wall. Held that the decree-holder's application could not be granted in that form, and that he should have asked the assistance of the Court in the way provided by s 260, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 32)—Protap v. Peary, 8 C. 174: 9 C. L. R. 453.

Execution in Part.—See notes to rule 15 under "Execution of Part of Decree."

Conditional Decree—Mode of Execution.—The Code does not seem to provide for the execution of conditional judgment. It deals with the case of absolute decrees. When a conditional decree is made, the plaintiff, on the default of the defendant, should apply to the Court, which passed the decree, on notice to the defendant for an order absolute. Then, if and when such an order is obtained after determination of any objection of the defendant, application may be made in the usual way for execution of the order.—Sudevi v Sobaram, 10 C W N 306

A conditional decree directed that if the defendant deposited the amount within three months he would be liable to pay interest at 12 per cent. (the claim was at 30 per cent) and would be exempted from further liability. It was affirmed by the High Court and Privy Council. Held that the time for payment must be calculated from the date of the decree of the first Court and not from date of the Privy Council decree—Ghanshyam v. Ram Narain, 31 A 379.

Who may Apply for Execution.—A decree was passed in favour of a firm with the name of an agent. The application for execution was made by an agent other than the agent named Such proceedings, however irregular, were not invalid —Lachman Bibi v Patni Ram, 1 A. 510

The person appearing on the face of the decree as the decree-holder is entitled to execution, unless it be shown by some other person that he has taken the decree-holder's place —Jasoda Deye v Kirtibash, 18 C. 639.

This rule refers to an application for attachment of moveable property belonging to the judgment-debtor, but not in his possession. Rules 43, 45 prescribe the attachment of moveable property in his possession.

Application for attachment of immoveable property to contain certain particulars.

(b) a specification of the judgment-debtor's share or interest in such property to the best of the belief of the applicant, and so far as he has been able to ascertain the same. [S. 237, para. 1.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—The words, " the same and, in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, a specification of such boundaries or numbers," have been added in clause (a) of this rule.

The amendment expressly lays down that in areas where settlement has been effected the numbers and boundaries in settlement record shall be given.

Description of Property and Specification of Interest.—The intention of this rule is that the description should be sufficient to identify the property; and in the case of an estate-paying revenue to Government, that there should be a specification of the revenue.—Lack Ram v. Mahesh, 13 W. R. 488

A judgment-creditor is bound, to specify the debtor's share or interest in the property sought to be attached to the best of his belief, or so far as he has been able to ascertain the same.—Ardesir Nasarvanji v. Muse Nath, 1 B. 601.

The specification required of the judgment-debtor's share or interest in immoveable property sought to be attached, should state distinctly whether it was the judgment-debtor's undivided share, or the family property in which the judgment-debtor had an undivided share which was sought to be attached, and should also specify what that family property was.—Muhammad Husain v. Dib Chand, 14 A. 190.

The effect of Or. XXI, rr. 13, 14 plainly is to impose a duty on the person applying for execution to disclose to the Court his own lien in his application for sale, and on the Court the duty of specifying the same in the proclamation, and in default the purchaser will purchase the property free of his mortgage lien.—Ram Chandra v. Jairam, 22 B. 686. See also Jaganatha v. Gangi Reddi, 15 M. 303; and Kasturi v. Venkatachalapathi, 15 M. 412.

Power to require certified extract from Collector's register in certain cases.

14. Where an application is made for the attachment of any land which is registered in the office of the Collector, the Court may require the applicant to produce a certified extract from the register of such office, specifying the persons registered as proprietors of, or as possessing, any transferable interest in, the land or its revenue, or as liable to pay revenue for the land, and the shares of the registered proprietors. [S. 238.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—Under the old section it was compulsory that the application should be accompanied by a certified extract. This restriction has been removed, and it has been left to the Court to determine whether such an extract should be asked to produce.

Certified Extract.—In attaching an estate paying revenue to Government, the attaching creditor must give also the special information required by this rule.—Ajoodhia v. Sheo Pershun, 11 W. R. 175. See also Lack Ram v. Mahesh, 12 W. R. 488.

It is unnecessary to specify in the sale notification the names of the mouzas included in the property sought to be sold. All that is necessary is to specify the estate or shares of estates, and the number they bear in the Collector's office.—Amirunnissa v. Secy. of State, 10 C. 63: 3 C. L. R. 131.

The circumstance that a sale notification contains only the name of one, and not the recorded proprietors of a revenue-paying estate, does not amount to an irregularity.—Secy. of State v. Rash Behary, 9 C. 591: 12 C. L. R. 27.

In addition to the information required by Or. XXI, rr. 13, 14, the area of a revenue-free tenure and the amount of an annual revenue should be stated in the application for attachment. See Calcutta High Court C. O. No. 10, dated 27th March 1879.

Application for execution by joint decree-holder.

15. (1) Where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one, any one or more of such persons may, unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary, apply for the execution of the whole decree for the benefit of them all, or, where any of them has died, for the benefit of the survivors and the legal representatives of the deceased.

(2) Where the Court sees sufficient cause for allowing the decree to be executed on an application made under this rule, it shall make such order as it deems necessary for protecting the interests of the persons who have not joined in the application. [S. 231.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—This rule corresponds with s 231, C. P. Code, with some changes. The words "unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary," have been added in sub-rule (1). The addition seems to have been made in accordance with the principle laid down in 6 A. 69, noted below The words "or his or their representatives" have been omitted, as this will be covered by the general clause (s. 146)

Scope.—The Code does not expressly lay down the rules as to the course to be pursued by the Court, if several persons who have rights in a decree all seek to execute it Rule 15 provides for cases where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one; Arumuga v Yogamba, 17 I. Application for Execution of the Whole Decree by one of Several Joint Decree-holders.—Under ordinary circumstances all the decree-holders must join in the execution Where some of the joint decree-holders apply for execution, the application may be refused or granted at the discretion of the Court, which is bound to protect the interests of the absent decree-holder, but whether the Court does so or not, all recoveries in execution so made must be for the benefit of all the decree-holders —Shib Chunder v Ram Chunder, 16 W. Execution must be For the Whole Decree.—Though one of several decree-holders may, with the permission of the Court, take out execution of a joint decree, the execution must be for the whole and not for any fractional share and the Court may admit the application after making proper orders for, protecting the interest of other decree-holders.—Thakoordas v. Luchmeput, 7 W. Application by One of Several Decree-holders for Execution in respect of his Share of the Decree.—A joint decree cannot be executed by one of the several joint decree-holders in respect only of his share of the decree—Banarasi Das v Maharani Kuar, 5 A. 27 (1 A. 231; 4 A 72, and 8 Bom L. R. 114, followed); Muthusami Ayyar v. Natesa Ayyar, 18 M. 464; Collector of Shajahanpur v. Surjan, 4 A. 72; Dali Chand v. Bai Shivkor, 15 B. 242; Meik v. The Midnapur Zemindary Co. Ltd., 4 Pat L. J. 575. 53 I. C. 803. But if the decree specifically determines the extent of the share of each decree-holder, one among the joint decree-holders may take out execution in respect of his share only —Harish v. Kali Sunderi, 9 C. 482, P. C.: 12 C L R 511, P C, followed in Fazak v. Habib, 7 I. C. 474: 61 P. R 1910 A decree may some times become devisible and executable in part to the extent of such severance when by operation of law or by act of parties, the judgment-debtor has acquired the interest of one of the joint decree-holder, Pena Sami v Krishna Ayyar, 25 M. 431 F. B.: 12 M L. J 166 Separate execution may be taken for costs; Sukha Sindhu v Jogeswar, 5 I C 460

If all the decree-holders file a petition that they have no objection to executing the decree by one of them, then the decree may be executed at the instance of one only —Krishnakishore v Sukhasindhu, 10 C. W. N. 1000, (1002.)

This rule of law which forbids application for execution of part of a decree does not bar application for all that remains due upon a decree where the rest has been previously satisfied —Tej Narain v. Ram Tunoo, 12 W. R. 370.

When a decree is of a complex nature and grants different kinds of reliefs to be obtained by process of different kinds, there is no valid objection to separate applications for partial execution of the decree.—Ram Buksh v. Madat Ali, 7 N W 9 See also Johnson v. Mad. Ry. Co., 28 M. 479. 15 M L J 363.

If an application for partial execution is not objected to by the judgment-debtor and allowed, it will keep the decree alive; Nanda v. Raghunandan, 7 A. 282; Dali Chand v Bai Shivkor, 15 B. 242; Nepal v. Amrita, 26 C. 888.

" Unless decree imposes any condition to the contrary."—The provisions of this rule are not applicable to the case of joint decree-holders whose decree is conditional on their joint performance of a particular act.—Farzand v Abdullah, 6 A. 69.

Effect of Payment by Judgment-debtor out of Court to One of Several Decree-holders.—If a payment of a portion of the decretal amount is made by judgment-debtor bona fide to one of several joint decree-holders and duly certified to the Court by the latter for the benefit of all the decree-holders, the other joint creditors cannot execute the decree for more than their share; Taruck v. Direndro, 9 C. 831: 11 C. L. R. 566. If such payment to one of several joint decree-holders is not certified it cannot be regarded as made in satisfaction of the decree except for the purpose of determining what orders should be passed under this Rule; Sultan v. Saralayammal, 15 M. 313: 11 M. L. J. 50. One of several joint decree-holders is not competent to grant full discharge of the decree out of Court, or to certify to the Court complete satisfaction of the decree, without the concurrence of the other decree-holders, though he may certify satisfaction in respect of his own share therein.—Lachman v. Chaturbhy, 28 A. 252; Moti Ram v. Hannu, 26 A. 334; Tamman Singh v. Lachhmin, 26 A. 318; Umrao v. Muktar Beg, 45 A. 401: A. I. R. 1923 A. 494: 74 I. C. 687; Pichakkuttiya v. Doraiswami, 47 M. L. J. 498: 82 I. C. 588: A. I. R. 1925 M. 230. Although a payment to one of two joint decree-holders of the whole decree amount does not, even when certified, absolve the judgment-debtor from liability to the other decree-holder, such decree-holder is not bound to proceed against the judgment-debtor, but he may sue the other decree-holder to recover his share.—Somasundaram v. Krishnasamy, 29 M. 183.

A payment to two out of three partners who are joint decree-holders does not bind the third unless the former are agents; Mahomed Silar v. Nabikhan, 1916 M. W. N. 471.

" Any one or more of such persons."—This includes persons claiming under such persons. A transferee of a decree, within the meaning of r. 16 below, is such a person; Dwar Buksh v Fatik, 26 C. 250.

Effect of Payment to a Joint-creditor.—The sum due upon a mortgage was paid to one of the two mortgagees and he gave an acquittance without the knowledge of the other mortgagee, who now sued upon the mortgage Held that the mortgage had been discharged and the plaintiff was not entitled to sue —Barber Maran v. Ramana, 20 M. 461. 7 M. L. J. 269. The payment to one of two joint mortgagees does not necessarily operate as a discharge of the debt to the other mortgagees. Ausainara v. Rahamannessa, 13 C. L J. See also Sitaram v. Sridhar, 27 B. 292 [25 M. 26 (39) referred to].

Appeal.—An order under this rule allowing or disallowing one of several joint decree-holders to execute a joint decree is a decree under s. 47 and is appealable when the contest is between decree-holder and judgment-debtor; Lakshmi v. Ponnassa, 17 M 394, see also Gooroo Dass v. Ram Rungince, 17 W R. 136, Obhoya v Mahadeo, 17 W. R. 415 But where the contest relating to the execution of the decree is between the decree-holders themselves (and not between decree-holders on the one side and judgment-debtor on the other), no appeal lies against an order; Ratanlal v. Bai Gulab, 23 B. 623. Where four only, out of eleven joint decree-holders, applied for execution, and no objection was raised by the judgment-debtor in the executing Court, which therefore passed no orders under this rule, held that he cannot contend in appeal that the executing Courts order allowing execution is barred; Yarmath Khan v. Amir-ul-umma, 24 L. W. 711 · 97 I C 375: A. I. R. 1926 M. 1198.

Effect of Application by One of Several Joint Decree-holders on Limitation.—When one of several joint decree-holders applies for execution, time runs from the date of presentation and not from the date on which the application is disposed of; Raj Behari v Kalihar, 10 C. L. J. 479. See also 30 C. 761: I C. W N 260.

Every application made by one or more out of several decree-holders is an application made in the interests of all, and every proceeding taken by one is a proceeding taken for the benefit of all to enforce the judgment or to keep it in force.—Roy Preonath v. Prannath, 8 W. R.

100, Dhanessuree v. Goodhur, 11 W. R. 421; Bhoobunessuree v. Chunder Monee, 21 W R 243, Hurrukh v. Zurooree, 22 W. R. 468 Oudh Behari v. Brojo Mohan, 4 Bom L. R. Ap. 41; 13 W. R. 128; Johuroonissa v. Ameeroonnissa 6 W R. Mis. 59; Indurjeet v. Muzum, 6 W. R. Mis 76, Azimunissa v. Sashi Bhusan, 2 Bom. L R. Ap. 47: 11 W. R. 343 But if the decree gives separate sums to each of the decree-holders separately, proceedings taken by one cannot keep the decree alive for the benefit of the others —Choon Sahoo v. Tripoora, 13 W. R 244.

Where a joint decree is obtained by several persons, and afterwards some of them die, the execution may be taken by the survivors of the original decree-holders for the benefit of all the parties interested in the decree in order to keep the decree alive.—Teja Singh v. Raj Narain, 1 Bom. L R A C 62 10 W R 95 See also Jogendra Chandra v. Sham Das, 9 C. L J 271.

An application to execute an aliquot part of a decree, though irregular and ineffectual for the purpose, must, if made bona fide under a misapprehension of the law, be regarded as a proceeding which keeps the decree alive.—Koylash Nath v Nitya Shama 15 W. R. 449; Shib Chunder v. Ram Chunder, 16 W. R 29; Pran Kishore v. Kishore Chunder, 16 W. R. 267; Doyamoyee v Nilmonee, 25 W R. 70.

An application for the partial execution of a joint decree by one of the decree-holders is an application according to law and has the effect of keeping the decree in force —Nanda Rai v Raghunandan, 7 A. 282 See also Ponampilath Parapravan v Ponampilath Parapravan, 3 M. 73, Dali Chand v Bai Shivkar, 15 B 242 See, however, Ram Autar v Ajudhia Singh, 1 A. 231, Collector of Shahjahanpur v. Surjan Singh, 4 A. 72

Minor.—Where one of several joint decree-holders was a minor and the remedy of major joint decree-holder was barred: Held that the remedy of the minor decree-holder was not time-barred under s. 7 of the Limitation Act, 1877, and that he was entitled under this Rule to execute the whole decree, as although the remedy of the major decree-holder was barred, his right was not extinguished —Anando Kishore Das v. Anando Kishore Bose, 14 C 50 (4 C 350, distinguished) See also Govindram v. Tatia, 20 B 383; followed in Zamir Hasan v. Sundar, 22 A. 199.

Where one of several joint decree-holders is a minor, s. 7 of the Limitation Act saves an application for execution by the minor decree-holder from being barred by limitation —Surja Kumar v. Arun Chunder, 28 C. 465· 5 C. W N 767 (20 B 383 and 22 A. followed; 13 M. 236 and 17 M. 189 dissented from) But see Periasami v. Krishna Ayyan, 25 M. 431, F B, where it has been held that sec. 7 of the Limitation Act. 1877, only applies where all the joint decree-holders are under disability at the time when the period of limitation begins to run (28 C. 465 dissented from, 13 M. 236 and 16 M. 436 approved).

Application for Execution Against Some Only of Joint-debtors—Effect of.—Where there has been a joint-decree against more persons than one, an application for execution against some one or his representatives will keep the decree alive against all persons jointly liable under the decree—

Subramanya v. Alagappa, 30 M. 268: 2 M. L. T. 180; Barada v. Nabin, 11 C L. J. 83: 14 C. W. N. 465; see also 2 C. L. J.4-n; Ramanuj v. Hingu, 8 A. 517; Krishnaji v. Muraravran, 12 B. 48 But see Harendra v. Sham Lal, 27 C. 210

Where a decree was passed against several defendants, each of whom is declared to have a separate liability in respect of a definite amount, execution against one or more of such judgment-debtors keeps the decree in force against all simultaneously.—Mohesh Chunder v. Mohun Lal, 8 W. R. 80. See also Mohesh Chunder v. Tara Moone, 9 W. R. 240; and Stephenson v. Unnoda, 6 W. R. Mis. 18. But see Wise v. Rajnarain, 1 Bom. L. R. 258, F. B.: 10 W. R. Khema Debea v. Kamola Kant, 10 Bom. L. R. 259-n; 10 W. R. 10; and Hurkoo Singh v. Ram Kishen, 6 W. R. Mis. 44.

Application for execution by transferee of decree

16. Where a decree or, if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree-holder in the decree is transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law, the transferee may apply for execution of the decree to the Court which passed it; and the decree may be executed in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by such decree-holder

Provided that, where the decree, or such interest as aforesaid, has been transferred by assignment, notice of such application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections (if any) to its execution.

Provided also that, where a decree for the payment of money against two or more persons has been transferred to one of them, it shall not be executed against the others. [S. 232.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration and Effect.—The important changes in para 1 are the addition of the words "or if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree-holder in the decree is" ; and the omission of the words "if that Court thinks fit" which occurred in the old section As to their effects see below

"Decree."—The word "decree" in para. 1 and proviso 1 of this rule includes a mortgage decree, Sarju v Thakur, 42 A 544 · 58 I. C. 743; Kudhai v. Sheo Dayal, 10 A 570 The second proviso is limited to money decrees only.

"If transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law."—The only persons competent to apply for execution under this rule are;—

(1) The transferee of a decree under assignment in writing. A transferee under an oral assignment is not competent to apply; Parvata v. Digambar, 15 B. 307.

(2) The transferee of a decree by operation of law. Such a transferee includes the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder, the Official Assignee in the case of an insolvent decree-holder, or the purchaser of a decree at a Court sale in execution of a decree against the decree-holder; Gour Sundar v Hem, 16 C. 355. A transfer by operation of law means a transfer on death, or by devolution, or by succession

(3) A transferee (under an assignment in writing or by operation of law) from any of the transferees mentioned in (1) and (2) above; Amar v. Gour Prosunno, 27 C. 488; Ganga v. Yakub, 27 C. 670.

Execution by Transferee a Matter of Right.—The omission of the words "if that Court thinks fit" from the rule has an important effect Formerly it was held that the Court had an absolute discretion to allow or refuse execution at the instance of the transferee (see Shama v. Nobin, 15 W. R. 283; Krishna Mohini v. Kedar Nath, 15 C. 446; Balkissen v Bedmati, 20 C. 388; Parvata v Digambar, 15 B. 307: 31 B. 462; 9 B 179). The omission now makes it clear that the transferee can proceed with execution as a matter of right It does not depend upon the discretion of the Court, Asad Ali v Haidar Ali, 38 C. 13 at p. 21. A transferee of a decree must prove his right before he can be allowed to execute; Mohomed Rowther v Pichari, 4 L W. 534.

"The transferee may apply for execution of the decree."—"Transferee" does not mean only a transferee of the whole decree It includes a transferee of a portion of the decree, and also where the decree is a joint one, the transferee of the interest of any one of the joint decree-holders; Kishore v. Gisborne & Co , 17 C. 341; Endoori v. Venkatachairulu, 33 M 80; Muthiah v. Govind, 44 M. 919, 69 I C. 337; Muthunarayane v. Balkrishna, 19 M 306 This rule applies to the assignment of even a fractional interest in a decree; Ram Sahai v. Madan Lal, 48 A. 432: 24 A. L J. 430: A. I. R. 1926 A. 346

But a decree for payment of money and costs is one and indivisible, and the transfer of the right to realize costs only does not give any right of execution to the transferee, Ram Chandra v. Abdul, 35 A 204: 19 I. C. 304; Ahmad Shah v Faujdar, 2 Lah. L J. 1: 55 I. C. 983

"Transferee" within the meaning of this rule does not mean a person to whom a party to a suit agrees to transfer any decree that may be passed in the suit, Basroovittil v. Rama Chandra, 17 M. L J. 331.

A purchaser of a portion of immoveable property from the holder of a decree for possession of that property, is not a transferee of the decree within the meaning of this rule, and is not therefore entitled to execute the decree; Hansraj v. Nukhraji, 27 A. W. N. 280; Vithal v. Mahadeb, 26 Bom. L. R. 333: A. I R. [illegible] B. 426: 80 I. C. 249; Pommal v. Marukrithammal, A. I R [illegible] I. C. 856

An application for [illegible] by an assignee, pending suit, of the rights of the [illegible] a decree is subsequently passed, is not one [illegible] The necessity for an assignment prior to an application for execution is one which the law, as embodied in this rule, requires as a condition precedent; Genaram v. Hanmantram, 28 Bom. L. R. 761 : A. I. R. 1926 B. 406.

Sale of Property does Not Give Right of Execution.—If a decree-holder holding a decree for possession of immoveable property sells a portion of such property, the sale does not, without express provision to that effect give the purchaser any right to execute the decree himself.—Hansraj Pal v. Mukharji Kunwar, 30 A. 28: A. L. J. 759 (7 A. 107 referred to).

The sale of a mortgaged property by the mortgagor does not entitle the purchaser to execute a redemption decree obtained by the mortgagor before the sale unless the sale deed expressly includes the decree.—Ahmed Shah v. Faujdar Khan, 55 I. C. 883. But when, in execution of mortgage decree the mortgaged properties were sold together with "all arrears of rent," the purchaser was held to be entitled to execute all decrees for rent obtained against the tenants of the mortgaged properties by the mortgagor; Ananda Mohun v. Promotha Naht, 57 I. C. 874: 25 C. W. N. 863.

Pledge of Decree.—This rule seems to recognise the validity of a pledge of decree as security no less than the validity of its sale; Subbaraya v. Kuppuswamy, 1 I. C. 535 · 5 M L. T 278.

Transfer When Takes Effect and When Complete.—When a decree is transferred by an instrument in writing, such transfer takes effect from the date of instrument, and not from the date of its recognition by Court: Sadagopa v. Raghunatha, 33 M. 62. The transfer is complete when the assignment is in writing It does not depend on the sanction of the Court; Subba Naicker v. Saminatha, 5 M L T 260: 1 I. C. 353.

Part Transfer of Decree.—A share of a decree can be transferred. Though Or. XXI, rr. 15 and 16 may not in terms apply, there is nothing in the Code prohibiting an application by such transferee. The principle underlying r. 16 will apply and Court has jurisdiction to place the part transferee on record, though the deed of transfer expressly provided that the transferor should execute the decree —P. M. A. R M Muthiah Chettiar v. Lodd Gobinda, 44 M 919, F B But see Majaher Hossain v. Mt. Amtul Bibi, 66 I. C. 679, where it has been held that unless the whole interest be exhausted there is no transfer within the meaning of this rule.

General Rights and Liabilities of Transferee of a Decree.—This rules should be read with s. 49, which lays down the respective rights and liabilities of transferees and judgment-debtors See notes ante.

A transferee cannot apply for mere recognition of his right to execute the decree without asking for execution; Alagappa v Ramasawmi, 14 M. L. T. 513.

The assignment of a decree is one approved by law as contained in this rule and the transferee of a decree gains by the transfer the rights of the transferor.—Vishnu Sakharam v Krishnarao, 11 B 153.

(1) The transferee of a decree under assignment in writing. A transferee under an oral assignment is not competent to apply; Parrata v. Digambar, 15 B. 307.

(2) The transferee of a decree by operation of law. Such a transferee includes the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder, the Official Assignee in the case of an insolvent decree-holder, or the purchaser of a decree at a Court sale in execution of a decree against the decree-holder; Gour Sundar v. Hem, 16 C. 355. A transfer by operation of law means a transfer on death, or by devolution, or by succession

(3) A transferee (under an assignment in writing or by operation of law) from any of the transferees mentioned in (1) and (2) above, Amar v. Gour Prosunno, 27 C 488; Ganga v. Yakub, 27 C. 670.

Execution by Transferee a Matter of Right.—The omission of the words "if that Court thinks fit" from the rule has an important effect Formerly it was held that the Court had an absolute discretion to allow or refuse execution at the instance of the transferee (see Shama v. Nobin, 15 W R. 283; Krishna Mohini v Kedar Nath, 15 C. 446; Balkissen v. Bedmati, 20 C 388, Parvata v Digambar, 15 B. 307; 31 B. 462; 9 B. 179). A transferee of a decree must prove his right before he can be allowed to execute; Mohamed Rowther v Pichari, 4 L W. 534.

"The transferee may apply for execution of the decree."—"Transferee" does not mean only a transferee of the whole decree It includes a transferee of a portion of the decree, and also where the decree is a joint one, the transferee of the interest of any one of the joint decree-holders; Kishore v Gisborne & Co, 17 C 341; Endoori v. Venkatachairulu, 33 M 80; Muthiah v. Govind, 44 M 919; 69 I C. 337; Muthunarayane v. Balkrishna, 19 M 306 This rule applies to the assignment of even a fractional interest in a decree, Ram Sahai v. Madan Lal, 48 A. 432: 24 A. But a decree for payment of money and costs is one and indivisible, and the transfer of the right to realize costs only does not give any right of execution to the transferee; Ram Chandra v. Abdul, 35 A. 204: 19 I. C. 304; Ahmad Shah v. Faujdar, 2 Lah. L. J. 1: 55 I. C. 983.

An application for execution of the decree by an assignee, pending suit, of the rights of the plaintiff in whose favour a decree is subsequently passed, is not one made in accordance with law. The necessity for an assignment prior to an application for execution is one which the law, as embodied in this rule, requires as a condition precedent; Genaram v. Hanmantram, 28 Bom. L. R. 761: A. I. R. 1926 B. 406.

Pledge of Decree.—This rule seems to recognise the validity of a pledge of decree as security no less than the validity of its sale; Subbaraya v. Kuppuswamy, 1 I C. 535: 5 M. L T 278.

The transferee of a decree for costs is entitled to realize the amount in execution of the decree and not by a separate suit.—Ram Buksh v. v. Panna Lal, 7 A. 457.

A purchaser of a portion of mortgaged property, who subsequently purchased the mortgage-decree, was held entitled to execute the decree against the judgment-debtors personally as well as against the portion of their property in their hands.—Nafar Chundra v. Bhikanto Nath, 4 C. L. R. 156.

Assignment must be in Writing.—An assignee of a decree under an oral assignment has no locus standi at all to apply for execution of a decree, Parvata v. Digumber, 15 B. 307; Ramanathan v. Sokkanatha, 2 M. W. N. 559, Ramanathan v. Raghavendra, 16 I. C. 807.

As writing is essential in a transfer of a decree, a mere agreement to transfer, does not entitle the intended transferee to apply for execution.—Jotindra Nath v. Peyerdeya Debi, 43 C. 990: 24 C. L. J. 67: 20 C. W. N. 866. 34 I. C. 69 P. C.

As a transfer of a decree must be in writing a transferee under an oral assignment has no right to execute the decree. A person to whom a decree is agreed to be transfered is not a transferee. A transfer of property during the tendency of suit, does not entitle the transferee to execute the decree unless he has taken steps to get himself substituted in the suit in place of his vendor, nor can an assignee of a property with all its future and back rent, execute a decree for rent subsequently obtained by the landlord when the decree itself has not been transferred.—Mathurapur Zemindari Co. Ltd. v. Bhasa Ram, 28 C. W. N. 626. 39 C. L. J. 373.

A transfer of a decree by an unrecognised transferee is seldom objected to in practice and is recognized by the Courts as passing a good title.—Mian Shaheb Levai v. Gopalier, 33 I. C. 558, but if the transferee is not recognised by Court, the decree-holder on record can execute the decree in spite of the transfer. S. Ari Chetti v. Theer Chama Lal Chetty, 34 I. C. 791.

Who can Apply on Assignment of Decree.—Where a decree has been transferred to a particular person under an instrument in writing, no other person claiming that he was the real owner under the transfer, and that the transferee named therein was a mere benamidar for him, can apply for execution of the decree under the terms of Or. XXI, r. 16, Gurdial v. Gurbaksh, 8 L. 35. A. I. R. 1927 L. 110 (A. I. R. 1925 M. 701 folld.).

Rights of Transferee by Operation of Law.—As to right of the representative of a decree-holder to execute the decree without a certificate of heirship, see notes under Or. VII, r. 4, under the heading "Right to Execute Decree Without Certificate."

The succession of a son to the estate of his deceased father is succession or transfer by operation of law.—Umasondury v. Brojonath, 16 C. 847. See also Raghunatha v. Venkatesa, 20 M. 101.

The right to execute a decree obtained by a Hindu widow, would not pass to her heirs or assigns, but would revert to her reversionary heirs.—Hridoy Kant v. Behari Lal, 11 C. W. N 239.

The representatives of the original decree-holders are transferees of the decree by operation of law.—Purmanandas v. Vallab Das, 11 B. 506; but a person, by being a decree-holder of the decree-holder, does not become a transferee of the decree-holder by operation of law; Fazlur Rahman v Musst Kokila, 5 Pat. 511: 96 I. C. 446: A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 320.

The holder of a certificate of administration under s 7 of Reg. VIII of 1827 is transferee by operation of law of a decree obtained by the deceased.—Khandevav v. Ganesh, 11 B 368.

Where the estate of an insolvent is assigned to his surety, the surety is an assignee by operation of law —A. T. Mitter v Abinash Chunder, 4 C. W. N 785.

A person attaching a decree under Or. XXI, r 53 is a representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of that term as used in s. 47, and in every case is entitled to enforce execution of the decree which he has attached.—Peary Mohun v Romesh Chunder, 15 C. 371; and Rangasami Chetti v. Periasami Mudali, 17 M 58 See also Adhar Chander v. Lal Mohan, 24 C 778

A mortgage suit, even after an order absolute, is a pending suit up to the time of sale. An application for substitution, by legal representatives of the decree-holder, after order absolute for sale, but before actual sale is governed by Or XXII, r. 10, and not by Or. XXI, r 16 —Bhagwan v. Nilkanta, 9 C W N. 171

Certain persons sought to enforce a decree on the ground that they were transferees thereof by operation of law The transfer was disputed and the matter was sub-judice in another suit Held that the Court has discretion both under ss 232 and 234, C P. Code, 1882, either to stay execution or dismiss the petition.—Vakubaabhararanes v Rangaiyan Chetty, 28 M. 357.

Application by Transferee for Execution must be to "the Court which passed the decree."—As to definition of "Court which passed the decree," see notes to s 37

It includes the Court, which by reason of a transfer of jurisdiction, has jurisdiction in respect of the subject-matter of the suit —Udit Narain v. Mathura, 35 C 974 12 C. W N. 859 But where after a decree was transferred to another Court for execution and the interests of the judgment creditor vested in another person by operation of law he can apply for execution to the Court to which the decree was transferred and obtain afterwards a certificate from the Court which passed the decree; Manorath v Ambika, 13 C W N 538 · 9 C L J 443

An application by the transferee of a decree for execution after substitution of his name can be entertained only by the Court which passed the decree and the Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution has no jurisdiction to entertain it.—Amarchandra v. Guru

Prosunna, 27 C. 488 See also Manorath Das v. Ambika Kant, 13 C. W. N. 533 (14 W R 65· 5 Bom L. R 497; 9 B 46, and 2 A. 283, referred to).

The Court to which a decree is transferred for execution has no power to entertain the transferee's application for rateable distribution under s. 73 Such application can be entertained by the Court which passed the decree —Tamesher Prasad v Thakur Prasad, 25 A. 443 (27 C 488 and 16 A 483 referred to) But see 26 M 258.

Where an order of the Privy Council was transmitted by the High Court to the District Court as the Court which pased the first decree, the latter has jurisdction to entertain an application made by an assignee and to allow him to execute the decree, Krishna v. Raja of Vizianagram, 38 M. 832.

Notice of Application shall be Given to Judgment-debtor and Transferor.—The notice required by the first proviso to this rule is not notice of the assignment but notice of the application for execution of the decree: Musst. Bhagwanta v. Dewan Zamir, 3 Pat. 596: 78 I. C. 766: A. I R 1924 Pat. 576. The provision as to notice is imperative and no execution by assignee can proceed unless notice has been served both upon judgment-debtor and transferor Notice upon judgment-debtor alone is not enough; Sreenath v Achutananda, 11 C L. J. 354· 6 I C 262 If execution is issued without notice, the proceedings in execution are void; Gulzari v Daya Ram, 9 A 46, Musst. Gulab v. Syed, 6 Pat L J 858; Notan Das v Lachhman, L. 230· 63 I. C 884. The object of the notice is to enable the transferor and the judgment-debtor to raise such objections regarding the assignment as may be available to them, Sheo Prasad v P E Lall, 4 Pat 120 86 I. C. 564: A. I. R. 1925 Pat 449 See also 36 B. 85 and Protap Sing v Gurditta Mal, 39 I. C 952. A notice under s 158, B T Act, will not dispense with the necessity of a notice under this rule —Maharaja Sir Rameswar Sing v. Harihar Jha, 57 I. C 250. But if no objection be taken in prior execution proceedings, the judgment-debtor cannot plead want of notice under this rule when a subsequent execution is proceeding.—Brailal Marwari v E M. Atkinson, 5 Pat L J. 639 57 I C. 707. Notice of application for execution and not of transfer is to be given, so where during the pendency of an execution proceeding, the assignee applies for continuance of the execution he does not apply for fresh execution and no notice is necessary —Musst Golab Koer v Syed Mahomed Zaffar Hossain, 62 I. C. 30 The provisions of this Rule are mandatory and non-compliance with them renders the proceedings void —Notan Das v Thaka Lachman Sing, 63 I. C 884

The notice required by this rule need not be in writing, Musst Bhagwanta v Dewan Zamir, 3 Pat 596: 78 I C. 766: A I R 1924 Pat 576

A notice under this rule can be issued only by the Court which passed the decree An application for transmission of the decree for execution can be treated as an application for execution.—Nando Lal v. Chutterput, 29 C 235.

Where on an application by the transferee of a decree to have his name substituted as a decree-holder, no objection is taken by the judgment-debtor as to the validity of the transfer, the judgment-debtor will be precluded from questioning the validity of the transfer, on an application by the transferee for execution of the decree; Taj Singh v. Jagan Lal, 38 A. 289; Dwarkadas v. Muhammad, 47 A 86: 80 I. C. 722: A. I. R. 1925 A. 119.

Where judgment-debtor is dead, no such notice can be sent until his representatives are brought on record.—Mahalinga v. Kuppana Chariar, 30 M. 241: 17 M L J 485. Notice of the transfer may be served on the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor.—Khushrobhai v. Harmazsha, 11 B 727

A decree is not a "debt" within the meaning of that word as used in s. 131, Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1881), so as to make a transfer thereof void without express notice. When a decree is assigned, a notice under this rule is sufficient.—Dagu v. Vanji 24 B 502. See also Afzal v. Ram Coomar, 12 C 610

"Objections" to be Heard Before Attachment.—Upon an application by an assignee, attachment was issued before hearing judgment-debtor's objection; held the attachment was illegal and should be set aside.—Kassum v Dayabhai, 13 Bom L. R. 973

The fact that when notice under Or XXI, r 16 was given to the judgment-debtor of the application for execution, he failed to file any objection as to its executability before the decree was tranfserred for execution, does not prevent him from raising an objection to the right of the transferee of decree to execute the decree before the Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution, Ram Sewak v. Satruhan, 8 P. L. J. 163: A I R 1927 Pat. 170 (12 C L J 312 distinguished)

Benamidar.—If a decree is transferred to one as benamidar for the actual purchaser, the latter is entitled to execute it and his right course is to apply under this rule.—Manikkam v. Talayya, 21 M 388; Chellam Chetti v. Seeni Chetti, 43 I. C. 801. If the transferee is a benamidar for one of the judgment-debtors, he cannot execute, Ramanaya v. Krishnamurthi, 19 M. L. T 124, Mohamed Rowther v Pichai, 4 L W. 534; Mahammed Rowther v Pichai Rowther, 35 I C. 624, Gian Chand v. Sunder Das, A. I R 1926 L 666

But the absence of consideration for the assignment of a decree is immaterial and will not deprive the assignee of his right to execute the decree provided the assignment is not a sham transaction, Thimma Reddy v. Subba Reddy, 40 I. C 141

It is permissible for the Court to enquire, if a transferee is a benamidar for the judgment-debtor. If the transferee is found to be a Benamidar for a judgment-debtor, the Court is bound to refuse execution in his favour; Gauraitta Mal v Partab Singh, 54 I. C 94; Gurdial v. Gurbaksh, A. I. R. 1927 L. 110

But a purchase by a pleader of judgment-debtor, in the name of his wife, does not satisfy the decree and release the judgment-debtor from liability, although the pleader holds the decree assigned to him in trust for his clients and if called upon by his clients, to do so, is bound to assign the decree to them, on equitable terms, Nagendra Bala Dassi v. Debendra Nath, 22 C. W. N. 491. 27 C. L. J. 388. A benamidar may otherwise be permitted to execute the decree; Lala Dwarka Das v. Burma Railways Co., 62 I. C. 299.

"Decree for the payment of money."—The second proviso applies only to decrees for money personally due by two or more persons, and it does not apply to mortgage decrees.—Lala Bhagun v. Hollaway, 11 C. 393; see also Laidhari v. Manager, Court of Wards. 14 C. L. J. 639. 16 C. W. N. 132. 12 I. C. 70; Jagabandhu v. Haladhar, 27 C. L. J. 110, Chidambara v. Subbarayar, 49 M. 508. 93 I. C. 53: A. I. R. 1926 M. 623. The prase "a decree for payment of money" means a personal decree for the payment of money by two or more defendants jointly. The proviso does not extend to a decree against the estate of a deceased person, where the personal liability of the representatives is to be determined by the Court.—Pana Chand v. Sundrabai, 31 B. 308. 9 Bom. L. R. 409.

As to whether a rent decree is a decree for money or not, see s. 65, B. T. Act and 25 C. 322.

Award.—A transferee of an award filed in Court under the provisions of the Arbitration Act, 1899, is entitled to apply for execution under this rule, Gladstone Wyllie & Co. v. Joosub, 27 C. W. N. 666: 77 I. C. 868: A. I. R. 1924 C. 117.

Proviso (2). Effect of Transfer of Money—decree Against Two or More Persons to One of them.—The proviso does not make an assignment of a decree in favour of one of several judgment-debors invalid in law. It only provides that the transferee is not entitled to enforce his rights by execution.—Arumuga v. Yogamba, 17 I. C. 323; 13 M. L. T. 227; see also Annabatulla v. Annabatulla, 28 I. C. 906. The proviso does not mean that a judgment-debtor purchasing a decree will have no relief against his fellow judgment-debtors. It provides that he shall not execute the decree against the others. The proper procedure would be to bring a suit for contribution, for if execution was allowed, a purchasing judgment-debtor might execute the whole decree against one of his fellows who might then purchase it and execute the whole againt anther and so on; Ramlal v. Khiroda 18 C. W. N. 113, Anant v. Vinayak 32 B. 195 p. 197; see also Kalyan v. Damber 6 A. L. J. 564. There is a distinction between purchase of the whole decree and purchase of a partial interest. When one of several joint judgment-debtors, acquires the position of decree holder in respect of the whole judgment-debt, by operation of law or by transfer, the effect is to extinguish protanto the liability of other judgment-debtors, and the decree cannot be executed against them. But when one of them so acquires only a partial interest in the decree, the effect is not to extinguish the entire judgment-debt, but so much only of it as such judgment-debtor has acquired.—Benarasi Dasi v. Maharani Kuar, 5 A. 27. (7 W. R. 136; 25 W. R. 343; 9 N. R. 230; 6 N. W. P. 1, referred to). See also Kudhai v. Sheo Dayal, 10 A. 570 (followed in Fazal v. Habib, 61 P. R. 1910: 7 I. C. 474), and Pogose v. Fukurooddeen, 25 W. R. 343.

Rule 16 prohibits the execution of a decree by one judgment-debtor against another, but where by an agreement between the decree-holder and some of the judgment-debtors it was settled that the decree-holder should execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors and pay the amount to them in consideration of the fact that they have paid the amount in advance to him, the agreement does not fall under the prohibition of r. 16; Ramanathan Chetti v. Muthu Vabliappa, 52 M. L. J. 59: 99 I. C 902: A. I R. 1927 M. 322.

A decree directing separate amounts with separate sets or proportionate costs to be recovered against defendants, is not a decree passed jointly against several persons and this rule is not applicable.—Anant Vinayak v Nagappa, 32 B 195 (9 W. R. 230, referred to).

The purchase of the benefit of a decree by one of the joint-debtors, although it has the legal effect of satisfying the judgment-debt which the decree creates, cannot affect the decree itself —Abul Munsoor v. Abdool Hamid, 2 C. 98.

Attachment of Decree by a Co-Judgment-Debtor.—When a person attaches a decree against himself and several others in execution of a decree obtained by him against his decree-holder, the ownership does not vest in him, and he is competent to take out execution against his co-judgment-debtors; Kalyan v Damber, 6 A. L J. 564: 2 I. C. 626

Assignment of Rent Decree—See s 148 (h), B. T. Act, which provides that notwithstanding any thing contained in this rule, an application for the execution of a decree for arrears obtained by a landlord shall not be made unless the landlord's interest in the land has become and is vested in him See also Dinanath v. Golap Mohini, 1 C W. N. 183: Monmotho v. Rakhal, 10 C. L J. 397, Sambhunath v Sheo Prasad, 40 C. 462 F B. 17 C W. N. 296; 16 C. L. J 227 (Dwarka v. Peari, 1 C. W. N. 694 overruled); Kailash v. Jadunath, 14 C 380; Karunamayi v. Surendra, 26 C 176, Chatrapat v Gopi Chand, 26 C 750. 4 C W. N. 446; Nagendra v Bhuban, 6 C W. N 91, Hem Chander v Monmohini, 3 C. W. N. 604, Gurucharan v Kartick, 18 C. W N 747 41 C. 926 P C (Maharaj Bahadur v Forbes, 35 C 737 reversed); Dinonauth v v. Golap, 1 C W N 183.

As to what is a rent decree and what is not, see 27 C 827 F. B : 4 C. W N 357· 4 C. W. N. 605.

Substitution of Name of Assignee in Execution Proceedings Not Necessary.—There is no provision in the Code which renders necessary the actual substitution of the name of an assignee or legal representatives for the validity of the execution proceedings, all this rule provides is that assignee should apply for execution of the decree and that his name should be brought on the record, Monmotho v. Rakhal, 10 C L J 396. See also Jogendra v Sham, 36 C 513, Syud Nadir v Pearoo, 19 W. R. 255; Shamapodo v Nobin, 15 W R 283, Javermal v Umaji, 9 B 179.

Record Decree-holder Entitled to Proceed.—The person appearing on the face of the decree as the decree-holder is entitled to execution, unless it is shown that another person has taken his place as assignee. Jasoda v. Kirtibash, 18 C. 639, Khetter v. Ishur, 11 W. R 271, Manmotho v. Rakhal, 10 C L J. 396.

Fresh Attachment not Necessary.—If at the date of assignment of a decree the judgment-debtor's property is already under attachment in execution of the decree, fresh attachment by assignee is not necessary, Hafiz Suleman v Abdullah, 16 A 133 (12 Bom. L. R. 133 referred to)

Fresh Application Not Necessary.—It is not necessary for an assignee of decree to present a fresh application if the execution initiated by the transferor is pending at time of transfer; Monmotho v. Rakhal, 10 C. L J. 396, p. 400.

Decree-holder Dying Pending Execution—Legal Representatives must Apply for Execution Afresh.—There is no rule of law which enables the legal representatives of a deceased decree-holder to apply for mere substitution of names He must apply, whenever he does apply for fresh execution, in the usual form of ten columns, when his predecessor's application is pending; Baij Nath v Ram Bharos, A. I. R. 1927 A. 165.

Right of Assignee to Sue for Refund of Price or for Declaration of Right.—A suit lies at the instance of the assignee of a decree for a declaration as to the validity of his assignment. S. 47 is no bar—Rammanapate v Chinta, 26 M 264 (14 M 478 referred to).

An assignee of a decree who was refused execution is entitled to sue his assignor to recover the amount paid by him for his assignment, Ramasami v Basapappa, 16 M. 225. The assignee is also entitled to sue for the cancellation of the order refusing execution and for a declaration of his right to execution. Such a suit is not barred by s 47—Raman v. Muppil, 14 M 478 Where an application by the transferee was dismissed on the ground that his purchase was benami for some of the judgment-debtors, he was entitled to bring a separate suit for a declaration of his right to execute the decree—Halodhar v. Harogobind, 12 C 105 See also Sheoraj v. Aminuddin 20 A 539; and Ram Baksh v Panna Lal, 7 A. 457. But no suit will lie to establish a right to execute a decree when an order dismissing an application under this rule has been allowed to become final—Amanatulla Khan v. Sardah Parsad, 28 A 618; 3 A. L. J. 421 (1906), A W. N. 133. (20 A. 539 distinguished) See also Kunhammad v Amad, 16 M. L. J. 27.

A transferred a decree to B, who recovered part of the amount due under it, and was prevented from recovering the balance by an attachment in execution of a decree against A Held that A was liable to pay compensation to B—Puthiandi v Avalil Moidin, 20 M. 137.

A suit brought for a declaration that a decree purchased in the name of the defendant who had wrongfully taken out execution of the same in his own name had been really purchased by the plaintiff for his own benefit is not barred by s 47—Gourmohan v Denonath, 2 C. W. N 76. See also Sethurayar v Shanmugam Pillai, 21 M. 353.

Appeal.—A transferee of a decree is a representative of the decree-holder; hence an order refusing to recognize the transferee of a decree or dismissing his application for execution on the objection of the judgment-debtor is a decree and appealable as such; Subbuthayammal v. Chidambaram, 25 M. 383; Ganga Das v. Yakub, 27 C. 670; Harditta v. Nizhaia, 4 Lah. L. J. 259; A. I. R. 1922 L. 396; Badri Narain v. Jai Kishan, 16 A. 483; Tameshar v. Thakur, 25 A. 3.

17. (1) On receiving an application for the execution of a decree as provided by rule 11, sub-rule (2), the Court shall ascertain whether such of the requirements of rules 11 to 14 as may be applicable to the case have been complied with; and, if they have not been complied with the Court may reject the application, or may allow the defect to be remedied then and there or within a time to be fixed by it.

Procedure on receiving application for execution of decree.

(2) Where an application is amended under the provisions of sub-rule (1), it shall be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law and presented on the date when it was first presented.

(3) Every amendment made under this rule shall be signed or initialled by the Judge.

(4) When the application is admitted, the Court shall enter in the proper register a note of the application and the date on which it was made, and shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application :

Provided that, in the case of a decree for the payment of money, the value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be, correspond with the amount due under the decree. [S. 245.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 245, C P Code 1882, with some changes.

Sub-rule (1).—The words "may allow the defect to be remedied" have been substituted for the words "may allow it (application) to be remedied." The last sentence of the old section, viz, "If the application be not so amended, it shall be rejected," has been omitted Sub-rule (1) states the procedure that a Court should adopt on receiving an application for execution and emperors the Court to reject the application if not properly drawn up or to allow the defect to be remedied. Where an application is not signed, it should not be rejected but should be allowed to be amended, Chowdhuri v Srimati, 1 Pat 149 69 I C. 200. A I R. 1922 Pat 400, Ganesh Das v Fatteh Chand, 2 Lah. L. J 104 · 55 I C 16 The amendment may be allowed even after the application has been registered, provided the execution of the decree has not been barred by limitation on the date of filing the application; Rai Bahadur v. Ram Bahadur, 2 Pat 328 71 I C 741 A I R 1923 Pat 61; Chaurasi v Bhagan, 2 Pat 787 · 74 I C 141 A I R 1923 Pat. 209 The Court has an option under Or. XXI, r 17 either to reject the application or to allow the defect to be remedied within a time to be fixed by it. If it rejects the application, t[illegible] ...air v.

Ambu, 49 M. L. J. 699. A. I. R. 1926 M. 260. It was held in Vemuri v. Raja Yarlagadda, 45 M. L. J. 651: A. I. R. 1924 M. 367, that where an application for amendment is filed after the expiration of 12 years provided by s. 48, the Court may accept it or reject it.

Sub-rule (2).—This sub-rule is new. It has introduced a change of an important character and has been framed to remove some doubts which hitherto existed, as to whether a defective application for execution can save limitation and to set the rest at several conflicting rulings under the old Code. Sub-rule (2) has made it clear that even if an application for execution was defective when it was filed and subsequently amended, the amended application shall be deemed to be an application in accordance with law and to have been presented on the date when it was first filed.

Sub-rule (4).—The words "subject to the provisions hereinafter contained," have been added.

For the meaning of the words "decree for payment of money," see notes under rule 20 of this order.

Procedure After Admission of Application for Execution.—If an application for execution corresponds with the terms of a decree, it should be admitted.—Bisheshur Roy v. Bisheshur Bose, 8 W. R. 227.

If the application is admitted, the Court is bound to issue executio[n] according to the nature of the application if made in writing after th[e] passing of the decree.—Davis v. Middleton, 8 W. R. 282.

This rule does not contemplate any enquiry before the Court whethe[r] the property belongs to the judgment-debtor or not.—Subjan Bibi v. Sanatulla, 3 Bom. L. R. A. C. 413: 12 W. R. 329.

An application for execution is said to be "granted" when it [is] made formally and regularly. The word "granted" is equivalent [to] "admitted" as used in this rule.—Dewan Ali v. Soroshibala Dabee, [...] C. 297: 10 C. L. R. 111 and Rahim Ali v. Phulchand, 18 A. 482.

A decree-holder cannot as a matter of right discontinue the execu[...]tion proceedings at any stage at his option; Kenaram v. Kailash, 18 [C.] L. J. 53: 19 I. C. 904.

Time for Remedy of Defect.—Court can extend the time allowed see s. 148.

Duty of Court.—Court may either allow amendment or reject defective application, but it is not bound to calculate interest due und[er] the decree.—Chintamoni v. Monmohini, 69 I. C. 200: 1 Pat. 149.

Sub-rule (2) and Limitation.—The rulings under the old law wer[e] not uniform (see notes to r. 11 under the heading "Irregular or Defective Application") as to whether a subsequent amendment would rela[te] back and the application be deemed to be presented on the date when [it] was first presented. It was held in the following cases decided und[er] the old Code that where an order was made for amending an applicati[on] for execution and the amendment was made, the application should b[e] deemed to have been presented not on the date when it was first presen[ted] ed, but on the date when it was amended; Mathura v. Musst. Anuraga 14 C W. N. 481; Gopal Sah v. Janki Koer, 23 C. 217; Raghunatha v. Venkatesa, 26 M. 101. These decisions are no longer law because the addition of sub-rule (2) makes it clear that when an application is amended, it shall be deemed to be an application "in accordance with law" and presented on the date when it was first presented.

A decree-holder applied for execution of a decree, and the Judge ordered the application to be amended within seven days. This order was disobeyed, but no order rejecting the application was passed. Subsequently the applicant prayed for leave to make the amendment, which prayer was granted. Held that the order granting leave to amend was not ultra vires of the Judge under this rule.—Kaminy Mohun v. Gopal, 8 C 479: 10 C. L. R. 519.

A decree-holder made several applications for execution giving wrong date of decree in each On the third application the judgment-debtor objected that the application was barred. The application was allowed to be amended, but the amendment took place after the expiry of the period of limitation. Held that the amendment would relate back to the preceding applications, and execution of decree was not barred.—Jiweat Dubee v Kali Charan, 20 A. 478; Gnanendra v. Rishendra, 22 C. W. N. 540: 27 C. L. J. 398.

Where an execution application has been registered, no amendment is possible thereafter, but an application to file fresh list of properties against which execution is also prayed for is not an amendment of the execution petition; Chaurasi v. Bhagan, 2 Pat. 787 · 74 I C. 144. But the Madras High Court has held that rule 17 does not take away the power of the Court to allow amendment of execution petition at any time before final disposal and that an amended application must be deemed to have been in accordance with law when it was presented, though the amendment was made after the period of limitation; Vemuri Pitchayya v Raja Yaralgadda, 45 M. L J. 651.

Value of Property Attached shall Correspond with Decretal Amount.—Under this rule the value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be, correspond with the amount for which the decree has been passed; Sadatmand v Phul Koer, 20 A. 412, P C.: 2 C W. N. 550, P. C. See also Madarsah v. Pillaniappa, 23 M. 628; and Sivasami v. Ratnasami, 23 M 568

See notes to Order XXI, rule 66

If the order for attachment is wrong and excessive the attachment actually put is not null and void or without jurisdiction, Sorabji v. Govind, 16 B 91 (114).

Execution of Declaratory Decree.—Execution cannot be obtained on a merely declaratory decree.—Muniyan v Periya, 1 M. H. C 184; Jeora v. Thakoree, 2 N. W. P 303; Tata Chariar v Singara Chariar 1 M. 219. See, however, Kishore Bun v. Dwarka, 21 C. 781.

A decree, so far as it is a mere declaratory decree, cannot be enforced in execution.—Janakiram v. Thiruvee Koda, 2 M. L. T 94 (5 B. 80; 3 M. I. A. 359; 23 M. 298, and 18 C. 448, P. C., referred to).

Declaratory decree cannot be executed in Revenue Court: Kuar v. Achhaibar, 27 A. 97: 26 I. C. 397.

Execution of Rent Decree.—A landlord who has obtained a d for arrears of rent of an under-tenure is at liberty to execute the d in the ordinary manner against the person or other property, wh moveable or immoveable, of his judgment-debtor. He is not rest by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act to executing such d in the first instance by sale of the under-tenure.—Folick v. Foly, 492 (14 C. 14 explained); Tarini v. Narayan, 17 C. 301; Bhabari v. tap, 8 C. W. N. 575; Surendra v. Surnomoyi, 23 C. 103: 3 C. W. 38 (foll'd. in 8 C. L. J. 754).

Execution of Maintenance Decree.—If in a maintenance decree party is charged with payment of the allowance, to make a fresh unnecessary in case of default in payment of the instalments, a re should be appointed under the decree itself with directions, in ca default in payment of the maintenance to take possession of the and sell the same, and out of the sale-proceeds to pay the allowanc maintenance.—Hemangini v. Kumode, 26 C. 441. See also the f ing cases: 2 B. 494, 9 B. 108; 9 A. 33, 19 C. 139; 10 M. 259; 16 A. 22 C. 813 and 906; 2 C. W. N. 33, 12 B. 65 and 416; and 12 M.

A decree for maintenance can be executed after the death o person against whom it was passed, against other members of the family, where the decree created a charge on the joint family proper Subbanna Bhatta v. Subbamma, 30 M. 324, 17 M. L. J. 180.

Execution of Satisfied Decree.—This rule has nothing to do the invalidity of a sale made to a stranger, who purchased without n of the fact that the amount realised by previous sale of other plots c property attached was more than sufficient to satisfy the decree in e tion.—Surendra v. Bela Ram, 45 I. C. 699.

Mortgage-decree.—See the cases under Or. XXXIV.

Appeal.—An order under this rule is not appealable as a d Paltah Veeran v. Kunhi, 9 I. C. 760: 9 M. L. T. 347. An order all the decree-holder to withdraw execution is not appealable; Kenar Keilash, 18 C. L. J. 53.

18. (1) Where applications are made to a Court for the cution of cross-decrees in separate suits for payment of two sums of money passed betw the same parties and capable of executio the same time by such Court, then—

Execution in case of cross-decrees.

(a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction shall be ent upon both decrees; and

(b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be t out only by the holder of the decree for the l sum and for so much only as remains after dedu the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller shall be entered on the decree for the larger sum as well as satisfaction on the decree for the smaller sum.

(2) This rule shall be deemed to apply where either party is an assignee of one of the decrees and as well in respect of judgment-debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment-debts due by the assignee himself.

(3) This rule shall not be deemed to apply unless.—

(a) the decree-holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment-debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits; and

(b) the sums due under decrees are definite. [S. 246.]

(4) The holder of a decree passed against several persons jointly and severally may treat it as a cross-decree in relation to a decree passed against him singly in favour of one or more of such persons. [New.]

Illustration.

(a) A holds a decree against B for Rs 1,000. B holds a decree against A for the payment of Rs. 1,000 in case A fails to deliver certain goods at a future day B cannot treat his decree as a cross-decree under this rule.

(b) A and B, co-plaintiffs, obtain a decree for Rs. 1,000 against C, and C, obtains a decree for Rs 1,000 against B. C, cannot treat his decree as a cross-decree under this rule

(c) A obtains a decree against B for 1,000 C, who is a trustee for B, obtains a decree on behalf of B against A for Rs 1,000 B cannot treat C's decree as a cross-decree under the rule.

(d) A, B, C, D and E are jointly and severally liable for Rs. 1,000 under a decree obtained by F. A obtains a decree for Rs. 100 against F singly and applies for execution to the Court in which the joint-decree is being executed F may treat his joint-decree as a cross-decree under this rule.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds with 246 of the C P Code of 1882, with some modifications The meaning of the rule has been made more clear by use of appropriate words

Alterations and Effect—Sub-rule (1).—The words "where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross-decrees," and words "in separate suits" have been added after "Cross-decrees" in order to indicate that this rule is applicable to cross-decrees passed separate suits and not cross-claims under one decree, for which provisi is made in rule 19 The addition seems to have been made in adoptio of the principle laid down in Kalka Prasad v. Ram Din, 5 A. 272.

Sub-rule (4).—This is new; it has been added in accordance wit the principles laid down in Ram Sukh Dass v. Tota Ram, 14 A. 339 an Hurry Dayal Guha v. Din Dayal Guha, 9 C. 479: 13 C. L. R. 93 Th illustration (d), which has been newly added, clearly explains the meanin of sub-rule (4).

Applicability.—The words "where applications are made to a Cou for the execution of cross-decrees in separate suits" clearly indicate tha this rule contemplates applications by both persons for execution of bot decrees passed in separate suits, viz., A against B and B against A. A being the decree-holder against B in one suit, and B the decree-holde against A in another That is both the two decrees sought to be set of must be before the same court and under execution at the same time If one decree-holder only applies for execution and the other has no applied, set off can not be allowed and execution must proceed for th full amount; Chajmal Lal v. Dharam, 24 A. 481 [L. R. 18 I. A. 10 (110) refd. to], followed in Ponnusamy v Doraisamy, 32 M. 336

The words "separate suits" signify that for the purposes of set of a counter-claim is not an independent action. For all purposes except those of execution a claim and a counter-claim are two independent actions; per Lord Esher in Stumor v Campbell & Co., (1892) 1 Q. B. 317.

Where parties are entitled under the same decree to recover from each other, though in different ways, this rule applies.—Sankara Menon v. Gopala Pattar, 23 B 121 (16 A 395 approved).

This rule is applicable to cross-decrees and not to cross-claims under one decree —Kalka v Ram Din, 5 A 272. As to cross claims, see rule 19

Requisites for Right of Set-off of Cross-decrees.—In order that this rule may apply the following elements must be present: (1) The cross decrees must be passed in separate suits, (2) The cross-decrees must be for payment of two sums of money passed between same parties; (3) The cross-decrees must be in the same Court for execution at the same time, i.e., both decree-holders must apply for execution; (4) They must be capable of execution, (5) The sums due under decrees must be definite. (6) The decree-holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment-debtor in the other, and each party fills the same character in both suits The existence of one without the other does not justify application of the rule. They will be considered under separate heads —

(1) Cross-decrees in Separate Suits.—Rule 18 applies even though one decree is in a suit and the other is in a proceeding under s 144 Where A attached, in execution of a decree against B, a decree for mesne profits obtained by B under s. 144 of the C. P. Code against C, though the case may be not strictly fall under Or. XXI, r. 18, the Court has inherent power to allow C to set off as against A executing the decree for mesne-profits against him (as B's assignee) to a decree for a larger sum which he holds as against B: Adwaita v. Chittagong Loan Cos, 28 C. W. N. 988: 84 I. C 747: A I. R 1925 C. 102.

(2) "Two sums of money"—Mortgage-decrees.—A decree in a mortgage suit directing the plaintiff to recover the amount by sale of properties but not directing payment by the defendant, is essentially a decree for money. The provisions as to set-off, in this rule will apply to such decrees.—Krishnan v Venkatapathy, 29 M. 318 (28 M. 476 followed). See also Rule 20 of this order which seems to have been framed in adoption of the principle of this ruling.

"Between the same parties."—In order to admit of a set-off being made when there are cross-decrees, the parties must be the same, and the sum due under each decree or decrees must be definite.—Razoodin v. Fazloonissa, 5 W R. Mis. 12.

Where a decree-holder holds a decree against several persons jointly, one of whom holds a decree against him singly, both decrees being executable in the same Court, it is competent to the holder of the joint decree to plead such decree in answer to an application for execution of the decree against him singly.—Ram Sukh v. Tata Ram, 14 A. 339. See also Hurry Dayal v. Din Dayal, 9 C. 479: 13 C. L. R. 93. See, however, Murli Dhur v. Parsotam, 2 A. 91.

(3) In the Same Court and under Execution at the Same Time.—See notes under "applicability," above. Before a cross-decree can be set-off, the one against the other, it is necessary that both the decrees should be in the same Court for execution: For instance, A obtaining a decree against N in the Court of S, in execution prays that another decree obtained by N against A in the Court of B should be set-off against A's decree This cannot be allowed as the two-decrees were not in course of execution in the same Court; Afzalunnissa v. Nurul, 11 A L. J. 763: 21 I. C. 32. See also E. I. Ry. Co. v. Hall, 3 N. W. P. 104; and De Silva v. Ameer Shaha, 16 W. R. 303. They must be under execution at the same time.—Juddo Nath v. Ram Baksh, 7 W. R. 535 See also Chajmal v. Dharam, 24 A. 481, folld. in Ponnusami v. Durasamy, 32 M. 336: 1 I. C. 247; Rukmani v. Seethamul, 22 I. C. 75.

But when the Court directed that a decree for rent should not be executed until the amount of mesne profits due under a decree against the Rent decree-holder has been ascertained, evidently the intention was that the decrees should be set-off against each other and set-off was allowed though the judgment-debtor did not apply for execution of his decree, Hiralal v. Ramjiram, 52 I. C. 746.

The provisions of this rule apply only to cross-decrees of the same Court between the same parties, or to cross-decrees between the same parties, though of different Courts, which had found their way for execution to the same Court.—Ram Coomar v. Gobind, 7 W. R. 480 (reversing on review 6 W. R 21). See also Hadoo Sardar v. Jadoo Manee, 17 W. R. 46. Where on application for execution of a decree in the Court of a Sub-Judge, it was sought to set-off a decree obtained in the Judge's Court which has not been sent to the Sub-Judge for execution: Held that this rule was inapplicable.—Girish v. Fakir, B. L. R. Sup. Vol 500; 6 W. R. Mis. 72.

separate suits and not cross-claims under one decree, for which provision is made in rule 19 The addition seems to have been made in adoption of the principle laid down in Kalka Prasad v. Ram Din, 5 A. 272.

Sub-rule (4).—This is new, it has been added in accordance with the principles laid down in Ram Sukh Dass v. Tota Ram, 14 A 339 and Hurry Dayal Guha v Din Dayal Guha, 9 C. 479: 13 C. L. R. 93 The illustration (d), which has been newly added, clearly explains the meaning of sub-rule (4)

L. R. 93. See, however, Murli Dhur v. Parsotam, 2 A. 91.

(3) In the Same Court and under Execution at the Same Time.—See notes under "applicability," above. Before a cross-decree can be set-off, the one against the other, it is necessary that both the decrees should be in the same Court for execution. For instance, A obtaining a decree against N in the Court of S, in execution prays that another decree obtained by N against A in the Court of B should be set-off against A's decree. This cannot be allowed as the two-decrees were not in course of execution in the same Court, Afzalunnissa v. Nurul, 11 A. L. J. 763 : 21 I. C. 32. See also E. I. Ry. Co. v. Hall, 3 N. W. P. 104; and De Silva v. Ameer Shaha, 16 W. R. 303. They must be under execution at the same time.—Juddo Nath v. Ram Baksh, 7 W. R. 535. See also Chajmal v. Dharam, 24 A. 481, folld. in Ponnusami v. Durasamy, 32 M. 336 : 1 I. C. 247; Rukmani v. Seethamul, 22 I. C. 75.

But when the Court directed that a decree for rent should not be executed until the amount of mesne profits due under a decree against the Rent decree-holder has been ascertained, evidently the intention was that the decrees should be set-off against each other and set-off was allowed though the judgment-debtor did not apply for execution of his decree, Hiralal v. Ramjiram, 52 I. C. 746.

The provisions of this rule apply only to cross-decrees of the same Court between the same parties, or to cross-decrees between the same parties, though of different Courts, which had found their way for execution to the same Court.—Ram Coomar v. Gobind, 7 W. R. 480 (reversing on review 6 W. R. 21). See also Hadoo Sardar v. Jadoo Manee, 17 W. R. 46. Where on application for execution of a decree in the Court of a Sub-Judge, it was sought to set-off a decree obtained in the Judge's Court which has not been sent to the Sub-Judge for execution: Held that this rule was inapplicable.—Girish v. Fakir, B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 503; 6 W. R. Mis. 72.

(5) Decrees Capable of Execution.—A decree which is incapable of being enforced cannot be set-off against a decree which is alive.—Huro Pershad v. Fool Kishore, 16 W. R. 308.

A set-off is not admissible, except upon a cross-decree which the decree-holder is seeking to execute, and not upon a cross-decree incapable of execution by lapse of time. A cross-decree must be kept alive by action of the party entitled under it.—Anund Mohun v. Huro Chunder, 5 W. R. Mis. 16, Prosunno Coomar v. Sham Lal, 5 W. R. Mis. 8; Hemraj v. Asoodun, 5 W. R. Mis. 43. But where in one suit judgment is given in part for the plaintiff, and in part for the defendant, the decree for the smaller sum becomes absorbed in the one for the larger and no question of limitation can therefore arise in respect to the execution of the decree for the smaller sum which became incapable of execution as soon as the decree for the larger sum was passed.—Nubo Lall v. Maharanee of Burdwan, 9 W. R. 590.

When an appeal has been decided, then the original decree is merged in the appellate decree, and for the purpose of execution as for the purpose of amendment, the appellate decree even when it affirms the original decree is to be taken as embodying and superseding that decree; Bepin v. Krishna, 46 C. 168: 27 C. L. J. 392.

(6) Each Party Fills the Same Character in Both Suits.—For the meaning of these words, see Illustration (c) of this rule and illustrations (a) and (b) of Or. VIII, r. 6. See also Abdul Hasan v. Zalerajan, 5 A. 299, where it has been held that in a suit by the creditor of a deceased debtor to recover his debt, an amount due as manager cannot be set-off, against a personal liability. For instance A obtains a decree against B as executor to the estate of C, and B obtains a decree against A personally, the two decrees cannot be set-off, as A and B do not fill the same character in the two suits.

In the case of ordinary money decrees, even when the parties are not identical, but the decree is joint and several against the decree-holder of the other decree, set-off may be allowed, Ram Chander v. Mahabir, 39 I. C. 560 but the matter is different when the decree is a mortgage decree particularly when there is no personal liability, ibid. See also Sheo Sanker v. Chunnilal, 36 I. C. 948: 38 A. 669.

Decree for sale on mortgage against puisne encumbrancer—Personal decree in favour of puisne encumbrancer against mortgagee—Different capacities; Sheo Shanker v. Chunnilal, 14 A. L. J. 776: 38 A. 669.

When Two Sums are Unequal—execution should be issued for the difference. The smaller decree being absorbed in the larger, it cannot be executed separately; see Sinnu v. Santhoji, 26 M. 488. See also Hara Sanker v. Tarak, 3 B. L. R. A. C. 114.

Where property sold in execution of valid decree, under the order of a competent Court, was purchased bona fide and for fair value. Held that mere existence of a cross-decree for a higher amount in favour of the judgment-debtor without any question of fraud would not support a suit by the latter against the purchaser to set aside the sale.—Rewa Mahton v. Ramkishen, 14 C. 18, P. C. Followed in Mothura v. Akhoy Kumar 15 C. 557; and in Yellappa v. Ram Chandra, 21 B. 463. See also Sinna Bandaram v. Santhoji, 26 M. 428 (14 C. 18, P. C., explained).

Where there are essentially cross-decrees, the decree for the smaller becomes absorbed in the one for the larger, and the order of attachment under Or. XXI, r. 46, can have no operation or affect the legality of the set-off.—Bhujhawan Lal v Sukraj Rai, 2 A 866.

When the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken only by the holder of the decree for the larger sum See notes to r. 19

Though the holder of the decree for the smaller amount cannot apply for execution, his right and priorities should be decided as if the decree for the larger amount was attached at his instance as soon as application for execution is made; Arumaga v. Yokamla, 17 I C 323

Rights of Assignee of Decree to Set-off.—A and B had obtained a decree against K and J After partial satisfaction A and B assigned it to D. Prior to the date of assignment, K and J had instituted a suit against A, B and D, and ultimately obtained a decree against them Held that K and J were entitled to set-off their decree against the unexecuted portion of the decree which had been assigned to D—Kristo Ramani v. Kedar Nath, 16 C. 619.

Attaching decree-holders are assignees within the meaning of sub-rule (2) of this rule X, who has obtained a decree against Y, attaches in execution of his decree a decree held by Y against Z; X is an assignee of Y's decree within the meaning of sub-rule (2), Adwaita v The Chittagong Loan Co Ltd., 28 C W N 988: 84 I. C. 747· A I R 1925 C. 102

A, by deed or zur-i-peshgi, let certain land to B to secure a sum advanced by him to her. B covenanted to pay certain dues annually to A. On failure of B, A obtained a decree against him for the amount In execution of a decree against B, C purchased his interest in the sum secured by the zur-i-peshgi deed, and sued A to recover the sum. Held that A was entitled in such suit to set-off the amount of the decree obtained by her against B—Bhagwani Kunwar v Lala Baija Nath, 2 B L. R. A. C. 84: 10 W R 380.

The purchaser of a decree held by A against whom B holds a cross decree takes it subject to a set-off on account of B's decree—Kaim Ali v. Lokhikant, 1 B. L. R 23 (F B) 10 W R 32, Nundc Coomar v. Koonjo Kishore, 6 W. R. Mis 73· Doorga Churn v. Debnath, 18 W. Cross-decree for Mesne-Profits.—Where there are cross-decrees for possession and mesne-profits in respect to the same land, the earlier decree comprehending only a part of the land embraced in the latter, each party may take execution and be entitled to receive mesne-profits separately.—Anund Mohun v. Shibo Soonduree, 16 W R. 256 See also Ram Coomar v. Gobind Nath, 12 W R 391

When both the decrees are for mesne-profits, the amounts of which have not been ascertained, the right of set-off does not arise until the amounts due under the decree are definitely ascertained and after ascertainment of the amounts due, the provisions of this rule can be applied.—Matadin v Chandi Din, 10 A 188.

Appeal.—An appeal lies against an order under this rule as under s 47; Krist Ramani v Kedar Nath, 16 C. 619.

Execution in case of cross-claims under same decree.

19. Where application is made to a Court for the execution of a decree under which two parties are entitled to recover sums of money from each other, then—

(a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction for both shall be entered upon the decree; and

(b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the party entitled to the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered upon the decree. [S. 247.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is applicable to cross-claims under one decree only and not cross-decrees in separate suits.

Scope—Applicability.—The object of this rule is to prevent each side executing a decree in respect of sums due whether for costs or otherwise under the same decree. (Bhagwan v. Ratan, 16 A. 395; Venkatanarayana v. Puvvada, 44 M L J 590. A I R. 1923 M. 638: 72 I. C. 865). There is nothing in the rule to prevent a plaintiff who holds a joint and several decree against two defendants (who under the same decree are individually entitled to different amounts for costs which in the aggregate exceed the amount due to the plaintiff), from taking out execution against one defendant alone for the balance due to him by both defendants until the other defendant applies for execution against the plaintiff. Thus A gets a joint decree against B and C for Rs 1,200, B gets Rs. 400 as costs against A and C gets Rs 1,000 as costs against A. A can execute against B for Rs 800; Rangiah v. Narasayya, 3 L. W. 267: 34 I. C 388

To make this rule applicable in the case of cross-claims under one decree, the parties entitled thereunder to recover from each other must hold the same character and possess identical rights of enforcing execution, and enforcement of the decree can only be refused, or satisfaction entered up, when this is the case.—Kalka Pershad v. Ram Din, 5 A 272

This rule is not limited in its application to cases in which the remedy of each party against the other is of precisely the same nature or where the parties fill the same character, 24 I. C. 276 Thus, where one party was entitled to recover certain costs by means of the sale of hypothecated property, and the other party under the same decree was entitled to recover a smaller sum as costs from his opponent personally. Held that this rule was applicable.—Bhagwan Singh v Ratan, 16 A.

395 (5 A. 272 dissented from). Approved in Shankara Menon v. Gopala Pattar, 23 M. 121; referred to in Mirza Sadik v. Hashin, 24 I. C. 376.

" Two parties "—mean the two parties or sets of parties who are parties not only to the suit in which the decree was passed but also referred to in the opening sentence of the rule; Rangiah v. Narasayya, 8 L. W. 267: 34 I. C. 388.

" Execution may be taken only by the party entitled to the larger sum."—It follows from this provision that the party who under a decree is entitled only to the smaller sum has no right to apply for execution The rule contemplates that the decree should be regarded as a single indivisible order enforceable only for the difference between the two sums awarded When two unequal sums are awarded, the smaller sum must be taken to have been entered as satisfied under the provision " satisfaction for the small sum shall be entered on the decree." Thus if A is awarded Rs. 50 against B, and B is awarded Rs. 100 against A, as costs, and A applies to execute the decree against B, he cannot do so even if B's claim against him is barred by limitation; Madappa v. Jaki Ghosal, 40 B. 60: 17 Bom. L. R. 689; see notes to r. 18. If in violation of this Rule, a decree-holder takes out execution without setting off the dues of the judgment-debtor, the Court can under its inherent power compel a refund of the sum taken in excess.—Annada Mahan v. Atul Chandra, 24 C W N 465: 58 I. C 753

Set-off in Cross-claims under Same Decree.—Where two parties have to recover sums from each other under the same decree, the party entitled to the lesser sum cannot be allowed to take out execution against the party entitled to the larger sum, and the Court is bound to direct a set-off, or to enter satisfaction of the smaller sum upon the decree.—Jugo Mohun, v. Soorendro Nath, 13 W. R. 106. See also Ramlal v. Ashutosh, 44 I. C. 445.

Under this rule all that the decree-holder is entitled to enforce execution of is the difference between the amount found recoverable by him and the amount which the judgment-debtor is entitled to recover against him —Giribala Debia v. Rani Minakumari, 5 C. W N. 407. See Amjud Ali v. Fazal Hossein, 10 W. R. 187; Issur Chunder v. Munmakun, 12 W. R. 308.

A decree in a pre-emption suit directed that the plaintiff should obtain possession and recover costs from the defendant on payment of the purchase-money within a fixed time Held, applying the equitable doctrine of set-off, that the plaintiff was entitled, when depositing the purchase-money under the decree, to deduct therefrom the sum which the decree awarded to him as costs.—Isri v. Gopal Saran, 6 A. 351. See also 2 L. 294.

Cross-decrees and cross claims in mortgage suits.

20. The provisions contained in rules 18 and 19 shall apply to decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Object—Mortgage-decrees.—This rule is new. It is inserted in order to make it clear that the provisions as to cross-decrees and cross-claims apply to the case of mortgage decrees. The rule also makes it clear that the expressions "decree for the payment of money" and other similar expressions in the Code do not include a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge.—Report of the Select Committee.

This rule seems to have been framed in accordance with the principle laid down in Krishnah v Venkatapathi, 29 M. 318, where it has been held that a decree directing the plaintiff to recover the decreed amount by sale of properties but not directing payment by the defendant is essentially a decree for money and the provisions as to set-off in s. 246, C P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r 18), will apply to such decrees (28 M. 476 followed; 24 M. 412 overruled)

It has been held that a simple decree for recovery of money can be set-off against a decree for recovery of money by enforcement of a mortgage or charge, Nagar v Ram Chand, 33 A. 240; 7 A. L. J. 1129.

The costs awarded to a judgment-debtor can be set-off against the money recoverable under a mortgage decree; Mirza Sadik v. Hashim, 24 I. C. 376.

21. The Court may, in its discretion, refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor. [S. 230, para. 2.

Simultaneous execution.

COMMENTARY.

Simultaneous Execution Against Person and Property.—This rule should be read with r 30, which says that decree may be executed both by attachment of person and property.

Though the Court has discretion to refuse execution against the person and the property simultaneously, it has no power to refuse execution against the person of the judgment-debtor on the ground that the decree-holder must in the first instance proceed against the property of the judgment-debtor; Hargobind v Hakim Singh, 6 L. 548.

Appeal.—An order under this rule, refusing execution of a decree simultaneously against the person and property of judgment-debtor, is appealable as a decree —China Pemaji v. Ghelabhai, 7 B. 301.

22. (1) Where an application for execution is made—

Notice to show cause against execution in certain cases

(a) more than one year after the date of the decree, or

(b) against the legal representative of a party to the decree,

the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice to the person against whom execution is applied for requiring him to show cause, on a date to be fixed, why the decree should not be executed against him :

¹Provided that no such notice shall be necessary in consequence of more than one year having elapsed between the date of the decree and the application for execution if the application is made within one year from the date of the last order against the party against whom execution is applied for, made on any previous application for execution, or in consequence of the application being made against the legal representative of the judgment-debtor, if upon a previous application for execution against the same person the Court has ordered execution to issue against him. [S. 248.]

(2) Nothing in the foregoing sub-rule shall be deemed to preclude the Court from issuing any process in execution of a decree without issuing the notice thereby prescribed, if, for reasons to be recorded, it considers that the issue of such notice would cause unreasonable delay or would defeat the ends of justice. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Principle—Scire Facias.—" Writs of execution must be sued out within a year and a day after the judgment is entered otherwise the Court concludes prima facie that the judgment is satisfied and extinct; yet however, it will grant a writ of scire facias, for the defendant to show cause why the judgment should not be revived and execution had against him."—(Stephen's Commentaries on Blackstone, p 421, Vol. 3, 15th Ed.). The provisions of this rule have been borrowed from the English procedure for a write of scire facias; Jogendra v. Sham Das, 36 C. 543; Livinia v. Madhabmani, 11 C. L. J. 489, 498. A scire facias is a judicial writ issued for the purpose of substantiating and carrying into effect an antecedent judgment.

Alterations—Effect.—This rule corresponds to section 248, C P. Code 1882, with several alterations and additions. The old section has been re-arranged and the language re-cast in order to make the meaning more clear and intelligible.

Sub-rule (2) is new. It has given full discretion to the Court to issue process in execution before issuing a notice under this rule, if for any reason the Court is satisfied that the isssue of such notice would cause unreasonable delay or would defeat the ends of justice. But before doing so, it shall record reason. The addition is no doubt an improvement and it has done away with the stringent rule which hitherto existed that omission to issue a notice rendered the execution proceedings null and void; see 20 C 370; 21 B. 424; 21 C. 19; 6 C. 103; 8 A. 424. See notes, post, under " Effect of Omission to Issue Notice to the Judgment-debtor "

The explanation attached to the old section has been omitted as unnecessary in view of s 37 in which the expression " Court which passed a decree " has been clearly defined.

"The Committee have omitted the reference to a decree passed in appeal, for that is ordinarily the decree to be executed (Kristo Kinkur Roy v. Raja Burroda Kant Roy, 14 M. I. A. 465 and Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v Muhammaydar Khan, 11 A. 267)."—Report of the Special Committee.

Object of Notice—is to prevent undue surprise, to a judgment-debtor, when more than one year has elapsed between the date of the decree and the application for execution, or when the decree is sought to be enforced against the legal representative of the party against whom the decree was originally made —Jogendra Chandra v Sham Das, 9 C. L. J. 271. 36 C. 543

The object is not merely to give an opportunity to show cause why the decree should not be executed because for instance it is time-barred or has been adjusted, but also to give him an opportunity to satisfy before issue of execution, Erava v Sidramappa, 21 B. 424; Arjun v. Gunendra, 20 C. L. J. 344; Livinia v. Madhabmoni, 11 C. L. J. 480, 407; Lakshmi v. Srish, 18 C. L J 162; Tara Prasanna v Jnanendra, A I. R. 1926 C 86; Gurudas v Thakamani, 25 C W N 972.

Proper Notice.—An insolvent's estate vested in the Official Assignee and a notice was served upon him to show cause why he should not be substituted for the judgment-debtor Held that this was not a proper notice under this rule and a notice to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him ought to have been issued; Raghunath v. Sundar, 42 C. 72, P. C.

An application for transmission of a decree is not an application for execution, and no notice under this rule can be issued upon it; Chatterpat v. Saita, 20 C. W N. 889 · 23 C. L. J 645. F. B. The Registrar of the High Court cannot order execution to issue, as an order for execution to issue is a judicial act which cannot be delegated to the Registrar under s. 637 of the old Code; Ibid

Proof of Notice.—A notice under this rule stands upon a different footing from a summons or other notice which a party is bound to serve, and it must be presumed that a Court, until the contrary is proved, has duly issued such notice when required by law to do so.—Bimola Soonduree v. Kalee Kishen, 22 W R 5

Court's Duty to Issue Notice.—It is the Court's duty to issue notice upon judgment-debtor when the decree is more than one year old even though the decree-holder may not formally ask and it is not obligatory upon him to do so; Stevens v Kamta, 10 C L. J. 19 · 2 I. C. 941 (20 C 580 refd. to).

Effect of Omission to Issue Notice to the Judgment-debor.—The question arises whether a sale without notice to the judgment-debtor is null and void by itself or voidable? It was held in Gopal v. Gunamoni, 20 C. 370, that the issue of notice is a condition precedent to the issue of execution in order that the Court should obtain jurisdiction to sell the property by way of execution, and omission to issue such notice renders the sale null and void. The decision was approved by the Privy Council in Raghunath v. Sunder Das, 41 I. A. 251 : 42 C. 72 : 24 I. C. 304; Shyam Mandal v. Satinath, 44 C. 954 : 38 I. C. 493; Ram Kinkar v. Sthitiram, 27 C. L. J. 528; Fani Bhusan v. Surendra, 35 C. L. J. 9: 64 I. C. 25; Rajagopala v. Ramanuja Chariar, 47 M. 288: 80 I. C. 92: A. I. R. 1924 M. 431 F B., Sarada v. Krishna Dome, 91 I. C. 711: A. I. R. 1926 C. 539. The sale is a nullity whether it is purchased by the decree-holder (Rameswari v. Doorgadas, 6 C. 103, Gurudas v. Bhowanipore Zemindary Co. Ld., 25 C. W N. 972); or by a third party (Imamunnissa v. Liakat Husain, 3 A. 424; Sahdeo v. Ghasiram, 21 C. 19; Parashram v. Balmukund, 32 B. 572. In a case which went to the Privy Council, a decree was sought to be executed against the estate of a deceased judgment-debtor and a person described in the application as the legal representative was served with notice under this rule, who objected that he was not the legal representative. The executing Court ruled that he was the legal representative. The execution went on and the property of the judgment-debtor was sold. It turned out afterwards that the person served with the notice was not the real representative It was held by the Privy Council that the Court having determined for the purpose of execution proceedings that the person served was the legal representative, had jurisdiction to sell although the decision as to who was the legal representative was erroneous The omission to serve notice on the right person was a serious irregularity and the sale was voidable under Or XXI, r. 90 or by an independent suit brought within a year as provided by Art 12, cl (a) of the Limitation Act. But the sale was a reality and was valid so long as proper action under the law was not taken and it was not set aside.—Malkarjan v. Narhari, 25 B 337 P C 5 C W. N 10. The point was raised in Livinia v. Madhabmoni, 11 C. L. J 489 14 C. W. N. 560, where all the cases were discussed and the principle enunciated above in the Privy Council case was affirmed, and it was held that omission to serve notice is a grave irregularity sufficient by itself to justify the reversal of the sale if a proper proceeding is taken in that behalf. It was said there that that case (25 B. 337) is an authority for the proposition that a sale held without issue of notice under this rule is not a nullity and cannot be ignored by the party whose property has been sold as if the sale had never taken place: but such omission is a serious irregularity. This principle was applied in Lakshmi v. Sris Chandra, 13 C. L. J. 162; Kumud Bewa v Prasanna, 40 C 45, Sham Sundar v Jhumak: 20 C. L. J. 337 11 I C 893 See also Arjun v Gunendra, 20 C. L. J. 341.

In accordance with the principle laid down in the cases cited above, it has been held in Kumud Bewa v Prasanna, 40 C 45 (21 C. 19 not followed), that omission to serve notice is not by itself sufficient to render a sale subsequently held, void In order to justify the setting aside of such a sale it must be proved that the omission resulted in substantial injury; see also Lakshmi v. Srish, 13 C L. J 162, 164. Quaere: Whether omission to issue notice is a serious irregularity under the new Code having regard to para. 2, Mahomed Meera v Kadir, 22 I C. 302. 1914 M. W. N. 63.

The recent Privy Council case of Raghunath v Sundar, 42 C 72: 18 C. W. N. 1058, seems to have changed the situation There, it has been laid down (approving Gopal Chunder v Gunamani, 20 C 370) that a notice under this rule is necessary to confer on the executing Court jurisdiction to sell property and the Privy Council decision in Malkarjan v. Narahari, 25 B 337, was distinguished as one where notice was actually served on a person whom the Court decided to be the legal representative If there is no jurisdiction to sell without service of notice, it must follow that the subsequent sale without notice is not merely an irregularity but a nullity The Calcutta High Court followed Raghunath v. Sundar in Moharaj Bahadur v Surendra, 19 C. W. N. 152, and held that non-service of notice vitiates the sale In Syam Mandal v. Satinath, 44 C. 954. 24 C L J. 523 also, it has been held that omission to give notice is not a mere irregularity which makes the proceeding voidable, but is a defect which goes to the root of the proceeding and renders it void for want of jurisdiction See also Ram Kinkar v. Sthiti Ram, 27 C L. J. 528; Das Narayan v Mir Muhammad, 6 Pat. L. J. 319; see also Rajagopala Iyer v Ramanuja Chariar, 46 M. L. J. 104 F.B., where 42 C. 72 has been followed, 45 M. 875 and 45 M. L. J. 413 overruled, and 25 B. 337, and 14 C. 18 distinguished.

A mere issue of notice is not sufficient, service of such notice is essential, otherwise order for execution is without jurisdiction and sale void; Gurudas Biswas v Bhowanipore Zemindary Co. Ltd., 25 C. W. N. 972.

But the rule is sufficiently complied with if notice is given to the adult co-tenants in a case where they and the minor co-tenants live in the same house and the minors have no guardian ad-litem on record; Fani Bhusan v Surendranath, 35 C. L. J. 9: 64 I. C. 25.

This rule does not apply when judgment-debtor dies after attachment and order for sale, and the sale is not bad if held without the representatives of deceased judgment-debtors being brought on record; Doraiswamy v Chidambaram, 75 I. C. 46 45 M. L J. 413.

The issue of an attachment before the service of a notice under this rule without recording reasons, does not render the proceedings invalid Girwar Sahai v Mangal, 73 I. C. 241.

The notice under this rule is not necessary in every execution though made one year after the last execution proceedings, if once a notice has been served after one year from the date of the decree; Mahadeo Singh v Dhotu Sing, 2 Pat. 916, 74 I. C 838.

In case of instalment decrees, notice under this rule is necessary if execution is sought for 1 year after the decree, though the date of default is within one year of the execution of the petition. The terminus a quo is the date of decree and not the date of default; Koralal v. Punjab National Bank Ltd, 5 L L. J 67.

Where one of several judgment-debtors has ceased to have an interest in the property, a failure to serve him with notice does not vitiate the execution proceedings in view of a definite provision to that effect in Art. 182 of the Limitation Act; Tara Prasanna v. Jnanendra, A I. R 1926 C. 86.

Remedy when Property has been Sold, Without Notice to Judgment-debtor.—A sale without notice to the judgment-debtor may be set aside under Or. XXI, r. 90, or by a separate suit; Malkarjan v. Narahari, 25 B. 337 P C See, however, the following cases where it has been held that omission to serve notice is not a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale within the meaning of Or. XXI, r. 90, and that rule does not apply. The proper procedure is to apply to set aside under s. 47 as the question arises in execution proceeding and the matter could not be raised in a separate suit; Lakshmi v. Sris, 13 C. L. J 162. See also Kumud v. Prasanna, 40 C. 45; Livmia v Madhabmoni, 11 C. L. J. 489; Parashram v. Balmukund, 32 B. 572, Rajagopala v. Ramanuja Chariar, 46 M. L. J. 104 F. B.

Rule Applies to Moveable Property or to Strangers.—It makes no difference in the application of this rule, if the property sold without notice is moveable property or if the auction purchaser is a stranger and not the decree-holder; Sahadeo v. Ghasiram, 21 C. 19; Syam Mandal v. Satinath, 44 C. 954: 24 C. L. J. 523.

Where the Judgment-debtor had No Knowledge of Notice or does Not Object.—Where notice was not personally served on the judgment-debtor and he came to know of the execution proceedings only when his property was attached, he is entitled to prefer objection against execution at that stage; Mochai v. Meseruddin, 13 C L J. 26 (the principle enunciated in Mungul v. Girija, 8 C. 51 P. C explained)

Although a judgment-debtor does not contest a notice under this rule, he can put in objections when his property is attached; Chatterput v. Daya Chand, 23 C L. J. 641

Irregular Service of Notice.—Irregularity in the service of notice as distinguished from non-service is a material irregularity within the meaning of Or. XXI, r 90; Das v Mir, 6 Pat. L. J 819 61 I C 822.

Appeal.—An order refusing or allowing an application to set aside a sale without notice is an order under s. 47 and appealable A second appeal lies; Kumud Bewa v Prasanna, 40 C. 45; see also Parashram v. Balmukund, 32 B 572 An objection as to non-service of notice can be taken in appeal although not taken in the first Court, Lakshmi v. Sris, 13 C W N 162

Effect of Issue of Notice of Execution on Limitation.—The issuing of a notice under this rule gives a fresh starting point for limitation under Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908, whether such notice is issued on a valid or invalid application for execution.

Where notice under this rule is issued, the time provided by Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, runs from the date of the order directing issue of notice; actual service of the notice is not necessary —Damodar v. Sonaji, 27 B. 622 and Govind v Dada, 28 B 416 See also Hari v. Yamunabai, 23 B. 35 and Jumai v. Abdul Karim, 30 A 532 But in Kedaressur v. Mohim, 6 C W. N 656, it has been held that the expression " the date of issuing a notice " means the date when it is actually issued and not the date directing issue of notice See also Rattan Chand v. Deb Nath, 10 C. W N 303 4 C L J 530, Cheranath v. Nenoth, 30 M. 80: 16 M. L J. 548 In Kooni v Girdharee, 22 W. R 484, and in Sheo Sahoy v Birj Beharee, 23 W R 195, it has been held that time should be reckoned from the date of actual service of notice upon the judgment-debtor.

But the filing of an affidavit to prove service of notice under this rule has been held to be an application to take a step in aid of execution, Pran Krishna v. Pratab, 21 C W. N. 423: 38 I. C. 536.

An order for execution of a decree, made after notice to the judgment-debtor under this rule, has the effect of such a revivor of decree as prevents the execution of the decree from being barred by Art. 180 of the Limitation Act, 1877—Ashootosh v. Doorga, 6 C. 504: 8 C. L R. 23; Jogendra v Sham, 9 C L J. 271, 36 C. 543 followed in Kamini v. Aghore, 11 C. L. J. 91, Futteh v Chundrabati, 20 C. 551; Suja Husham v. Monohur Das, 24 C 224 (reversing on review, 22 C. 921), and Umrao v. Lachmi, 26 A. 361 See also Desoo Venkatesa v. Perumal, 38 M. 187. See, however, Monohur Das v Futteh Chand, 30 C 979: 7 C. W. N. 793.

Revival of Decree by Notice to One Judgment-debtor.—Revival of decree of original side of the High Court on notice to one only of two judgment-debtors does not keep the decree alive against the other judgment-debtor; McLaren v Veeriah, 38 M 1102

Reasons for Dispensing with Notice to be Recorded.—The omission to record the reasons for dispensing with the notice as required by sub-rule (2) is a mere irregularity; Raja Gopala v. Ramanuja Chariar, 47 M. 288. 80 I. C 92. A. I. R. 1924 M 431.

Procedure after issue of notice.

23. (1) Where the person to whom notice is issued under the last preceding rule, does not appear or does not show cause to the satisfaction of the Court why the decree should not be executed, the Court shall order the decree to be executed.

(2) Where such person offers any objection to the execution of the decree, the Court shall consider such objection and make such order as it thinks fit. [S. 249.]

COMMENTARY.

Court shall Consider Objection.—When objection is filed under this rule, the Judge is bound to take it into consideration, and pass order notwithstanding the absence of the judgment-debtor and his pleader, for the decree might be prima facie unexecutable —Rajballab v. Ram Saday, 5 B. L. R Ap 65 14 W. R 155. An objection need not be verified; Sant Gopal v Jugat, 8 W R 200

When, after issue of notice, the legal representative of the judgment-debtor neglected to appear and raise objection to the execution, and certain property belonging to him was sold without opposition, and the sale was duly confined and the purchaser was put into possession he cannot afterwards come and ask to have the sale set aside as nullity.—In the matter of the petition of Cochrane, 14 B. L. R. 330: 23 W R 310.

Appeal.—An order by a Munsif refusing to execute a decree transferred for execution, or an objection raised by the judgment-debtor under this rule, is appealable.—Perumal v. Venkataroma, 11 M. 130 Where an order was virtually under this rule and by a clerical mistake r 25 was quoted, it was held appealable; Ange Lal v. Jagdish, 9 I. C. 431.

PROCESS FOR EXECUTION.

Process for execution.

24. (1) When the preliminary measures (if any) required by the foregoing rules have been taken, the Court shall, unless it sees cause to the contrary, issue its process for the execution of the decree. [S. 250.]

(2) Every such process shall bear date, the day on which it is issued, and shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as the Court may appoint in this behalf, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court and delivered to the proper officer to be executed.

(3) In every such process a day shall be specified on or before which it shall be executed. [S. 251.]

COMMENTARY.

Sub-rule (1) corresponds to sec 250 with the omission of the words "subject to the provisions of section 245-A, and 245-B" (s 57 and r 37 of this Order) as unnecessary. In sub-rule (2) process has been substituted for warrant, as the former word is more comprehensive The latter portion of s. 251 has been omitted and reproduced in rule 25.

"Shall issue process."—It is not open to the Court to refuse to execute a decree against which no appeal has been preferred, and the time for appealing against which has expired —Ishan Chandra v Ashanoollah; 10 C 817

"Shall bear date.—Execution of Time-expired Warrants.—This rule requires the Court to specify in a warrant for execution of a decree, the day on or before which the warrant must be executed It cannot be executed after expiration of the date A person resisting a time-expired warrant is not guilty of any offence.—Abinash v Ananda, 31 C 424; Anand Lall v. Empress, 10 C 18; Shaik Mansur v Emperor, 37 C. 122: 14 C. W. N. 282. But a warrant may be executed till the date it bears although the nazir who makes it over to the peon fixes an earlier date for execution and return, Subed v. Emperor, 40 C 849

If a warrant is extended, the date must appear on the warrant; Shaik Mansur v. Emperor, 37 C 122

Where a warrant bears no date upon which or before which it was to be executed it was bad and resistance to execution was no offence; Mohini v. K Emperor, 36 I C 871 1 Pat L J 550

"Shall be signed by the Judge or such other officer as the Court may appoint."—A warrant for arrest may be signed by the Judge himself or by the sheristadar who must be duly authorized —The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Mir Sarwar, 6 C W N 845 See also Q. E. v. Janki

Prasad, 8 A. 293. But the word "signed" does not include initial—Abdul Gofur v Queen-Empress, 23 C. 896 and Ram Dayal v. Mahatab singh, 7 A. 506. If the warrant of attachment was not signed by the Judge and did not bear the seal of the Court, held the attachment was bad and resistance to such attachment was not an offence.—Khadir Bukhash v Emperor, 49 I C 171 3 Pat. L. J. 636.

An execution sale was set aside on the ground that the warrant had not been signed by the Judge, but by a Munsarim of the Court.—Ram Dayal v. Mahtab Singh, 7 A 506.

"Shall be sealed."—The provisions of this rule are mandatory, and omission to affix the Court's seal on the warrant renders the attachment illegal; Khidir Bux v. K -Emperor, 3 Pat L J. 636: 49 I. C. 171; Badri Gopi v. Emperor, 7 Pat L T. 30: 5 Pat 216· 93 I. C. 146: A. I R. 1926 Pat 237.

Delegation of Authority to Execute.—The office to whom a process is delivered for execution may delegate it to another officer for execution; Abdul Karim v Bullen, 6 A. 385; Dharam Chand v. Q. E., 22 C. 599 (distd in 40 C 849); Sheo Pragash v Bhoop Narain, 22 C 759

A warrant under s. 45 of the Chaukidari Act cannot be delegated; Shaik Mansur v Emperor, 37 C. 122

See notes to r 25.

Arrest or Attachment Without Warrant.—The arrest of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree without the officer making the apprehension having the warrant in his possession is illegal.—Empress v. Amar Nath, 5 A. 318. The judgment-debtor is entitled to see the warrant; Shaik Mansur v Emperor, 37 C 122 (126)

When a public servant attaches property under a warrant in execution of a decree, he must have the warrant with him, otherwise the taking of the property is not lawful —Emperor v Ganeshi Lal, 27 A. 258

Endorsement on process.

25. (1) The officer entrusted with the execution of the process shall endorse thereon the day on, and the manner in which it was executed, and, if the latest day specified in the process for the return thereof has been exceeded, the reason of the delay or, if it was not executed, the reason why it was not executed, and shall return the process with such endorsement to the court.

[S. 343, including latter part of S. 251.]

(2) Where the endorsement is to the effect that such officer is unable to execute the process, the court shall examine him touching his alleged inability, and may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine witnesses as to such inability and shall record the result.

[S. 343.]

COMMENTARY.

"Officer entrusted with execution"—means the person who actually conducts execution i.e. seizes property. Such a person is known in English as "Bailiff" In Mofussil Courts such work is done by persons called "Peons."

The words "officer entrusted with execution" clearly indicate that such officer is the peon and not the nazir; Subed Ali v. Emperor, 40 C. 849.

Endorsement on Process—Delegation.—The Code does not prohibit a nazir from delegating a subordinate to execute a warrant for him, and his endorsement is prima facie evidence of the authority of the person to whom the warrant is delivered for execution.—Abdul Karim v. Bullen, 6 A. 385. See also Dharam Chand v Q E., 21 C. 596; and Sheo Progash v. Bhoop Narain, 22 C 759. In Subed Ali v. Emperor, 40 C. 849, it has been held that the fact that processes are actually addressed to "bailiff's" shows that the peon executing derives his authority from the Court and not from nazir who endorses it. It is the nazir's duty to distribute the process among the peons and this does not amount in any way to delegation. See notes to r 24.

Proof of Execution of Process.—A return by the nazir to the effect that the peon swears that a process has been served is insufficient in law to prove the service without the deposition on oath of the peon taken before a competent authority—Raj Kishore v Bydo Nath, 12 W. R. 365. The nazir's return is no legal evidence of the service of process.—In the matter of Nil Kant, W R (1864), Mis 9, Okhoy v Erskine, 3 W. R. Mis 11; Sree Nath v Watson, 4 W R Mis 4; Ram Soonder v. Kalee Kamul, 6 W. R , Act X , 92, Koondul v Noor Ali, 10 W. STAY OF EXECUTION.

When Court may stay execution.

26. (1) The Court to which a decree has been sent for execution shall, upon sufficient cause being shown, stay the execution of such decree for a reasonable time, to enable the judgment-debtor to apply to the Court by which the decree was passed, or to any Court having appellate jurisdiction in respect of the decree or the execution thereof, for an order to stay execution, or for any other order relating to the decree or execution which might have been made by such Court of first instance or appellate Court if execution had been issued thereby or if application for execution had been made thereto.

(2) Where the property or person of the judgment-debtor has been seized under an execution, the Court which issued the execution may order the restitution of such property or the discharge of such person pending the result of the application. [S. 239.]

Power to require security from, or impose conditions upon, judgment-debtor.

(3) Before making an order to stay execution or for the restitution of property or the discharge of the judgment-debtor, the Court may require such security from, or impose such conditions upon, the judgment-debtor as it thinks fit. [S. 240.]

COMMENTARY.

The stay of execution contemplated by this rule, if allowed, will only be for such a period as is necessary for applying to the Court which passed the decree or to the Appellate Court for any order relating to the execution of the decree

Stay of Execution.—Where, in the opinion of the Court, sufficient cause has been shown against the execution of a decree transferred for execution, the Court should follow the procedure prescribed by this rule. But it is beyond its jurisdiction to question the correctness or propriety of the order under which the decree has been transferred to it for execution —Beer Chunder v Maymana, 5 C 736. See also Mulla Abdul v. Shakhinaboo, 21 B 456, Ramchunder v. Mohendro, 21 W. R. 141; Dhunesh v. Oolfut, 21 W R 219, Ram Lall v Radhay, 7 A 330.

Under this rule a Court to which a decree has been transferred may refer the objector to the Court which passed the decree.—Jasoda Koer v Land Mortgage Bank of India, 8 C 916, 11 C. L. R 348.

A Court is competent to stay execution of decree of the High Court for a sufficient time to enable the judgment-debtor to apply to the High Court for a new trial, on the ground that the decree had been obtained ex parte without his knowledge —Mritoonjoy v. Cocharane, 8 W. R 202

Costs.—Where the defendants applied to the Appellate Court for stay of execution of the decree pending the appeal they must pay the costs of the application —Chuni Lal v Anantram, 25 C 893

As to the jurisdiction of the Court to which a decree is sent for execution to try the question of limitation, see notes under section 42

As to the extent of liability of a surety and the mode of enforcing a surety bond, see notes under section 145, and Order XLI, rules 5 and 6

Appeal.—Formerly, under the old Code an order relating to stay of execution was held to be appealable as a decree under s 47; see Steel v. Ichhamoyee, 13 C 111; Kristomohiny v Bama Churn, 7 C. 733; Ghazidin v. Fakir, 7 A. 73; Lingam v Kandula, 20 M. 366; Ishawargir v. Chudasama, 12 B. 30; Udayla v Gregson, 12 C. 624; Luchmeeput v. Seetanath, 8 C. 477. The omission of the words "or to the stay of execution thereof" from cl. (1), s. 47 of the present Code, does not bring an order relating to stay of execution, within s 47. Even in a decision under the old Code it was held that an order relating to stay of execution does not come under s 47 and is not appealable (see Nihal Chand v. Rameshari. 9 C. 214 and also Gambhirmal v Chejmal, 11 B. 151) It has been held that an order for security to stay execution is neither an order under s 47 nor a "decree" within s. 2, (2) and is not appealable; Saraswati v. Golap Das, 41 C. 160 (Deokinandan v. Bansi, 14 C. L. J. 35; Srinibash v. Keso Prasad, 38 C. 754 referred to).

Liability of judgment-debtor discharged.

27. No order of restitution or discharge under rule 26 shall prevent the property or person of a judgment-debtor from being retaken in execution of the decree sent for execution. [S. 241.]

COMMENTARY.

This is an exception to the ordinary rule. Cf. s. 58 (2).

A judgment-debtor, once arrested and imprisoned in execution of a decree, cannot, under the Code, be again arrested under a fresh writ of attachment on the same decree, Secy of State v. Judah, 12 C. 652. (Followed in the matter of Bolye Chund Dutt, 20 C. 874; distinguished in Rajendra v. Chunder, 23 C 128). But see Shamji v. Poonaji, 26 B 652, where it has been held that re-arrest is not forbidden (20 C. 874 dissented from; 12 C 652 distinguished).

Order of Court which passed decree or of appellate Court to be binding upon Court applied to.

28. Any order of the Court by which the decree was passed, or of such Court of appeal as aforesaid, in relation to the execution of such decree, shall be binding upon the Court to which the decree was sent for execution. [S. 242.]

COMMENTARY.

Principle.—The transfer of a decree to another Court for execution amounts to a qualified delegation of the powers possessed by the Court that passed the decree in discharging its functions relating to the execution of that decree. Such delegation however, is not complete, nor does it entirely divest the Court which transfers the decree, of its powers and functions in relation to the execution of such decree; Gazaidin v. Fakir Baksh, 7 A. 73 (76).

Where a Sub-Judge's Court in one district executes a decree of a Sub-Judge's Court in another district, it is bound to comply with a requisition from the latter Court to transmit to it the record of the case — Indur Chunder v Gopal Chand, 11 W R 230

For the powers and functions of the Court to which a decree is transferred for execution, see notes to s. 42.

Stay of execution pending suit between decree-holder and judgment debtor.

29. Where a suit is pending in any Court against the holder of a decree of such Court on the part of the person against whom the decree was passed, the Court may, on such terms as to security or otherwise, as it thinks fit, stay execution of the decree until the pending suit has been decided. [S. 243.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "either absolutely" in the old section have been omitted

Scope.—There is no provision in the law which empowers the Court passing a decree to set aside the proceedings under which the decree-holder has already been placed in possession in execution of his decree The provisions of this rule have no reference to a case in which execution has already been carried out, and the decree-holder has been placed in possessoin of the property decreed to him —Gazidin v. Fakir Baksh, 7 A 73.

Any Court to which a decree is sent for execution can, under this rule, stay execution, notwithstanding that the suit pending between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder is pending in such Court, and not in the Court which transmitted the decree.—Cooke v. Hisceba Beebe, 6 N. W P. 181.

The Court has ample power to stay execution under s. 151, in cases not provided for by this rule; Bhagwan v Harnam, 82 P. R 1910. As for instance when the ex parte decree is obtained by fraud; Fitzholms v Waryam Singh, 75 I C 419

" Such Court."—The words "such Court" do not limit the exercise of the powers only to decrees passed by the Court in which the suit is pending, but that Court is empowered to stay execution of decrees transferred to it for execution from either a Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction or a Court of appeal.—Kassa Mal v. Gopi, 10 A. 389.

Whether Provisions relating to Execution of Decrees Apply to Awards.—An award filed in Court under s. 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act (IX of 1899) is nothing more than an award although it is enforceable as if it were a decree and execution of such award cannot be stayed under this rule; Tribhuwandas v. Jivan Chand, 35 B. 196; see also Gajjar v. Dharam Chand, 12 Bom L R. 860. It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Allahabad that an award filed in Court under s. 11 of the Arbitration Act being enforceable under s 15 of that Act, as if it were a decree, the provisions of the Code applicable to the execution of decrees apply to an award so filed; Gladstone Wyllie & Co. v. Joosub, 27 C. W. N. 666: 77 I C. 868: A I R. 1924 C. 117; Sital Prasad v. Clement Ratson & Co, 43 A 394 61 I. C 401.

Appeal.—See notes to r 26

Limitation.—Where the execution of a decree is stayed under this rule an application for execution of such decree, after disposal of the suit is governed by Art. 178 and not by Art. 179 of the Limitation Act —Rungiah Gounden v Nanjappa Row, 26 M. 780.

MODE OF EXECUTION.

Decree for payment of money.

30. Every decree for the payment of money, including a decree for the payment of money as the alternative to some other relief, may be executed by the detention in the civil prison of the judgment-debtor or by attachment and sale of his property, or by both. [S. 254.]

COMMENTARY.

The language of the old section has been recast and made more explicit. The word order has been omitted as s 36 says that provisions relating to execution of decrees shall apply to execution of orders.

See r. 21 which lays down that Court may refuse simultaneous execution against person and property

This rule does not constitute a limitation upon the general right conferred by s. 51; Lahanu v. Harak, 11 N L R 113.

Alternative to Some Other Relief.—See Or. XX, r. 10 An order made under the Land Acquisition Act, directing a party, to whom a sum of money was awarded as compensation, to refund the money, may be enforced under this rule.—Nobin Kali v Banalata, 32 C. 921: 2 C. L. J. 595.

Where a decree is for the delivery of movable property, and states the amount to be paid as an alternative the goods must be delivered if capable of delivery, but if not capable of delivery, then assessed damages should be paid.—Kashee Nath v. Debkisto, 15 W. R. 240.

Option as to Mode of Execution.—Under this rule a judgment-creditor has the option of enforcing his decree against the person or property of the judgement-debtor, and the fact that such decree is an ex parte one makes no difference —Raj Crunder v. Shama Soondari, 4 C 583.

It is for the decree-holder to decide whether he should execute the decree for payment of money by the arrest of the judgment-debtor, or by the attachment and sale of his property, or by both While the Court has discretion to refuse execution against the person and property simultaneously under Or. XXI, r 21, it has no authority to refuse an order of committal to prison on the ground that the decree-holder should proceed in the first instance against the property of the judgment-debtor, Hargobind Kishan Chand v Hakim Singh, 6 L. 48: 93 I. C. 54: A. I. R. 1926 L 110.

"Decree for payment of money."—The words "decree for payment of money" include all sorts of decree for payment of money, except mortgage-decree, see notes under rule 20

A suit on mortgage-bond was adjusted by the defendant agreeing to pay the amount claimed and costs, with interest, by instalments within a fixed time, and that, in the event of default, the plaintiff should be at liberty to bring such property to sale Held that such decree was a mere money-decree, and not one which gave the plaintiff a lien on such property.—Janki Prasad v Baldeo Narain, 3 A. 216 See, however, Debi Charan v. Pirbhu Din, 3 A. 388, and Jagannath v Debi Pursad, 73 I. C. 598, where it has been held that no attachment is necessary in the case of a decree for money when it is provided that if it is not paid by a certain date specific immovable property should be sold

Where a landlord obtains a decree, for rent against his tenant without creating a charge and which is on the face of it a decree for money, he is at liberty in execution to bring to sale the property of the judgment-debtor, other than the tenure.—Tarini Prosad v. Narayan Kumari, 17 C 301. See also Fatick Chunder v. Foley, 15 C. 492 (14 C. 14 explained) See also Bhabani Charan v. Pratap Chandra, 8 C. W. N. 575 and Sourendra Mohan v Surnomoyi, 26 C 103; 3 C. W. N 38.

Detention in Civil Prison.—The High Court's power to imprison for contempt is a jurisdiction inherited from the old Supreme Court, and it has not been affected by the Code.—Martin v. Lawrence, 4 C. 655. See also Hassonbhoy v. Cowasji, 7 B 1, and Norivahoo v. Naratamdas, 7 B 5

An insolvent, who has obtained a protection order, is not liable to arrest or imprisonment for arrears of maintenance included in the schedule filed by him.—Tokee Bibee v Abdool Khan, 5 C. 536; 5 C. L R 458.

Decree for specific movable property

31. (1) Where the decree is for any specific moveable, or for any share in a specific movable, it may be executed by the seizure, if practicable, of the movable or share, and by the delivery thereof to the party to whom it has been adjudged, or to such person as he appoints to receive delivery on his behalf, or by the detention in the civil prison of the judgment-debtor, or by the attachment of his property, or by both.

(2) Where any attachment under sub-rule (1) has remained in force for six months, if the judgment-debtor has not obeyed the decree and the decree-holder has applied to have the attached property sold, such property may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the decree-holder, in cases where any amount has been fixed by the decree to be paid as an alternative to delivery of movable property, such amount, and, in other cases, such compensation as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the judgment-debtor on his application.

(3) Where the judgment-debtor has obeyed the decree and paid all costs of executing the same which he is bound to pay, or where, at the end of six months, from the date of the attachment, no application to have the property sold has been made, or, if made, has been refused, the attachment shall cease. [S 259.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—In sub-rule (1) the words " or for the recovery of a wife " which occurred after " any share in specific movable," in the old section have been omitted; for there can be no such decree under the law, as a wife cannot be treated as a chattel to be delivered over to the husband. Where any third person prevents the wife from returning to her husband, the latter may obtain an injunction against him, which may be enforced in case of disobedience, either by the imprisonment of the defendant or by the attachment of his property, or by both

Applicability.—This rule is not applicable where the property sought to be attached is not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, e g., with the Bank. Padmanund v. Chundi Dat, 1 C. W. N 170

" Specific moveable property."—This means the property recovered in specie, i e., the very property itself, not any equivalant, substitute or reparation It does not include money, Sankunni v Govind, 37 M. 381. As to what entitles the plaintiff to obtain delivery of specific movable property by suit and to enforce the decree, see Jaldu Venkatasubba v. Asiatic S. N. Co, 39 M. 1.

A decree for certain movable and immovable property was given, and it was directed that the amin was to ascertain the extent of the moveables. Held that the Court in execution could not enquire into the value of such of the movables as could not be found in order to give alternative damages —Bhoobun Mohinee v Gobind Chunder, 19 W R 82.

See sec. 11 of the Specific Relief Act.

Decree for specific performance, for restitution of conjugal rights, or for an injunction.

32. (1) Where the party against whom a decree for the specific performance of a contract, or for restitution of conjugal rights, or for an injunction, has been passed, has had an opportunity of obeying the decree and has wilfully failed to obey it, the decree may be enforced in the case of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights by the attachment of his property or in the case of a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction by his detention in the civil prison, or by the attachment of his property, or by both.
[Para 1, S. 260.]

(2) Where the party against whom a decree for specific performance or for an injunction has been passed is a corporation, the decree may be enforced by the attachment of the property of the corporation or with the leave of the court, by the detention in the civil prison of the directors or other principal officers thereof, or by both attachment and detention. [New.]

(3) Where any attachment under sub-rule (1) or sub-rule (2) has remained in force for one year, if the judgment-debtor has not obeyed the decree and the decree-holder has applied to have the attached property sold, such property may be sold; and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the decree-holder such compensation as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the judgment-debtor on his application. [Para 2, S. 260.]

(4) Where a judgment-debtor has obeyed the decree and paid all costs of executing the same which he is bound to pay, or where, at the end of one year from the date of the attachment, no application to have the property sold has been made, or if made has been refused, the attachment shall cease. [Para. 3, S. 260.]

(5) Where a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction has not been obeyed, the Court may, in lieu of or in addition to all or any of the processes aforesaid, direct that the act required to be done may be done so far as practicable by the decree-holder or some other person appointed by the Court, at the cost of the judgment-debtor, and upon the act being done, the expenses incurred may be ascertained in such manner as the Court may direct and may be recovered as if they were included in the decree. [New.]

A, a person of little substance, erects a building which renders uninhabitable a family mansion belonging to B A in spite of his detention in prison and the attachment of his property, declines to obey a decree obtained against him by B and directing him to remove the building The Court is of opinion that no sum realizable by the sale of A's property would adequately compensate B for the depreciation in the value of his mansion B may apply to the Court to remove the building and may recover the cost of such removal from A in the execution-proceeding

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—In sub-rule (1) the words, " or for an injunction, has been passed," have been substituted for the words, " or for the performance of, or abstention from, any other particular act has been made," and the words, " detention in the civil prison," have been substituted for the word " imprisonment " The italicized words in sub-rule (1) were added by Amendment Act XXIX of 1923.

Sub-rule (2) is new, there was no similar provision in the old section

Sub-rule (5) with the illustration is new and corresponds with R S C Or. XLII, r. 30, see notes.

Applicability.—This rule applies equally to cases where a party is directed to carry out something as well as to cases where he is directed to abstain from doing an act, Makaran v. Somayajipad, 6 I. C. 289: 7 M L. T. 227. It applies also to cases where the injunction restrains certain persons from doing certain things in prepetuity and not only to cases where the imprisonment or attachment can be continued until the decree has been executed; Anjana v. Vathiar, 32 I. C. 698: 19 M. L. T 132

Decree for Specific Performance of Contract.—See ss. 12-30 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1887)

"Decree for restitution of conjugal rights."—These words were added in the Code of 1877, as s. 200 of the Code of 1859 was held to be inadequate for enforcement of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights (see Gatha Ram v. Moohita, 23 W. R. 179). It was however held that a decree for restitution of conjugal rights between Mahomedans or Hindus may be enforced under this section —Yamunabai v Narayan, 1 B. 164; see also Chotun Beebee v. Ameer, 6 W. R 105; 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 317. The introduction of rule 33, now gives the Court a discretion where executing such a decree.

In an application for execution of a decree for restituton of conjugal rights, the Court will not issue an attachment,without notice to the defendant. The Court must also be satisfied on affidavit that the decree has been served on the defendant, and that he has had an opportunity of obeying it, that the plaintiff has a house to take her to, and that he has given her notice thereof, and that she had refused —Troylokho Nath v. Radharani, 3 C W. N (S N) xxxix (39).

A mother directed by a decree to refrain from preventing her daughter returning to her husband, permitted her to reside in her house. Held that such conduct does not justify execution of the decree against her under this rule.—Ajanasi Kuar v Suraj Prasad, 1 A 501

A plea by wife that sexual intercourse is impossible owing to her incurable disease or physical malformation, is not a good defence. A Judge has no discretion to refuse a decree for restitution of conjugal rights for other causes than those which in law justify a wife from refusing to return to live with her husband —Purshotamdas v. Bai Mani, 21 B. 610. See also Dadaji v. Rukhmabai, 10 B 301 (reversing 9 B 529).

Where it was the universal custom that a child wife should remain away from her husband until a certain event had occurred, a Court was held to have been justified, while such contingency had not happened, in refusing to order such a wife to go to her husband —Suntosh Ram v. Geru Pattuck, 23 W R 22

The effect of a Civil Court decree in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, is to supersede the order of the Criminal Court for maintenance.—Nur Muhammad v Ayesha Bibee, 27 A 483 (23 B 484 followed).

Form of Decree in Suits for Restitution of Conjugal Rights.—A decree should be passed in the form that the husband is entitled to conjugal rights, that his wife do return to live with him, and that the parents do not interfere in any manner to prevent her so doing —Ram Tahul v Madho, 2 Agra 111, Koobur Khansama v Jan Khansama, 8 W. A decree that "the case be decreed awarding the plaintiff to take the defendant as his married wife," is not a proper form of decree —Gatha Ram v Moohita Kochin, 14 B L R 298 23 W R 179

Sub-rule (3).—The rule is a highly penal one and must be con strictly. Under it the following conditions must exist before a s ordered: (a) a valid original attachment; (b) application within on of that attachment by decree-holder for sale; (c) lapse of one year date of attachment; Badri v. Fakira, 10 I. C. 341 · 170 P. L. R. 1

Sub-rule (5). Disobedience to Order for Injunction or for Specific Performance of Contract.—This sub-rule is new. It has been borrowed from O. XLII, r. 30 of the English Rules, and supplies a distinct want. The illustration, newly added, clearly explains its meaning. Under the old Code, it was held that a decree for injunction could only be executed by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor or by attachment of his property as laid down in the old section. That relief was not adequate; Protab v. Peary, 8 C. 174; Durgadas v Dewraj, 33 C 306; Sakarlal v. Bai Parvathi; 26 B. 283. The new provision will give immediate relief wherever possible by causing the decree to be executed through the agency of the decree-holder so far as practicable or by appointment of some officer of the Court by removal of the obstruction or building.—Sachi Prasad v. Amarnath, 46 C 103: 45 I C 864. But the Court has no power under this rule to order the police to see that its decree is carried out; Goswami Gordhanlalji v. Goswami Mahsudan, 40 A 648 48 I C 26

The expression " the act required to be done " in sub-rule (5) means what has to be done to enforce the injunction; Sachi Prasad v. Amarnath, 46 C 103: 45 I C 864

Disobedience to Order of Injunction—Contempt of Court.—The proper remedy for disobedience of an order of injunction passed by a Civil Court is committal for contempt —In the matter of Chandra Kanta, 6 C. 445: 7 C. L. R. 350 See also Pran Jivan Das v Mayaram, 1 B. 148 and Advocate-General of Bombay v Gangji Akhai, 19 B 152.

Where a plaintiff has once obtained a perpetual injunction directing the defendant to refrain from certain acts, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to sue again for similar relief, if in future the defendant ignores such injunction Disobedience is contempt of Court, and the Court can take proceedings to enforce its authority, notwithstanding art. 179 of the Limitation Act, 1877 —Ram Saran v Chatar Sing, 23 A 465 Followed in Bhagwan Das v Sukhdei, 28 A 300 (1906) A W N 10 3 A. I. J. 836.

Even a temporary disobedience is punishable, Aiyana v Vathiar, 32 I. C. 648 The procedure is to punish for contempt and not to discharge the decree so as to prevent a decree-holder from taking further steps; Ahmadi Begam v Anant, 1 A L J 431

As to failure to carry out Court's order and contempt of Court, see Dharmapal v Krista Dayal, 10 C. L J 631

Limitation.—Where a perpetual injunction has been granted, on each successive breach of it, the decree may be enforced under this rule by an application made within 3 years of such breach under art. 178 of the Limitation Act 1877 The decree-holder is not bound to take action in respect of every petty infringement, and the injunction does not by his inaction become inoperative after 3 years from the date of the first petty breach so as to disentitle him to take action where a serious breach is afterwards committed.—Venkatachallam v Veerappa Pillai, 29 M 311, see also Bhagwan v Sukhdei, 28 A 300 2 A L J 836

" An opportunity of obeying "—Notice Not Obligatory.—Before issuing execution the Court is to see whether the judgment-debtor had ample opportunities of obeying the injunction or decree, and has wilfully disobeyed it. Where there was opportunity of obeying but the defendant wilfully failed to obey, no notice is necessary. It is not obligatory to issue any notice before execution under this rule. It is in the discretion of the Court; Durgadas v. Deoraj, 33 C. 306: 10 C. W. N. 297: 3 C. L. J. 112. See also Bhagwan v. Sukhdei, 28 A. 300. The proper course is to issue a notice first, fixing a time within which to comply with the order; Pratap v. Peary, 8 C. 174 (distd. in 33 C. 306). Where an application has been dismissed on the ground that the debtor has had no opportunity of obeying, there is no bar to a subsequent application after such opportunity was given; Kishore v. Dwarka, 21 C. 784.

Discretion of Court in executing decree for restitution of conjugal rights.

33. (1) Notwithstanding anything in rule 32, the Court, either at the time of passing a decree against a husband for the restitution of conjugal rights or at any time afterwards, may order that the decree shall be executed in the manner provided in this rule.

(2) Where the Court has made an order under sub-rule (1), it may order that in the event of the decree not being obeyed within such period as may be fixed in this behalf, the judgment-debtor shall make to the decree-holder such periodical payments as may be just, and, if it thinks fit, require that the judgment-debtor shall, to its satisfaction, secure to the decree-holder such periodical payments.

(3) The Court may from time to time vary or modify any order made under sub-rule (2), for the periodical payment of money, either by altering the times of payment or by increasing or diminishing the amount, or may temporarily suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again revive the same, either wholly or in part as it may think just.

(4) Any money ordered to be paid under this rule may be recovered as though it were payable under a decree for the payment of money. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration in the Rule.—The italicized words, "against a husband" in sub-rule (1), were added by Amendment Act XXIX of 1923 and the words, "shall be executed in the manner provided in this rule," were substituted for the words, "shall not be executed by detention in prison." The words, "and the decree-holder is the wife," which occurred in sub-rule (2), were omitted by the same Act.

34. (1) Where a decree is for the execution of a document or for the endorsement of a negotiable instrument and the judgment-debtor neglects or refuses to obey the decree, the decree-holder may prepare a draft of the document or endorsement in accordance with the terms of the decree and deliver the same to the Court. [Para. 1, S. 261.]

Decree for execution of document, or endorsement of negotiable instrument.

(2) The Court shall thereupon cause the draft to be served on the judgment-debtor together with a notice requiring his objections (if any) to be made within such time as the Court fixes in this behalf. [Para. 2, S. 261.]

(3) Where the judgment-debtor objects to the draft, his objections shall be stated in writing within such time, and the Court shall make such order approving or altering the draft as it thinks fit. [Para. 3, S. 261.]

(4) The decree-holder shall deliver to the Court a copy of the draft with such alteration (if any) as the Court may have directed upon the proper stamp-paper if a stamp is required by the law for the time being in force ; and the Judge or such officer as may be appointed in this behalf shall execute the document so delivered. [Paras. 3, 4, S. 261.]

(5) The execution of a document or the endorsement of a negotiable instrument under this rule may be in the following form, namely :—

"C. D., Judge of the Court of.................................. (or as the case may be), for A. B., in a suit by E F. against A. B.", and shall have the same effect as the execution of the document or the endorsement of the negotiable instrument by the party ordered to execute or endorse the same. [S. 261.]

(6) The Court, or such officer as it may appoint in this behalf, shall cause the document to be registered if its registration is required by the law for the time being in force or the decree-holder desires to have it registered, and may make such order as it thinks fit as to the payment of the expenses of the registration. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule embodies the provisions of ss. 261, 262, C. P. Code, 1882, in a re-arranged and modified form. Throughout, the word

'document' has been substituted for "conveyance" The rule has been brought into conformity with the chronological order of events, and a provision has been added to meet the requirements of the Indian Registration Act (see sub-rule 6) It was pointed out, in decisions under the old Code, that endorsement by the Judge on the back of a mortgage deed of over Rs. 100, showing its transfer to auction-purchaser requires registration; Kanahia v Kali Din 2 A 392

Execution of Document or Endorsement by Court.—This rule prescribes the machinery for enforcing a decree, which directs the execution of a conveyance, and the form and the effect of such a conveyance—Atul Kristo v Mutty Lal, 3 C W N 30

Where decree directs the defendant to execute a conveyance and provides that if he failed, the Court would execute it, and the conveyance was executed by Court nothing further remained to be done in execution proceedings, and if either of the parties wanted to enforce his rights under it, a separate suit is maintainable, Kali Narain v. Harinath, 12 C L J. 599

Where a decree based upon a compromise directed that one party should execute a kobala in favour of another within a certain time after the date of the decree, Held that the proper course for the parties would have been to proceed regularly as if a decree for specific performance was made Either party ought to have submitted to the Court a draft of the kobala to be served on the other side, the other side having the right to object to the terms of the draft Then the matter should have been taken up by the Court, or by a proper officer of the Court to settle the terms of the kobala and then the person who was to execute the document should have executed it and filed it in Court and the execution should have been attested by persons known to the recipient of the kobala or by other respectable persons —Hare Krishna v Priya Nath, 10 C W N 345

Where in a suit for declaration of title, a compromise decree was passed under which the respondents were directed to execute a mortgage bond within a specified time and the respondents having failed to execute the mortgage bond, the appellants applied for execution of the mortgage bond in execution of the decree, held that the question what is the subject-matter of a suit must depend upon the facts of each case and in the present case, the decree was capable of execution under this rule, Soudamini v. Behari, 25 C W N 68

The provision in a solenama—which solenama has been embodied in a decree—that one of the parties shall execute a patta in favour of the other, can be executed under Or. XXI, r. 34, Ashwani v. Ram Gopal, 95 I C. 179: A I R 1926 C 975

So also a decree directing transfer of shares may be executed under this rule; 41 I. C. 77.

The Registrar of the High Court has authority, when so directed, to execute a conveyance on behalf of a party refusing to do so, so as to pass his estate, if any, but has no authority to bind him by entering into any conveyance on his behalf.—Ram Chunder v Dwarka Nath, 16 C. 330.

In a suit for specific performance of an oral agreement, if the defendant fails or refuses to comply with the decree, the Court shall proceed to exercise the power under this rule for carrying out the conveyance.—Chunder Kant v. Krishna, 10 C 710

In a suit for specific performance of a contract of sale and to execute a sale-deed, the Court ordered the defendant to execute a deed of sale. On failure of the defendant to do so, the Court executed a deed of sale in plaintiff's favour under this rule —Nathu Pandu v. Bhika, 18 B. 537.

Courts in British India cannot direct agent to convey to the principal properties situate outside jurisdiction The only way to grant relief is under Or. XXI, r 52; Ramasami v Karuppan, 29 M L J. 551.

Appeal.—An order on an objection to draft conveyance or endorsement under this rule, is appealable under Or XLIII, r 1 (i)

35. (1) Where a decree is for the delivery of any immovable property, possession thereof shall be delivered to the party to whom it has been adjudged, or to such persons as he may appoint to receive delivery on his behalf, and, if necessary, by removing any person bound by the decree who refuses to vacate the property. [S. 263.]

Decree for immovable property.

(2) Where a decree is for the joint possession of immoveable property, such possession shall be delivered by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property and proclaiming by beat of drum, or other customary mode, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree. [New.]

(3) Where possession of any building or enclosure is to be delivered and the person in possession, being bound by the decree, does not afford free access, the Court through its officers, may, after giving reasonable warning and facility to any woman not appearing in public according to the customs of the country to withdraw, remove or open any lock or bolt or break open any door or do any other act necessary for putting the decree-holder in possession. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—Sub-rule (1) corresponds with s. 263 C. P. Code 1882 with some verbal changes only.

Sub-rule (2) is new. It makes provision for delivery of joint possession of immoveable property, to the owner of an undivided share or the purchaser of the rights of a co-sharer, as there was no such provision in the old Code

Sub-rule (3) is also new The provision is made in this rule for delivery of khas possession by removing or opening any lock or bolt or by breaking open any door, etc, etc

"Bound by the decree."—In delivering possession the first thing to to be seen is, whether the person who refuses to vacate is bound by the decree or not If he is not bound by the decree and is a stranger then he cannot be removed, nor his doors can be broken open.

This rule should be read with s 146, and proceedings under it may be taken against persons claiming under the judgment-debtor, e.g., the representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor

Delivery of Possession—Symbolical and Actual.—Possession may be delivered in two ways, viz, delivery of actual or khas possession and delivery of formal or symbolical possession Sub-rule (1) and (3) speak of actual possession, and sub-rule (2) contemplates symbolical possession Rule 95 contemplates actual possession to the auction purchaser. Rule 36 (next rule) and r 96 contemplate symbolical possession Rules 95 and 96 deal with possession to be given to auction purchaser.

Distinction between actual or khas possession under this rule and formal possession under r 36 explained and the mode of taking possession under each of the above rules pointed out by Edge, C J —Sitaram v Ram Lal, 18 A 440, F B (pages 449, 450 and 451)

"Constructive" possession by receipt of rent from tenants is not physical possession —Batul Begum v Mansur Ali, 20 A. 315 F B

Symbolical possession does not amount to dispossession as contemplated by s. 335 C P Code, 1882, (Or XXI, rr. 97, 103) —Ibrahim v. Ram Jadu, 30 C 710

Effect of Symbolical Possession.—Delivery of symbolical possession in execution operates in point of law and fact, as between the parties, a complete transfer of possession from one party to another, and forms, as against the judgment-debtor, a fresh starting point for limitation in respect of a suit for possession of the property, although such possession is of no avail as against third parties —Jaggobundhu v. Ram Chunder, 5 C 584, F B 5 C L R 548, Juggobundhu v. Purnanund, 16 C 530, F. B (10 C 402 overruled), Shama Charan v. Madhub Chandra, 11 C. 93; Janaki v Baikunthanath, A I. R. 1922 C. 176; Radha Krishna v. Ram Bahadur, 22 C. W. N 330 P C · 43 I. C. 208 P. C.; Mahadevappa v. Bhimsa, 46 B. 710. 66 I C 320. A I. R. 1922 B. 28; Ranganatha v. Srinivasa, 49 M. L J. 656 90 I C 1037 · A. I. R. 26 M. 42, Jogendra Krishna v Joy Shib, 96 I. C 481 · A I. R. 1926 C. 1172.

Though symbolical possession is delivered, where actual possession should have been given, still so far as judgment-debtor and other persons bound by the decree are concerned, it operates as delivery of actual possession; Maharaja Protap v. Bhaiani Sunder Bans, 71 I. C. 999. Fernat delivery under rule 35 (1) amounts to actual delivery. Pandurang v. Sampat, 72 I. C. 318; Babu Edal Singh v. Babu Ram Bahori Lal, 2 Pat. L. T. 743. But the delivery of symbolical possession is effective only in cases where C. P. Code recognizes such possession. Such symbolical possession does not affect persons impleaded as parties to the suit against whom, however, there is no decree for possession; Raghunath v. Kanduba, 68 I. C. 91: A. I. R. 1922 B. 2.

Symbolical Possession and Limitation.—Merely formal possession of immoveable property by a purchaser at a Court sale cannot prevent limitation running in favour of the judment-debtor where the latter remains in actual possession and the property is not in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same; Mahadev v. Janu Namji, 36 B. 373 F. B.; Raghunath v. Kondiba, 24 Bom. L. R. 499: 68 I. C. 91. A. I. R. 1922 B. 2; Shridhar v. Ganpati, 43 B. 559. The effect of this decision is that symbolical possession given in circumstances in which actual possession ought to have been given is a nullity, and the period of limitation for a suit for actual possession is 12 years from the date of sale. The Allahabad High Court in Jang Bahadur v. Hanwant, 43 A. 520 F. B., took the same view as the Bombay High Court. The Madras High Court, in an earlier case (Govind v Venkata, 17 M. L. J. 598), took the same view as the Calcutta High Court, but in later cases, (Kamayya v. Bhimavasetti, 49 M. L. J. 303: 86 I. C 439: A. I. R. 1925 M. 1140; Govinda Swami v. Petha Perumal, 44 I C. 839), it followed the Bombay decisions. A contrary view has been taken by the Calcutta High Court where it has been held that a suit by an auction purchaser who has obtained symbolical possession for actual possession of land, brought within twelve years from the date of symbolical possession is not barred by limitation; Harimohan v. Baburali, 24 C. 715; Bhulu Beg v. Jatindra, 27 C. W N 24 77 I. C. 1035. A. I. R 1923 C. 138 See also the Calcutta cases noted above under " Effect of Symbolical Possession "

It should be noted that symbolical possession though effective against the judgment-debtor, is of no avail against third persons or strangers, Harimohan v. Babur Ali, 24 C 715, Giri Narain v. Modhusudan, 17 C. W. N. 324; see cases noted above under " Effect of Symbolical Possession." Thus D conveys his property to A but remains in possession A sells the property to P. In execution of a decree against D the property is sold as D's property and purchased by Q. P then sues A and D for possession and gets a decree in execution of which he obtains Symbolical Possession When he went to take actual possession he was resisted by Q whose adverse possession was for more than twelve years including D's adverse possession against A. P then brings a suit against Q The suit is barred, as the Symbolical Possession obtained by P did not break the continuity of Q's possession, Harjivan v. Shivram, 19 B 620 In Kocherlakota v. Vadreru, 27 M 262 it has been held that symbolical possession will affect even a third party when it is delivered with his knowledge and in his presence, see also Lakshman v Moru, 16 B 722, Namdeb v Ram Chandra, 18 B 37, Doyanidhi v Kalai, 11 C L R 395

Symbolical possession, as may be given by sticking a bamboo into the ground or the like, of a dwelling-house of which actual possession might have been granted, is not such bona fide possession as will save limitation —Sholee Nath v. Obhoy Nund, 5 C. 831.

Held that when the lease purports to be a perpetual lease reversion to the grantors, and no rights reserved to them, but only nal rent, symbolical possession as against the grantors would not b tive against the lessee, and thus save the bar in limitation.—Gossa mar Puri v Bipin Behary, 18 C 520 (4 C 327 referred to)

If a person obtaining formal possession in execution of a decree 12 years to elapse without taking any steps to acquire and assert possession, he loses the title conferred by the decree.—Pearee Mo Jugobundhu, 24 W R 418 See also, Bagdu Majhi v. Durga Pr C W. N 292; Ramlal v Masum, 25 A 35

Where a decree declared that plaintiff was to get possession of land after batwara being made, and the decree-holder, after allow right to be barred by lapse of time, applied to the Collector, had a b effected and obtained merely formal possession; held that such po gave him no fresh cause of action —Kishore Singh v. Gobind Su W. R 33

Where formal possession has been given under a final fore decree but mortgagor continued in actual possession, the remedy i suit and not under s 47 of the C P Code, consequently the law of tion applicable is that governing suits, not execution proceedings.— Nath v Milap Chand, 28 A 722 3 A L J 504: (1906), A. W (11 C 93, 24 C 715, 19 A 499, referred to)

Delivery of Actual or Khas Possession.—A decree, which is decree for possession, cannot be executed by an order for delivery of p sion of property in the possession of a third party who has acquired subsequently to the institution of the suit —Ameerounissa v. Abedo 16 W R 307

The delivery of possession under this rule contemplates the d holder being placed in actual possession by possibly dispossessing, eye of law, a third person who is not affected by the decree The formal delivery of possession cannot of itself effect such disposse unless the deprivation of possession be complete as a fact, a conc which the Court has to form on the whole of the evidence.—Ram Ch v. Ravji, 20 B 351 F B (13 B 213 referred to).

If in execution of a decree for khas possession, it is necessary to re any of the defendants from the land covered by the decree, the Cou application is authorized to remove such person; but if the decr silent as to the building situated on the land, it is not within the pro of the Court which executes, to direct that the building be pulled do Radha Gobinda v Brojendro Coomar, 18 W. R. 527.

Where plaintiff sued defendant as trespasser, the prayer in the being for khas possession and the defendant set up adverse title, the d given against the latter for possession was held to give the judgment-cr the possession sued for, i e, legal possession as provided by this secti Raj Mungul v Anund Moyee, 11 W R. 63

Delivery of possession of land under a decree for redemption, inc standing crops thereon.—Aung Bow v. Tuno Gaung, 3 L. B. R. 129.

Second Application.—A decree-holder who has been put in possession under this rule and has been obstructed by a third person on behalf of the judgment-debtor cannot put in a second application for possession under this rule; Thandavaroja v. Subramania, 29 M. L. J 501

But a decree-holder in a partition suit who has been given partial possession of portion of the property allotted to him in an execution case which was dismissed after delivery of formal possession, can maintain a second application in execution for actual possession under this rule, Khetra v. Jogendra, 45 I. C. 7

Delivery of Khas Possession After Delivery of Symbolical Possession.—Where a plaintiff obtained a decree against certained putnidars to recover possession of a share of ijmali talook, it was held that the Court executing it, was bound to put him in possession of the property adjudged, and if necessary, by removing any person who might refuse to vacate, and that his having already been put in possession under r 36 was no bar to his being put into the more direct and actual possession contemplated by this rule.—Adormonee Dassee v Prem Chand, 9 W. R. 454 See also Banee Muhtoon v Gopee Bhuggut, 12 W R 285, and Hur Kishore v Sudoy Chunder, 17 W R 80, where it has been held that a Court had jurisdiction to issue an order for khas possession to be given under r. 36

A person who has obtained symbolical possession under r 36 may subsequently ask for actual possession under this rule —Robson v Maseyk, 3 W. R. Mis. 2

Joint Possession—Undivided Share.—When in execution of a decree held by her, the decree-holder purchased an undivided share in a house which the judgment-debtor owned jointly with S a third person, and the judgment-debtor resisted the decree-holder when attempting to get possession—held on a construction of the rule and r 95, he was entitled to have the judgment-debtor removed from the premises, Sarvi Begum v Taj Begam, 36 A. 181

The provisions of this rule clearly show that a plaintiff who is entitled to joint possession can be granted decree for joint possession, whether he was originally in joint possession, and was subsequently dispossessed or whether he had never been in possession; Jagannath v Ramphal, 34 A. 150 (Phani Singh v Nawab Singh, 28 A 161 dissnted from)

Per Oldfiled, J —An usufructuary mortgagee of the share of a coparcener in a joint family property is not entitled to a decree for joint possession —Per Napier, J , contra in Kota Balabhadra v Ketra, 16 M. L. T. 229.

Break Open.—In a case in which the officers of a Court were unable to give possession on account of the house being locked up by the judgment-debtor, held that the Court was bound to remove the lock and to place the decree-holder in possession of the house —Gunesh Chander v. Ram Dhunee, 22 W R 283

Where a decree only directed plaintiff's right of passage through a doorway, and to remove the brick work with which it was filled· Held that, in executing it, the decree-holder was not authorized to remove a wooden door in existence there.—Rooknee Kant v. Nund Lall, 25 W. R. 120.

Use of Force in Giving Possession.—A bailiff authorised to give possession may use a reasonable degree of force in order to effect the removal of persons bound by the decree and refusing to vacate the same. If the writ simply authorizes "to give possession" and there are no words expressly authorising forcible removal, the omission is immaterial, Meredith v Sanjibani, 42 C 313 19 C W N. 278

Resistance or Obstruction to Delivery of Possession.—See r 97 et seq and notes

Decree for delivery of immovable property when in occupancy of tenant.

36. Where a decree is for the delivery of any immoveable property in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same and not bound by the decree to relinquish such occupancy, the Court shall order delivery to be made by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property, and proclaiming to the occupant by beat of drum or other customary mode, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree in regard to the property. [S. 264.]

COMMENTARY.

Symbolical Possession and Khas Possession.—See note to r. 35 above 970

Procedure for Delivery of Possession.—This rule imperatively requires that a copy of the writ of delivery of possession should be affixed in some conspicuous place on or near the property, the object of the provision being that the co-sharers and tenants may know that possession has been transferred to the decree-holder Failure to comply with this procedure is fatal to the delivery of possession; Jahuri v. Peman, 55 I C. 19, Nidhi v Parsu, 74 I C. 1

Applicability of the Rule.—Or XXI, r. 36 applies only to a case where the property is in exclusive possession of a person not bound by the decree and entitled to remain in possession. It does not apply to a case of a joint holding, which is covered by r. 35; Devi Sahai v Ramji Lal, 27 P L. R 617 97 I C 170 A I R. 1926 L. 668.

Delivery of Property in Occupancy of Tenants, etc.—Where a decree is partly for a share of land in the khas possession of the defendant, and partly for a share of land in the possession of the ryots, the decree as to the former can only be executed under r. 35 and as to the latter according to this rule —Shama Soondery v. Jardine Skinner & Co., 7 W. R. 376 (reversing 3 W. R. 144).

If there is a decree for partition and the lands are in possession of tenants, delivery can be given under this rule.—Uppala Raghava v. Uppala Ramanuja, 26 M. 78.

Order for delivery of possession of a house according to this rule is correct when the objector asserts that he has a right of residence in it; Jiban v. Simrikha, 20 I. C. 571.

A person disturbing the possession of another, without any right legitimately derived from any competent person to do so, is not a "person entitled to occupy" the property within the meaning of this rule; Ibrahim v. Konammal, 43 M. L. J 179. 70 I. C. 755: A. I. R. 1923 M. 25

Possession Without the Intervention of Court.—The Code of Civil Procedure does not limit the applicant to any particular manner of obtaining possession, and there is nothing in the Code to prevent the decree-holder or auction-purchaser to obtain possession without the assistance of the Court Possession actually taken without the intervention of Court is equally effectual.—Obhoya Churn v. Rajendra Coomar, 22 W R. 406; Salig Ram v. Meheen Lall, 2 Agra 235, Lallu v. Annaji, 5 B. 387; and Bandu v. Naba, 15 B 238.

Suit for Khas Possession After Symbolical Possession.—A suit by auction-purchaser to obtain possession of lands the subject of his purchase, will lie when, it is shown that attempt has been made to obtain possession in execution proceedings, and that such attempt has become unsuccessful.—Iswar Pershad v Jai Naram, 12 C. 169 (10 C L R 258 distinguished). See also Seru Mehun v Bhagoban Din, 9 C. 602; Balvant Santaram v. Babaji Bin, 8 B. 602; and Sevu v Muttu Sami, 10 M 53. A plaintiff who has obtained only symbolical possession in execution of a former decree, is entitled to maintain a fresh suit against the same defendant to obtain actual possession.—Shankar Bisto v. Narsingrav Ram Chandra, 22 B 667.

Magistrate to Give effect to Civil Court's Decree for Possession.—A magistrate is bound to give effect to the decree of the Civil Courts and to maintain the party in possession, who under the decree has already been put in possession of the property in dispute —Kunja Behari v Khettra Pal, 29 C 208 6 C W N 38 (26 C 625 referred to. Distd. in 31 M 416)

It is duty of the magistrate in proceedings under s. 145, C. P. Code, to find possession in accordance with the decree of the Civil Court under which possession has been delivered —Gulraj Marwari v Sheik Bhatoo, 32 C. 796 (22 C 297 cited); approved in Kuloda v. Danesh, 33 C 33; 10 C. W. N. 257 2 C L J. 71, Akshoy v Basu Rai, 37 C. L. J 256.) The weight to be attached to such previous orders depends on the particular circumstances of the case; see Parmeshwar v Kailaspati, 1 Pat. L J 836; see also Krishna v Abdul, 80 C 155

ARREST AND DETENTION IN THE CIVIL PRISON.

Discretionary power to permit judgment debtor to show cause against detention in prison.

37. (1) Notwithstanding anything in these rules, where an application is for the execution of a decree for the payment of a money by the arrest and detention in the civil prison of a judgment-debtor who is liable to be arrested in pursuance of the application, the Court may, instead of issuing a warrant for his arrest, issue a notice calling upon him to appear before the Court on a day to be specified in the notice and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison.

(2) Where appearance is not made in obedience to the notice, the Court shall, if the decree-holder so requires, issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. [S. 245-B.]

COMMENTARY.

See rr 11 and 21 of this Order

Issue of Warrant when Judgment-debtor does Not Reside Within the Jurisdiction of the Court.—The fact that the judgment-debtor does not reside within the jurisdiction of the Court is not a sufficient reason for refusing to issue warrant for his arrest, although such a warrant can be executed only within the Court's territorial jurisdiction. In such cases Court should fix a date for the return of the warrant; Krishna v Bidya 44 I C 296.

"Issue notice."—Court may issue notice against a judgment-debtor who in other execution proceedings has applied for insolvency; Ganpat v Mahadeb, 22 B 731

The issue of a notice under this rule is not a revivor of decree for purposes of limitation; Chatterput v Daya Chand, 11 I. C 216

Appearance After Notice.—See r 40 for procedure to be followed after appearance.

38. Every warrant for the arrest of judgment-debtor shall direct the officer entrusted with its execution to bring him before the Court with all convenient speed, unless the amount which he has been ordered to pay, together with the interest thereon and the costs (if any) to which he is liable, be sooner paid. [S. 337.]

Warrant for arrest to direct judgment-debtor to be brought up.

39. (1) No judgment-debtor shall be arrested in execution of a decree unless and until the decree-holder pays into Court such sum as the Judge thinks sufficient for the subsistence of the judgment-debtor from the time of his arrest until he can be brought before the Court.

Subsistence allowance.

(2) Where a judgment-debtor is committed to the civil prison in execution of a decree, the Court shall fix for his subsistence such monthly allowance as he may be entitled to according to the scales fixed under section 57 or, where no such scales have been fixed, as it considers sufficient with reference to the class to which he belongs.

(3) The monthly allowance fixed by the Court shall be supplied by the party on whose application the judgment-debtor has been arrested by monthly payments in advance before the first day of each month.

(4) The first payment shall be made to the proper officer or the Court for such portion of the current month as remains unexpired before the judgment-debtor is committed to the civil prison, and the subsequent payments (if any) should be made to the officer in charge of the civil prison. [S. 339.]

(5) Sums disbursed by the decree-holder for the subsistence of the judgment-debtor in the civil prison shall be deemed to be costs in the suit:

Provided that the judgment-debtor shall not be detained in the civil prison or arrested on account of any sum so disbursed. [S. 340.]

COMMENTARY.

Arrest.—Subsistence money must be paid into Court before the order for arrest can be made, Kastur Chand v. Raoji, 4 B. 65

Subsistence Money to be Paid in Advance.—Subsistence money for a month must be paid in advance, a similar payment must be received in advance every successive month pending the imprisonment; and that, if any such payment be not made, the prisoner is entitled to be released and further detention is illegal.—In re Kanoy Lall, Bourke, O. C 51, Aga Ali v Joydoyal, Bourke O. C. 52 See also Speyer v. Janssen, Bourke O. C. 28, In re Sumboo Chunder; In re Doorga, Bourke O. Ap 79 Subsistence money must be paid before the commencement of the month for which it is paid; Haladhar v. Ambika, 5 B L. R. Ap. 80

Arrest Before Judgment.—Where a defendant is arrested before judgment, his subsistence money is to be fixed in the same way as in the case of an arrest in execution of a decree; and if the plaintiff fails to pay the subsistence money fixed by the Court, the defendant is entitled to his discharge from prison —In the matter of Callachand Das, 1 Ind Jur N. S 327; Bourke O C 423

Proceedings on appearance of judgment-debtor in obedience to notice or after arrest.

40. (1) Where a judgment-debtor appears before the Court in obedience to a notice issued under rule 37, or is brought before the Court after being arrested in execution of a decree for the payment of money and it appears to the Court that the judgment-debtor is unable from poverty or other sufficient cause to pay the amount of the decree or, if that amount is payable by instalments, the amount of any instalment thereof, the Court may upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit, make an order disallowing the application for his arrest and detention, or directing his release, as the case may be.

(2) Before making an order under sub-rule (1), the Court may take into consideration any allegation of the decree-holder touching any of the following matters namely:—

(a) the decree being for a sum for which the judgment-debtor was bound in any fiduciary capacity to account ;

(b) the transfer, concealment or removal by the judgment debtor of any part of his property after the date of the institution of the suit in which the decree, was passed, or the commission by him after that date of any other act of bad faith in relation to his property, with object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree ;

(c) any undue preference given by the judgment-debtor to any of his other creditors ;

(d) refusal or neglect on the part of the judgment-debtor to pay the amount of the decree or some part thereof when he has, or since the date of the decree has had, the means of paying it ;

(e) the likelihood of the judgment-debtor absconding or leaving the jurisdiction of the Court with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree.

(3) While any of the matters mentioned in sub-rule (2) are being considered, the Court may, in its discretion, order the judgment-debtor to be detained in the civil prison, or leave him in the custody of an officer of the Court, or release him on his furnishing security, to the satisfaction of the Court, for his appearance when required by the Court.

(4) A judgment-debtor released under this rule may be re-arrested.

(5) Where the Court does not make an order under sub-rule (1), it shall cause the judgment-debtor to be arrested if he has not already been arrested and, subject to the other provisions of this Code, commit him to the civil prison. [S. 337-A.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to s. 337-A of the C. P. Code, 1882, with change of wording. It was added to the C P Code of 1882, from the Debtor's Act VI of 1888, (s. 4)

"May disallow arrest."—A judgment-debtor who is not able to get in his assets readily may be unable to escape arrest and imprisonment. But the Court is armed with sufficient power under this rule to prevent such a debtor from being unnecessarily harassed, Ponnuswami v Narayanaswami, 25 M. L J. 545: 21 I. C 293

After notice the judgment-debtor appeared and pleaded poverty. The Court after enquiry under this rule disallowed the objection and directed his immediate arrest and commitment to jail. If the cause is insufficient the Court is bound to order arrest; Gubboy v. Ram Doyal, 2 C. W. N. 588. Lunacy is a good cause for refusal of warrant for arrest. Bhanabhai v. Chotabhai, 22 B. 961.

Where a decree is passed against three persons, and the Court is satisfied that one of them is really unable to pay while the other two possess property, the Court may reject an application made by the decree-holder for the arrest of the judgment-debtor who is unable to pay; Lala Das v. Mina Mal, 4 L. L J. 266 79 I C. 551· A. I. R. 1922 L. 259

Insolvency.—An insolvent who has not inserted in his schedule a debt for which a decree is subsequently obtained is not protected from arrest in execution of such decree, merely because his property is in the hands of the receiver; Panna Lall v. Kanhaiya, 16 C. 85. There is nothing to prevent the Court from issuing a warrant of arrest against a judgment-debtor at the instance of one decree-holder pending an enquiry into the judgment-debtor's application for insolvency in execution of a decree of another decree-holder, Ganpat v Mahadeb, 22 B 731

Failure to Apply for Insolvency—Surety.—A judgment-debtor applied under s. 55 (4) and a person stood surety for his appearance on fixed date. Before the due date, the judgment-debtor applied under this rule instead of applying for insolvency The Court postponed its consideration to a date subsequent to the date finally fixed for his appearance; but on this date the judgment-debtor remained absent. Held that the surety was absolved from liability as the original date fixed for judgment-debtor's appearance was, no longer to be regarded as the date fixed for his appearance and no proceedings took place on that day, Bhagwan v Bhagat, 61 P. W. R. 1910

Transfer, Concealment, Removal or any other Act of Bad Faith.—The Code contemplates a case of active concealment, or removal of substantive property since the institution of the suit in which was passed the decree in execution of which the judgment-debtor was arrested or imprisoned, with intent to deprive the creditors of available assets for division, Suhrit Narain v. Raghunath, 7 A 445.

The words "bad faith" mean bad faith in respect of the debt for which he has been imprisoned and with regard to which the application has been made.—See Oriental Bank v. Mani Madhub, 3 B. L. R. Ap 14, In re Guru Das Bose, 7 B. L. R. Ap. 23; Butler v. Lloyd, 12 B. L. R. Ap. 12, Anonymous, 1 Ind Jur N. S. 8: see, however, Smith v. Boggs, 5 B L R Ap 22, where it has been held that the words "bad faith" meant bad faith not only in respect of the application but included bad faith on previous occasions.—In In re Soopersaud, 2 Ind. Jur. N. S 91, and In re Sub Chunder, 2 Ind. Jur N. S. 93-note, it was held that the acts of bad faith are not limited to acts of bad faith committed by the prisoner in his application for discharge, but included acts of bad faith in the manner of incurring his original liability. Acts of bad faith must be done wilfully.—Karim v Misri, 7 A 295

Acts of bad faith towards creditors just at the period at which the applicant was contemplating insolvency may be held to be a part of the matter of the application.—Bavachi Packi v. Pierce, Leslie and Co, 2 M. 219 See also Gopal Das v Bihari Lal, 17 A. 218, where it has been held that the expression "any other act of bad faith" not only means any act of bad faith which bears directly upon the conduct of the debtor in the matters leading up to his application for insolvency but also includes acts of bad faith committed by the applicant for declaration of insolvency antecedent to his application Followed in Gaya Din v Hira Lal, 26 A. 517

The bad faith, the reckless contracting of debts, the unfair preference of creditors, the transfer, removal or concealment of property, the making of false statements in the application, are all acts of misconduct that will debar the applicant from obtaining the relief and the protection he seeks.—Salamat Ali v Minahan, 4 A. 337

The test of good faith is whether the transaction is genuine or colourable; 29 B. 428 (434).

Undue Preference.—This clause (c) applies to cases where the transfer would under any enactment for the time being in force, be void, as a fraudulent preference, if the debtor were adjudged an insolvent As to when a transfer of property by a debtor may be avoided as a fraudulent preference, see s. 37 of the Pro Insolvency Act (III of 1907), and s 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882).

A debtor, who gives an unfair preference to one creditor by giving him a large proportion of his property, so as to reduce the aliquot share of the other creditors, acts fraudulently; Dadopa v. Vishnudas, 12 B 424. But in Brown v. Ferguson, 16 M 490 (following Butcher v. Stead, L. R. 7 E. and I. Ap 839), it has been held that a mortgage by the debtor to one of his creditors to secure a barred debt, since renewed, did not amount to an act of fraudulent preference within the meaning of this section. See also Joakim v Secretary of State, 3 A. 530, where it has been held that an assignment by a debtor of all his property to one of his creditors, did not amount to an "undue preference" within the meaning of this section.

In deciding whether or not a payment made to a particular creditor amounts to an unfair preference, the Courts may fairly refer to, and be guided by, the provisions of the Insolvent Act, which treats a transaction as an unfair preference only when it has occurred within a limited time before the insolvency proceedings.—In the matter of Hastie, 11 C. 451.

For the meaning of the word "creditor," see In the matter of Chunni Lal, 29 C. 503.

Refusal or Neglect to Pay the Amount of the Decree.—Reckless trading, although, unaccompanied by any legal or moral fraud, is a ground for suspending protection.—In re Baggot, Bourke Ins. 5.

A Judge would not be exercising a right discretion, if he refused relief in the case of persons, who, although knownig that they had no means of paying at the time the debt was contracted, yet honestly believed upon reasonable grounds that they would have the means of paying eventually.—Bavachi Pachi v. Pierce, Leslie and Co., 2 M. 219.

"Some part thereof" in cl. (d) refer to decree for payment of money generally and not only to instalment decrees; Cowie & Co. v Skidmore, 7 Bur. L T. 242.

Likelihood of the Judgment-debtor Absconding.—A person must go away from his place of business for the purpose of being absent in order that it may be impossible or difficult for his creditors to find him, and a mere retirement to the private part of the house would not necessarily be such departure.—In re Dhunput Singh, 20 C 787, 794

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order made under this rule disallowing an application by a decree-holder for the arrest and imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, such an order being appealable as a decree under s. 47; Raj Karni v Karm Ilahi, 1 L 77, Lala Das v. Mina Mal, 4 L L J. 266 · 79 I C. 551 A I R 1922 L 259 Similarly, an appeal lies from an order granting an application for release under this rule, Abdul Rahaman v. Mahomed Kasim, 21 M 29.

ATTACHMENT OF PROPERTY.

Examination of judgment-debtor as to his property.

41. Where a decree is for the payment of money the decree-holder may apply to the Court for an order that—

(a) the judgment-debtor, or

(b) in the case of a corporation any officer thereof, or

(c) any other person, be orally examined as to whether any or what debts are owing to the judgment-debtor and whether the judgment-debtor has any and what other property or means of satisfying the decree ; and the Court may make an order for the attendance and examination of such judgment-debtor, or officer or other person, and for the production of any books or document. [Cf. S. 267.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—This rule has been substituted for s. 267 of the C. P. Code of 1882, which has been recast and changed The main distinctions between this rule and the old section, are (1) that this rule refers to a decree for payment of money, but the language of the old section covered all sorts of decrees; (2) this rule provides for the examination of the judgment-debtor or any other person at the instance of the decree-holder but under the old section the Court had power to act on its own motion.

Object.—The object of this rule is to obtain discovery for purposes of execution, to avoid unnecessary troubles in obtaining satisfaction of money decrees But orders for discovery or personal examination may operate harshly and ought not to be made unless the Court is satisfied about the bona fide of the application and urgent necessity; National Bank Ld. v. Guznavi, 43 C. 285 34 I C. 287 (on appeal; see 20 C W. N 562).

"Any other person."—This rule is applicable to all the property of the judgment-debtor out of which the decree can be satisfied either by delivery in obedience to the decree or by sale. A person may be examined in respect of property which is prima facie the property of the judgment-debtor even though such person may allege that he is a mortgagee in possession of the attached property.—In re Premji Trikum Das, 17 B 514; see also 16 B. 152

Production.—On an application by decree-holder for execution of decree by attachment of debts, the Court may require the production in Court of judgment-debtor's books of account; Ajoodhya v. Middleton, 3 N. W. P. 334.

Attachment in case of decree for rent or mesne profits or other matter, amount of which to be subsequently determined.

42. Where a decree directs an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits or any other matter, the property of the judgment-debtor may, before the amount due from him has been ascertained, be attached, as in the case of an ordinary decree for the payment of money. [S. 255.]

COMMENTARY.

Attachment After Preliminary Decree.—A decree for possession and mesne profits to be ascertained after enquiry is a decree for money, and there is no irregularity in the decree-holder applying for attachment of the judgment-debtor's property, pending the ascertainment of mesne-profits — Sharoda Moyee v. Wooma Moyee, 8 W. R. 9: folld. in 18 Cal. 188; refd. to in 30 M. 255.

If the judgment-debtor dies after preliminary decree and before final decree, his representatives will not be bound unless they were brought on the record at the time of the ascertainment of the mesne-profits; Radha Prosad v. Lal Saheb, 13 A. 53 P. C.

43. Where the property to be attached is moveable property, other than agricultural produce, in the possession of the judgment-debtor, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the attaching officer shall keep the property in his own custody or in the custody of one of his subordinates, and shall be responsible for the due custody thereof:

Attachment of moveable property, other than agricultural produce, in possession of judgment-debtor.

Provided that, when the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody is likely to exceed its value, the attaching officer may sell it at once. [S. 269, Paras. 1 and 2, and S. 128 (2) (B).]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to paras. 1 and 2 of section 269, C. P. Code, 1882, with some additions and alterations. The words, "other than agricultural produce," have been substituted for the words " other than the property mentioned in the first proviso to s 266," which occurred in para. 1 of the old section.

Moveable Property.—Under the present Code moveable property includes growing crops. See sec. 2, cl. (18); but money is not " moveable property."—Maung Lan Bye v. Maung Po Nyun, 1924 Rang. 21.

Property Outside Jurisdiction.—The attachment under this rule can be effected only when the property is situate within the jurisdiction of the Court issuing attachment; Begg Dunlop & Co. v. Jagannath, 89 C. 104, 110.

Actual Seizure.—A warrant of attachment was executed by affixing it to the outer door of a warehouse in which goods belonging to the judgment-debtor were stored. The door was not broken open nor was physical possession taken of the goods inside. Held that this, in effect, was actual seizure within the meaning of this section.—Multanchand v. Bank of Madras, 27 M. 346.

" Shall be responsible for the due custody thereof."—An attaching officer deputed to attach moveable properties before attachment having attached the properties, entrusted them to a third person without the permission of the Court. The property was lost. Held that the attaching officer must make good the loss and not the third person entrusted with the property, and the Court had power under Or. XXI, r 43 to make the order; Badri Prasad v Chokhelal, 24 A. L. J. 561: 48 A. 510: A. I. R. 1926 A. 406. But where a person to whom goods attached were made over for safe custody by the attaching officer, on his executing a bond undertaking to produce them in Court, fails to produce the goods when required by the Court, the decree-holder is not competent to proceed against the surety under s 145; Raja of Venkatagiri v Sura, 39 M. L. J. 472: 60 I. C. 134. The Allahabad High Court, in Madho Prasad v. Pearey Lal, 19 A L. J. 217 · 62 I C 719, held that the surety could be proceeded against under s. 145

44. Where the property to be attached is agricultural produce, the attachment shall be made by affixing a copy of the warrant of attachment—

Attachment of agricultural produce.

(a) where such produce is a growing crop, on the land on which such crop has grown, or

(b) where such produce has been cut or gathered, on the threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like or fodder-stack on or in which it is deposited, and another copy on the outer door or on some other conspicuous part of the house in which the judgment-debtor ordinarily resides or, with the leave of the Court, on the outer door or on some other conspicuous part of the house in which he carries on business or personally works for gain or in which he is known to have last resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain ; and the produce shall thereupon be deemed to have passed into the possession of the Court. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

" Growing crops " are moveable property, see the definition in s. 2 (13). The definition of moveable property, as given in the present Code, has rendered the following cases obsolete and inoperative; 11 M. 193, 5 B. L. R. 194; 13 W R 275, 14 A 30, 15 A. 394, and 6 B. 592.

Agricultural Produce.—As to exemption, see s. 61.

45. (1) Where agricultural produce is attached, the Court shall make such arrangements for the custody thereof as it may deem sufficient and ; for the purpose of enabling the Court to make such arrangements, every application for the attachment of a growing crop shall specify the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered.

Provisions as to agricultural produce under attachment.

(2) Subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the Court in this behalf either in the order of attachment or in any subsequent order, the judgment-debtor may tend, cut, gather and store the produce and do any other act necessary for maturing or preserving it ; and if the judgment-debtor fails to do all or any of such acts, the decree-holder may with the permission of the Court and subject to the like conditions, do all or any of them either by himself or by any person appointed by him in this behalf, and the costs incurred by the decree-holder shall be recoverable from the judgment-debtor as if they were included in, or formed part of the decree.

(3) Agricultural produce attached as a growing crop shall not be deemed to have ceased to be under attachment or to require re-attachment merely because it has been severed from the soil.

(4) Where an order for the attachment of a growing crop has been made at a considerable time before the crop is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered, the Court may suspend the execution of the order for such time as it thinks fit, and may, in its discretion, make a further order prohibiting the removal of the crop pending the execution of the order of attachment.

(5) A growing crop which from its nature does not admit of being stored shall not be attached under this rule at any time less than twenty days before the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered.

46. (1) In the case of—

Attachment of debt, share and other property not in possession of judgment-debtor.

(a) a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument ;

(b) a share in the capital of a corporation;

(c) other moveable property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, except property deposited in or in the custody of, any Court.

the attachment shall be made by a written order prohibiting—

(i) in the case of the debt, the creditor from recovering the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof until the further order of the Court ;

(ii) in the case of the share the person in whose name the share may be standing from transferring the same or receiving any dividend thereon ;

(iii) in the case of the other moveable property except as aforesaid, the person in possession of the same from giving it over to the judgment-debtor.

(2) A copy of such order shall be affixed on some conspicuous part of the court-house, and another copy shall be sent, in the case of the debt, to be debtor, in the case of the share, to the proper officer of the corporation, and, in the case of the other moveable property (except as aforesaid), to the person in possession of the same.

(3) A debtor prohibited under clause (i) of sub-rule (1) may pay the amount of his debt into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same. [S. 268.]

COMMENTARY.

"Debt."—The term 'debt' in this rule is used in its legal sense of a debt either due or accruing due. An annuity not yet due is not a debt and cannot be attached; Padmanund v. Rama Prosad, 14 C. L. J. 127 A debt is a sum of money which is now payable or will become payable in future by reason of a present obligation—per Lindley, L. J., in Webb v. Stenton, 11 Q. B. D (1883) 518. See also Bancharam v. Adyanath, 36 C. 936. 13 C W N 966 An existing debt though payable at a future date, is attachable; Tafazzul v. Raghunath, 14 M. I. A. 40, 50 A sum payable upon a contingency however, is not a debt and does not become a debt until the contingency happens. Thus when A is bound under a deed to pay to B a monthly allowance during the lifetime of the latter, there can not be a valid attachment of any portion of the allowance by prohibitory order issued to A of a date anterior to the time when the same falls due to B; Haridas v Baroda, 27 C. 38; See also Padmanund v. Rama Prasad, 14 C L J 127.

Attachment of Debt Payable by Person Outside Jurisdiction.—It is not competent to a Court, in execution of a decree for money to attach under this rule, at the instance of the decree-holder, a debt payable to the judgment-debtor outside the jurisdiction, by a person not resident within the jurisdiction of the Court. Thus J in execution of a decree against H in the Burdwan Court applied there for an order of attachment of Rs. 6,750 alleged to be due to H from a firm in Calcutta and a prohibitory order was issued upon the said firm—Held that the debt could not be attached by the Burdwan Court; Begg Dunlop & Co. v. Jagannath, 39 C 104 (Obiter dictum in Re Hollick, 2 B. L. R. 108: 10 W. R. 447, not followed).

Effect of Attachment.—This rule does not mean that, while a debt is under attachment, the person to whom the debt was originally owing should be debarred from bringing a suit in respect of it. What it prohibits is the recovery of the debt and the payment of it by the debtor to the creditor. An order of attachment under this rule is not an injunction or order staying a suit within the meaning of section 15 of the Limitation Act.—Shib Singh v. Sita Ram, 13 A. 76. Followed in Collector of Etawah v. Beti Maharani, 14 A. 162 (affirmed by the P. C. in 17 A. 198, P. C.). See also, Musst. Sheoraja v. Jagan, 49 I. C. 88.

An order of attachment under this rule only operates so as to give the judgment-creditor certain rights in execution. It does not operate, when those rights are not exercised before the presentation of an insolvency, so as to create in favour of the judgment-creditor a title which prevails against that of the Official Assignee, under the vesting order in insolvency made after the order of attachment.—Krishnasawmy v. Official Assignee, 26 M. 673.

An attaching creditor is not in the same position as an assignee for value without notice of a prior assignment but stands in respect of prior assignments in no better position than his judgment-debtor; Megi Hansraj v Ramji, 8 B H. C. 169.

Requisites to Make a Debt Attachable.—It is essential that the relation of creditor and debtor should exist between the jugdment-debtor and the garnishee (judgment-debtor's debtor) and two practical tests are applied: (1) Could the judgment-debtor sue the garnishee for the amount, and recover it? (2) Would the debt vest in the judgment-debtor's trustee in the case of bankruptcy.

Where the debt is not due, there is nothing to be attached, Webb v. Stenton, 11 Q. B. D. 518 C. A.

Annuity.—Annuities payable by trustees are attachable, Nash v. Pease, 47 L. J. Q. B 766, but the money must have reached their hands and be also payable, Webb v Stenton, 11 Q B D. 518. Annuity not yet due is not a debt; Padmanand v Rama Prosad, 14 C L J 129.

Right to Receive Debt or Rent.—A right to receive a debt or to collect rent can be attached under this rule, Basanayya v. Syed Abbas, 24 M. 26 Dissented from in Chindambara v. Ramasamy, 27 M 67.

Rent due can be attached, Mitchell v Lee, (1867) L. R 2 Q B. 259. But it is not attachable unless it becomes payable by the tenant, Barnett v. Eastman, (1898) 67 L J. Q B. 517

Monthly Allowance.—Monthly allowance payable to a judgment-debtor is a debt, and is attachable under this section —Maharani Dambar Koeri v. Rai Sham Kissen, 9 C. W. N. 703

Debt Payable by Instalments.—A garanishee order can be made where the debt is payable by instalments, for payment of the accruing instalments as they become payable from time to time; Tapp v Jones, (1875) L. R. 10 Q B 591.

Decree.—A decree of Revenue Court stands in the position of an ordinary debt, and may be dealt with under this rule.—Aulia Bibi v. Abu Jafar, 21 A. 402 (7 Bom L P 318, 15 W R. 34, 2 A. 290 referred to).

Attachment of Debt Already Paid by Cheque.—If the attachment is made after a cheque for money due on contracts has been delivered, the payment of the cheque cannot be stopped —Bhagwan Das v Abdul Hussein,) 3 B. 46.

Where the judgment-debtor has been paid by cheque which is stopped by the garnishee upon his being served with a garnishee order nisi, there is an attachable debt; Cohen v Hale, (1871) 3 Q B D 371; but not if the garnishee does not stop the cheque nor is he bound to do so, Elwell v. Jackson, (1885) 1 Times L. R. 454 C A

Debt Not Immediately Payable.—An attaching creditor can attach any debt though not immediately payable. Money deposited by judgment-debtor as security for the due performance of a contract can be attached, though it is not payable to judgment-debtor till the completion of the contract and may even be liable to forfeiture; S. B. Das v. Muthu Chetty, 56 I. C. 948.

Joint Decree Against Two or More Persons.—A judgment-creditor who has got a joint decree against two or more persons, can attach a debt owing to any of his judgment-debtors (Miller v. Mynn, 1859, 28 L. J. Q. B. 524) by a third person, but not apparently by one judgment-debtor; Chapman v. Callis, (1862) 6 L. T. 282.

Attachment of Mortgage Debt.—It was held that if the property to be attached is a mortgage debt, where the mortgagee is not in possession nor is entitled to possession, it is attachable under this rule and not under r. 54; Aulia Bibi v. Abu Jafar, 21 A. 405. The question was considered in a recent case in Madras and it has been held that the words "debt not secured by a negotiable instrument" are undoubtedly wide enough to cover a debt secured by a hypothecation bond or a simple mortgage and for the purpose of execution, a debt due to a judgment-debtor under a hypothecation bond is moveable property within the meaning of this rule and the procedure as to moveable property is applicable. Or. XXI, r. 54 is not applicable to such cases though the General Clauses Act and the T. P. Act speak of such debt as an interest in immoveable property; Nataraja v. South Indian Bank of Tinnevelly, 37 M. 51 (Sami Ayyar v. Krishnaswami, 10 M. 169 and the view of the majority in Appaswami v. Scott, 9 M. 5, not followed). This decision follows and is in agreement with the earlier decisions in Dependra v. Ruplal, 12 C. 546; Kashinath v. Sadasiv, 20 C. 805; Baijnath v. Benoyendra, 9 C. W. N. 5; Baldev Dhanrup v. Ram Chandra, 19 B. 121; Tarvadi v. Bai Kashi, 26 B. 305; Muniyappa v. Subrahmaniya, 18 M. 437 (12 C. 586: 20 C. 805 approved), Karimunnunnissa v. Phul Chand, 15 A. 134; Satya Charan v. Madhub, 9 C. W. N. 693; Lal Umrao v. Lal Singh, 22 A. L. J. 840: 80 I. C. 890: A. I. R. 1924 A. 796. The same view has been taken in Chullile v. Nambiar, 27 M. L. J. 239, where it has been held (following 37 M. 51) that the attachment of a mortgage debt should be made under this rule. The fact of the mortgagee being in possession, actual or constructive of the mortgaged property makes no difference. There is diversity of judicial opinion on the question, and in another series of cases it has been held that a debt secured by a mortgage of immoveable property cannot be sold in execution under the provisions of the Code applicable to moveable property; but such interest is immoveable property for the purpose of attachment and sale, see Srinath v. Gopal, 9 C. 511: 12 C. L. R. 445, Parashram v. Gobind, 21 B. 226, Appaswami v. Scott, 9 M. 5; Sheo Charan v. Sheo Shewak, 18 A. 469; Sewa Ram v. Dheru, 18 I. C. 838; 125 P. L. R. 1913. It would appear that the weight of opinion is in favour of the first view. See also, Sha Mahammad Yusuf v. Lachminarain, 50 I. C. 157.

When a debt which is not secured by a negotiable instrument is attached under this section a claim may be preferred by a third party and may be investigated under r. 58; Chidambara v. Ramasamy, 27 M. 67.

It was held under the corresponding section in the Code of 1877 (s. 268, under which an attachment could not remain in force for more than six months) that bonds on which recovery will be time-barred before the date on which a sale can be legally made, cannot be made available for satisfaction of judgment-creditor's debt, by a Court of Small Causes; Narsing v. Tulsiram, 2 B. 558.

As to form of prohibitory order see App. E., No. 10, First Schedule.

See notes to r. 53, under the heading "Attachment of Mortgage Debt."

Usufructuary Mortgage Debt.—In the case of an usufructuary mortgage there is no debt payable by the mortgagor to mortgagee which can be attached under this rule. The procedure should be by attachment of the interest in immoveable property under r. 54 and sale thereafter: Manilal v Motibhai, 35 B. 288 (26 B 305 explained)

Shares.—A deed of transfer of shares in a Company which does not comply with the formalities prescribed by the Indian Companies Act and the Articles of Association of the Company, is invalid as against a person who has purchased the shares in execution of a decree against the share-holder; Nagabhushanam v. Rama Chandra, 45 B. 537: 70 I. C. 659: A. I. R. 1923 M 241.

"Other moveable property not in possession of judgment-debtor."—This rule provides for the attachment, in execution of a money-decree, of moveable property belonging to the judgment-debtor in the possession of a third person, while r 52, applies to a case where the property of the judgment-debtor is deposited in or in the custody of any Court or public officer.—Pudmanund v Chundi Dat, 1 C. W N. 170

Money deposited as security for performance of duties of servant may be attached subject to the employer's lien, but cannot be sold or realised until the deposit is at the disposal of the judgment-debtor freed from the lien; Karuthan v Subramanya, 9 M 203

Money deposited with third person for a special purpose which fails, is attachable in his hands, Stumore v Campbell, 1892, 1 Q. B 314 C. A. Money standing at bank to judgment-debtor's credit is attachable; see Rogers v. Whiteley, 1892 A. C. 118. Money placed on deposit at a bank is not an attachable debt until notice of withdrawal has been given; Cowley v. Taylor, 1908, 124 L. T J 569. Money is not attachable in the hands of the police, which was found upon a judgment-debtor when arrested, who is afterwards convicted, Jervis v. Peel, 1815, 1 Times L R 306

For form of prohibitory order, see App E., No 5 First Schedule.

Where Garnishee Denies Debt.—He cannot be asked to pay; Kishen v. Bhowya, 18 W R 40

If the property of which the sale is sought, is debt, and the Court receives notice from the alleged debtor that no debt exists, the Court should satisfy itself as to the existence or otherwise of the debt, and, if it comes to the conclusion that no debt exists, should abstain from proceeding to sale —Hari Lal Amthabhai v Abhesang, 4 B 323

When a debt alleged to be due by a third party (garnishee) to judgment-debtor has been attached by a prohibitory order, the Court may make an order to pay the debt to the judgment-creditor in case he admits the debt; but if he denies the debt, there is no other course open to the judgment-creditor than to have it sold or to have a Receiver appointed Toolsa v. Antone, 11 B. 448, Maharaja of Benares v. Patraj Kunwar, 28 A. 262; (1905) A. W. N. 277, Nanak Chand v. Chheda Lal, 97 I. C. 467; Saw Yin v. Hocktoo, 4 R. 100: A. I. R. 1926 R. 175: 97 I. C. 247.

"May pay into Court"—Where Attached Debt is Not Paid into Court.—A sued B and obtained attachment before judgment of a debt on the allegation that B was the real creditor. The debt was ostensibly due from C to D. The Court issued a prohibitory order on C and called him to pay the money into Court which he did, on a conditional order that it would be retained till the adjudication of the question whether B or D was beneficially interested therein. A obtained an ex parte decree against B and withdrew the money. D subsequently sued C and got judgment. C now sued A to recover the money withdrawn. It was incumbent on the Court to enquire as to who was the real creditor of C and it had full authority to compel the defendant (A) to bring back the money, Harinath v. Haradas, 20 C. W. N. 188: 23 C. L. J. 163.

A voluntary payment by a debtor of his own choice and at his own risk, into a Court of inferior jurisdiction with full knowledge of the attachment by a higher Court will not discharge him, Ramasamy v. Chakrapany 17 M. L. J. 488.

Where A has been ordered to pay money into Court, a third party cannot be compelled by garnishee proceedings to pay into Court a debt owing from him to A, In re Greer, (1893) 2 Ch. 217.

Where a debt attached under this rule was not paid into Court: the Court cannot call on the person to pay or to show cause, why he should not pay his debt into Court. The Court is bound to satisfy itself that a debt is due; the debt then must be sold and delivery made; Siriah v. Muckanachary, 10 M. 191.

It has been held in Bombay that the Court may make an order for payment of the debt into Court which the person is to obey as also an order for payment to the judgment-creditor; Toolsa Goolal v. Antone, 11 B. 488.

Payment out of Court.—Where a debt, attached under this rule was paid out of Court to the only person who, had the money due been paid into Court as required would have been entitled to withdraw the said money from Court, and such payment was certified to the Court, it was held that this amounted to a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this rule, Mida Husain v. Moula Bukhsh, 21 A. 145.

Garnishee's Right to Set-off.—If a cross-debt is due to the garnishee at the date of the attachment, from the judgment-debtor, the garnishee has a right of set-off; and the equity can be set up without payment of Court fee; Tayaballi v. Atmaram, 38 Bom. 631, 636 (Tapp v. Jones, L. R. 10 Q. B. 591, 593 followed).

Service of Prohibitory Order.—When the service of the prohibitory order was effected by affixing it to the wall of the dwelling-house of the person on whom it was intended to serve, it was not a sufficient service

It ought to have been served by delivery, or by registered letter.—Gobind v. Kherode, 10 B. L. R. Ap. 12. Until notice is given, the debtor is bound to pay the debt to the creditor, and it is no part of the duty of the debtor to make enquiries whether his creditor is or is not entitled to receive money.—Thakoor v. Luchmeeput, 7 W. R. 10

Notice to Debtor.—Where the decree-holder attached certain money held in deposit by him on behalf of the judgment-debtor, no notice on the judgment-debtor is necessary as the property was not in his possession: Rajab Ali v Upper India Cowper Mills Co., 15 O. C. 289.

" Copy of order shall be affixed in Court house."—Omission to comply with this invalidates an attachment as against a subsequent assignment: Satya Charan v. Madhab, 9 C. W. N. 693

Procedure where Debtor of Attached Debt Admits Liability but does Not Pay.—The procedure to be followed when a debtor who admits he owes money to a judgment-debtor, but does not pay it into Court is indicated in Or. XXI, r. 46 (a), and was added to the Code by the Chief Court of Lower Burma. All that can be done is to warn him that if he fails to pay the amount due by him, he may be subjected to a suit, 33 I. C. 169.

Attachment of share in moveables.

47. Where the property to be attached consists of the share or interest of the judgment-debtor in moveable property belonging to him and another as co-owners, the attachment shall be made by a notice to the judgment-debtor prohibiting him from transferring the share or interest or charging it in any way. [New.]

This is a new rule

Attachment of salary or allowances of public officer or servant of railway company or local authority.

48. (1) Where the property to be attached is the salary or allowances of a public officer or of a servant of a railway company or local authority, the Court, whether the judgment-debtor or the disbursing officer is or is not within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction, may order that the amount shall, subject to the provisions of section 60, be withheld from such salary or allowances either in one payment or by monthly instalments as the Court may direct; and, upon notice of the order to such officer as the Government, may by notification in the Gazette of India or in the local official Gazette, as the case may be, appoint in this behalf, the officer or other person whose duty it is to disburse such salary or allowances shall withhold and remit to the Court the amount due under the order, or the monthly instalments, as the case may be.

(2) Where the attachable proportion of such salary or allowances is already being withheld and remitted to a Court in pursuance of a previous and unsatisfied order of attachment, the officer appointed by the Government in this behalf shall forthwith return the subsequent order to the Court issuing it with a full statement of all the particulars of the existing attachment.

(3) Every order made under this rule, unless it is returned in accordance with the provisions of sub-rule (2), shall without further notice or other process, bind the Government or the railway company or local authority, as the case may be, while the judgment-debtor is within the local limits to which this Code for the time being extends and while he is beyond those limits if he is in receipt of any salary or allowances payable out of His Majesty's Indian revenues or the funds of a railway company carrying on business in any part of British India or local authority in British India ; and the Government or the railway company or local authority, as the case may be, shall be liable for any sum paid in contravention of this rule [S. 268, last three paras.]

COMMENTARY.

Attachment of Salary of Public Officer, etc.—This rule is not altogether new It was embodied in the provisions contained in the last three paras. of s. 268, C P. Code, 1882, with considerable additions and alterations. It is on the lines of s 151 (3) of the Army Act (44 and 45 Vict., c 58), which applied only to officers of the Army It has been made applicable to all public officers and servants of Railway companies or public authorities.

Under the law as existed before the Code of 1908, it was held that the salary of a public officer or railway servant, could not be attached, unless the disbursing officer was within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree; see Rango v. Bal Krishna, 12 B. 44. Saiyad Khan v. Davies, 28 B. 198; Abdul Gofur v. Albyn, 30 C. 713: 7 C. W. N 821 (6 A 48 and 2 C L R 30 followed). This led to considerable difficulties in the execution of such decrees, and in most cases yielded no result although the expense was great. The Legislature has by this rule provided a less expensive and at the same time a more effective remedy

The Court has now full power to attach the salary of a public officer or of a railway servant, whether the disbursing officer or the judgment-debtor is or is not within the local limits of its jurisdiction. It overrides the decisions noted above.

This rule as well as r. 3 is an exception to the general rule that a Court cannot attach the property of a judgment-debtor situate beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree. See Begg Dunlop & Co. v Jaganath, 39 C. 100, noted under r. 46

The salary of a public officer is to be attached under this rule and not under r. 52 which does not allow of an anticipatory attachment of money expected to reach the hands of a public officer, but applies only to moneys actually in his hands.—Tulaji v. Balabhai, 23 B. 39.

It does not apply to the wages of a domestic servant.—Ayyavayyar v. Virasami Mudali, 21 M. 393.

Where money deposited with a Railway Company by one of its servants as a guarantee for the due performance of the duties, is attached by a judgment-creditor of such servant, the creditor is not entitled to have his decree satisfied out of the deposit but was entitled to a stop-order and also to payment of the interest, if any, due by the Company on such deposit to the servant.—Karuthan v. Subramanya, 9 M. 203.

Compulsory deposit under the Provident Funds Act (IX of 1897) is not liable to be attached under this rule.—Veerachand v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co.; 29 B. 259.

Extent of Attachment.—See s. 60 (h), (i).

Sub-rule (2).—In case of previous attachment, the return of the subsequent order suggests that there can be no rateable distribution of salary already under attachment. The attachable portion can be attached again, after the satisfaction of the decree in execution of which it was attached before.

It has however been held that where the salary of a Government officer is once attached and then another attachment takes place, the party attaching subsequently is entitled to claim rateable distribution under s. 73 because it amounts to assets within the meaning of that section. There is no inconsistency between the explanation to s. 64 and clause (2) of this rule; Velchand v. Nusson, 14 Bom. L R. 633.

Sub-rule (3)—indicates that if the judgment-debtor lives beyond the limits of British India, and receives salary or emoluments from the Indian revenues or from the funds of a Railway Company in British India, they will also be available and unless the order is returned in accordance with the provisions of sub-rule (2) it will bind the Government or the Company.

When an officer commanding, refuses to comply with an order under this rule, the Civil Court should proceed to recover from Government the sums which should have been paid from judgment-debtor's pay leaving the Government to settle up as it pleases with its officer and the judgment-debtor; Oakes & Co Ltd v Discarcie, 5 I. C 802: 10 P R. 1910. No order can be made against Government without bringing it on the record. Therefore Government money cannot be attached on an application in which the debtor alone is impleaded; Ntadar v. Biddulph, 14 I C. 737: 98 P. R. 1912.

Attachment of partnership property.

49. (1) Save as otherwise provided by this rule, property belonging to a partnership shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree other than a decree passed against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such.

(2) The Court may, on the application of the holder of a decree against a partner, make an order charging the interest of such partner in the partnership property and profits with payment of the amount due under the decree, and may, by the same or a subsequent order, appoint a receiver of the share of such partner in the profits (whether already declared or accruing) and of any other money which may be coming to him in respect of the partnership, and direct accounts and inquiries and make an order for the sale of such interest or other orders as might have been directed or, made if a charge had been made in favour of the decree-holder by such partner, or as the circumstances of the case may require.

(3) The other partner or parters shall be at liberty at any time to redeem the interest charged or, in the case of a sale being directed, to purchase the same.

(4) Every application for an order under sub-rule (2) shall be served on the judgment-debtor and on his partners or such of them as are within British India.

(5) Every application made by any partner of the judgment-debtor under sub-rule (3) shall be served on the decree-holder and on the judgment-debtor, and on such of the other partners as do not join in the application and as are within British India.

(6) Service under sub-rule (4) or sub-rule (5) shall be deemed to be service on all the partners, and all orders made on such applications shall be similarly served. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new. Sub-rules (1), (2), (3) have been taken from s 23, English Partnership Act, 1890 (53 and 54 Vict., c. 39), with variations, and the rest from Or. XLVI, rr 1-A and 1-B of the English Rules

" Shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree, etc."—This rule provides that no execution can issue against any partnership property except on a decree passed against the firm or against the partners of the firm as such; Karimbhai v Conservator of Forests, 4 B. 222; but the decree-holder of a partner in a firm can under sub-rule (2) apply for an order charging the interest of such partner and for the appointment of a receiver. The share of a partner in partnership business is liable to attachment; Jagat v Iswar Chandra, 20 C 693.

" Against the partners in the firm as such."—These words in sub rule (1) do not occur in the English Act They are added to make it clear that this rule is applicable even if the decree is passed not against the firm but the partners as such Execution under this rule can therefore issue only when the decree is against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such. But a judgment-creditor of a partner in a firm may apply for an order charging that partner's interest.

Decree Against Individual Partner.—A decree against an individual partner can be made; such a decree is contemplated by Or XXI, r. 49,

C. P. Code, and Court can also direct accounts to be taken; Krishna v. Sanyas, 23 C. W N. 500: 29 C. L. J 280.

"Direct accounts."—The discretion given to direct accounts should only be exercised under special circumstances, e.g., with a view to dissolution; Brown Janson & Co v. Hutchinson & Co, 1895, 2 Q C 126.

Execution of decree against firm.

50. (1) Where a decree has been passed against a firm, execution may be granted—

(a) against any property of the partnership;

(b) against any person who has appeared in his own name under rule 6 or rule 7 of order XXX, or who has admitted on the pleadings that he is, or who has been adjudged to be, a partner;

(c) against any person who has been individually served as a partner with a summons and has failed to appear:

Provided that nothing in this sub-rule shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the provisions of section 247 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.

(2) Where the decree-holder claims to be entitled to cause the decree to be executed against any person other than such a person as is referred to in sub-rule (1), clauses (b) and (c) as being a partner in the firm, he may apply to the Court which passed the decree for leave, and where the liability is not disputed such Court may grant such leave, or where such liability is disputed, may order that the liability of such person be tried and determined in any manner in which any issue in a suit may be tried and determind.

(3) Where the liability of any person has been tried and determined under sub-rule (2), the order made thereon shall have the same force and be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise as if it were a decree.

(4) Save as against any property of the partnership, a decree against a firm shall not release, render liable or otherwise affect any partner therein unless he has been served with a summons to appear and answer. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds with Or. XLVIII-A, r. 8 of the English Rules.

"Where a decree has been passed against a firm."—Execution under this rule can only be granted where a decree has been passed against a firm in the firm's name.

Sub-rule (1).—Execution under this rule may be granted against the partnership property or against the partners themselves In the latter case, their separate property will be liable. Where decree has been passed against a firm, execution will be granted as a matter of course against a person referred to in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-rule (1), but where the decree-holder claims to execute it against any person other than those mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) as being a partner, he is enabled by sub-rule (2) to apply for leave, and that sub-rule provides the procedure then to be applied; Jagat Chandra v. Gunny Hajac, 53 C. 214. 91 I C. 824 A. I R. 1926 C. 271.

Where a judgment is against a firm, execution may issue only against any property of the partnership, so far as partners, who are not individually served and those who have not appeared, are concerned; Shaib Thambi v Hamid, 2 M. W. N. 534.

In a suit against a firm, the names of the partners were not disclosed in the plaint, but summons was served by order of Court on B as a partner of the firm. A decree was passed against the firm—Held that execution could be proceeded with against B under sub-rule (1), cl. (c); Baishnab Charan v. Bank of Bengal, 19 C. L. J. 581 Per BEACHCROFT, J.—Sub-rule (2) is only applicable in the absence of the conditions in sub-rule (1).

But a decree against a firm as such will not affect a partner who has not been served with summons to appear and answer so far as his other property is concerned —Jivraj v. Bhagaban Das, 68 I. C. 627: 1923 B. 66.

Sub-rule (2)—Execution by Leave.—Sub-rule (2) applies to the case of persons against whom a decree-holder seeks to execute the decree other than the persons mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-rule (1). Clauses (b) and (c) refer to person who have appeared or who have been individually served as partners and who have failed to appear. The intention of sub-rule (2) is that when an application for leave mentioned in the sub-rule is made, it should be on notice to the person who is alleged to be liable as a partner; he is to be served with a summons and called upon to answer the application. Then if the Court finds that the liability is not disputed, the Court may grant leave to execute the decree against the person who does not dispute the liability. If the person who is sought to be made liable as a partner, having been served with the summons and having appeared to answer, disputes his liability, then the issue is to be tried in any manner in which any issue in a suit may be tried and determined. "In my opinion the meaning of sub-rules (2) and (4) is that a decree obtained against the firm cannot be forced except as to partnership property against a person alleged to be a partner, and against whom an application has been made under sub-rule (2), unless he has been served with a summons to appear and answer the application and has had an opportunity of disputing his liability as a partner if he desires to do so."—Per Sanderson, C. J., in Jagat Chand v. Gunny Hajee, 53 C 214: 91 I. C. 824: A. I. R. 1926 C. 271. The decree-holder, however is not entitled to cause the decree to be executed against a partner who left the firm to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit Leave cannot be granted in such case, in view of the proviso to Or. XXX, r. 3. If there has been a dissolution to the knowledge of the plaintiff, he cannot make an out-going partner liable unless he serves the writ upon him. If he omits to do this, and applies under this rule for leave to issue execution on the ground that he was a partner when the debt was contracted, the Court will refuse to issue execution against such partner because he was not made liable by being served with the writ; Wigram v. Cox, 1894, 1 Q. B. 792. The wording of sub-rule (2) is wide enough to cover the case of a deceased partner; Jivraj v. Bhagvandas, 24 Bom. L. R. 1037: 68 I. C. 627: A. I. R. 1923 B 66. In such a case a combined notice under sub-rule (2) and Or. XXI, r. 22 may be given; Jagat v. Gunny, 53 C. 214. A I. R. 1926 Cal. 271

R. 50 (2) applies only where members of partnership who have not been impleaded as such are sought to be arrested in execution of decree against the firm; Bank of Bengal v. Ramanadhan, 28 I C. 260: 1915 M. W. N. 180.

Representatives of a Partner Dying Before Institution of Suit can be Proceeded against in Execution of such Decree.—Where a decree is obtained against the firm in a suit brought against the firm, the legal representatives of a person who was a partner in such firm at the time when the cause of action arose, but who died before the institution of the suit, can be proceeded against in execution of such decree under Or. XXI, r. 50 (2): Firm of Gokaldas Khataoo v. Lachmandas, A I. R 192! Sind 130 F. B

"Execution may be granted."—As to subsequent proceedings, see Or XXX, rr 6-8. Where judgment is recovered by a firm suing in the firm's name, and afterwards one partner dies, the surviving partner may issue execution by leave; Davis v Andrews, W. N 84 (94)

"Against any person who has appeared, etc."—As to the effect of entry of appearance, see Or XXX, rr 6-8

"Has failed to appear."—Where one person is trading as a firm, execution cannot issue against him under cl. (c) unless he has been individually served (either personally or by substituted service) and the judgment in default is based upon such service or leave has been obtained under this rule. See Or XXX, r. 10

"Claims to be entitled to cause the decree to be executed."—See notes under the heading "EXECUTION BY LEAVE"

Minor Partner.—Where a decree has been passed against a firm having a minor partner who is admitted to the benefits of a partnership, execution may be granted against the property of the firm including the share of such minor partner in the partnership property, but it cannot be executed against the separate property of the minor, see Sanyasi v Krishnadhan, 49 I A 108. 49 C. 560: A I R 1922 C 237

Sub-rule (4).—"The summons to appear and answer" mentioned in this sub-rule means a summons or a notice to appear and answer the decree-holder's application for leave mentioned in sub-rule (2) The object of sub-rule (4) is to give the person, against whom the decree-holder seeks to execute his decree as an alleged partner, an opportunity of disputing his liability as a partner if he desires to do so, Jagat v Gunny, 53 C. 214;

91 I. C. 824: A. I. R 1926 C. 271; Jivraj v. Bhagwandas, 24 Bom L R. 1037: 68 I. C 627: A I. R. 1923 B. 66

Insolvency of firm.—The insolvency of firm after the passing of the decree is no bar to execution of the decree against any individual partner who was served with the summons; Vaishno Das v Tirath Das, 7 L L J. 165; 89 I C 138. A I. R. 1925 L. 379

Attachment of negotiable instruments.

51. Where the property is a negotiable instrument not deposited in a Court, nor in the custody of a public-officer, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the instrument shall be brought into Court and held subject to further orders of the Court. [S. 271.]

Attachment of property in custody of Court or public officer.

52. Where the property to be attached is in the custody of any Court or public officer, the attachment shall be made by a notice to such Court or officer, requesting that such property, and any interest or dividend becoming payable thereon, may be held subject to the further orders of the Court from which the notice is issued:

Provided that, where such property is in the custody of a Court, any question of title or priority arising between the decree-holder and any other person, not being the judgment-debtor, claiming to be interested in such property by virtue of any assignment, attachment or otherwise, shall be determined by such Court. [S. 271.]

COMMENTARY.

Attachment of Negotiable Instrument.—The proper mode of attaching a promissory note is by its actual seizure and not by the issue of a prohibitory order; Subramania v. Chokalinga, 46 M. 415: A I. R 1923 M. 317 · 72 I. C. 189.

"Property to be attached."—A judgment-debtor was entitled to a life-interest in certain trust funds of which the Official Trustee was the trustee. The life-interest was attached by a decree-holder by giving notice to the Official Trustee but there were no funds in the hands of the Official Trustee which would have been attachable under r. 46. Held that the interest of the judgment-debtor was not validity attached.—Abdul Lateef v. Dautree, 12 M 250.

Letters in the Post Office, addressed to certain judgment-debtors, were attached. The day before the attachment, the senders had applied to have the letters returned to them. Held that the letters in the Post Office were held in trust for the judgment-debtor and were, therefore, attachable on the application of the decree-holder.—Narasimhulu v. Adiappa, 18 M. 212.

Property attached yielding a revenue or producing interest or dividends is within the meaning and contemplation of all garnishee orders under this rule; and such revenue, interest or dividend payable in future can be attached under the same rule; Umabai Shankar v Amritrao, 39 B. 80: 17 Bom. L. R. 133: 28 I. C. 18.

"Custody of Court."—This rule does not allow of an anticipatory attachment of money expected to reach the hands of a public officer, but applies only to moneys actually in his hands —Tulaji v. Valabhai, 22 B. 39 (Followed in Raja Padmanund v Rama Prasad, 14 C L. J. 127) The principle of the rule is that what is attached must be something in existence and not merely in futuro, Umabai v. Amrit Rao, 39 B. 80. See also Takurdas v. Joseph, 44 C. 1072: 25 C. L. J. 595: 21 C. W. N. 887; where all these cases have been followed and discussed. Where the fund consisted of surplus sale proceeds payable to defendant mortgagor and it was attached before money was paid in to Court; held the attachment was bad as it was before it came in the custody of Court; Tiruvengadiah v. Tiruvengadiah, 26 M L J. 364: 24 I C. 617.

This rule also applies to property in the custody of the same Court which executes the decree; Surjamull v Ramchandra, 20 C. W. N. 412: 28 I. C. 123.

Property in Receiver's Hands.—An attachment of money in the hands of the receiver, without previous permission or sanction of the Court, is improper and irregular, as he is an officer of the Court.—Mahommed Zohuruddin v. Mahommed Nooroodeen, 21 C 85 See also Khan v. Alli Mahomed, 16 B 577.

A receiver is an officer of the Court and money in his hands is regarded as being in the custody of the Court Therefore the only Court which has jurisdiction to decide disputes relating to such money is the Court in whose custody the money is and not any other Court, Rani Debendra Bala v Chandra Sekhar, 1 Pat L J 449 35 I C 589

Attachment of Dividends in Official Assignee's Hands.—The Official Assignee being a public officer within the meaning of s 2 (17) of the Code moneys in his hands, payable by way of dividend to a creditor of an insolvent, may be attached in execution of a decree against the creditor under this rule, Hardayal v. Haji Adam, 49 B 638 87 I C 1011 A. I R. 1925 B. 344

Determination of Question of Title or Priority.—An attachment under this rule does not confer any priority upon the person at whose instance it was made, since at most it is an injunction relating to the fund, Katum Sahiba v Hajee Badsha, 38 M 221 29 I C 239, see also Thakurdas v. Joseph, 44 C 1072 But see Visvanathan Chetty v Arunachellam Chetty, 44 M. 100 · 60 I. C. 302, which has overruled the case reported in 38 M 21 and where the case reported in 44 C 1072 has been dissented from. See also Nachiappa v Subbier, 46 M 506 72 I C 820 A I R 1923 M 505

The proviso is merely intended to mean that any question of title or priority is to be determined by the Court in which, or in whose custody the property is, and not by the Court which made the order of attachment. Quaere —Whether an order under this section is final or not. Gopee Nath

v. Achcha Bibee, 7 C. 553 9 C. L. R. 395. Question of priority is not to be determined by a regular suit; Dabee Pershad v Gujadhar, 20 W R. 73.

Attachment under decree of High Court, of property already attached under decree of S C. Court, held that the S. C. Court was the only Court to decide the question of priority.—Jeynarayan v Ismail, 19 B. 710

A suit will lie to set aside an order such as is contemplated by the proviso to this section, Tikum Singh v. Sheoram, 19 C. 286

If attached funds are in the hands of the receiver, the Court to decide a dispute as to priority between mortgagee and holder of money decree, is the Court in whose custody the money is, Rani Debendra v. Chandra Sekhar, 35 I C 580 1 Pat L J 449

Effect of Attachment under this Rule on any Previous Attachment.—If there was a previous attachment, the mere fact that the respondent by way of abundant caution prayed for formal attachment under this rule, would not take away the effect of the former attachment; Surjamull v Ramchandra, 20 C W N 412

An attachment order takes effect only from the date of actual promulgation and not from the date the order itself was served, Simrick v Radharaman, 32 I C 276.

Attachment of decrees.

53. (1) Where the property to be attached is a decree, either for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, the attachment shall be made,—

(a) if the decree were passed by the same Court, then by order of such Court, and,

(b) if the decree sought to be attached was passed by another Court, then, by the issue to such other Court of a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, requesting such other Court to stay the execution of its decree unless and and until—

(i) the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed cancels the notice, or

(ii) the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment-debtor applies to the Court receiving such notice to execute its own decree.

(2) Where a Court makes an order under clause (a) of sub-rule (1), or receives an application under sub-head (ii) of clause (b) of the said sub-rule, it shall, on the application of the creditor who has attached the decree or his judgment-debtor proceed to execute the attached decree and apply the net proceeds in satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed.

(3) The holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree of the nature specified in sub-rule (1) shall be deemed to be the representative of the holder of the attached decree and to be entitled to execute such attached decree in any manner lawful for the holder thereof.

(4) Where the property to be attached in the execution of a decree is a decree other than a decree of the nature referred to in sub-rule (1), the attachment shall be made, by a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed to the holder of the decree sought to be attached, prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way; and, where such decree has been passed by any other Court, also by sending to such other Court a notice to abstain from executing the decree sought to be attached until such notice is cancelled by the Court from which it was sent.

(5) The holder of a decree attached under this rule shall give the Court executing the decree such information and aid as may reasonably be required

(6) On the application of the holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree the Court making an order of attachment under this rule shall give notice of such order to the judgment-debtor bound by the decree attached; and no payment or adjustment of the attached decree made by the judgment-debtor in contravention of such order after receipt of notice thereof, either through the Court or otherwise, shall be recognized by any Court so long as the attachment remains in force. [S. 273.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations and Scope.—This rule corresponds to 273, C P. Code, 1882, with several additions and alterations. The most important change is the addition of the words "or sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge" in sub-rule (1) The present rule has been made applicable to money-decrees as well as to mortgage-decrees The addition seems to have been made to meet those cases, in which it was held that a [illegible] e within the meaning of s 273 [illegible] 6 C W N. 5, Macgnaghten [illegible] Delhi London Bank v Partab, 28 A. 771 F. B., Jogendra v Hiranya, 2 C L J 499. The old section has been recast and re-arranged with some changes in the details of procedure to be followed when attaching a decree.

Cl. (a) of sub-rule 1, sub-rule (2), (3) and (6) are new

This rule applies to attachment before judgment; Venkayya v Lakshmiah, 22 M L J 394.

Decree for Money.—The following have been held to be money-decrees —Decree for mesne profits to be ascertained; Sharodamoyee v Wooma, 8 W R 9 Decree for arrears of rent, Banku Behary v. Shyama Charan, 25 C 322 Decree for dissolution of partnership; Sidlingappa v. Sankarappa, 27 B 556 (16 B 522 and 577 and 21 C. 85, referred to) Attachment may be made after judgment though decree not drawn up as the decree when drawn up relates back to the time of judgment, Ram Kanai v. Purna Chandra, 34 C. L J 494

It has been held that money-decrees and mortgage-decrees are not to be realized by sale, Vithal Das v Subraya, 45 B. 343; Maung Lun Bye v. Maung Po Nyun, 1 R 360 · A I. R. 1924 R. 21. They can only be realized in the manner prescribed by sub-rule (2). Sultan Kuar v. Gulzari Lal, 2 A. 290, Tiru Vengada v Vythilinga, 6 M. 418. Jotindra Nath v. Dwarka Nath, 20 C 111; Sidlingappa v. Sankarappa, 27 B. 556; there is no provision made in this rule for the realization of a decree for partition, or for foreclosure of a mortgage, or a decree for specific performance These decrees are to be realized by a sale thereof; Gopal v. Joharimal, 16 B 522; Barhma Din v Baji Lal, 26 A. 91. But for the special procedure prescribed by sub-rule (2) of the present rule for the realization of money-decrees and mortgage decrees, they would have been attachable and saleable under s 60 as coming within the expression " all other saleable property " The special procedure prescribed by sub-rule (2) is therefore an exception to the general rule that all properties when attached can only be realized by a sale thereof.

Mortgage-Decrees.—The addition of the words " or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge " in sub-rule (1) now makes the rule applicable to mortgage decrees, and it is now clear that mortgage-decrees are to be attached and realized in the same manner as money-decrees

This rule lays down that the holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree for sale, in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, shall as the representative of the holder of the attached decree, be entitled to execute in any manner lawful to the holder thereof. Kuppusami v Subboraya, 22 M L J 161 · 13 I. C. 224

Sub-rule (4). Attachment of Other Decrees.—The right, title, and interest of judgment-debtors, in a decree for possession and mesne profits was held liable to be attached and sold in execution of a money-decree— Ganesh Lall v. Shamnarain, 6 C 213

A certificate under Or XXI, r 71, certifying deficiency in purchase price, being declared by that rule to be in effect " a decree for the payment of money " for the purpose of the method of its recovery, such a certificate is attachable as a decree for the payment of recovery under the provisions of this rule, Abdul Jabbar v. Sita Ram, 21 A. L J. 385 A I R. 1926 A. 379. 95 I. C. 1033.

The right, title, and interest of a judgment-debtor in a partly executed decree for possession of a moiety of a taluk is liable to be attached and

A decree of a Revenue Court is not capable of attachment and sale under this section, in execution of a Civil Court decree; such decree stands in the position of an ordinary debt, and may be dealt with under s. 60 —Aulia Bibi v. Abu Jafar, 21 A. 405 (16 A. 496, referred to). See Gholam Mohamed v. Indra Chand, 7 B. L. R. 318: 15 W. R. 34, where also Gholam Mohamed v. Indra Chand, 7 B L R. 318· 15 W. R. 34, where it has been held that a decree of a Court falls within the description of " other property."

Decrees Passed by the Same Court.—Under the Code of 1877 this was held to apply also to cases where the decrees were passed by different Courts but were being executed by one Court; Sultan v. Gulzari, 2 A. 290.

Irregular Attachment.—The defect in the attachment in consequence of the order being passed by the executing Court, instead of by the Court which passed the decree, is not such a jurisdictional defect as to make the order void —An objection to the issue of notice under r. 53 (2) is one that the parties could waive—Per Sundara Iyer, J., in Arumuga v. Yogamba, 17 I. C. 523: 13 M L T. 227

Effect of Attachment.—The attachment of a decree under this rule has the effect of staying further execution and debarring the Court from proceeding further until that bar has been removed in either of the ways specified therein. Where a sub-Judge after receiving an attachment order from a Munsif's Court, returned it on the ground that it did not state the amount of the decree and proceeded with execution which resulted in the sale—held that the Sub-Judge was bound to comply with the order and had no jurisdiction to proceed with the sale —Manik Lal v Bonomali, 32 C. 1104· 10 C W. N. 193· 3 C L J. 27

The attaching judgment-creditor is the only person who can execute the decree, and the original holder of the decree is precluded from executing his decree, unless the Court which issued notice cancels the notice. Thachakavil v. Arapayi, 21 M L J 577 9 I C 786 (14 M L J 265: 2 M 417· 24 C 778, referred to)

The only two persons who can take out execution are the holder of the attached decree or the attaching creditor The assignee from the holder cannot apply for execution; Thiruvengadam v Doredla, 13 I C 659; 11 M. L. T 144.

If after attachment of a decree, the judgment debtor of the attached decree pays into Court all moneys due under the attached decree, interest on the attached decree as well as on the decree executed ceases to run, Madan v. Bishnupada, 35 C. L J 109 61 I C 780

Sub-rule (3). A person Attaching Decree is a Representative of the Decree-holder.—A person attaching a decree is representative of the decree-holder within s 47 and in every case is entitled to enforce execution of the decree which he has attached —Peary Mohan v. Romesh, 15 C. 371. (Referred to in Adhar v. Lal Mohan, 21 C. 778) See also Brojonath v Gaya Sundari, 6 C L J 141 and Rangasami v Parasami, 17 M. 58, where it has been held that attaching decree-holder is entitled to take all steps necessary for the realization of the proceeds of the attached decree by the Court See, however, Sami Pillai v Krishna Sami, 21 M 417, in which a different view seems to have been taken.

A decree-holder purchased immoveable property at an auctio held in execution of the same, but before the sale was confirmed decree was attached by a judgment-creditor of the decree-holder. that the effect of the attachment was to place the attaching creditor i position of the decree-holder so as to entitle him to have the sale firmed.—Boharia Rudrani Koer v Ram Pertap, 11 C. W. N. 158

Where A in execution of a decree against B attaches, under section, a decree which B holds against a company in liquidation Court will direct the liquidator to recognize A as the representative and allow him to prove for the decree-debt in the name of B, a receive and apply dividend payable to B in satisfaction of A's judg debt subject to the rights of other attaching creditors to rateable dis tion —Sesha Ayyar v. T S Sugar Mill, Co., 30 M. 533.

Sub-rule (6) Adjustment of Attached Decree.—This sub-rule is and gives effect to the decision in Gopal v. Jaharimal, 16 B. 522 XXI, r 53 (6) applies also to cases where the attachment was already before judgment, Gorigala v Mugunta, 14 I. C. 285 · 22 M J 394.

A decree-holder attached a decree obtained by his judgment-d against a third person The Court directed him to execute the atta decree. The decree-holder applied several times but the applications struck off for default Judgment-debtor then paid a sum to his de holder Held that rule 57 was inapplicable The attachment was sisting and the payment was invalid, Prem v. Habibullah, 24 I C (16 B 522, relied on)

Attachment of immoveable property.

54. (1) Where the property is immoveable, the attach shall be made by an order prohibiting the j ment-debtor from transferring or charging property in any way, and all persons f taking any benefit from such transfer or charge.

(2) The order shall be proclaimed at some place on or jacent to such property by beat of drum or other customary m and a copy of the order shall be affixed on a conspicuous par the property and then upon a conspicuous part of the court-ho and also, where the property is land paying revenue to the Gov ment, in the office of the Collector of the district in which land is situate. [S. 27

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—In sub-rule (1) the words "from taking any be from such transfer or charge" have been substituted for "from recei the same from him by purchase, gift, or otherwise." In sub-rule (2) words "upon a conspicuous part" have been added before "C house."

Immoveable Property.—Or XXI, rr. 53 and 54 make it quite c that a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage is not to be regar as an attachment of immoveable property within the meaning of those Orders—Surbani v. Puran, 8 A. L. J. 1327.

Attachment of Immoveable Property.—A decree for redemption is not attachable under this rule, but under r. 53 (2); Naigar Timapa v. Bhaskar, 10 B. 444. The equity of redemption of a mortgagor is immoveable property within this rule; Parashram v. Govind, 21 B. 226; Barendra v. Martin & Co., 33 C L. J. 13: 62 I. C. 167. Bequest to a Parsi widow, of income of immoveable property, with obligation of maintaining and educating children, is an interest in immoveable property, under this rule.—Natha Kerra v. Dhunbaiji, 23 B. 1.

An attachment is not complete until the procedure provided by this rule has been fully followed; Kanailal v. Ahed Bux, 39 I. C. 562; see also 42 M. 844: 53 I C. 207 F. B. But once it is made under this rule it is immaterial that the Collector did not enter it in his Touzi Register; Ram Khelwan v Sunder, 34 I. C. 34. An omission to affix a copy of an attachment order on a conspicuous part of the Court house or to post it in the office of the Collector or to post it in some conspicuous part of the land attached is a fatal defect which invalidates an attachment of land; Attar v. Ghulam, 60 I. C. 527. But see Jodhan v. Kapil Nath, 69 I. C 563 · A. I. R. 1923 Nag. 78, where it was held that omission to post a copy of the order of attachment in the office of the Collector, as required by Or. XXI, r. 54 (2), does not render the attachment invalid if all the other formalities prescribed by that rule have been observed.

This rule does not apply to property of the nature of debt secured by hypothecation bond. The preponderance of judical opinion is in favour of the view that mortgaged debts are moveable properties; Nataraja v. S. I. Bank Ltd, 10 M L. T. 503. 2 M. W. N 590 (15 A. 134· 12 C. 546; 20 C. 805 6 C W N 5, referred to).

See notes to s. 16.

Attachment of Mortgage Debt.—See notes to r 46, under the heading "Debt Not Secured by Negotiable Instrument—Mortgage Debt"

In the case of a purely usufructuary mortgage, where no debt was payable by the mortgagor, the procedure should be by attachment of the interest under this rule Or XXI, r 46 does not apply; Manilal v. Motibhai, 13 Bom. L. R. 233. 10 I C. 812. The substantial difference between attaching the interest of a usufructuary mortgagee under this rule and under r. 46 is that under r 46 the mortgagor would have received a written order of the Court prohibiting him from making the payment to the mortgagee; and under this rule he would receive no such order nor any notice of the attachment; Ramasami v Srinivasa, 39 M 389. 28 I. C. 284: 28 M. L. J 338

Proof of Attachment.—An attachment under this section must be strictly proved, mere production of order sheet is not sufficient —Gonesh Pershad v. Brij Behary, I C L J 565.

Proof of Service of Prohibitory Order.—When the prohibitory order under sub-rule (1) was found to be duly served on the judgment-debtors, but the return to prove the service, having been destroyed, could not be produced to prove the service, it was held that the failure to produc the return did not render the execution sale invalid; Muhammad Abdi v Akram, 22 A L J 703 · 83 I. C 878: A I. R. 1924 A. 747.

Effect of Attachment.—Where an attachment of land was made b written order under this rule the conditions prescribed had to be fulfille in order to render any private alienation of the property attached nul and void—Indra Chandra v Agra and Masterman's Bank, 1. B. L R S N 20: 10 W R 264 See also, Nur Ahmad v. Altaf Ali, 2 A. 58

Where no order for attachment of the property is passed in favour o the decree-holders in the manner provided, their claims are not entitle to the protection conferred by s. 64 against private alienations; Gangadr v. Kushali, 7 A. 702.

Attachment by prohibitory order under this section does not con stitute a dispossession of the party in actual possession of the property—Narayanrav v Damodar, 4 B 529

An attachment only prevents alienation, but does not confer title—Moti Lal v Karrabuddin, 25 C 179, P C (Referred to in Lachmidayal v Har Danni Lal, 25 A 347. p 350).

An execution creditor does not by attachment acquire such an interest in the attached property as will enable him to maintain an action for its wrongful removal The rights of attaching creditors are regulated by the C P. Code, and the provisions of s. 91 (f) of the T. P. Act, 1882. do not apply to them The remedy, if any, of the attaching creditor is by proceedings in execution and not by separate suit.—Karappa Chetti v Kandasami, 30 M 207 17 M L J. 84 (27 A. 278 doubted) On appeal 30 M. 413 · 17 M L J 334, where it has been further held that where attached property is removed by a third party the decree holder must enforce his claim by a separate suit and not in execution See also 26 M 673

Effect of Re-attachment.—A re-attachment of property after decree does not imply an abandonment of the attachment obtained before decree.—Ram Krishna v Surfunnissa, 6 C. 129; Kosuri Surparaju v Mandapaka, 26 I. C. 81. But when an application is made for attachment of property which has been previously attached under the decree, a Court may presume that the prior attachment had ceased before the application for a second attachment was made—Hafiz Suleman v. Abdullah, 16 A. 133 (12 B L. R 411 referred to)

Absence of, or Defective, Attachment—Irregularity.—If in the attachment order there be any incorrect description as to the right and interest of the judgment-debtors, in the property attached, the attachment is not good in law and does not affect actual rights and interests—Hargu Lal v. Mahommad Raza, 13 A 119

An attachment of immoveable property is not voidable, merely because all the forms prescribed in this section have not been followed, when the irregularities complained of are immaterial.—Koranee Dassee v. Bhuban Mohan, 6 W. R. Mis 52.

Where copy of order for attachment was not fixed up in the Collector's Office: held that the defect in the mode of attachment might render the attachment ineffectual for the purpose of avoiding alienations made, but the attachment was effectual against the judgment-debtor, and the defect did not afford a ground for declaring the execution proceedings ineffectual —Rai Balkishen v. Rai Sitaram, 7 A. 731.

Omissions to have a drum beaten as required is a material irregularity so as to render a sale held in execution of a decree liable to be set aside —Trimbak Ravji v Nara, 10 B. 504.

Where revenue-paying lands were described as revenue-free lands in the order of attachment: the misdescription protected the bona fide purchaser from having the alienation set aside as void under r. 64 —Gumani v Hardwar, 3 A 698.

If there had been no attachment or a defective attachment, but valid order for sale had been made during the life-time of the judgment-debtor, the effect will be as that of an attachment followed by an order for sale —Peari Lal v. Chandi Charan, 11 C. W. N. 163: 5 C L. J. 80.

After confirmation of sale and grant of certificate to the purchaser, the sale is not to be considered as a nullity merely by reason of the absence of any attachment.—Kishory v. Mahomed, 18 C. 188 (Followed in Hari Charan v. Chandra Kumar, 34 C. 787, p. 802). See also, Sharoda Moyee v. Wooma Moyee, 8 W. R 9 and Sheodhyan v. Bholanath, 21 A. 311, where it has been held that the absence of an attachment, prior to the sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree amounts to no more than a material irregularity; but is not sufficient, unless substantial injury is caused thereby to vitiate the sale (10 A 506; 11 A. 333; 21 C. 66, P C., referred to). But see Mahadeo Dobey v. Bhola Nath, 5 A 86, where it has been held that a regular attachment is an essential preliminary to a sale in execution of a money decree. There is no provision in Act X of 1859 under which the sale of a jote in execution of a decree is liable to be set aside on the ground of non-attachment and non-proof of publication of the sale proclamation.—Palit Sahu v. Hari Mahanti, 27 C. 789

Invalid Attachment.—An attachment is null and void, if at the time of attachment the decree under which it was made had been set aside and was not in existence The fact that a renewed decree was subsequently passed in terms of the original decree, could not make the attachment valid.—Chettiattil Muhamed v. Kunhi Koru, 29 M. 175

" Order shall be proclaimed " etc.—This section does not require that the sale proclamation should be served in each of the villages comprised in the property to be sold. The word " property " evidently refers to each. " lot " to be sold separately from the rest Though it is a sound rule to follow, viz, to serve a separate proclamation in each of the villages embraced in the same process when they are at such a distance from one another that there is no moral certainty of communication to persons on or interested in the one of what is publicly done on the other, the fact that the processes were not served in each does not necessarily constitute an infringement of the provisions of this section.—Moulvi Abdul Kashem v Benode Lal, 12 C. W N 757 (11 C. 74 referred to; 12 B. 368 commented on). In Tripura Sundari v Durga Charan, 11 C. 74, it has been held that, where distinct properties are proclaimed for sale, the omission to affix a copy in each of such properties amounts to irregularity. But in Pedro Antonio v. Jaibhoy Ardeshir, 12 B. 368, it has been held that a mere breaking up of an area into lots does not necessarily make it several distinct properties for the purposes of a proclamation of attachment or sale. See r. 67 (3) and notes.

It is necessary that a copy of the sale proclamation should be affixed to some conspicuous place on the property attached —Kalytara v. Ram Coomar, 7 C. 466 9 C. L R. 114.

The proclamation of sale, required to be made at some place adjacent to the property to be sold, and the affixing up of a copy of the order in a conspicuous part of the property, are acts which must precede the posting of the notices in the court house; Megh Lall v. Shib Pershad, 7 C. 34: 8 C. L. R. 369 See also Mahendra v. Gopal, 17 C. 769 (779). See, however, Ram Chander v Kamta Prosad, 4 A. 300.

In order to constitute a valid attachment, the proclamation described in the second portion of R. 54, Or. XXI, must be made; Mularam v Jivinda Ram, 4 L 211. 5 Lah L J 200: 72 I. C. 452.

Irregularity in Publishing Sales.—See r 90, and notes.

Attachment Not Necessary in Mortgage-decree.—If the decree contains a direction for sale of the mortgaged premises, it is not necessary to issue an attachment The direction for sale in the decree is in itself sufficient authority for the sale —Daya Chand v Hem Chand, 4 B. 515 See also Pedro Antonia v. Jaibhoy, 12 B 368, and Jogendra v Debendra, 26 C. 127, page 129, where it has been held that under the Act no attachment is necessary, and Dosibhai v. Iswardas Jagjivandas, 9 B 561, affirmed by the P. C in 15 B. 222

The omission to cause an attachment to be made in execution of a decree for the realization of a mortgage-debt, does not affect the validity of a sale of the mortgaged property in execution of such decree —Tincowri v. Shib Chandra, 21 C 689, Muniappa v Subramania, 18 M. 437

"Land paying Revenue to Government."—Shrotriyam villages in the Madras Presidency are lands paying revenue to Government within the meaning of this rule, Ganamma v Ketiredddi, 46 M. 736. A. I R. 1924 Mad. 217: 75 I C 369; Yar v Bose, 7 Lah. L. J. 501: A. I. R 1925 Lah. 583: 88 I C. 321.

55. Where—

Removal of attachment after satisfaction of decree.

(a) the amount decreed with costs and all charges and expenses resulting from the attachment of any property are paid into Court, or

(b) satisfaction of the decree is otherwise made through the Court or certified to the Court, or

(c) the decree is set aside or reversed, [S. 275.]

the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn, and in the case of immoveable property, the withdrawal shall, if the judgment-debtor so desires, be proclaimed at his expense, and a copy of the proclamation shall be affixed in the manner prescribed by the last preceding rule. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—The words " or certified to the Court " in cl (b) and the last para. are new. As to certifying payment, see rule 2 The effect of the added para. is that on the happening of any of the events in clauses (a), (b) or (c), the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn, i.e., it shall cease of itself. Formerly an application and an express order of the Court were necessary. It is now optional with the judgment-debtor to make an application for same Cases.—Part satisfaction of decree does not effect withdrawal of attachment and does not defeat the claims of those who have applied for rateable distribution; Khub Chand v Niadarmal, 10 A L J 165 Where property has been attached, an order dismissing an application for execution but not specifically withdrawing attachment or declaring the decree incapable of execution does not raise the attachment; Bank of Upper India v. Sheo Prasad, 19 A 482. The death of judgment-debtor does not affect the attachment, Sheo Prasad v Hira Lal, 12 A 440. In the case of the death of a judgment-debtor of a joint Mitakshara family, the attachment does not cease even though the estate passed to the surviving members of the family; Beni Pershad v Parbati, 20 C. 895.

Sums paid into Court under this rule are not assets under s 73 for rateable distribution; Sorabji v Kala Raghunath, 36 B 156. 18 Bom. L. R. 1193.

Revival of attachment.—Where a decree under which an attachment has been made is set aside on first appeal but restored on second appeal, the attachment is revived.—Parameshwar Din v Debi Prasad, 48 I. C 386

Satisfaction in part.—Where satisfaction of the decree in part only is certified, the attachment cannot be deemed to be withdrawn; Khub Chand v. Niadar, 15 I C 677 10 A. L J 165.

Order for payment of coin or currency notes to party entitled under decree.

56. Where the property attached is current coin or currency notes, the Court may, at any time during the continuance of the attachment, direct that such coin or notes, or a part thereof sufficient to satisfy the decree, be paid over to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same. [S. 277.]

COMMENTARY.

The word " current " has been added before the word "coin " The effect seems to be that if the coins attached be not current coins, they cannot be paid over to the decree-holder, but should be sold, as other moveable properties

57. Where any property has been attached in execution of a decree but by reason of the decree-holder's default the Court is unable to proceed further with the application for execution, it shall either dismiss the application or for any sufficient reason adjourn the proceedings to a future date. Upon the dismissal of such application the attachment shall cease. [New.]

Determination of attachment

COMMENTARY.

Object and effect.—The purpose of this rule is to put an end to doubts which from time to time have arisen as to the continuance of an attachment by reason of the practice of "striking off proceedings" or "removing proceedings from the file," for which there was no justification under any of the earlier Codes, Duwan Chand v. Bedha, 52 I C 291

It has been inserted to set at rest a long mooted point upon which there was much diversity of judicial opinion. The conflicting rulings have been noted under s. 64 and it has overidden all those cases in which a view contrary to this rule were expressed. The effect of this rule would be that all previous attachments shall cease with the dismissal of an application for execution, and the judgment-debtor will get sufficient opportunity to make a private alienation of his property, if once an execution case be dismissed under this rule. This rule has put some difficulty in the way of decree-holders realizing money. Under the old Code it was settled by a long course of decisions that, when property has once been attached in execution of a decree, an order merely dismissing an application for execution, which order does not contain specific words withdrawing the attachment, will not have the effect of raising the attachment Quaere—Although upon the dismissal of an application for execution the attachment shall cease under this rule; whether the Court under the powers vested in it by section 151 of the Code and under the circumstances of any particular case, and for the ends of justice, can make a special order maintaining the attachment, where it considers that the judgment-debtor is likely to alienate the property to defraud the decree-holder?

Under the old Code execution cases were "struck off" for relieving the congestion of the file or some fault of the applicant i.e, default in appearance, failure to deposit process fees, or to file copies of necessary papers, or for not taking any steps. The effect of such "striking off" was considered in numerous cases (see Dhonkal v. Phakkan, 15 A 84; Thakur v. Fakirullah, 22 I A 44, Srinivasa v. Sami Rau, 17 M. 180; Bank of Upper India v. Sheo Prasad, 19 A 482 and other cases noted under s 64, under the heading "Effect of striking Off Execution Proceedings") The decisions were not harmonious and in numerous cases it was held that such an order did not necessarily put an end to the attachment and it was open to the decree-holder to revive the execution proceedings and continue it from the point where it has previously stopped This rule sets at rest the various interpretations that were put on the previous practice Under this Code there can be no "striking off" of applications. If there is any default of the decree-holder, the application must be dismissed and the attachment ceases forthwith, even though the Court and the parties intended that the attachment should subsist; Namuna v. Rosha Miah, 38 C. 482: 15 C. W. N. 428; Dildar Hosain v. Sheo Narain, 41 A. 157: 49 I. C. 113; Fateh Din v. Qutab Din, 3 L. 7: 67 I. C. 543: A. I. R 1922 Lah. 108.

A revival of execution proceeding does not operate as a revival of the attachment, so as to prejudice the rights of strangers who have in the interval acquired a title to the property; Patringa v. Madhavanand, 14 C. L. J. 476.

Applicability.—This rule can apply only to orders of dismissal passed after the Act came into force; Vardiparthi v. Kosrukonda, 27 I C. 568 It cannot have a retrospective effect; Khande v Nara Subba, 27 I. C 792, see also 31 I. C. 911. This rule does not apply to a case where a Court strikes off an execution proceeding or consigns the record to the record room to suit its own convenience, or to reduce its pending file without any default having been committed by the decree-holder or without its having been asked to take any further steps necessary for proceeding with it; Bijai Saran v. Deo Kishen, 24 A. L. J 901: 97 I. C. 702: A. I. R. 1926 All. 734. It was also held in the above case that an application which is in substance as well as in form an application to revive a pending execution which had been suspended for no act or default of the decree-holder, is not an application to initiate a fresh appli cation, and the effect of such an application, if granted, is that the proceeding is continued from the stage at which it was left An order restoring an attachment relates back to the date when the attachment is first made, and its effect is to invalidate any private sale made during the subsistence of that attachment

Attachment Before Judgment.—The provisions of this rule have no application to attachment before judgment under Or. XXXVIII It applies only to attachment "in execution of a decree" An order for attachment before judgment subsists for the benefit not only of the first application for execution but also for subsequent application; Gones Chandra v. Banuari, 16 C. L. J. 86 14 I. C 345: Banuddin v Arunachalla, 22 I. C. 351· 26 M L J 215, Bohra Alkhey Ram v. Basant Lal, 46 A. 891: 80 I C 106: A I. R 1924 All. 860. But see Meyyapachettiar v. Chidambaram, 47 M 483 83 I C 91. A I R. 1924 Mad 490, in which it was held (following 44 M 902 and overruling 42 M 1) that the provisions of this rule apply to attachment before judgment which become converted into attachment in execution when application is made to execute the decree passed in the suit; hence upon the dismissal of such an application by the decree-holder's default, the attachment made upon judgment ceases.

"Default."—There is no reason for giving a restricted meaning to the word "default" and confining it to default in appearance, in the payment of process fees, or in the production of documents Omission to serve notice under r. 66 is a default; Namuna Bibi v. Roshan, 15 C. W N. 428; 9 I. C 558. 38 C 482; Lakhpat Rai v. Mayya Mal, 75 I C. 821. So also is omission to file proclamation; Mandhyan v. Badram, 17 C. W. N. 204.

Where an execution sale is set aside for any reason other than the decree-holder's default, the antecedent attachment is revived so as to support a second application for execution of the decree by sale of the same property, and no fresh attachment is necessary; Mahabharat v. Surjakanta, 3 Pat. L J 310 45 I C 598, Venkatesuarayyan v. Ananatha, 45 M L J. 315 75 I C 491 A I R 1923 Mad. 703.

A decree-holder in execution of a decree attached the properties of the judgment-debtor but subsequently accepted a payment made by him towards the satisfaction of the decree and agreed to give time for payment of balance of the decree amount. Thereupon the court dismissed the application after recording the part payment Held that the effect of the dismissal of the execution application was to put an end to the attachment and that the dismissal was due to the default of the decree-holder. No doubt the Court has no power to dismiss an application for execution unless there is default on the part of the decree-holder but, as has been held, default means a failure to do what one is legally bound to do, Jai Krishna v Bibi Sokhia, 4 Pat L T 418 · 71 I. C. 881.

Cases.—Where, by mistake of the court, an application for execution against property under attachment was dismissed, but the decree holder obtained a review and the executing Court was directed to proceed, and there was no order removing the attachment, held that the attachment subsisted and was valid or against a sale made by the judgment-debtor previous to the review ; Aziz Baksh v Kaniz, 34 490: 15 I C. 49

The dismissal of an execution application under this rule has the effect of vacating a prior order passed under Or XXI, r. 23, ordering execution to proceed, Penakaruppan v. Manikka, 2 L. W. 1055 (24 A 282, dissented from).

An attachment ceases upon the dismissal of the application for execution. A subsequent application for sale only is defective but curable under s. 153 by amendment, Kunchapudy v Mallikarjuna, 25 I. C. 883.

Where after attachment by a court of first instance, the sale was stayed by an order of the appellate Court and the first Court thereupon dismissed the application held that the attachment subsisted ; Vahakath Puthiah v. Thachar, 35 I C 240 3 L. W. 601 (38 C. 482 not folld, 34 A. 490 approved).

After decree-holder attached a property, a claim was filed and the Court recorded the following order on the execution petition: "Decree-holder's Vakil states that he will file a fresh application as the claims petition is pending Struck off" The claim was allowed and decree-holder filed a suit and succeeded in it More than three years after the previous application, decree-holder applied for execution. Held that the former attachment subsisted and this Rule did not apply ; Karaturi v Gopi Setti, 21 M. L. T 88.

"Striking off."—Where a sale proclamation was not made owing to the laches of the decree-holder and an order was passed "proclamation not filed, struck off" Held that it amounted to a dismissal of attachment ; Mandhyan v. Badram, 17 C. W. N. 204: 18 I. C. 441.

INVESTIGATION OF CLAIMS AND OBJECTIONS.

58. (1) Where any claim is preferred to, or any objection is made to the attachment of, any property attached in execution of a decree on the ground that such property is not liable to such attachment, the Court shall proceed to investigate the claim or objection with the like power as regards the examination of the claimant or objector, and in all other respects, as if he was a party to the suit :

Investigation of claims to, and objections to attachment of, attached property.

Provided that no such investigation shall be made where the Court considers that the claim or objection was designedly or unnecessarily delayed.

(2) Where the property to which the claim or objection applies has been advertised for sale, the Court ordering the sale may postpone it pending the investigation of the claim or objection.

Postponement of sale.

COMMENTARY.

If an order is passed after investigation under the rule, the party against whom such order is passed may bring a regular suit under, r. 63. As to when an order is said to be passed on investigation, see notes to r 63, under the heading " Limitation of One Year When Applies and When does Not."

Object and Scope.—The object of this rule is to give a claimant a speedy and summary remedy and not to deprive him of his remedy by suit. The summary remedy given by this rule is alternative to the remedy by way of suit ; Kanhaya Lal v. National Bank of India, 40 I A. 46: 40 C. 598 ; Raghunath v. Sarosh, 23 B. 266 , Krishnabhupati v Vikrama, 18 M. 13, 17 , Sundar Singh v. Ghasi, 18 A. 410 , Bibi Aliman v. Dakeshwar Prasad, 1 C L J. 296

Claims may be preferred in execution proceedings, by parties to the suit or their representatives or by third persons All objections raised by parties to the suit or their representatives come under s 47, and the objector should proceed by an application under that section, a separate suit for the purpose is barred Claims preferred to attached property by third persons come under this rule It is important to note the distinction, as orders passed under s 47, allowing or disallowing an objection to attachment, is a " decree " and is therefore appealable, whereas an order rejecting a claim under this rule is not appealable; Abdul v. Muhammad, 4 A. 190, Dayaram v Gorardhan Das, 28 B 458 An unsuccessful claimant has the option to institute a separate suit for establishing his title under r. 63 and if this is not done, the order dismissing the claim is conclusive; Rahim Bux v. Abdul Kader, 32 C. 537, Sardhari Lal v Ambika, 15 C. 521: 15 I. A. 123; Rajaram v. Raghubansman, 24 C. 503. There was a diversity of judicial opinions as to whether an objection or claim prefer by a party or his representative come under this rule or s. 47, when t objection is based on the ground that the property is held by him on beh of a third party as shebait, trustee etc. As to this see notes to sec under the heading "Objection by Trustee or Shebait When Falls Wit this Section.

If a Court is invited by a decree-holder to sell property not duly attac ed and the Court is apprised of that fact by a person claiming to be intere ed therein, it has inherent power to investigate the matter; Sarirama Meherban, 13 C. L J 243: 9 I C. 918.

The words of r 59 show that a claim may be made by a person wl has some interest in the property, although he is not in possession mortgagee in possession is in possession partly on his own account ar partly on account of the mortgagor i e., to the extent of his interest. Tl Code requires the Court to investigate the claim of a mortgagor in such case and to the extent of the mortgagor's interest; Nga Tok v Subran ahim, 10 I. C 991. See also Bhagwan v. Raj Nath, 9 A L. J. 474. I I C. 790

An usufructuary mortgagee cannot prefer a claim under this rule but h may come in under r 100, Biswanath v Lingaraj, 1 Pat. 159.

Objections or Claims by Parties or their Representatives.—See s 47 and notes

Objections or Claims by Trustee or Shebait.—Where a decree is passed against a judgment-debtor in his individual capacity and he take an objection to attachment of certain property in his possession upon the ground that, although it is in his possession, it is not in the possession of him in his personal capacity but in possession of him as a manager of endowed property, the question is one between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, and objection would lie under s 47 and not under Or. XXI, r 58; Shah Naim Ata v Girdhari Lal, 4 O W N. 102: A I R. 1927 Oudh 120 See notes under s. 47.

"Shall proceed to Investigate."—It is the duty of the Court to investigate Where a munsif improperly refused to investigate a claim under this rule, he was held to have refused to exercise a jurisdiction which he was bound to exercise and the Appellate Court set aside the order and ordered the investigation, Jameela v Lachman, 4 C. L. R. 74; see also 17 W. R 74: 8 W R 26 11 W R 54 1 C. W. N. 24: 22 B 875.

The extent to which the investigation should be carried, depends upon the circumstances of the case —Sardhari Lal v. Ambica Persad, 15 C. 521, P. C.

Limits of Enquiry.—See notes to r. 60 under the heading "Extent of Investigation."

Proviso.—If the Court is of opinion that an application has been designedly or unnecessarily delayed, it may refuse an investigation, but if it makes an investigation it is bound to pass orders under r 60 or r 61 and dismissal after investigation on the ground of delay would be illegal,

The word "unnecessarily" must be construed in a generous way; Nga San Babu v Mi Thaik, 39 I. C 345: (1916) 24 B. R. 136: 11 Bur. L. T. 41 After a property which had been attached in execution of a decree, has been sold, the Court has no jurisdiction to hear an application putting forward a claim which, if successful, would result in the release of the attached property; Kali Charan v. Sarojini A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 468.

Burden of Proof.—The onus is on the claimant to prove that the property attached is his or in his possession, Nga Tha v. Bum, 2 B. L. R. 91 F. B: 11 W. R. 8 (8 W R 352 and 362, overruled) See Abdul Rahman v. Mahomed Azim, 4 C W N 151 noted under s 50.

Remedy under this Rule is Alternative.—The summary remedy given by this rule is permissive and alternative. The object is not to deprive a claimant of his remedy by suit, but to give him a more speedy and summary remedy —Raghunath v Sarosh, 23 Bom 266, See also Krishnabhupati v Vikrama, 18 M 13, p 17, and Sundar Singh v. Ghasi, 18 A. 410; Kanhaya v. National Bank of India, 17 C W. N 511 P. C.: 40 C 598 But see Man Kaur v Tara Singh, 7 A 583

Cases that Come under this Rule.—Defendants who are exempted from the operation of a decree are not parties to the suit within the meaning of s. 47 and their objection to the properties attached is to be investigated under this rule.—Ram Pershad v Jagannath, 30 C 134 6 C W. N. 10. When a suit is dismissed against one of the parties but decreed against the rest, the former is not a party to the suit within s. 47, and his objection to attachment would fall under this rule —Rahimuddi v. Lalt Meah, 29 C. 696. 6 C. W. N 727.

Where the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in certain lands were attached, a claim to a fractional share of the property is to be investigated under this rule —Raj Coomar Roy v Kadumbini, 13 W. R. 68, F B . 4 B L R 175 F B.

Held that an objection, made by one whose property was attached and sold in execution of a decree for the payment of money for the performance of which he had become a surety, might have been taken under this rule at the time of attachment, and was not entertainable under Or. XXI, r. 90.—Hub Lal v Kanhia Lal, 7 A 365

A claim set up in an investigation held under s 287, C P Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, rr 66, 70), cannot be treated as a claim under s. 278, C P Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r 58), the latter section having reference to claims and objections to attachment of property under attachment —Bhika Bal v Khem Chand, 14 B 369

Where, in execution of a money-decree against the father alone for the personal debt, the decree-holder attached the whole of the joint family property, a claim by the sons that they are entitled to a share in the property and for its release from attachment, is to be investigated under this rule.—Ram Dayal v. Durga Singh, 12 A 209

An objection of a third party in execution of a decree for delivery of possession falls within the provisions of this and not of Or XXI, r. 90.—Mahabir Prasad v. Parma, 14 A. 417.

Claim to " Debts " Attached in Execution.—It was held in a Bombay case that where a decree-holder attached a debt due to ment-debtor the Court could not entertain under this rule claim by the person served with the prohibitory order; Harilal v Abhesa 323. It has however been held in a Madras case that when a secured by a negotiable instrument is attached a claim by a thir may be preferred under this rule, Chidambara v. Ramasamy, 2 (Followed in Tayabali v Atmaram, 38 B 631· 16 B. 520 where was not followed)

Claim to " Decrees " Attached in Execution.—Where in e of a decree for money obtained by A against B, A attached a cer perty (in this case a decree) belonging to B, but before the attac had obtained a sale deed in his favour in respect of the property Held that the question whether C's title is good, or whether the in C's favour is fictitious, is a question relating to title to the sought to be attached, and so it clearly comes within the purvie XXI, r. 58, and not under s. 47 The fact that the property to be happened to be a decree made no difference; Pearey Lal v. A Bank, 24 A L. Claim to " Property " Attached in Execution of Rent De 170 of the B T Act, VIII of 1885, bars a claim under this rule to or holding attached in execution of a decree for arrears due therer cases —Amritta Lal v Nemai, 28 C 382, F. B.. 5 C. W. N. 474, C W N 732, approved, 4 C W. N 734 overruled), even wher lord's interest is sold after decree.—Khetra Pal v. Kritarthamoy 33 C 566, F B 10 C W N 547· 3 C. L J. 470. (3 C. An attachment of a tenure or holding in execution of a decree by a fractional co-sharer for arrears of rent of his separate share is an attachment as is contemplated by section 170 of the Bengal Act, (VIII of 1885), and therefore this rule is applicable to such a Beni Madhub v Jaod Ali, 17 C 390, F. Claim to Property Seized by a Receiver.—Where property of insolvent is seized by receiver in insolvency, claim cannot be preferred under this rule. The remedy is under s. 22, Prov. Insolvency Act; Mulchand v. Murari, 36 A. 8.

Claim to Property Ordered to be Sold under a Mortgage-decree.—"Though the execution of mortgage-decree is expressly incorporated in the Code, the Committee still think that claims and objections arising out of the execution of such decrees should not be the subject of summary procedure under this and the following rules, but should be determined in the ordinary course. This does not imply that the procedure under the later rules as to resistance to possession does not apply."—Report of the Special Committee.

Proceedings by way of claim as provided by this rule are not applicable where the property is directed to be sold under a mortgage-decree.—Himat Ram v. Khusal, 18 B. 98; Deefholts v. Peters, 14 C. 631 (Folld. in Harimohan v. Lachmi Chand, 18 I. Dismissal of Claim If Bars a Fresh Claim.—Where a claim is dismissed or struck off without any adjudication, a fresh claim may be entertained.—Mohadeb Mundul v. Modhoo, 16 W. R. 59. A Judge has no jurisdiction to try the same objector's claim under this section a second time as against the same attachment, or to re-open a question finally decided on the former occasion.—Khelat Chunder v. Bhuggobutty, 14 W. R. 144.

Where an objection under this rule was struck off for default, the High Court refused to interfere in revision, holding that the remedy of the petitioner was under Or. IX, r. 4 read with s. 141 or a suit under r. 63.—Sheo Prasad v. Kastura Kuar, 10 A. 119.

Rejection of Claim Debars Assertion of Title under Rules 97, 99, 101.—Rejection of a claim under this rule debars the claimant from asserting his title against an auction-purchaser in a proceeding under s. 335, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, rr. 97, 99, 101).—Nilo Pandurang v. Rama Patloji, 9 B. 35. See also In the matter of the petition of Banee Madhub Roy, 13 W. R. 431.

Decision in a Claim Case is Binding upon the Parties Thereto.—When property which has been attached is ordered to be released, the order is made with reference to the particular claimant obtaining the order. This order is not to be regarded as a general decision (of which all the world can have the benefit) that the property does not belong to the judgment-debtor.—Imam Bandee Begam v. Mahomed Tukee, 8 W. R. 27; and Badiroonnissa v. Kureemoonnissa, 21 W. R. 230. See also Jagannath v. Ganesh, 18 A. 413, where it has been held that an order under this rule does not enure for the benefit of other decree-holders, who are not parties to the proceedings. The order is not binding as against the judgment-debtor unless he has a party to the proceedings, and cannot be availed of by any one who is not a party to the proceedings.—Vadappalle v. Dronamarju, 31 M. 163: 18 M. L. J. 26. (13 M. 366: 25 M. 721: 30 M. 35: 18 A. 413, followed.)

59. The claimant or objector must adduce evidence to show that at the date of the attachment he had some interest in or was possessed of, the property attached. [S. 279.]

Evidence to be adduced by claimant.

COMMENTARY.

This rules does not mean that if the claimant establishes that he has some interest in the property, he is entitled to succeed irrespective of the question of possession, nor does it imply that if he fails to establish the particular interest he sets up, his claim must be disallowed irrespective of the question of possession of the judgment-debtor. In each of the cases mentioned in rr. 60 and 61, the Court must determine the question of possession of the judgment-debtor. The Court cannot base its decision on the question of the validity of the claim or the determination of the title to the property attached, Sathan v. Tirtha Narain, 24 I. C. 62.

"Some Interest."—To reconcile this rule with rr. 60, 61 the words "some interest" must be taken to imply such interest as would make the possession of the judgment-debtor, possession not on his own account but on account of, or in trust for, the claimant.—Mohunt Bhagwan v. Khetter Moni, 1 C. W. N. 617. See also Sabhapathi v. Narayana, 25 M. 555; Satkari v. Thirtnanarayan, 24 I. C. 62. A beneficial interest is as much an interest within the meaning of this rule as a legal interest in the property attached.—Sabhapathi v. Narayanasami, 25 M. 555.

"Was possessed of."—The word "possessed" is not used in a restricted sense as relating to a mere tangible or physical possession. It includes constructive possession, or possession in law, of debts and other intangible property.—Chidambara v. Ramasamy, 27 M. 67 (24 M. 2) dissented from). See notes to r. 60.

Extent of Investigation.—"Rules 58 to 62 are directed to give a means by which execution proceedings may be made effective and not too closely entangled with disputes between third parties and the debtor. Provision is made for investigation of claims in a limited fashion. The scope of the enquiry being confined, the investigation will not be at all elaborate, and the Privy Council, in Sardhari v. Ambika, 15 C. 521, have pointed out that sometimes that investigation may well be very slight indeed. Rules 58 to 62 provide for a summary investigation into possession as distinct from a thorough trial of ultimate right. It is impossible to separate altogether the question of possession and of title. Thus if the judgment-debtor was in possession, he may have been in possession as agent or trustee for another, and this has to be enquired into. To that extent the title may be part of the enquiry in a claim case, but no ultimate questions of trust can be threshed out"; (per Rankin, J.) Nejimunnessa v. Nacha-

Benami.—Where the claimant alleges that the property attached is in his own possession on his account, and the decree-holder says that he is a benamidar of judgment-debtor it should be released as the question of benami is a question of title ; Monmohiney v. Radha Kristo, 29 C. 543 ; Sheoraj v. Gopal, 18 C. 290 ; Hamid v. Buktear 14 C. 617

Onus of Proof.—The onus is on the claimant to prove that the property attached was his or in his possession, and therefore not in the possession of the judgment-debtor. His evidence must be confined to proving his own claim, and he cannot be allowed to show a title in a third person. —Nga Tha Yah v. Buru, 2 B L R. 91, F B ; 11 W R 8 F. B (8 W. R. 358 and 362, overruled) See Abdul Rahman v Mahomed Azim, 4 C. W N 151, noted under s 50.

Release of property from attachment.

60. Where upon the said investigation the Court is satisfied that for the reason stated in the claim or objection such property was not, when attached, in the possession of the judgment-debtor or of some person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, or that, being in the possession of the judgment-debtor at such time, it was so in his possession, not on his own account or as his own property, but on account of or in trust for some other person, or partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person, the Court shall make an order releasing the property, wholly or to such extent as it thinks fit, from attachment. [S. 280.]

COMMENTARY.

"Possession of the judgment-debtor or of some person in trust for him" etc.—The question to be determined under this rule is the question of possession ; the words ' possession of the judgment-debtor or some person in trust for him," refer to cases in which the possession of a claimant as a trustee is of such a character, as to be really in the possession of the debtor, and not to cases in which very intricate questions of law may arise as to whether or not valid trusts may result in particular instances —Hamid Bakhut v Buktear Chand, 14 C 617 Approved in Sheoraj Nandan v Gopal Saran, 18 C 290, and followed in Monmohiney v Radha Kristo, 29 C 543 See also 1 C W N 617 , Sualso Bhaiji v Administrator-General of Bombay, 23 B 128

Held that the latter portion of this rule applies only where the property is in possession of the judgment debtor, " partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person,' and not where the property was at the time of the attachment, and had been for some months previously, in the sole possession of a trustee, and neither wholly nor partly in the possession of the judgment-debtor —Burjorji Dorabji v. Dhunbai, 16 B 1 For the meaning of the expressions "on account of" or "in trust for," as used in this rule, see Velji Hirji & Co. v. Bharmal, 21 B. 287

Effect of Order of Release.—The order for release under this rule is not final but provisional, as r 63 declares it to be subject to the result of any suit which the attaching creditor may bring to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute The order of release made under this rule has not therefore the effect of putting an end to an attachment duly made, so as to leave the claimant free to deal with the property in any way he likes The result is that any private alienation of the property by claimant, though made after the order of release passed under this rule, will be void under s. 64, if in a title suit subsequently brought by the aggrieved party under r. 63, the right to attach the property is established, Bonomali v Prosunno, 23 C 829 ; Ramchandra v. Mudeshwar, 33 C. 1158 ; Pratap v Sarat, 25 C W N 544 · 62 I. C. 348 ; Ahmad Khan v Banshidhar, 31 A. 367 ; Anthaya v. Manjaiya, 45 M. 84 · 69 I C 642 A I R 1922 Mad 176.

A release from attachment can only be made under this rule, which indicates the conditions on which alone that release can be directed A Court before directing release must hold those conditions established—Chaman Lal v Macleod, 8 Bom L R. 794.

This rule contemplates not only the entire release of the property from attachment, but also the retention of the attachment to such extent as the Court thinks fit —Kashwant Shenvi v. Vithola Sheti, 12 B. 231.

Where property has been released from attachment under this rule, and subsequently declared liable to attachment by a decree against which an appeal is pending, a sale of such property before the final result of the appeal is not illegal by virtue of the provisions of Or. XXI, r 63—Fathula v Muniyappa, 6 M 98.

As to whether a judgment-debtor is a party to the proceedings under this section or not, see notes under rule 63.

Disallowance of claim to property attached.

61. Where the Court is satisfied that the property was, at the time it was attached, in the possession of the judgment-debtor as his own property and not on account of any other person, or was in the possession of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, the Court shall disallow the claim. [S. 281.]

COMMENTARY.

Disallowance of Claim.—If the Court erroneously does not enter into the question of possession but disallows the claim on some other grounds, the order disallowing the claim cannot for this reason only be said to have been made without jurisdiction and therefore a nullity. Such an order is conclusive and binding on the claimant till a suit under r. 63 is brought by the claimant; Bhagawan Das v. Rajnath, 34 A. 365: 11 I. C. 790.

A certain property having been attached in execution, the plaintiff intervened claiming the property, and was directed to adduce evidence, which however, he failed to do, and the case was struck off. Held that the order striking off the case must be taken as an order disallowing the claim. —Rash Behary v. Buddun Chunder, 12 C. L. R. 550

When a claim is preferred, the Court should define the respective shares of the judgment-debtor and intervenor and sell the judgment-debtor's share only. If without doing so, the Court simply orders the sale of the property subject to the claim of the claimant, the order would not be a valid one, and one year's limitation would not be applicable ; Udit Narain v Muntaza 2 A. L. J 178 · 27 A 464 (4 W. R. 35 folld.)

The claim of a person in possession under a collusive sale should be rejected on the ground that the property was in possession in trust for the judgment-debtor ; Mc Intosh v. Bidhu Bhusan, 16 C. W. N. 959.

Effect of Order under this Rule.—The effect of an order disallowing a claim to attached property is to gave the auction-purchaser a title as against the claimant, unless the order is set aside by a suit —Khub Lal v. Ram Lochun, 17 C. 260 (15 C 521, P. C., referred to). An order in favour of one of several decree-holders made under this rule does not inure for the benefit of the other decree-holders who are not parties to the proceedings ; Jagannath v. Ganesh, 18 A. 413

Appeal and Revision.—In execution of a decree against a firm, certain property, was attached, to which a partner objected that it was his private property The Court disallowed the objection. Held that the order was not under s 47 and was not appealable —Abdul Rahman v. Muhammad Yar, 4 A. 190.

Where a Court disallowed an application for the release of certain property attached before judgment—Held that there being a remedy by suit under Or. XXI, r. 63 the High Court should not interfere in revision—J. J. Guise v. Jaisraj, 15 A 405 (8 M 484, F B , 11 A 119, and 11 A 383, referred to), Subbu Reddiar v. Kumaraswamy, 21 I. C 461 · 1913 M. W. N. 856. See, however, Satkari v Tirtha Narain, 24 I C. 62

Continuance of attachment subject to claim of incumbrancer.

62. Where the Court is satisfied that the property is subject to a mortgage or charge in favour of some person not in possession, and thinks fit to continue the attachment, it may do so, subject to such mortgage or charge. [S. 282.]

COMMENTARY.

"Subject to a mortgage."—This rule lays down that where during the investigation of claims or objections, the Court is satisfied that the property is subject to a mortgage it may direct it to be sold subject to that mortgage, i.e., the right of redemption is offered for sale. Rule 66 says that when a property is ordered to be sold, the sale proclamation should specify any incumbrance to which the property is liable. So that in the latter case the purchaser buys it simply with notice of mortgage or charge but there is no finding that the mortgage really exists. It may turn out that there is no subsisting mortgage or that the mortgage is invalid The auction-purchaser is not debarred from contesting the validity or otherwise of the mortgage If such mortgage is declared invalid, he is entitled to the benefit and the judgment-debtor cannot claim the amount due on the mortgage (Izzatunnissa v. Partab, 13 C. W. N. 1143 P. C ; 588) Under this rule, the Court decides that a mortgage subsists and the property is sold subject to it.

The distinction between r 62 and r 66 is that in the former case the Court being satisfied of the existence of the mortgage sells only the judgment-debtor s right of redemption, so that the purchaser does not acquire any greater rights than those of redeeming the mortgage. In the latter, the Court decides nothing as to the existence of the mortgage and the purchaser buys subject to such risks as the notice might involve Thus in execution of a money-decree the rights of a mortgagor in certain property, ostensibly subject to mortgage, were sold The property was not sold subject to the mortgage as contemplated by this rule. But the existence of the mortgage was notified in the sale proclamation without enquiry, held, on a suit brought by the mortgagee for sale, that the auction-purchaser was not debarred from proving that the mortgage was fictitious and without consideration Shib Kunwar v Sheo Prasad, 28 A. 418. 3 A. G obtained a money decree against H and attached some property U preferred a claim alleging himself to the owner of the property The Court held that H was the owner but U had a lien. The property was sold subject to the lien and purchased by X U then sued X for the amount of the lien. Held, that X was not bound by the miscellaneous order for he was neither a party nor a representative. The Court's order was not under the rule but under r 66, Narayen v Umbar, 35 B. 275. 10 I. C 913

63. Where a claim or an objection is preferred, the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute, but, subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive. [S. 283.]

Saving of suits to establish right to attached property.

COMMENTARY.

Object and Scope.—The object of a suit, is not to have the order in the claim proceedings set aside, but to have the right of the claimant in the property in dispute established —Bibi Aliman v. Dhakeshwar, 1 C L. J. 290 (13 B 72: 18 B. 241, and 13 C 228, dissented from). In these latter cases it seems to have been held that the suit to be brought is one to set the order made in the claim case. In Veera Pannadi v. Karuppa, 2 I. C. 980· 6 M. L T. 154, it has been held that a suit under this rule is one to set aside the order passed upon the claim, and is a form of appeal therefrom. The plaintiff in such a suit cannot ask for a declaration of a mortgage lien or charge. A suit under this rule is a suit to alter or set aside a summary decision or order of the Court and is a method of obtaining a review; Jamahar Kumari v Asharan, 22 C. L J. 27 (35 C. 202: 7 C L J. 86, folld.).

This rule is much wider in its scope than the corresponding s 283 of the Code of 1882, and unlike the latter section covers cases in which there has been no investigation. Under the new Code such orders become final if not set aside within one year, Narasinha v Vijiapola, 27 I. C 944: 2 L. W 206

A suit under this rule is maintainable although no claim is preferred under r. 58 and no order is made under r 61 The summary remedy given by r. 58, is alternative to the remedy by way of suit. The object of that rule is not to deprive a claimant of his remedy by suit, but to give him, if he is diligent, a more speedy and summary remedy.—Raghunath v. Sarosh, 23 B 266; Sunder Singh v Ghasi, 18 A. 410 (Man Kuar v. Tara Singh, 7 A 583 dissented from), Krishnabhupati v Vikrama, 18 M. 13 (17).

The effect of the judgment in the suit brought in accordance with this rule is to supersede the order under r 58 and to render it inconclusive — Kissori Mohun v. Harsukh Das, 17 C 436, P C

A suit under this rule is a continuation of claim proceedings. It is merely a form of appeal in the guise of an original suit. Certain property was released after a claim was put in. The claimant sold it to another person within one year from date of release The decree-holder sued under this rule to set aside the order in the claim case The purchaser is an alienee pendente lite, Krishnappa v Abdul Khader, 26 M L J. 449 (31 M 262 referred to)

In a suit under this rule the Court is not restricted to determine only the question as to whether property ought to be atached or not. The judgment debtor can plead that the decree was collusively obtained and the suit from the beginning to the end was a fraud, Bama Charan v Bogala, 23 I. C 755 (17 M. 387 folld).

It is open to a judgment-debtor to bring a suit under this rule without including a prayer for possession In a declaratory suit therefore it is unnecessary to consider whether the judgment-debtor is in possession or not; Saleka v Malladi, 16 M L T 300.

Person Objecting under Rule 58 can Plead Invalidity of Attachment When Suing under Rule 63.—A person who puts in a claim petition under r. 58 can, when asking for a declaration under r. 63 that his property is not liable to attachment, also show that either what was done was no attachment or that there was an invalid attachment which could not affect his rights in any way; Venkatappayya v Venkatachalapathi Rao, A I R 1927 M. 150.

Procedure under this Rule is Permissive.—The procedure prescribed by this Rule is only permissive and it does not in any way affect the right of a claimant to pay up the decretal amount in order to save the property from sale and then to sue to recover the amount from the party who wrongfully attached the property; Kanhaiya Lal v. The National Bank of India Ltd., 40 C 598 17 C L. J. 478 P. C.

"Party against whom an order is made."—If the order is made against the decree-holder under r 60, he may bring a suit under this rule to get a declaration of his rights to attach and sell the property; Mitchell v. Mathura, 12 I. A 150, Dallu Mal v Hari Das, 23 A. 263; Tofail v. Banee Madhub, 24 W R 394 The claimant whose claim has been disallowed under r 61, may sue the decree-holder under this rule to establish his right to the property attached; Narayanrav v. Balkrishna, 4 B. 529 A judgment-debtor who is not in fact a party to the claim proceedings does not become such only because he happens to be the judgment-debtor. unless therefore he is a party in fact, the order of release made in favour of the claimant is not binding on him, and he may institute a suit even after the lapse of one year from the date of the order, provided he does so within the ordinary period of limitation applicable to the suit, to establish his title to and recover possession of the property from the claimant, Krishna Sami v. Somasundaram, 30 M 325; Vadapalli v. Dronamraju, 31 M. 163; Shivappa v Dod, 11 B 114, Kedar v. Rakhal, 15 C. 674 The fact that a person became a representative of the judgment-debtor who was no party to the claim proceedings does not override the estoppel or relieve against the disability imposed by this rule; Ramu Iyer v. Palaniappa 35 M. 35

Where a claim or objection is preferred by a mortgagee under r. 58 and the Court disallows the objection owing to the default of the mortgagee to produce the mortgage deed in time, the unsuccessful objector comes within the words "the party against whom the order is made;" Debi Das v. Maharaj Rupchand, 25 A L J 609; 102 I. C. 172; A. I. R 1927 All. 593.

Necessary parties in a suit under this rule.—This rule provides that a party against whom an order under rule 60 or rule 61 is made, may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute. Such a suit must, under Art. 11 of the Limitation Act, 1908, be instituted within one year from the date of the order; otherwise the order made against him shall be conclusive The following persons are competent to file a suit under this rule.—

(1) The claimant whose claim to the attached property has been disallowed under r 61, may institute a suit against the decree-holder to establish his right to the attached property; Narayanrav v. Balkrishna, 4 B. 529 The judgment-debtor is a necessary party to such a suit; Ghasiram v Mangal Chand, 28 A 41

(2) The decree-holder against whom an order releasing the property from attachment is made, may institute a suit against the successful claimant for a declaration of his right to attach and sell the property; Mitchell v. Mathura Das, 12 I A 150. To such a suit the judgment-debtor is not necessary party, Ghasiram v Mangal Chand, 28 A. 41.

(3) The judgment-debtor may also, if he is affected by the order of release, institute a declaratory suit under this rule against the claimant

If the judgment-debtor is a party in fact, he will be bound by the order, unless he brings the suit within one year. If he is not a party in fact, his rights are not affected and he may bring a suit within the ordinary period of limitation. An order made in a claim case is not conclusive against or in favour of the judgment-debtor unless he was a party to the proceedings in which the order was passed.—Vadapalli Narasimham v. Dronamraju, 31 M. 163; Krishasami v. Somasundaram, 30 M. 325; Kedar v. Rakhal, 15 C. 674; Anantram v. Damodar Das, 22 I. C. 797.

There were two claim petitions—one on the allegation of purchase prior to attachment, the other claiming by survivorship. Both petitions were heard and the Court found that the property had passed by survivorship to one claimant, and plaintiff who was the other claimant, could not make good his claim of bona fide purchase. One order was however passed raising the attachment Held that though the Court passed an adverse opinion, that did not make the plaintiff " the party against whom an order " was passed; Ponaka Balarami v. Hazi Mahomed, 26 M. L. J. 499.

Where a claim has been rejected and the properties have been sold and purchased by a stranger purchaser, the decree-holder is not a necessary party to a suit by the claimant; Subbaraya v. Kandaswamy, 32 M. L. T. 124: 70 I. C. 168.

In a suit under this rule, the other creditor of the judgment-debtor need not be necessarily added. The attaching creditor, the judgment-debtor and the alleged transferee are the only proper parties; Surendra v. Kiranmoyi, 1 I. C. 428.

Where the contest was throughout between objector and judgment-debtor and the objection was allowed, held that the judgment-debtor was a party to the proceedings; Anant Ram v. Damodar, 22 I. C 797: 84 P. R. 1914.

As to who are necessary parties generally under this rule, see Durga v. Jatindra, 27 C. 493

Position of Purchaser.—Where property is sold subject to encumbrance, purchaser cannot question the validity of the incumbrance—Gurcharan v. Bachni, 30 I. C. 238, but a distinction must be made between cases where property is sold subject to incumbrance and cases where merely incumbrances are notified In the former case, the purchaser cannot question the validity of the encumbrance, in the latter case he can, Kali Das v Prosanna, 47 C. 446: 24 C. W N. 269. 55 I. C 189; Roshan v. Lallu, 68 I. C. 790.

Claims to property Attached Before Judgment.—Rules 58 to 63 apply also to claims preferred to property attached before judgment —Mallikarjun v. Matlapalli, 41 M. 849. 47 I. C 1000 F B; Prasada Nayudu v. Virayya 41 M. 849. 47 I C 1000 F B. Difference between attachment in execution and attachment before judgment pointed out in Pratab v. Sarat, 33 C L. J. 201, where it has been held that even after a release of attachment in execution, the attachment will revive, if a suit under this Rule succeeds but the claimant must be made a party within the period of limitation, but the attachment before judgment falls with the dismissal of a suit and does not revive even if the appeal succeeds

Nature of Suit under this Rule.—" A suit under this rule is not limited by any special standard of evidence or law. The claimant may, if necessary, thrash out his title in the fullest and most ultimate sense But if the title which he claims is not the ultimate full title to the property, then, of course, he must be content to assert whatever the title claimed may be So, too, the decree-holder may make out his debtor's title exactly as if it were a suit for possession by the judgment-debtor "; per Rankin J) Najmunnessa v Necharaddin, 51 C. 548: A. I. R. 1924 Cal 744: 83 I C 238; Vasudev v Eknath, 35 B. 79: 8 I. C. 630. There is nothing in this rule to limit the party unsuccessful in the claim proceedings under rules 60 and 61, to a suit for a mere declaration of his alleged right He is at liberty to pray for consequential relief to which he may be entitled. Thus it is competent for a plaintiff in a suit under this rule to pray for a declaration of his right to moveables and also for a direction that the defendant at whose instance they were attached, be ordered to pay him the value of the moveables; Basivi Reddi v. Ranayya, 40 M. 783. 31 M. L. J 394 36 I C 446, Sadu Bin v Ram Bin, 16 B. 609; Abdul Rahim v. Sital, 41 A 658, 54 I. C. 792 In a suit to establish a right under this rule, the plaintiff may include a prayer for refund of costs which he has been ordered to pay in the claim proceedings, and if he does not do so, the Court which tried the claim proceedings, cannot make an order for refund of the costs, Raghunath v Bedri Prasad; 6 A. 21.

"The right which he claims to the property."—The words "the right which he claims to the property in dispute" mean the right which is claimed in that proceeding in respect of the property, that is, the right to have it sold or the right to have it released from attachment. They do not mean the right or title to the property. Rr. 58, 61, 63 must be read together. Where therefore, a claimant being unsuccessful in a claim case has got the property released from attachment by coming to terms with the decree-holder without notice to the judgment-debtor, a suit subsequently brought by him against the judgment-debtor for recovery of possession is not barred by this rule —Morshia Barayal v. Elahi Bux, 3 C. L. J. 381 (15 C. 674, 31 C 228, followed) In an enquiry under this rule the Court may in a proper case go into questions of title and is not necessarily restricted to question of possession Maung Po v. Somasundaram, 39 I. C. 275.

"Subject to the result of such suit, the order shall be conclusive."—An order passed under r 61 rejecting a claim after investigation, will, if not contested by the claimant, operate as an estoppel in a subsequent suit —Bailur Krishna v. Lakshmana, 4 M. 302; Velayuthan v. Laksmana, 8 M 506; Krishnan v. Chadayan Kutti, 17 M. 17; Nemaganda v. Paresha, 22 B. 640; and Surnamayi v. Ashutosh, 27 C. 714. But an order passed without investigation is not conclusive.—Karsan v. Ganpatram, 22 B. 875 Nor an order passed without jurisdiction, in a claim preferred in execution of a mortgage-decree —1 C W. N 207. But under the present Code the order is conclusive, whether passed on investigation or not, and even when the claim case is dismissed for default Satindranath v. Shiva Prasad, 26 C. W N. 126. The alteration in the wordings of rr. 61-63 and Art. 11 of the Limitation Act to be particularly noticed. See also Machi Raju v. Sri Rajah, 41 M 985 . 48 I. C. 27 (F. B.), where it has been held that an order refusing to investigate a claim is one under this rule and therefore conclusive if not set aside by a suit within the time prescribed by Art 11 of the Limitation Act; and the practice of notifying claims to intending purchaser without deciding the claim case is condemned.

Where an order has been passed against any person making a claim to a property under attachment, if such person fails to bring a suit under this rule within the prescribed time, he is precluded from asserting his title against the auction-purchaser, whether plaintiff or defendant.—Nilo v. Rama, 9 B. 35; Yashvant Shenvi v Vithoba Shebi, 12 B 231; Surnomoyi v. Ashutosh, 27 C. 714; Dinkar Ballal v. Hari Shridhar, 14 B. 206; Badri Prasad v. Muhammad Yusuf, 1 A. 382; Jooni v. Bhagwan, 1 A. 541; Bibi Aliman v. Dhakeshwer Pershad, 1 C. L. J. 296. But see Mannu Lal v. Harsukh Das, 3 A. 283. Haripada v. Surendra, A. I. R. 1922 Cal 164; Piara Ram v Ganga Ram, 71 I. C. 45

Effect of Decision in Claim Case Regarding Possession—Whether Res Judicata.—The Code, in using the words "shall be conclusive" of the order made after the limited investigation contemplated by rr. 58 to 62, is thinking not of the subsequent effects of that decision as res judicata, but is thinking of and dealing with a Court that is doing something. The Court has attached and is going to sell. The meaning is that the act of the Court is to be void unless there is a suit. It means that the attachment held valid in the claim case shall be valid and the attachment removed shall be as though it never was, so far as the parties are concerned. The rule seems to mean that subject to a suit factum valet, the act of the Court shall not be questioned save in that way; the effect of the decision as to possession in other proceedings in which that question may again arise, is not the matter to which the words "shall be conclusive" are directly addressed; Najumunnessa v Macharaddin, 51 C. 548: A. I. R. 1924 C 744: 83 I C 288

Certain creditors attached some wakf properties and the mutawalli filed an objection. Court found the wakf invalid and the properties were sold. An heir of the wakf who was a judgment-debtor brought a suit for a declaration of his title in the properties Held, that the decision in the claim case was not res judicata, Ashan Bibi v Awaljadi, 21 C W N. 222.

Order When Not Conclusive.—A claimant whose claim is dismissed, but the attachment is withdrawn at the instance of another claimant subsequent to the order, is not bound to sue as once the attachment goes, the order dismissing his claim does not affect him; Gollumpalli v Sankara, 42 I. C. 683. But if after the rejection of the claim case, the claimant brings a suit, which is dismissed for default, and the execution case being withdrawn by the decree-holder for want of sufficient bid, the decree-holder makes a fresh application after 1 year, the claimant cannot bring a fresh suit, as the order in the claim case was conclusive as soon as the previous suit failed. This Rule has modified the old s 283 of C P Code.—Gopal v. Ganpat, 85 I. C. 321

Onus of Proof.—In a suit under this rule, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff and not on the defendant; Ramnath v Brindaban, 18 A 369; Nanuhijan v. Bhuri, 30 A 321· 5 A L J. 601; Perayya v Venkayyama, 47 M. L. J. 14: A I R 1924 M 770· 79 I C. 899; Al Bai v. Kahan, 8 Lah L. J 109: 67 I C 876

In a suit under this rule to establish the right to attach property, it is for the plaintiff to prove that the property in question is the property of the judgment-debtor, the onus of proof is upon him The defendant in defending such a suit may rely upon the title of a third person.—Adam Isufbhai v. Jamnadas, 17 B. 94.

Period of Limitation for Suits under this Rule.—A suit under this rule is governed by Art. 11 of the Limitation Act IX of 1908, and the period is one year from the date of the order. "It (the order under r. 60 or r. 61) is not conclusive; a suit may be brought to claim the property notwithstanding the order; but then the law of limitation says that the plaintiff must be prompt in bringing his suit. The policy of the Act evidently is to secure the speedy settlement of questions of title raised at execution sales, and for that reason, a year is fixed as the time within which the suit must be brought"; Sardhari v. Ambika, 15 I. A. 123. 15 C 521. Where an appeal is preferred from the order, the period of one year is to be calculated from the date of the appellate order; Venugopal v Venkatasubbiah, 39 M. 1196: 28 I. C. 867.

The order contemplated by r 61 is an order made after investigation into the facts of the case, and it is only where the order is made after such investigation that the limitation of one year is applicable to a subsequent suit under this rule.—Chandra Bhusan v. Ramkanth, 12 C. 108; Venkapa v Chenbasapa, 4 B 21 and 23-note; Rashbehary v. Buddun Chunder, 12 C L R 550; Kachinamthodi v. Kachinamthodi, 44 M. L. J 141; Goberdhandas v. Makundilal, 45 A. 438: 21 A. L. J. 342. Order dismissing claim for default is not an order made after investigation and need not be set aside within one year.—Sarala v. Kamsala, 31 M. 5; (Sarat Chandra v Tarini, 34 C 491 11 C W. N. 487 followed). See also Umacharan v Heronmoyee, 18 C. W N 770. See, however, Ponnusami v Samu 31 M L J 247 where it has been held that Art. 11 of Limitation Act, 1908, is more comprehensive and covers orders after full investigation as well as orders passed on default Where property is released from attachment after investigation under r. 60, limitation of one year is applicable.—Sardhari Lal v Ambika Pershad 15 C. 521, P. C.; Khub Lal v Ram Luchan, 17 C 260, and Koyyana Chittemma v. Daosy Gararamma 29 M 225 16 M L J 136; Bal Makund v. Saiyed Maqsud, 19 O. C. 357.

Where a claim is disallowed on the ground of the claimant not having given any evidence in support of the claim, the order is one under r 61 and therefore the rule of one year's limitation does apply.—Rahim Bux v Abdul Kadir, 32 C 537—[followed in Kurada Venkata Chalanathi v. Gudivada, 28 I. C 244 (1915) M. W. N. 188]; Bibi Aliman v. Dhakeshwer Pershad 1 C L J. 296 (15 C. 521; 12 C. L R. 43 followed). But see, Kakar Singh, v Torib Manton, 1 C. W. N. 24.

Where a mortgagee's claim or objection to attachment under r. 58 is disallowed, he comes within the words "the party against whom an order is made" and as such must sue within one year under Art. 11 of the Limitation Act to establish his mortgagee rights. The ordinary mortgagee's term of 12 years for suing is cut down to one year by such an adverse order, Debi Das v. Maharaj Rupchand, 25 A. L J. 609: 102 I. C. 792 A. I. R. 1927 A. 593

An essential condition precedent to a suit under this rule is the making of an attachment of some property; of objection being taken to such attachment; of investigation being made to such objection; and, lastly, of its being allowed or disallowed: and where these do not exist, the rule of one year's limitation does not apply.—Angan Lal v. Gudar Mal, 10 A. 470.

Where an attachment in respect of which a claim is disallowed is finally withdrawn on judgment-debtor's paying the decretal amount into Court, the claimant is not bound to bring his suit to establish his title to attached property within one year.—Ibrahimbhai v. Kabutabhai, 13 B. 72; Gopal Purshotam v. Bai Divali, 18 B. 241; Krishna Prasad v. Bepin Behari, 31 C. 228. But all these cases have been dissented from in Bibi Aliman v. Dhakeshwer Pershad, 1 C. L. J. 296.

Suit under this Rule Not Necessary if Property is Released from Attachment Within the Period of Limitation.—A claimant is not compelled de bene esse to institute a title suit under this rule within a year after his claim under r. 58 has been rejected, when the object sought by him in making the application under r 58 has been attained by the release of the property from attachment, e.g., by reason of the dismissal of the application under r. 57 for default of prosecution or by reason of the withdrawal of attachment on payment of the decretal amount by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder. In circumstances such as those, Art. 11 of the Limitation Act of 1908 does not apply, and the claimant is not affected by any of the consequences which result from a failure to institute a suit under this rule, Najmunnessa v. Nacharuddin, 51 C. 548: 83 I. C 233: A I. R. 1924 C. 744, Wamandhai v. Kanta Prasad, 22 N. L R 94. 97 I C. 178; Kumara v. Thevaraya, 48 M. L. J 616. A I. R. 1925 M 1113, Fateh Din v. Qutab Din, 3 L. 7: A. I R. 1922 L. 108, Mani Lal v. Natha Lal, 45 B. 561; Umes v Rajbullav, 8 C 279.

Suit for Refund of Purchase-money.—Where the claimant whose claim to the property under r. 61 is disallowed, brings a suit against the judgment-debtor for refund of the purchase-money paid by him for purchase of the property, such a suit is not barred by limitation even if instituted more than a year after the date of the order. The reason is that r. 63 does not apply to such a suit, Ratiram v. Brahmajit, 46 A. 45: A. I. R. 1924 A. 302: 77 I. C. 82.

Payment by Claimant under Protest.—If the claim fails and the property is not released, the claimant is not compelled to bring a suit under this rule for a declaration of his title to the property. In such a case, he may prevent the sale of the property by paying the decretal amount to the decree-holder and then sue for the recovery of the amount so paid under pressure of execution proceedings; Duli Chand v. Ram Kishen, 7 C 648; Jugdeo v. Rajah Singh, 15 C. 656. He may also pay the decretal amount under protest and then sue for refund as stated above; Kanhaiya Lal v. National Bank of India, 40 C 598. 40 I. A. 56

One Year's Limitation does Not Apply to Persons Who are Not Parties to Claim Case.—The law of one year's limitation could not apply to a person whom the Court had refused to make a party to the proceedings under r. 58 because he came in too late.—Raghoo Nath v. Bydo Nath, 14 W. R. 864.

A judgment-debtor is not necessarily a party to an investigation under r. 58 so as to preclude his instituting a suit after the lapse of one year from the date of the order to establish his title to the property which has been the subject-matter of a claim in execution proceedings.—Kedar Nath v. Rakhal Das, 15 C. 674. See also Ghasi Ram v. Mangal Chand, 2 A. L. J. 412: (1905) A. W. N. 172. 28 A. 41 and 30 M. 335: 17 M. L. J. 95, F. B.; Sadaya v. Amurthachari, 8 M. L. T. 417. In Guruva v. Subbarayudu, 13 M. 366, it has been held that, if there is nothing to show that the order releasing the attachment was an order against the judgment-debtor, or that he was a party to the proceeding, a suit by him for declaration of title to the property is not barred by one year's limitation. See also Imbichi Koya v. Kakkunnat Upakki, 1 M. 391; and Karsan v. Ganpatram, 22 B. 875. In Shivapa v. Dod Nagaya, 11 B. 114, it has been held that it must depend upon the facts of each case as to whether a judgment-debtor is to be regarded as a party to an investigation under r. 58.

If it appears that in a proceeding under r. 58 no notice was issued to the judgment-debtor, he cannot be regarded as a piaty to the proceedings, and the rule of one year's limitation does not apply to a suit brought by the judgment-debtor to establish his right to the property.—Ambalathilakath Moidin v. Ambalathilakath Kunhi, 25 M. 721. Followed in Krishnasami v. Somasundaram, 30 M. 335. 17 M. L. J. 95, F. B. Even if the judgment-debtor be a party to the proceedings but if the Court does not adjudicate upon the question of the judgment-debtor's title, but decides the case on the question of possession only, he or his heirs will not be bound by the order; Vedalingam v. Veerathal, 54 I. C. 580

Orders in Claim Proceedings to which the Present Rule Applies.—An order made on an application which does not come within the purview of r. 58, is not an order to which the present rule applies; Bala Krishna v. Rangan, 41 M. L. J. 334 69 I. C. 826; Biswanath v. Lingaraj, 1 Pat. 159: 70 I. C. 36. A. I. R. 1922 Pat. 408. It was held in some cases under the old Code that an order dismissing a claim for default, and without investigation, did not come under s. 283 (present rule), and such order not being "conclusive," the party against whom order was made, was not precluded from instituting a suit more than one year after the date of he order; Sarala v. Kamsala, 31 M. 5; Sarat v. Tarini, 11 C. W. N. 487; Chandrabhusan v. Ramkanta, 12 C. 108. But r. 63, which is more comprehensive than s. 283, applies to all orders made against a party under rule 60 or rule 61, even if the order was made for default or without full investigation; Satindra v. Siva, 26 C. W. N. 126: 64 I. C. 718 A. I. R. 1922 Cal 166; Wamandhar v. Kamta Prasad, 21 N. L. R. 94: 97 I. C. 179; Nagendra v. Fani Bhusan, 45 C. 785; Gopal Singh v. Ganpat Rai, 35 I. C. 821; Gulab v. Mutassadi Lal, 41 A. 623: 50 I. C. 746. Where the Court rejects a claim or objection preferred under r. 59 on the ground that it was designedly or unnecessarily delayed, the order is one made against the claimant or objector within the meaning of this rule; Venkataratnam v. Ranganayakamma, 41 M. 985, 45 I. C. 270 F. B., Gobardhan Das v. Makundi Lal, 45 A. 439: A. I. R. 1923 All 485: 74 I. C. 1024; Ansamma v. Moidin, 47 M. 160: A. I. R. 1924 Mad 111: 77 I. C. 264; Kumara v. Thevaraya, 48 M. L. J. 616: 87 I. C. 635. A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1118.

Effect of Attachment on Adverse Possession.—Attachment of property in execution of a decree does not arrest the running of time in favour of a party holding the property adversely to the judgment-debtor; Seetami v. Venku, 11 M. L. J. 344; Ranganatha v. Srinivasa, 49 M. L. J. 656: A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 42: 90 I. C. 1037. A contrary view was taken by the Calcutta High Court in Najimunnesa v. Nacharuddin, 51 C. 548: 83 I. C. 233: A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 744, and by the Bombay High Court in Vasudeo v. Eknath, 35 B. 79: 8 I. C. 639.

Step in Aid of Execution.—The institution of a regular suit by the decree-holder under this rule to set aside an order in a claim case, is a step in aid of execution within the meaning of Article 179 (4) of the Limitation Act, 1877.—Rudra Narain v. Pachu Maity, 28 C. 487 (1 A. 355; 23 W. R. 183; and 5 B. 29, referred to). But see Raghunandun v. Bhugoo Lall, 17 C. 268; and Desraj Singh v. Karan Khan, 19 A. 71, where a contrary view seems to have been taken. See also Narayana v. Pappi Brahmani, 10 M. 22, which has been overruled by 28 M. 50, F. B.

Limitation for recovery of compensation for wrongful attachment and sale of moveables—see notes under rule 78 of this Order.

Jurisdiction of Provincial Small Cause Courts to Entertain Suits under this Rule.—A suit will not lie in the Small Cause Court to establish right to moveable property after an adverse order under rr 60, 61, 62.—Moosdeen v. Dinobundhoo, 13 W. R 99; Ilahi Buksh v. Sita, 5 A. 462; Mukand v. Nasiruddin 4 A. 416; Dakhyani Debea v Dole Gobind, 21 C. 480: Chhagan v Jeshan, 5 B. 503 and 505-note; Mahomed Koya v. Kasmi, 9 M. 206; Shiboo Narain v. Mudden, 7 C 608: 9 C. A suit to recover moveable property attached under colour of the Rent Recovery Act (Mad Act VIII of 1865) is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes—Davud Beg v. Kutlappa, 11 M 264

See also Schedule II, clauses 19 and 20 of the Provincial Small Cause Court's Act, (IX of 1887)

An order made upon a claim to attach the property filed in the Small Cause Court of Calcutta under Or XXI, r 58, is " an order in the suit " within the meaning of section 37 of the Presidency Small Cause Court's Act (XV of 1882), and is final, subject only to the right to apply for a new trial. The Small Cause Court has full power and authority to determine the question of title under a mortgage over attached property; and that question is therefore res judicata—Dino Nath v. Nuffer Chunder, 25 C. 778: 3 C W N 590. See also Ismail Solomon v. Mahomed Khan, 18 C 296

Court-fee.—A party against whom an order has been made under rules 60, 61, dismissing his claim to the attached property, can bring his suit to establish his right to the property on a stamp paper of Rs. 10, under Schedule II, Article 17 of the Court Fees Act—Dhondo Sahkaram v. Gobind Babaji, 9 B. 20; Phulkumari v Ghansyam, 35 C 202, P. Jurisdiction.—In a suit for a declaration that property is not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree, where the value of the property is in excess of the amount claimed in execution of the decree, the valuation of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is not the value of the property but the decretal amount; Khetra v. Mumtaz, 38 A 72: 31 I. Appeal and Revision.—No appeal lies from an order which properly comes under r. 60 The High Court also refused to interfere in revision —Dayaram v. Gobardhan Dass, 28 B. 458. See, however, Sabhapathi v. Narayansami, 25 M. 555; and also Satkari v. Tirtha Narain, 24 I. SALE GENERALLY.

Power to order property attached to be sold and proceeds to be paid to person entitled.

64. Any Court executing a decree may order that any property attached by it and liable to sale, or such portion thereof as may seem necessary to satisfy the decree, shall be sold, and that the proceeds of such sale, or a sufficient portion thereof, shall be paid to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same. Sales by whom conducted and how made.

COMMENTARY.

The words " save as otherwise prescribed every sale," " such other " and " in this behalf " are new.

As to sale of negotiable instrument, see s 78; as to agricultural produce, see ss 74, 75.

" Shall be conducted by an officer of the Court " etc.—It is the Nazir's business to complete the sale, although the Court (as well as the Nazir) has a discretion to decline acceptance of the highest bid when the price is extremely inadequate The Court has a quasi-revisional jurisdiction under condition 8 of the sale-proclamation and it does not require the Court itself to knock down the property. If a person bids at a sale and the property is knocked down to him, the mere fact that the Court has power to annul or confirm the Nazir's action does not leave it open to the bidder to withdraw his bid. The sale becomes complete; Rajendra v. Upendra, 19 C W. N 633, 21 C L J. 174: 27 I. C 805. Even where a sale is held by an auctioneer nominated by parties the sale is regarded as sale by Court.—J C Galstaun v Woomesh, 35 I. C 850

This rule clearly contemplates the employment of agents for the conduct of execution sales Receipt of purchase money by agents is equivalent to receipt of assets by Court for purposes of s 73; Galstaun v. Woomesh, 35 I C 850

The Court executing a decree passed an order postponing a sale, but the order failed to reach the officer conducting the sale, and the sale was subsequently held The judgment-debtor applied to set aside the sale. Held that the sale was illegal and void.—Sant Lal v. Umarunnissa, 1 A. 06 (4 A 382, 3 A 701; and 11 A. 333, referred to).

In sales under the direction of the Court, it is incumbent on the Court to be scrupulous in the extreme and very careful to see that no taint or touch of fraud or deceit or misrepresentation is found in the conduct of its officers. Where the conditions of the sale were read out in English which the purchasers did not understand, and a purchaser was led to believe by one of its officers that a substantial property freed and discharged from all incumbrances was being sold, though as a matter of fact the property was subject to incumbrances in amount far exceeding its value. Held that the sale was bad and must be set aside on the ground of misrepresentation; apart from this a Court is bound to set aside a sale induced by the misrepresentation of its accredited agent.—Mahomed Kala Mea v Harperink, 16 C. W. N. 249, P. C.: 9 C. L. J. 105: 36 C 323.

66. (1) Where any property is ordered to be sold by public auction in execution of a decree, the Court shall cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be made in the language of such Court.

Proclamation of sales by public auction.

(2) Such proclamation shall be drawn up after notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor and shall state the time and place of sale, and specify as fairly and accurately as possible—

(a) the property to be sold;

(b) the revenue assessed upon the estate or part of the estate, where the property to be sold is an interest in an estate or in part of an estate paying revenue to the Government;

(c) any incumbrance to which the property is liable;

(d) the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered; and

(e) every other thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property.

(3) Every application for an order for sale under this rule shall be accompanied by a statement signed and verified in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for the signing and verification of pleadings and containing, so far as they are known to or can be ascertained by the person making the verification, the matters required by sub-rule (2) to be specified in the proclamation.

(4) For the purpose of ascertaining the matters to be specified in the proclamation, the Court may summon any person whom it thinks necessary to summon and may examine him in respect to any such matters and require him to produce any document in his possession or power relating thereto. [S. 287.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule corresponds to section 287, C P Code, with several additions and alterations

In sub-rule (2) the words "shall be drawn up after notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor" have been added A notice is now necessary for settling the terms of sale

Sub-rule (3) reproduces para 2 of section 287 of the old Code with much elaboration embodying in it the law as laid down in the case of Sn- mati Girібala v. Srimati Rani Mina Kumari, 5 C. W. N. 497 (502) noted below. The verified petition, which under the old Code, was required to be filed at the time of attachment is under the present Code to be filed after attachment and before issue of sale proclamation.

In sub-rule (4) the words "in the proclamation" are new.

Para. 8 of section 287 of the old Code which empowered the High Courts to make rules under the old section, has been omitted; probably in view of sections 120 to 131 by which High Courts have been empowered to make rules consistent with the provisions of the Code. By virtue of s. 157, the rules framed under the old Code are still to be considered as law. See also, Lal Mohan v. Nunu, 17 C. 102.

The last para. of s. 287 has also been omitted and reproduced as a separate rule (rule 70).

"After notice."—Formerly in th[illegible] proclamation was usually drawn up without notice to [illegible] his back, so that he did not receive any [illegible] was fixed up in the Court house or was published upon the property. The judgment-debtor had therefore some excuse for not putting forward any objection; Raja Ramessur v Rai Sham, 8 C. W. N 257 (263). This defect has been remedied in the present Code, and a notice has to be served on the judgment-debtor before the sale proclamation is drawn up. Where after service of notice the judgment-debtors did not appear and object, but allowed the properties to be sold, it is not open to them to subsequently raise objections to the sale proclamation on the ground of misdescription; Subbaraya v. Muthammal, 22 I. C. 780 (12 M 19 P. C.: 21 I. C 389. 25 M L. J. 198 folld.); Mahadeo Singh v. Dhobi Singh, 4 Pat. L. T. 721. 74 I C. 838 Omission to issue or serve notice under this rule is a default within r. 57; Namuna v. Roshan, 15 C. W. N. 428

Notice to judgment-debtor only enables him to put his case before the Court, but if the decree-holder insists that a much smaller valuation should be inserted and the Court accepts his view, the decree-holder proceeds to sale at his risk and its validity may be subsequently challenged by the judgment-debtor; Ram Singh v. Janardan, 14 C. L. J. 541.

Omission to issue notice is an irregularity under r. 90; Bepin Behari v. Kanti, 18 I C. 715. Though a material irregularity, it must result in substantial injury before a Court sale can be set aside under Or. XXI, r. 90; Kanhyalal v. Megh Raj, A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 84.

Omission to serve a notice is more than a mere irregularity and renders the Court sale void.—Ramaswami v. Ma U Tha, 38 I. C. 98, but see Krishnaji v Bali Ram, 44 I. C. 252, where it has been held that notice under this rule is directory and not mandatory.

For form of Notice under sub-rule (2), see Appendix E, Form No 29

"Proclamation shall state time and place of sale."—The practice is to hold sales on certain fixed days of the month. These dates are known as sale dates. Sales are held on those days, and continued from day to day till finished.

The Court shall cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be made, giving the time and place of sale.—Makendra Narain v. Gopal Mondul, 17 C. 769.

When the proclamation advertised the sale to take place at the Court house, it is a material irregularity to hold the sale at the premises of some of the buildings advertised for sale.—Duni Chand v. Atma Singh, 182 P. R. 1906: 11 P. L. R. 1907.

A property advertised for sale was sold on the day fixed, but at an earlier hour than that stated in the proclamation. Held that there had been no sale within the meaning of the Code: proclamation of the time and place and the holding of it at such time and place, being conditions precedent to the sale being a sale under the Code.—Basharullah v. Uma Churn, 16 C. 764. See also, Chedami Lal v. Amir Beg, 7 A. 676; Khodeja Bebee v. Ram Narain, 12 W. R. 511; Pokhraj Singh v. Gossain Munraj Pooree, 12 W. R. 281; and Kishen Prosunno v. Nurduma Dossee, 17 W. R. 339.

Where the sale proclamation omitted to state the place of sale, and where the sale took place on a date other than that notified in the proclamation, and before the expiration of 30 days required by r. 68.—Held that the non-compliance with provisions was more than mere irregularity.—Jasoda v. Mathura, 9 A 511 (7 A. 289 referred to). See also, Marug Po Tha v. S. R. Chettyar, A. I R 1927 Rang. 84.

Under the Code it is intended that a sale of moveable property attached in execution of a decree should ordinarily be held in some place within the jurisdiction of the Court ordering the sale.—Lakhmi Bai v. Santapa Revapa, 13 B 23.

A sale held on a holiday is illegal; Haro Jamadar v. Jadub, 3 W. R. Mis. 24. But see Bisram v Sahibunnissa, 3 A 333.

See notes under rule 90 of this Order.

Fresh Proclamation.—Where a sale is postponed indefinitely or to a fixed date, it is necessary, in the absence of any express arrangement between all the parties that a fresh proclamation should be made, giving notice of the day to which the sale has been postponed.—Gopee Nath v Roy Luchmeeput, 3 C. 542 · 1 C. L. R 349; Okhoy Chunder v. Erskine, 8 W. R. Mis. 11; Shoshee Mookhee v. Dwarka Nath, 6 W. R Mis. 84; Jhoomuck Chowdhry v Radha Pershad, 25 W. R 328.

Where subsequent to the proclamation a portion of the property was released to a third party, a fresh proclamation must be made; Shib Prokash v. Sardar, 3 C. 544.

"Proclamtaion shall specify the property."—A judgment-debtor has the right to have the property to be sold described with reasonable accuracy.—Raja Ramessur Prosad v. Rai Sham Kissen, 8 C W N 257

In the advertisement of the sale the property was described as that of the widow, and the interest to be sold was described as that of the deceased debtor. Held that the purchaser at the sale acquired the property of the deceased debtor in the estate, and had a good title against the heir.—Ishan Chunder v. Buksh Ali, March 614; W R F B 119;

Nussceerun v Ameeroodeen, 24 W. R. 8; Hulkhory Lall v. Sheo Churn, 21 W. R. 109, Abdul Kureem v Jaun Ali, 18 W. R. 56; Satish Chunder v. Nilcomul, 11 C 15, and Devji v. Sambhu, 24 B. 135

Where a property is described at the time of an execution sale as the property of the debtors who were as mere representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor, prima facie, what is sold is the property of the deceased debtor.—Lalla Seeta Ram v Ram Buksh, 24 W. R. 383.

At a sale of an under-tenure for arrears of rent the growing crops passes to the purchaser, except where it has been specially excepted by the sale notification.—Afatoolla v. Dwarka Nath, 4 C 814: 4 C. L. R. 95

If there is any ambiguity in the sale proclamation; the decree should be looked into to see what was actually sold; Piarey Lal v Ramchandra, 96 I. C. 771: A. I R 1926 All 730

Where, on an execution sale, there is a discrepancy between the conditions in the notification of what is to be sold and the certificate of what has been sold, the conditions in the notification are to be taken as of superior authority in dealing with the conflicting claims of innocent third parties whose rights are affected by the variation.—Uma Churn v Gorind Chunder, 1 C. L R 460; Gowree v. Surut Chunder, 22 W. R. 408 See however, Dwarka v Aloke, 9 C 641.

R 66 prescribes the statements and information to be given by the proclamation of sale —Tasadduk Rosul v. Ahmad Husain, 21 C 66 P. C

Where in the sale of a certain share in a mahal which was described in the schedule, the share was attached and sold, but the Court issued a sale certificate in respect of a share in a different property, held that there was no power to sell the latter share since it was not a case of mere misdescription but of a mistake as to identity. That which is sold in a judicial sale can be nothing but the property attached, and that property is conclusively described, in and by the schedule to which the attachment refers; Raja Thakur v Jiban Ram, 40 C 590 P. C.: 18 C. W. N. 313 26 M. L. J 89: 21 I. C. 936

Duty of the Court to Settle the Sale Proclamation Itself.—It is the duty of the Court to settle the proclamation of sale itself. If it does not do it, but deputes a Commissioner to do it, the sale is invalid. The fact that the person seeking to set aside the sale was aware of the contents of the proclamation prepared by the Commissioner, is immaterial; Appu v. Achutha Menon, 49 M. 383: 91 I. C. 8: A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 735

" The revenue assessed upon the estate or part of it."—The " part of an estate " means the aliquot part of an estate.—Kally Prosonna v Dino Nath, 11 B. L. R. 56; 19 W. R. 434.

Where, on account of submersion of a mahal, it was neither attached nor advertised for sale, and the revenue assessed thereon was not referred to in the sale proceedings and the sale certificate contained no reference to it as the property sold, held that such a sale did not convey any right to the purchaser.—Fida Hosain v. Kutub Husain, 7 A. 38 (5 A. 66 referred to).

An objection to the validity of a sale of revenue-paying land, that the revenue assessed had not been stated in the sale proclamation cannot be entertained for the first time in the Court of appeal.—Macnaghten v. Mahabir, 9 C. 656, P. C. (reversing 9 C. L R. 134).

The sale proclamation should contain the statement as to the revenue assessed upon the estate and its omission is a material irregularity upon which the judgment-debtor can base an application for setting aside the sale if he could satisfy the other conditions required by the Code.—Ball Ram v Seth Narsingh Das, 75 I C. 546 P C · 45 M. L. J. 403

"Any incumbrance to which the property is liable."—Under this rule the Court will simply notify the incumbrance without deciding whether it is real or fictitious The distinction between this rule and r. 62 pointed out.—Shib Kunwar v. Sheo Prasad, 28 A. 418: 3 A. L. J. 200 As to the difference between r 66 and r. 62, see notes to r. 62

Where in an execution proceeding, on an application of the mortgagee of the property required to be sold, the mortgage was, without any inquiry as to its genuineness, notified and the property was purchased by the decree-holder held, that in a suit on that mortgage, the purchaser was not estopped from pleading that it was fictitious, unless there was on his part any declaration, act or omission debarring him from setting up the fictitiousness; Jairaj Mal v Radha Kishen, 35 A 257 · 20 I. C 182 (28 A. 418 followed).

Where it was merely proclaimed that a mortgage existed, the auction-purchaser cannot be obliged to discharge the incumbrance, if it appears that the document did not create any charge on the property purchased; Ganesh Prasad v. Bisram, 18 I C 461

When a party to a suit having a charge or incumbrance on the property in suit ordered to be sold, fails to have it notified in the sale proclamation, he is estopped from subsequently setting up his lien against the auction purchaser; Manik Ram v. Ram Autar, 27 I. C. 611 (22 B. 686 referred to).

Where the existence of certain incumbrances is notified, the purchaser is not estopped from showing the invalidity of the incumbrance; Lala Bhagwan v. Chaudhuri, 36 I C. 782.

The absence of specification of the incumbrances coupled with the fact that the property is undervalued amounts to a material irregularity.—Moti Laul v. Bhawani Kumari, 6 C. W. N. 836

It is the duty of the person applying for execution to disclose his own lien (which he must know of) in this application for sale, and the Court is to specify the same in the proclamation. A purchaser purchasing without notice of such incumbrance, purchases the property free of the mortgagee's lien.—Ram Chandra v Jairam, 22 B. 686 (7 M 107, and 12 B 678, referred to) See also, Kasturi v Venkata Chalapathi, 15 M 412 See, however, Dondo v Raoji, 20 B 290

Where a decree-holder stated in his application under sub-rule (3) that the property to be sold was subject to a mortgage in his favour, but no mention of the mortgage was made in the sale-proclamation, held that the omission not being due to any fraud on his part, the decree-holder was not estopped from enforcing his mortgage against the auction-purchaser; Ram Sarup v. Bharat Singh, 43 A. 703: 64 I. C. 763. But if he omitted to mention his mortgage in the application, he would be estopped from enforcing the mortgage; Kalidas v. Prasanna, 47 C. 446: 58 I. C. 189.

In a proclamation of sale in execution of a mortgage decree, it is most material that it should be known whether there is any incumbrance, prior or puisne to the mortgage, on account of which the property is to be advertised for sale.—Debendra Narain v. Ramtaran, 30 C. 599, p. 606: 7 C. W. N. 766, F. B.

There is no objection to the sale in execution of a decree for sale on a mortgage "subject to the charge" of property which is liable to a charge for maintenance in favour of a particular person.—Lalman v. Mohar Singh, 29 A. 205. 3 A. L. J. 848: (1907), A. W. N. 18.

When property is sold subject to incumbrances specified in the sale proclamation under this rule the auction-purchaser purchases the property subject to those incumbrances; and if in a subsequent suit or proceeding, the specified incumbrances are declared invalid, the auction-purchaser cannot hold the property without making good the amount of the incumbrances. The decree-holder is also estopped from denying the truth of the representations made by him and must pay to the judgment-debtor the amount of the incumbrances represented by him to be subsisting.—Inayat Singh v. Izzaunnissa Begam, 27 A. 97, F. B. Reversed in Izzatunnissa v. Kunwar Pertab 31 A. 583 P. C.: 13 C. W. N. 1143: 10 C. L. J. 313 Distinguished in 28 A. 418.

Claims admitted by parties or established by a decree of a Court should be entered in the proclamation of sale as charges upon the property, though they have come to the knowledge of the Court in an enquiry under this section only, and have not been made the subject of an order under this section.—Shantapa v. Subrao, 18 B. 175.

An arrear of rent due in respect of the property sought to be sold is to be regarded as an incumbrance to which the property is liable, and the omission to notify the arrears of rent due at the date of the issue of the proclamation had the effect of destroying the lien which the decree-holder has upon the tenure.—Giribala Debai v. Rani Minakumari, 5 C. W. N. 497 (10 C. 609, and 15 M. 412, referred to).

If a mortgage is merely notified and the property is not sold subject to mortgage, the decree-holder or the purchaser is not estopped from questioning its validity.—Roshan v. Lallu, 44 A. 714: 68 I. C. 700. But if the decree-holder fails to notify his own mortgage on the property, he is estopped thereafter to set up the mortgage against the auction purchaser.—Maung Kyin v. Ma Pwa, 64 I. C. 953. If the mortgage turns out to be invalid, the benefit is taken by the purchaser and judgment-debtor cannot claim refund of the amount alleged to have been due on the mortgage and the purchaser is free to contest the legality or validity of the mortgage when he is attacked by the mortgagee.—Krishnakishore v. Nagendrabala, 34 C. L. J. 333.

"Every other thing which the Court considers material" etc.—The proclamation shall specify as fairly and accurately as possible the property to be sold, the revenue assessed upon it, the incumbrances and every other thing which the Court considers material for the purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property the Court is selling and he is purchasing.—Ghulam Shahbir v. Dwarka, 18 A. 163 (165).

In ascertaining the value, only the rents realizable from the tenants and not the abwabs should be taken into account.—Shosi Bhusan v. Ahmed Hossein, 7 C W N. 439.

An arrear of rent due in respect of the property to be sold is to be regarded as one of the matters material for the purchaser to know.—Giribala Debia v. Rani Minakumari, 5 C. W. N. 497.

If the execution Court should have reason to believe that the property which was ordered to be sold, was an occupancy holding, it should enter the fact in the sale proclamation as warning to an intending purchaser that he might take nothing by his purchase.—Basdeo Prasad v. Juthan Ram, 27 A. 684: 2 A. L J. 401. (1905) A. W. N. 138.

Clause (c) of this section covers cases of puisne as well as prior incumbrances.—Hari Kishen v. Gisborne & Co, 9 C. W. N ccc (300).

Value of the Property.—The rule does not say that the sale proclamation shall specify the value of the property It lays down that it shall state every thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property. The value of the property is no doubt a material fact for the purchaser to know, and a misstatement or undervaluation may lead to serious consequences. Gross or deliberate undervaluation has been held to be material irregularity. The rule therefore in effect seem to require that the value must be stated. See also, proviso to r 17 of this order. It has been held that the exact value of the property to be sold must be stated in the sale proclamation as fairly and accurately as possible, inasmuch as it is a material fact for the purchaser to know and an under-statement of the value is a material irregularity, Sadatmand Khan v. Phul Kuar, 20 A 412, P. C.: 2 C. W. N 550. Followed in Sivadurga v Rajmohan, 15 C. W N. 577; Pran Singh v. Janardan, 14 C L J. 541; Madarsah v Palaniappa, 23 M. 628; and in Sivasami v Ratnasami, 23 M. 568. Relied upon in Moti Lal v. Bhawani, 6 C W. N 836; and in Rajah Rammessur Proshad v. Rai Sham Krissen, 8 C. W N 257 Distinguished in Jashinuddin v Monmohini, A I R 1922 Cal 93. These cases have been explained in Kashi Pershad v. Jamuna, 31 C 922 8 C W N. 542, holding that the law does not require a Court to make an investigation on the question of valuation. In Surendra Mohan v. Hurduck Chand, 12 C. W N. 542, it has been held that it cannot be laid down generally that in no case should any enquiry be made as to the value of the judgment-debtor's property to be sold before issuing the sale proclamation (31 C 922 8 C W N 264 commented on; doubted in 14 C W N. 40-n) The Court must make an enquiry as to the value of the property where the judgment-debtor objects; 11 C L. J. 63-n The enquiry under this rule is intended to be of a summary character, Pran Singh v Janardan, 14 C L J. 541 Gross or deliberate under-valuation is a material irregularity; T[illegible] Krishna v. Moti Chand, 40 C. 635, P. C., 17 C. W. N. 637; Sit[illegible];

v. Rajmohan, 15 C. W. N. 577. The value of the property must be stated as fairly and accurately as possible. The Court ought not to enter in the sale proclamation a statement that the property to be sold is valued by one person at a particular sum and by another at a larger sum; Raghunath v. Hazari, 37 I C 872 2 Pat. L. J. 130, F. B. But see Bejoy Singh Dudhuria v Ashutosh, 28 C. W. N. 552, where it has been held that a Court is justified in stating the valuation given by both parties instead of attempting itself to value the property when the property was one that it was most difficult to value accurately. If there is a wide difference between the values given by the two parties, the valuation as given by the judgment-debtor should also be stated in the sale proclamation; Basanta v. Baikuntha, A I R. 1926 Cal. 610: 91 I C. 819.

The insertion of any valuation in the sale proclamation other than the valuation fixed by the Court is calculated to mislead intending bidders and is therefore wrong. A sale held under such circumstances can be set aside; Damrupat Singh v Rameshwar Singh, A. I. R. 1923 Pat 208

Effect of an Order under this Rule.—This rule imposes upon the Court the duty of stating as fairly and accurately as possible any encumbrance to which the property is liable, with any other things which it considers material for the purchasers to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property But an order passed by the Court in the course of such an enquiry is not conclusive as between the decree-holder or purchaser on the one hand and the holder of the encumbrance on the other; Lala Bhagwan v Chaudhuri, 36 I. C. 732.

Sub-rule (3). Application to be Accompanied by a Verified Statement.—This rule has given effect to the practice that prevailed in the Madras Presidency and embodies the law laid down in Srimati Giribala v Srimati Rani Mina Kumari, 5 C W. N 497 (502).

The omission in an application in execution for attachment of immoveable property to verify the inventory of the property sought to be attached is an irregularity only and does not vitiate the application.—Nasirunnissa v. Ghufuruddin, 28 A 214 (1905), A W N 263 (22 A. 55 followed)

Sub-rule (4). Court may Summon Any Person.—On this point Prinsep, J, points out the duty of the lower Courts and gives instructions for their guidance —Debendra Narain v. Ram Taran, 30 C. 599 (607): 7 C W. N 766, F. B. The enquiry under this rule is intended to be of a summary character; Pran Singh v Janardan, 14 C L. J. 541.

A claim set up in an investigation under this rule cannot be treated as a claim under r 58 the latter having reference to claims to property under attachment.—Bhiku Bal v Khem Chand, 14 B. 369.

Appeal.—It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that an order under this rule determining the value of immoveable property is merely interlocutory and is not appealable as a decree; Deoki Nandan v. Bansi, 16 C. W. N. 124 · 14 C L. J 35 (approving Sivagami v. Subramania, 27 M. 259 F. B); Panch Duar v. Mani Raut, 16 C. W. N. 970. Mahammad Eahasan v. Tara Prasanna, 22 I. C. 548; Sashikanta v Fooljan Bewa, 96 I. C. 567: A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 1184. Though an order merely fixing the value of a property is not open to appeal but an order under r. 66 may in certain circumstances also amount to an order under

s. 47, and in such cases it is appealable; Debendra v. Kailash, A. I. R 1925 Cal. 318; Basanta v. Baikuntha, A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 610: 91 I. C 810; Alimuddin v. Gobinda Prasad, A. I. R. 1927 All. 208. The Madras High Court, in Sivagami v. Subramania, 27 M. 259, and in Ramanathan v Venkatachelam, 44 M. L. J. 599, has held that an order under this rule determining the value of the property to be sold, the place where the sale is to take place, the lots in which it is to be sold and the amount for the recovery of which the sale is to take place, is not a judicial but an administrative order, and it does not therefore come within s. 47 and is not appealable. The same view was also taken in Lanka v. Lanka, 46 M. L. J. 193: A. I. R 1924 Mad 527, that no appeal lies from an order directing the order in which the property should be sold. The Allahabad High Court, in Ajudhia Prasad v. Gopinath, 39 A. 415: 39 I C. 415, also held that an order under this rule determining the value of property, is not appealable under s. 47, as it is not a judicial order. The Patna High Court has also held in a recent case that an order of the Court determining any of the particulars to be stated in the sale proclamation, is not a final order, and is not therefore appealable; Mohit Narain v. Thakan, 4 Pat. 731: 88 I. C. 332: A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 500. The same High Court held in two earlier cases that an order of the Court determining the value of the property was merely interlocutory and therefore not appealable; Deokinandan v. Raja Dhakeshwar, 2 Pat L J 13; Saurindra v Mritunjay, 5 Pat L J 270: 56 I. C. 452.

An order fixing price of the property to be sold does not conclusively determine the right of parties and hence not appealable as a decree under s. 2, C. P. Code, nor is such an order an appealable one.—Ramanathan v. Somasundara, 37 I. C 897. But see contra in Kanhaia Lal v. The Bank of Upper India Ld., 49 I C. 539, where it has been held that the order of the Court is a judicial order and hence appealable The weight of authority however is against the latter view, see Bejoy v. Dhirendra 47 I. C. 512; Deokinandan v. Raja Dhakeswar, 2 Pat L. J. 13: Giridhari v. Altaf, 46 I. C. 564; N. C Chatterji v R M. K. Karpan, 36 I. C 402; Ajodhia Prasad v. Gopinath, 39 A. 415: 39 I. C. 578, Raja Braja Sunder v Sivaranjan, 59 I. C 282; Avudainayagappa v. Sundaranandan, 76 I. C 731

Where after notice under this rule, the judgment-debtor put forward certain objections, which were summarily rejected, held that the decision was under s 47 and appealable; (per Walsh, J) Shiam Lal v. Roshan, 35 I. C. 230: 14 A. L J. 363.

Sec. 288, C P Code, 1882, which was to the effect that " no Judge, etc., shall be answerable for error in the proclamation, unless it has been committed dishonestly " has been omitted from the present Code. " The commmittee are opinion that, having regard to the provisions of Act XVIII of 1850, the section may safely be omitted."—Report of the Special Committee.

Revision.—An order under this rule can be interfered with by the High Court in Revision under s. 107 of the Government of India Act, if not under s. 115 of the C. P Code, Raghunath v. Hazari, 37 I. C 872, 2 Pat. L. J 180 F. B.

Miscellaneous Cases.—Property to which title is made out by gift is not property inherited within the meaning of r 5, Chap IV of the General

Rules of Practice for the Civil Courts, and such property is consequently not ancestral, Fazal Ahmad v. Wesaluddin, 38 A. 481: 14 A. L. J. 609

Mode of making proclamation.

(2) Where the Court so directs, such proclamation shall also be published in the local official Gazette or in a local newspaper, or in both, and the costs of such publication shall be deemed to be costs of the sale. [S. 289.]

COMMENTARY.

Sub-rule 3 is new It has been framed to meet the conflicting decisions reported in 11 C. 74, 12 B. 368 and 12 C. W N. 757, noted below. In the case reported in 12 C W N 757, all the cases on the point have been referred to and discussed

"Proclamation shall be made."—See notes to rule 54 under the heading "Order shall be proclaimed."

Publication of a sale proclamation upon the decree-holder's property at a distance of half a mile from the judgment-debtor's property, is a material irregularity in the publication of the sale —Jamini Mohun v. Chandra Kumar, 6 C W N 44.

Where it appeared that the sale notification had not been fixed up in the Collector's office as required by this section that no affidavit as to search having been made in the Registry office with regard to incumbrances as required by r. 66, had been filed, and that sale took place on and not after the 30th day from the publication of the notice; but it also appeared that the applicant had himself been present at the sale and had purchased the property, and it was not shown that any substantial injury had resulted from the irregularities,—held that there was no ground for setting aside the sale.—Bandy Ali v Madhub Chunder, 8 C. 932.

A sale of revenue-paying land is not, ipso facto, void by reason of a copy of the sale proclamation not having been fixed up in the Collector's office as required by this section —Nana Kumar v. Golam Chunder, 18 C. 422 F. B. (8 C 932; 11 C. 74 and 658, referred to).

Advertisement.—It is right that the Court should permit any advertisement reasonably required which might have the effect of giving notice to all possible purchasers; Rai Manindra v. Luchmeshwar, 1 C. W. N clv. (n) If an advertisement in the Calcutta Gazette describing the property differed from that in the schedule of attachment, it could not be relied on to validate the sale of the property which was not the property to which the attachment related; Raja Thakur v. Jiban Ram, 41 C. 590 P. C. 18 C. W. N. 313.

Sub-rule (3). Division of Property into Lots.—It was held under the old Code that when distinct properties are proclaimed for sale in one execution there should be a separate proclamation on each of them; Tripura Sundari v. Durgacharan, 17 C. 74. See also Maulvi Abdul Kasem v. Binode, 12 C. W. N. 757. It was held in Bombay that where property is divided into a number of small lots, as a means of obtaining a better agregate price the law does not require that separate proclamation should be made on each lot.—Pedro v. Jalbhoy, 12 B. 368. Sub-rule (3), which is new, aims at settling the difference of opinion which hitherto existed, and adopts in substance the view in 12 B 368. It should be noted however that the rule speaks of proclamation for and not proclamation on.

Time of sale.

68. Save in the case of property of the kind described in the proviso to rule 43, no sale hereunder shall, without the consent in writing of the judgment-debtor, take place until the expiration of at least thirty days in the case of immoveable property, and of at least fifteen days in the case of moveable property, calculated from the date on which the copy of the proclamation has been affixed on the court-house of the Judge ordering the sale. [S. 290.]

COMMENTARY.

The proviso to rule 43 refers to properties which are subject to speedy and natural decay and to cases where the expense of keeping them is likely to exceed its value.

Sale in Cont[illegible] [illegible] been taken that such a sale is an illegality, vitiating the sale and is something more than a material irregularity to which r 90 refers; Bakhshi Nand v Malak Chand, 7 A. 289. See also Jasoda v. Mathura, 9 A. 511; Sadhusaran v. Panchdeo, 14 C 1; Ganga Prasad v. Jag Lal, 11 A. 333; Bashrutulla v. Uma Churn, 16 C. 794; and Mohendro Narain v. Gopal Mondul, 17 C. 769. In another set of cases it has been held that it is a material irregularity but its effect is not to make the sale a nullity without proof of substantial injury, Tasadduk v. Ahmad Husain, 21 C. 66 P. C.; Kokil Singh v. Edal, 31 C. 385. See also notes to r 90

Waiver of Irregularities.—As to this, see notes to r 90.

Adjournment or stoppage of sale.

69. (1) The Court may, in its discretion, adjourn any sale hereunder to a specified day and hour, and the officer conducting any such sale may in his discretion adjourn the sale, recording his reasons for such adjournment:

Provided that, where the sale is made in, or within the precincts of, the court-house, no such adjournment shall be made without the leave of the Court.

(2) Where a sale is adjourned under sub-rule (1) for a longer period than seven days, a fresh proclamation under rule 67 shall be made, unless the judgment-debtor consents to waive it.

(3) Every sale shall be stopped if, before the lot is knocked down, the debt and costs (including the costs of the sale) are tendered to the officer conducting the sale, or proof is given to his satisfaction that the amount of such debt and costs has been paid into the Court which ordered the sale. [S. 291.

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule corresponds to s. 291, C. P. Code, 1882, with some modifications. The words "under this chapter" which occurred after "adjourn any sale" have been omitted. By the above omission the rule has been clearly made applicable to sales of mortgaged properties. Again the words "thereupon the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished," which occurred at the end of s. of the T. P. Act (IV of 1882), have been omitted from rule 5 of Order XXXIV (which corresponds to s. 89), in order to make this rule applicable to all sales of immoveable property. In this connection reference may be made to the Full Bench case reported in 31 C. 163: 8 C. W. N. 69 which clearly explains the object of the omission. The words "other than a sale by the Collector," which occurred in the old section, have also been omitted on account of rule 70 which covers the exception.

"Court."—In execution of a decree passed by a Sub-Judge a sale was held by the Nazir of District Judge. Held that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to pass any order under this rule.—Nobokishore v. Prot Chunder, 1 C. L. R. 534. An execution case was pending before a Sub-Judge, who postponed the sale for eight months on a letter from the District Judge. Held it was entirely irregular; Kali Charan v. Debend 10 C L. J 496.

Any Sale.—This rule applies to sale under mortgage decrees. See notes above under the heading, "Alterations."

Adjournment After Partial Sale.—Court may adjourn the sale after the sale of the first two lots; Raja of Kalahasti v. Sri Raja Venkataramit 1914 M W N. 873: 26 I. C. 273.

Discretion.—Where a Judge is unable to attend the Court on account of illness, he is competent to postpone the sales.—Megh Lall v. Shib Pershad, 7 C. 34: 8 C. L. R. 369.

The adjournment of sale from time to time without sufficient ground is nothing more than a mere irregularity, and does not vitiate the sale. Venkata v. Sama, 14 M 227.

Adjournment by Bailiff.—Without Court's permission is a mere irregularity; Vaduganathan v. Foy, 20 I. C. 192: 6 Bom. L. T. 65.

Sale to be Adjourned to a Specified Day and Hour.—Where property was ordered to be sold at a fixed date but no hour had been fixed and it was sold at a very inadequate price,—held that there had been material irregularity causing substantial injury.—Surnomoyee v. Dakina Ranjan, 24 C. 211 (21 C. 66, P. C., explained); Jamini Mohan v. Chandra Kumar, 6 C. W. N. 44; Babu Ram v. Inamullah, A. I. R. 1927 A. 241. In Venkata Subbaraya v. Zamindar of Karvetinagar, 20 M. 159, it has been held that, when a sale is adjourned under this rule, the provisions mentioned must be followed with exactitude. The sale should be adjourned to a specified day and hour and omission to specify the hour of sale is material irregularity.—Mahabir Pershad v. Dhanukdhari, 31 C 815: 8 C. W. N. 686. Affirmed in 34 C. 709, P C.. 11 C. W. N. 789: 6 C. L. J. 11: 17 M. L. J. 353: 9 Bom. L. R 651; see also Bhikari v. Rani Surjamani, 6 C. W. N. 48 (24 C. 291; 6 C. W. N. 44; 20 M 159, refd. to). When a sale is adjourned, but no day is specified to which it is adjourned, the sale is void, Motahar v Mohammad, 40 C. L. J. 311: 84 I. C. 700: A. I R. 1925 Cal. 201. When the sale was fixed on the 13th but was held on the 20th owing to the absence of the Judge, there was no contravention of the provisions of the rule. Even if there is any irregularity, the sale cannot be set aside without proof of substantial injury; Thakur Ranglal v. Maharaja Raveneswar, 16 C W. N. 1, P. C.: 14 C. L. J. 834; but see Hari Sadhan v Shib Gopal, where it was held that when a sale is adjourned to a certain date, but is held on a different date, the case is one of material irregularity in conducting the sale.

A sale of land was, owing to the absence of bidders on the sale day, adjourned and held on the next day —Held, that the sale was invalid.—Palani v. Sivalinga, 8 M. 6.

It is the practice to place all properties intended for sale on a list and to proceed with the sales from day to day, commencing on an appointed day. As each property is taken up in its turn, an adjournment of the sale of a particular property which is the consequence of such procedure in not an adjournment within this rule; Lal Mohan v. Nunu, 17 C. 152. A sale may thus be conducted from day to day for a period longer than seven days, without any illegality or irregularity; Pir Mahamed v. Mayandi, 8 I. C. 564.

Power to Adjourn Sale of Mortgaged Property.—This rule will apply to a sale held in virtue of an order absolute for sale, passed under s. 89, T. P. Act (now Or XXXIV, r. 5), although no power is given under that Act for postponement, Raja Ram v Chuni Lal, 19 A. 205 Followed in Misri Lal v. Mithu Lal, 28 A 28 (1905) A. W. N 168. See also, Harjas Rai v Rameshar, 20 A 351, where it has been held that this section must be taken to have modified 89 of Act IV of 1882, when the debt and costs are tendered to the officer conducting the sale, or when the amount of such debt and costs has been paid into Court that ordered the sale See also Vallabha Vaiiya v Vilapuratti, 19 M 40 F. B., p. 48, and Bibijan v Sachi Bewah, 31 C. 863, F B , 8 C. W N 684, F. B (25 M. 244; 25 B. 101; 19 A. 205, and 31 C 373 followed) A Court has power under this rule to adjourn the sale of mortgaged property.—

Shyam Kishen v. Sundor Koer, 31 C. 373; see 37 C. 987: Bepin Behari v. Jatindra, 14 C. W. N. 1019.

See notes under Order XXXIV, r. 5, and the cases noted thereunder.

Issue of Fresh Proclamation When Necessary.—Where a sale in execution is postponed, it is necessary, in the absence of express agreement between the parties, to issue a fresh proclamation.—Gopee Nath v. Roy Luchmeput, 3 C 542, 1 C. L R. 349 (3 C. 544 followed). Followed in 7 C. 466; and explained in 7 C. 730

Where there was adjournment of the sale, but the property was kept on hammer throughout from the 16th January to the 28th January in expectation of higher bid, and on none of these dates did the bidding start afresh from the beginning, but only an attempt was made to obtain some higher bid. held that it was a continuous sale and the provisions of sub-rule (2) of r 69, do not apply; Murlidhar v. Nawab Saiyid, 6 Pat. 432: A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 312.

When there is a series of short postponements of less than seven days each which, taken together in the aggregate amount to more than seven days, a fresh proclamation is necessary; Jaminimohan v. Chandra, 6 C W. N. 44 (11 C. 658: 24 C. 291 referred to).

When the stay of proceedings is removed, a fresh proclamation ought to be issued If not issued again, the judgment-debtor's remedy is to object to the confirmation of the sale and not to impeach the sale by a regular suit.—Gujrajmati v. Saiyid Akbar, 11 C. W. N. 393, P. C.. 5 C. L. J. 138. 29 A. 196: 17 M. L. J. 112: 9 Bom. L. R. 83.

Omission to issue fresh sale proclamation after adjournment amounts to material irregularity; Bagal Chander v. Rameshur, 18 C. 496; Bhaiya Mati v. Bhaiya Pirthipal, 25 I. C. 17.

Waiver.—As to waiver, see notes to r. 90.

"Debts and costs."—These words in cl. (3) could not be interpreted to mean the balance of the decree debt and costs, which would remain, if by a legal fiction the sales of previous lots (not yet completed by the payment of the whole purchase money) were taken as completed by treating the whole of the purchase-money as actually paid up, Raja of Kalahasti v Sri Raja Venkataramiah, (1914) M. W. N. 873.

Tender.—An auction-purchaser of the properties, is a representative of the judgment-debtor and he can tender the decretal amount, when the property is going to be sold in execution of a mortgage-decree.—Radha Kishen v. Hem Chandra, 11 C. W. N. 495 (27 C. 966: 4 C. W. N. 317 followed).

Petition for Postponement.—Petition for time to pay the decretal amount, signed by the judgment-debtor's pleader, constitutes sufficient acknowledgment of debt.—Ram Coomar v. Jakur Ali, 8 C. 716 (3 A 247 followed). Followed in Taree Mahomed v. Mabood, 9 C 730 See also, Norendro Nath v. Bhupendra Narain, 23 C. 874; and Trimbak v. Kashi Nath, 22 B 722.

Withdrawal of Bid.—It is competent to a bidder at a Court sale to withdraw his bid. An offer to buy or sell may be retracted at any time before it is unconditionally and completely accepted by words or conduct; and a bidding at an aucton is a mere offer which may be retracted before the hammer is down; Agra Bank v. Hamlin, 14 M. 235.

A sale is complete when it is knocked down to the bidder by the Nazir; Rajendra v. Upendra, 19 C. W N 633: 21 C. L. J. 174.

Saving of certain sales.

70. Nothing in rules 66 to 69 shall be deemed to apply to any case in which the execution of a decree has been transferred to the Collector. [S. 287, last para.]

COMMENTARY.

As to execution of decrees by Collector, see ss. 68 to 73, Schedule III, and notes.

The Revenue Courts are Courts of civil jurisdiction within the meaning of the C. P. Code, in that their decrees when transferred in the regular course are to be treated in all respects as if they were passed by a Court of civil jurisdiction.—Ram Lochan v. Kumar Newaz, 9 C. L. J. 125 (16 A. 496 dissented from; 9 C. 295, P. C., and 5 A. 406 referred to).

Defaulting purchaser answerable for loss on re-sale.

71. Any deficiency of price which may happen on a re-sale by reason of the purchaser's default, and all expenses attending such re-sale, shall be certified to the Court or to the Collector or subordinate of the Collector, as the case may be, by the officer or other person holding the sale, and shall, at the instance of either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor, be recoverable from the defaulting purchaser under the provisions relating to the execution of a decree for the payment of money. [S. 293.]

COMMENTARY.

The words "or to the Collector or subordinate of the Collector as the case may be" have been added.

Application of the Rule.—The provisions of this rule, extend to all sales, whether of moveable or of immoveable property, and also to re-sales made under rr. 81, 85 and 86 —Ram Dhani v Rajrani, 7 C. 337; 9 C. L. R. 23 Relied on in Rajendra v Ram Charan, 2 C. W. N. 411.

But the re-sale should only cover the property sold at the prior sale, and any substantial difference of description at the sale and re-sale in any of the matters required by r. 66 will not entitle the decree-holder to recover the deficiency of price under this rule; Baijnath v Moheep, 16 C 535; Ganga Das v Bai Suraj, 36 B 329 "The reasonable construction to place on r. 71 is that the re-sale should be within a reasonable time after the first sale, and the property re-sold should be substantially the same, and that any difference will not matter if the difference in the condition of the property or the title thereto is one which would occur in the ordinary course of things, having regard either to the nature of the property, or the transactions in respect thereof having legal force at the date of sale, or was brought about by the first purchaser's default."—Venkatachelamayya v Nilakanta, 41 M. 474: 43 I. C. 685; affirmed on appeal to P C. in Nilkantagiriji v. Venkatachallam, 48 M. L J. 835: 86 I. C. 873: A. I R 1925 P. C. 61.

Defaulting Purchaser Liable for Deficiency of Price.—A purchaser failing to pay the deposit of 25 per cent. as directed by r. 84 is a defaulting purchaser and liable to make good any deficiency of price which may happen on a re-sale and all expenses attending the same.—Javherbhai v Haribhai, 5 B. 575, Sitaram v. Jankiram, 44 A. 276: 65 I. C. 813. So also is a decree-holder purchaser when he fails to pay the poundage fee as laid down in High Court Rules and Circular Orders.—Madhusudan v. Purna, 9 C. L. J. 115.

Before the defaulting purchaser can be made liable it must appear that the property which is the subject of the two sales is the same in every respect, and any substantial difference of description of a sale and re-sale will disentitle the decree-holder to recover the deficiency of price —Baijnath Sahai v. Moheep, 16 C. 535. See also, Kalikishore v. Guru Prosad, 25 C. 99. 2 C. W. N. 408.

Where the first sale was irregular and void, the decree-holder is not entitled to claim against the first purchaser, compensation for the loss on the second sale.—Amir Begam v The Bank of Upper India, 30 A. 273: 5 A. L. J. 336 (5 A. 316 followed). Where on a re-sale, on failure to deposit the balance of purchase money there was a large deficiency, and it was found that the descriptions in both proclamations were inaccurate, the defaulting purchaser is not liable: Gangadas v. Bai Suraj, 14 Bom L R 250: 14 I. C. 777.

A party purchasing in the character of an agent cannot be made liable for the deficiency, and in such a case, proceedings must be taken upon the contract against the principal.—Huree Ram v. Hur Pershad, 20 W. R 80. But see Gangabatulla v. Manchiraju, 46 M. L. J. 134, where it has been held that a person who bids at a Court auction without informing the Court or its officer conducting the sale that he does so only as the agent of a principal, makes himself personally liable for the deficit caused by his action in not completing the sale by depositing 25 per cent of the purchase-money.

The decree-holder having purchased property through his agent repudiated the bid, and did not pay the deposit, and the property was re-sold on the following day. Held that the judgment-debtor was entitled to recover deficiency of price from decree-holder.—Vallavan v. Panganni, 12 M. 454.

Sale of property by Receiver in insolvency—Failure of deposit of one fourth of price—Re-sale—Deficiency of price—Purchaser ordered to make good the deficiency: Chedalal v. Luchman, 39 A. 267: 15 A. L. J. 233 (36 A. 9 folld).

Though this sale does not provide for the issue of notice to the defaulting purchaser, it is the duty of the Court to give notice to him and hear his objections; Venkattachellam v. Nilkanta 41 M. 474: 43 I. C. 685.

"Shall be certified."—Absence of certificate is no bar to the recovery of the deficiency from the defaulter; Tapesri v. Deoki, 19 A. 22.

Interest on Deficiency.—A defaulting purchaser is liable to pay interest on the deficiency from the date on which an order is made against him under this rule and not from the date of sale; Kanthamma v. Manchiraju, 46 M L J 134 · 78 I. C. 296 A. I R. 1924 Mad. 476.

"At the instance of either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor."—Where the purchaser had defaulted in paying, the remedy of the judgment-creditor is not limited to a suit against the defaulting purchaser. He is entitled to recover the balance of his debt from his judgment-debtor, who might perhaps have his remedy against the defaulting purchaser.—Anandrav Bapuji v Shekh Baba, 2 B. 562.

A portion of the judgment-debtor's property was sold. The purchaser having defaulted, the property was again put up for sale, and the portion previously sold was purchased by the decree-holder at a price less than the amount bid for it in the former sale. Held that the decree-holder was not debarred from proceeding to satisfy his decree by sale of other portions of the attached property than that originally sold.—Kheroda Moyi v. Golam Abardari, 13 B. L R 114: 21 W. R. 149. Followed in Gour Chunder v. Chunder Coomar, 8 C. 291; 10 C. L. R. 236; and distinguished in Joy Chunder v. Kali Kishore, 8 C. L. R. 41.

The judgment-debtor can instead of proceeding under this rule apply to have the sale set aside on the ground of irregularity; Bepin Chandra v. Modhoo, 12 C. L. R. 316

Suit Lies.—A suit will lie to set aside an order passed under this rule.—Topesri Lal v. Deoki Nandan, 19 A. 22.

A suit to recover the deficiency for which the defaulting purchaser is made answerable under sec. 9 of Reg. VIII of 1819, is maintainable.—Raghu Ram v. Mohesh Chandra, 7 C. W. N. 111.

Appeal.—An appeal and second appeal will lie from an order passed under this rule making a defaulting purchaser liable; Kalikishore v. Guru Prasad, 25 C. 99: 2 C. W. N. 408; Nagappa v. Balkishandas, 23 N. L. R. 14: A. I. R. 1927 Nag. 112 (7 N. L. R. 134 overruled), Sitaram v. Jankiram, 44 A. 266: 65 I. C. 813: A. I. R. 1922 All. 200 (

A party purchasing in the character of an agent cannot be made liable for the deficiency, and in such a case, proceedings must be taken upon the contract against the principal.—Huree Ram v. Hur Pershad, 20 W R 80. Where a decree-holder was joint in family with the manager of an infant defendant and the defendant's property was to be sold in execution of the decree. Held that the decree-holder ought not to be granted leave to purchase at the sale.—Woopendro Nath v. Brojendra Nath, 7 C. 346; 9 C. Leave to bid puts the decree-holder in the same position as any other purchaser; Mohomed Mira v. Sarvasi, 4 C. W. N. 228.

Where the leave to bid is obtained by the decree-holder by misrepresentation, the Court may refuse to confirm the sale; Musst. Janakbati v. Maharajadhiraj, 1 Pat. 235: 69 I. C. 872: A. I. R. 1922 A. P. 511.

A mortgagee who has obtained a mortgage decree, and after obtaining permission to bid became the purchaser, does not stand in a fiduciary position towards his mortgagor; therefore he is at liberty to take out further execution of any balance of the decree, and is not bound to credit the judgment-debtor with the real value of the property to be ascertained by the Court.—Sheo Nath Dass v. Janke Prasad, 16 C. 132 (11 C. 718 distinguished). See also Mahabir Persad v Macnaghten, 16 C. 682, P. C. Dakshina Mohan v. Basumati, 4 C. W. N 474, Krishnasami Ayyar v. Janakiammal, 18 M. 153; and Gunga Persad v Jawahir Singh, 19 C. 4, where it has been held that the position of mortgagee who has purchased the mortgaged property after obtaining leave to bid is like that of an independent purchaser, and he is only bound to give credit to the mortgagor for the actual amount of his bid

In granting permission, the Court may attach conditons, and if the decree-holder purchases without fulfilling the conditions in toto, the Court has power to refuse to confirm the sale.—Mt Janakbati v Rameswar, 62 I. C 872.

The Amounts may be Set Off, subject to Section 73.—If decree-holder gets the permission without any qualification then the amount due on the mortgage may be set off But it may be one of the terms on which the permission to bid is granted, that there should not be the right of set-off.—Hazarimal v Namdev, 32 B 379 · 10 Bom. L R. 296

This rule must be taken as subject to the provision of s. 73, so that the decree-holder, who has ben permitted to purchase the property in execution of his own decree, must share the proceeds of the sale rateably with the other competing decree-holder, and will not be allowed to set off the purchase-money against the amount due to him on his decree.—Shrinibas v. Radhabai, 6 B. 570

This rule must be read with s 73, and to give effect to both, the receipt to be given by the decree-holder, who has obtained leave to bid and has purchased the property, can only be accepted for so much of the judgment-debt as the assets applicable to its discharge may suffice to satisfy.—Viraragava v Varada, 5 M. 123

Permission given to a judgment-creditor to set-off the amount of purchase-money against the debt due under his decree must be taken to be granted subject to the provisions of s. 73 and he may be compelled to refund the rateable amount by process in execution.—Madden v. Chappani, 11 M. 856.

Held that the fact of the set-off being allowed in exercise of the power given in this section instead of actual payment into Court did not alter the substantial nature of the transaction, so as to render the purchase-money less applicable to the satisfaction of the debts of other attaching creditors.—Toponidi Hardanund v. Mathura Lal, 12 C. 499.

" By himself or through another person."—A purchase by the decree-holder's undivided son is presumably with joint funds and as such is the purchase of the decree-holder.—Narayan v. Anaji, 5 B. 130.

" The Court may, if it thinks fit, set aside the sale."—A sale at which the decree-holder himself, or some other person for him, without the permission of the Court first obtained, becomes the purchaser, is not ipso facto void; it is a good sale, unless and until set aside by the Court under the provisions of this rule.—Jasherbai v. Haribhai, 5 B 575. Ganesh v. Gopal, 41 B 357 39 I C. 3; Param Siva v. Krishna, 14 M 498; Narayan v. Anaji, 5 B 130 In Rai Radhakishna v. Bisheshar, 49 I. A. 312: 1 Pat 733 27 C. W N. 294. A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 336, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee observed: " Upon the construction of this section it is evident that a purchase by a decree-holder is not void nor a nullity, but is only to be avoided on the application of the judgment-debtor or some other person interested. It would be injurious to those interested in the sale if a decree-holder, who had been forced up in the bidding to give a large sum of money, could escape from fulfilling his contract by getting the sale declared a nullity, and it would make all titles under such sales insecure if at later periods they were liable to be treated as nullities A sale is to be set aside upon application and upon cause being shown." Even if the decree-holder purchases after refusal by the Court to grant permission, the sale is not a nullity nor void, but can be avoided by appropriate proceedings. Where a decree-holder purchases benami without the permission of the Court, it can be set aside even after confirmation of sale under rule 92; Thathu v. Kandu, 32 M. 242: 1 I. C. 221 Chintamanrao v. Vithabai, 11 B. 568; Gopal v. Ram Lal, 21 C. 554

It is discretionary with the High Court to set aside an execution sale at which the decree-holder has bid and purchased without first obtaining permission; and the Court will not interfere with the sale unless it can be shown that the judgment-debtor has suffered substantial injury arising from such irregularity.—Mathura Das v. Nathuni Lal, 11 C. 731 Referred to in Gopal Chunder v. Ram Lal, 21 C. 554.

A decree-holder asked for, but was refused, leave to bid at the sale, but notwithstanding such refusal, purchased the property in the name of a third person. Possession under the sale was opposed, and the decree-holder, as purchaser, brought a suit for possession of the property

Held that the plaintiff had been guilty of an abuse of the process of the Court in buying the property benami, and that the sale therefore ought not to be enforced.—Mahomed Gazee v. Ram Lal, 10 C. 757. Referred to in Sarat Kumari v. Nai Charan, 5 C. W. N. 265.

Decree-holder purchasing without permission makes the sale void-able not void.—Rishi v. Ramdayal, 1 I. C. 645.

Suit to Set Aside a Purchase made Without Permission is Barred by Section 47.—A suit by the judgment-debtor against the decree-holder to have the sale set aside, on the ground that the purchase was made by him without leave of the Court, is barred by s. 244, C. P. Code, 1882 (s. 47)—Genu v. Sakharam, 22 B. 271. Nor will a suit lie even where the sale was procured by fraud, and purchased by a person who was not a party.—Sakharam v. Damodar, 9 B. 468; likewise, when the sale was brought about secretly and the purchasers were benamidars of the decree-holder.—Durga v. Balwant Singh, 23 A. 478. See also, Viraraghava v. Venkata, 16 M. 287.

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order passed under this section refusing permission to a decree-holder to bid at a sale in execution of his decree —Jodoonath v. Brojo Mohun, 13 C. 174; Ko Tha Hnyin v. Ma Hnin, 15 C. W. N. 862, P. C.: 38 C. 717: 14 C. L. J. 241: 38 I. A. 126. But under Or. XLIII, r. 1 (j), an appeal lies from an order seting aside or refusing to set aside a sale under this rule.

There is no special appeal from an order refusing to set aside a sale, unless such order is made under ss. 294, 312 or 313 C. P. Code, 1882.—Durga Sundari v. Govinda Chandra, 10 C. 868. In Bhagbut Lall v. Narku Roy, 21 C. 789, it has been held that no second appeal lies from an order made by a District Judge, on appeal setting aside a sale under this section.

Limitation and Step-in-aid of Execution.—An application by the decree-holder for leave to bid at the sale in execution of his decree "is a step-in-aid of execution" within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.—Vinayakrao Gopal v. Vinayak Krishna, 21 B. 331; Bansi v. Sikree Mal, 13 A. 211 and Dalel Singh v. Umrao Singh, 22 A. 339. Contra in Raghunundun v. Kally Dut, 23 C. 690, and Ananda Mohan v. Hara Sundari, 23 C. 106.

Restriction on bidding or purchase by officers.

73. No officer or other person having any duty to perform in connection with any sale shall, either directly or indirectly, bid for, acquire or attempt to acquire any interest in the property sold.

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 292, C. P. Code, 1882, with some verbal alterations. The words "or other person" have been added after the word "officer"; and the words "at such sale" which occurred in the last sentence of the old section, after the words "the property sold," have been omitted, as unnecessary.

Special provisions relating to growing crops.

75. (1) Where the property to be sold is a growing crop and the crop from its nature admits of being stored but has not yet been stored, the day of the sale shall be so fixed as to admit of its being made ready for storing before the arrival of such day, and the sale shall not be held until the crop has been cut or gathered and is ready for storing.

(2) Where the crop from its nature does not admit of being stored, it may be sold before it is cut and gathered, and the purchaser shall be entitled to enter on the land, and to do all that is necessary for the purpose of tending and cutting or gathering it. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule is new; but its provisions are somewhat similar to sections 129 and 131 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885)

The definition of the term " growing crops " is given in s 2 (13) — See notes under that section. Under the old Code growing crops were held to be immoveable property.—See notes under s 16.

Negotiable instruments and shares in corporations.

76. Where the property to be sold is a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation, the Court may, instead of directing the sale to be made by public auction, authorize the sale of such instrument or share through a broker. [S. 296.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 296, C P Code, with some verbal changes. The word " company " which occurred in the old Code before the word " corporation " has been omitted.

This rule comes within the exception mentioned in the beginning of rule 65 of this Order

The sale of Government promissory notes through a broker is permissive under this section, and not obligatory.—Luchmeput v Lekrj, 8 W. R. 415

COMMENTARY.

Sub-rules 1 and 2 correspond to section 297, C. P. Code, 1882, wi[th] some verbal changes. The word "re-sold" had been substituted for th[e] word "sold" which occurred in the old Code.

Sub-rule (3) is new It gives a right of pre-emption to the co-owne[r]. It is similar to rule 88 of this Order —See notes under rule 88.

"On payment of the purchase-money."—The provisions of this rul[e] give the officer conducting a sale of moveable property a discretion to allow the purchase-money to be paid at a reasonable time after the sale ha[s] been made —Fareed Alum v. Sheo Charun, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R 37.

In the case of moveable property, the sale on payment of the pur[-] chase-money becomes absolute at once, but the sale can be set aside b[y] a regular suit —Framji Besanji v Hormasji, 2 B. 258 (266).

Irregularity not to vitiate sale, but any person injured may sue.

78. No irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale of moveable property shall vitiate the sale; but any person sustaining any injury by reason of such irregularity at the hand of any other person may institute a suit against him for compensation, or (if such other person is the purchaser) for the recovery of the specific property and for compensation in default of such recovery. [S. 298]

COMMENTARY.

This section exactly corresponds to s. 298, C. P. Code, 1882

Moveable Property.—A money-decree is not moveable property with[in] the meaning of this rule; Maung Lun Bue v. Maung Po Nyun, 1 Ran[g]. 360 76 I. C. 679: A. I. R 1924 Rang. 21.

Irregularity.—There is no provision in the Code that sales of move[-] able properties shall in no case be set aside; but this section only provid[es] that no irregularity in the sale of moveable property under an execution shall vitiate the sale.—Framji Besanji v. Hormasji, 2 B. 258 (p. 266).

This section prohibits the setting aside of a sale of moveable property on the ground of irregularity in the publishing or conducting of it.—Baijnath v. Benoyendro Nath, 6 C. W. N. 5.

A Judge is not required by law to give notice, at the time of the sale, of the amount of the decree to be sold, and his omission to do so does not constitute an irregularity in the sale entitling the plaintiff to claim damages under this section.—Kassee Nath v. Hullodhur, 2 W. R. 60.

The law does not make any provision for the service of notification of sale on the judgment-debtor in person, or in the village in which he lives, and omission to do so is not an irregularity in affixing sale notification.—Romesh Chunder v. Jadub Chunder, 6 W. R. Civ. Ref. 14.

Overstating the amount really due is not an irregularity and will not vitiate sale.—Chuttersing v. Dhurrum, 1 N. W. P. 1. But if the sale proclamation warrants a title, the injured person may sue to set aside the sale.—Framji Bosanji v. Hormasji, 2 B. 259.

A debt due to the judgment-debtor by a third party was attached, but the judgment-debtor died after issue of proclamation and before sale. In an application to set aside the sale, held that the sale was vitiated by the omission to bring the legal representative of the judgment-debtor on the record and should be set aside.—Groves v. Administrator-General of Madras, 22 M. 119.

A sale in execution of a decree transfers to the purchaser nothing more than the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor at the time of attachment and sale, therefore, the sale of the moveable property belonging to a third party in execution of a decree, is not a mere irregularity within the meaning of this section, and the owner of the property so sold is entitled to sue for its restoration or damages.—Sham Sunder v Raheem Buksh, 6 N. W. P. H. C R 252; Mohanund v. Ahail Mehaldar, 9 W R. 118.

In a sale of moveable property in execution of a decree, there is no warranty of title whatsoever; all that is sold is the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, and the real owner, if not the judgment-debtor, can bring a suit, to recover the moveable property or its value, against the debtor.—Maung Pa v. Abdul Ganni, 4 Rang 202: A. I. R. 1926 Rang. 214: 97 I. C. 1029.

Delivery of moveable property, debts and shares.

79. (1) Where the property sold is moveable property of which actual seizure has been made, it shall be delivered to the purchaser. [S. 299.]

(2) Where the property sold is moveable property in the possession of some person other than the judgment-debtor, the delivery thereof to the purchaser shall be made by giving notice to the person in possession prohibiting him from delivering possession of the property to any person except the purchaser. [S. 300.]

(3) Where the property sold is a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument, or is a share in a corporation, the delivery thereof shall be made by a written order of the Court prohibiting the creditor from receiving the debt or any interest thereon, and the debtor from making payment thereof to any person except the purchaser, or prohibiting the person in whose name the share may be standing from making any transfer of the share to any person except the purchaser, or receiving payment of any dividend or interest thereon, and the manager, secretary or other proper officer of the corporation from permitting any such transfer or making any such payment to any person except the purchaser.

COMMENTARY.

This rule embodies the provisions contained in ss. 299, 300 and 301 of the C. P. Code, 1882 with some modifications.

In sub-rule (2), the words "in the possession of some person other than the judgment-debtors," have been substituted for the words "to which the judgment-debtor is entitled, subject to the possession of some other person," which occurred in section 300 of the old Code.

Sub-rule (3) is almost similar to section 301 of the C. P. Code, 1882, with some verbal changes only.

Forms.—For Forms of Notices under this rule, see Appendix E, Forms 32, 33 and 34.

Delivery shall be made by Written Order.—In Debendrakumar Mardel v. Ruplal Das, 12 C 546, it was held that no question having been raised as to the service of the order required by clause (3) the presumption is that this order was served.

80. (1) Where the execution of a document or the endorsement of the party in whose name a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation is standing, is required to transfer such negotiable instrument or share, the Judge or such officer as he may appoint in this behalf may execute such document or make such endorsement as may be necessary, and such execution or endorsement shall have the same effect as an execution or endorsement by the party.

Transfer of negotiable instruments and shares

(2) Such execution or endorsement may be in the following form, namely:—

"A. B. by C. D., Judge of the Court of (or as the case may be), in a suit by E. F. against A. B."

(3) Until the transfer of such negotiable instrument or share, the Court may, by order, appoint some person to receive any interest or dividend due thereon and to sign a receipt for the same; and any receipt so signed shall be as valid and effectual for all purposes as if the same had been signed by the party himself. [S. 302.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 302 of the C. P. Code, 1882, with some additions and alterations.

The important alterations are the additions of the word "or such officer as he may appoint in this behalf"; and of the words "such execution or endorsement shall have the same effect as an execution or endorsement by the party," in sub-rule (1) The other changes introduced in this rule are of a verbal character.

As to execution of deed of transfer of shares by Court to the purchaser, see Toolsee Dass v. E. I. Ry. Co., 2 Ind. Jur. N. S. 133.

Vesting order in case of other property.

81. In the case of any moveable property not hereinbefore provided for, the Court may make an order vesting such property in the purchaser or as he may direct; and such property shall vest accordingly. [S. 303.]

This rule exactly corresponds to section 303 of the C. P. Code, 1882.

Under the Civil Procedure Code it is intended that the sale of moveable property attached in execution of a decree should ordinarily be held in some place within the jurisdiction of the Court ordering the sale. Good and sufficient reasons must be shown for directing otherwise —Lakshmibai v. Santapa Revapa, 13 B. 22.

SALE OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

What Courts may order sales.

82. Sales of immoveable property in execution of decrees may be ordered by any Court other than a Court of Small Causes. [S. 304.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule exactly corresponds to s 304, C. P Code, 1882.

For the meaning of the words "immoveable property," see notes under sec. 16.

Court of Small Causes.—Where a Court of Small Causes sells immoveable property, the purchaser acquires no title.—Nattoo Meah v. Nundu Ranee, 17 W. R. 309.

Postponement of sale to enable judgment-debtor to raise amount of decree.

83. (1) Where an order for the sale of immoveable property has been made, if the judgment-debtor can satisfy the Court that there is reason to believe that the amount of the decree may be raised by the mortgage or lease or private sale of such property, or some part thereof, or of any other immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, the Court may, on his application, postpone the sale of the property comprised in the order for sale on such terms and for such period as it thinks proper, to enable him to raise the amount.

(2) In such case the Court shall grant a certificate to the judgment-debtor authorising him within a period to be mentioned therein, and notwithstanding anything contained in section 64, to make the proposed mortgage, lease or sale :

Provided that all monies payable under such mortgage, lease or sale shall be paid, not to the judgment-debtor, but, save in so far as a decree-holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72, into Court :

Provided also that no mortgage, lease or sale under this rule shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court

(3) Nothing in this rule shall be deemed to apply to a sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage of, or charge on, such property. [S. 305.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 305, C. P. Code, 1882, with some important additions and alterations.

In sub-rule (1), the words " on such terms " have been added after the words " order for sale."

In the first proviso, the words " but save in so far as a decree-holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72, " have been added.

Clause (3) is new. It has been added adopting the principles laid down in 3 C. 335 : 1 C. L. R. 205 and 31 C. 373. On this point there was a difference of opinion between the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts, the latter holding that Or. XXI, r. 83 was applicable to all sales of immoveable property including sales under the T. P. Act (IV of 1882). See 25 B. 104 and 26 B. 379. This sub-rule (3) has set at rest the above conflicting rulings by adopting the principle laid down in the above Calcutta case and it has overridden the Bombay rulings which are noted below.

Scope of the Rule.—Or. XXI, r 83 contemplates a mortgage or lease or private sale only where "the amount of the decree can be thus provided for." A Court executing a decree can neither grant a certificate under this section nor confirm a mortgage or other alienation of property, unless it appears that by such alienation the decree will be satisfied in full.—Gurusami v. Venkatsami, 14 Mad. 277. There should be a reasonable probability of the debt being discharged by the profits of the estate within a reasonably short period —Suhuj Narain v Ram Pershad, 21 W. R. 146.

Sale of Immoveable Property.—This section does not apply to a decree on a mortgage when the decree declares that a certain property is to be sold in satisfaction of the mortgage debt.—Womda Khanum v. Rajroop Koer, 3 C. 335; 1 C L. R 295. See also, Shyam Kishen v. Sundar Koer, 31 C. 373 ; Kora Lal v. Punjab National Bank, 5 Lah. L. J. 67 But in Krishnaji v. Mahadev, 25 B. 104, it was held that this rule applied to all sales of immoveable property including sales held under the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) See also Danappa v. Yamnappa, 26 B. 379

But properties directed to be sold in execution of a decree for the enforcement of a mortgage or charge have now been excluded from the operation of this rule by clause (3) of this rule which has adopted the principle laid down in the above Calcutta cases.

"The amount of the decree may be raised."—No sale should be postponed and no certificate should be granted under sub-rule (2) unless the whole amount due on the decree can be raised by mortgage, lease or sale ; Venkatasami v Chanbasappa, 14 M .277.

"May postpone the sale."—Postponement is a matter of discretion for the Court—Bishenmun v Land Mortgage Bank, 11 C. 244, 12 L. R. I. A. 10. It should exercise a reasonable discretion and should not postpone the sale unless a fair case is made out by the judgment-debtor—Kishen Coomaree v. Golab Coomaree, 15 W R. 477.

A judge is not bound to allow a judgment-debtor a year's time to pay his decree, without the debtor assigning some good or sufficient reason for the delay, e g, that the money due to the judgment-creditor could be raised equally well in some other way than by immediate sale, and that the creditor would not by that arrangement be put to loss.—Ram Ruttan v. Land Mortgage Bank, 17 W R 193

A Court can postpone the sale for a reasonable period, if by sale, mortgage, or otherwise, the debt can be cleared off in six months.—Mohini Mohun v Ram Kant, 15 W R 322 See also Rednum v Mahomed Amin, 5 M. Where an application under this rule was refused and the sale took place, an application to set aside the sale is maintainable under s 47 and r. 90—Enamuddin v Abdul, 5 I C 489

"Authorizing him."—In authorizing a private sale under this rule, a Court cannot empower a judgment-debtor to transfer any higher interest than he has and bind the interest of others in the property.—Danappa v. Yamanappa, 26 B. 379: 4 Bom. L. R. 61.

" Notwithstanding anything contained in S. 64."—This is an enabling rule and qualifies the provisions contained in s. 64; on compliance with the conditions of this rule, a private alienation, notwithstanding s. 64, becomes absolute, not only against the claim of the decree-holder but against all claims enforceable under the attachment.—Shivlingappa v. Chanbasappa, 30 B 337

Confirmation of Sale.—Decree of different Courts against same judgment-debtor—Leave given by both Courts to judgment-debtor to raise amount by private sale under this rule. Confirmation of such sale by one Court. Held that as both the Courts had concurrent jurisdiction to confirm the sale, the confirmation by one Court was sufficient for the validity of the sale, and that application to another Court for confirmation was superfluous.—Andanapa v. Bhimrao Annaji, 19 B. 530.

A private sale, by a judgment-debtor with the permission of the Court obtained under this rule but which had not been confirmed by the Court, did not convey to the vendor such title in the property as to entitle him to maintain a suit for possession of property against another vendee.—Srilal v. Ballabh Shankar, A. W. N. 1882, 213.

Alienation by Guardian of Minor.—A mortgage by a minor's certificated guardian with the sanction of the Subordinate Judge under this rule, without the previous sanction of the District Court under sections 29 and 30 of the Guardian and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), is invalid.—Dattaram v. Gangaram, 23 B 287.

A permission under this rule is not sufficient for a guardian who must have the sanction of the District Judge in spite of such permission.—Sarju v. District Judge of Benares, 31 A. 378: 6 A. L. J. 491: 2 I. C. 356 See also Dijendra v. Monorama, 36 C. L J. 320: 49 C. 911: A. I. R 1922 Cal. 150.

Appeal.—No appeal lies against an order refusing to postpone a sale under this rule, but the party aggrieved may apply for revision of the order under s. 115, and the High Court may in a proper case quash the order; N. K. R. R. M. Chetty v. Subraya, 3 Rang. 132: 89 I. C. 300. A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 271.

84. (1) On every sale of immoveable property the person declared to be the purchaser shall pay immediately after such declaration a deposit of twenty-five per cent. on the amount of his purchase-money to the officer or other person conducting the sale, and, in default of such deposit, the property shall forthwith be re-sold. [S. 306.]

Deposit by purchaser and re-sale on default.

(2) Where the decree-holder is the purchaser and is entitled to set off the purchase-money under rule 72, the Court may dispense with the requirements of this rule. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—Sub-rule (1) of this rule corresponds to section 306, C. P. Code, 1882, with some modifications.

The words " under this chapter " which occurred in the old section after the words " immoveable property " have been omitted ; the words " or other person " have been added after the words " to the officer ;" and the word " re-sold " has been substituted for the words " be put up again and sold " which occurred in the old section.

Sub-rule (2) is new, and it has been added to meet the case of Gopal Singh v. Roy Bunwari Lal, 5 C. L. R. 181, where it was held that a decree-holder buying with permission and desiring to set off his purchase-money against the amount of the decree is not exempt from the necessity of making a deposit of 25 per cent Under this sub-rule (2), the Court may dispense with the requirements of sub-rule (1), where the decree-holder obtains permission to bid under rule 72.

" In rules 77 and 84 express reference has been made to a re-sale so as to make it clear that the default mentioned in those rules will attract the consequence indicated in rule 71 In this connection reference may be made to I. L. R. 7 C. 337."—See the Report of the Special Committee.

" Declared to be the purchaser."—An execution sale is not complete until the presiding officer has accepted the bid and declared the purchaser. —Jai Bahadur v Matukdhari, 2 Pat. 549 · 76 I C. 113 A. I. R 1923 Pat. 525

" In default of such deposit."—The officer conducting the sale cannot insist upon a deposit being made before acceptance of a bidding , but if it appears that persons without means have been put forward to make sham biddings and fraudulently frustrate the sale, he would be justified in inquiring into the trustworthiness of the bidder before accepting his bid—Rajah Mohesh Narain v. Kishanund, 9 M I A 328

Failure to Deposit, Whether a " material irregularity."—It was held by the Allahabad High Court in Intizam Ali v Narain Singh, 5 A. 316 that if the deposit of 25 per cent. is not made immediately the sale is altogether void. This was followed in Amir Begum v The Bank of Upper India, 30 A. 273, but these decisions have been overruled by the Full Bench Case of Sita Ram v. Janki Ram, 44 A 266 · 65 I. C 813: A. I. R. 1922 All. 200 F. B. On the other hand it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that failure on the part of the person declared to be the purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree to make the deposit of 25 per cent immediately under this rule, constitutes only a " material irregularity " in conducting the sale, which would render the sale viodable if substantial injury has been caused by reason of such irregularity.—Bhim Singh v. Sarwan Singh, 16 C. 33. In Venkata v Sama, 14 M. 227, it has been held that any delay in making the deposit under rule 84 is not more than a mere irregularity and does not vitiate the sale. See also Raman Chetty v. Olagappa Chetty, 3 L. B. R 225. But if the balance of the purchase money is not paid, there is no sale under this rule.—Munshi Mahomed Ali v. Kibria, 15 C. W. N. 850.

Sale When Complete.—The function of a Nazir or other officer appointed to conduct an auction sale is of a ministerial character. If he conducts it in the presence of the presiding officer, and the latter forthwith declares under Or XXI, r. 64 who the purchaser is and signs the formal order, the sale is complete If it is not held in his presence, it can be completed only by his order closing the bid or an order accepting the bid under Or. XXI, r 84 Where in anticipation of sanction, the Nazir accepts the deposit required from the highest bidder there is only in law an offer and it is open to the Court to resume the auction ; Jaibadhar Jha v Matukdhari Jha, 2 Pat 548 4 Pat. L T. 498.

The mere making of the last bid does not conclude the sale ; it is necessary for the conclusion of the sale that the officer conducting it should accept the final bid, make a declaration as to who is the purchaser and also order him to pay the deposit under this rule.—Munshi Lal v. Ram Narain, 35 A. 65.

" Where the decree-holder is the purchaser."—Sub-rule (2) is new It empowers the Court to dispense with the 25 per cent. deposit when the decree-holder is the auction-purchaser

" In default of such deposit."—A decree-holder or other person who purchases property at a court-sale and fails to pay the deposit (25 per cent) directed to be paid under this rule is a defaulting purchaser within the meaning of rule 71 and liable, as such, to make good any deficiency of price happening on a re-sale and all expenses attending the same.—Javerbhai v Haribhai, 5 B 575 See also Valavhan v. Pangunni, 12 M. 454

The provisions of Or XXI, r 71 for making a defaulting purchaser liable for any deficiency on a re-sale, extend to all sales, whether of moveable or immoveable property, and also to re-sales held under Or. XXI, r. 77, r. 84 and r 86.—Ramdhani v. Rajrani, 7 C. 337: 9 C. L. R 23. See also, Rajendro Nath v. Ram Charan, 2 C. W. N. 411, where it has also been held that Or. XXI, r. 87 does not apply to a case in which the property is put up again and sold forthwith under this rule.

In case of any irregularity or misrepresentation by auctioneer in conducting the sale, the officer conducting the sale instead of proceeding under this rule should refer the matter to the Court, when it appears to him that the bidder has been misled by such misrepresentation.—Mohomed Kala Mea v A V Harpernk, 9 C L. J. 165, P. C. : 13 C. W. N. 249: 36 C. 323

Where a decree-holder, having bid for the property, failed to pay the poundage fee in the manner required by the High Court rules, and the property was again put up for sale Held that r. 71 applied, and not rr. 84 and 86 —Madhu Sudan v Purna Chandra, 9 C. L. J. 115.

In the absence of proof of substantial injury to the judgment-debtor, an auction purchaser's omission to deposit the 25 per cent. in Court is a mere irregularity and does not vitiate the sale.—Inaitulla v. The Punjab National Bank Ltd., 67 I. C. 427. It is not open to the Court to extend time for payment, but still when the Court extends time and the sale is confirmed it cannot be set aside merely on the ground of the irregularity.—Varanakkot v. Vykunda, 69 I. C. 1001.

"Forthwith."—The word "forthwith" shows that the re-sale is a continuation of the original sale and no adjournment is therefore allowable. —Bhim Singh v. Sarwan Singh, 16 C. 33, 38. But see, Vallabhan v. Pangunni 12 M. 454, where it was held it is a re-sale for the purposes of r. 71.

An officer conducting a second sale under this rule is not bound to commence from the next highest bid below that made by the defaulter. He may do so if the next higher bidder is willing to abide by his bid, otherwise he should commence the sale de novo—Gour Mookh v. Lalla Gour, 1 W. R. Mis, 11.

An offer to buy or sell may be retracted at any time before it is unconditionally and completely accepted, by words and conduct and a bidding at an auction is a mere offer which may be retracted before the hammer is down—Agra Bank v. Hamlin, 14 M 235.

Time of payment in full of purchase-money.

85. The full amount of purchase-money payable shall be paid by the purchaser into Court before the Court closes on the fifteenth day from the sale of the property: [S. 307.]

Provided that, in calculating the amount to be so paid into Court, the purchaser shall have the advantage of any set-off to which he may be entitled under rule 72. [New.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—The first para of this rule corresponds to section 307, C. P. Code, 1882, with some alterations and omissions The words "exclusive of such day, or if the fifteenth day be a Sunday or other holiday, then on the first office day after the fifteenth day" which occurred in the old section, have been omitted, and the word "from" has been substituted for the word "after" which occurred in the old Code. The object of substituting the word "from" for the word "after" will be clearly understood on reference to section 9 of the General Clauses Act X of 1887

The reason for the omission of the words "exclusive .....fifteeth day," which occurred in the old Code, is that there is already a codified law on this point, in sec 10 of the General Clauses Act X of 1897. The omission has been made adopting the law as laid down in Surendra Narain v. Sauravini, 10 C. W. N. 535· 3 C. L J. 339, in which all the cases on the point have been referred to and followed.

"Shall be paid."—The provisions of this rule are imperative, and must be given effect to On default by the purchaser to deposit the purchase-money within 15 days of the sale, the deposit of 25 per cent. must be forfeited, notwithstanding that the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor do not ask for a re-sale but content with the original sale being allowed to stand—Sambasiva Iyyar v Lydinadasami, 25 M. 535. See also, Mathura v Gauri Shankar, 32 A 380. The defaulting purchaser is answerable for any loss occasioned by re-sale—Jacherbai v Haribhai, 5 B. 575; Ramdhani v. Rajrani, 7 C. 387, Vallabhan v. Rangum, 12 M. 454

Time-limit for the Payment of the Purchase-money.—In order to satisfy the requirements of this rule it is necessary that the money should reach the Court within the time allowed, viz., before the closing of the Court on the 15th day.

Under the rules of the High Court, dated 21st June, 1882, payment into the Government Treasury is equivalent to payment into Court for the purposes of this section.—Srinivas v. Malayacha, 7 M. 211. But payment by purchaser in the Post Office within time is not payment, because the Post Office is not the agent of the Court.—Ram Chandra v. Belya, 22 B. 415.

When an order has been made for payment of money in a suit on a certain date, and the Court was closed on that date, a payment made on the following day would be a good payment for the purposes of the order.—Aravamudu v. Samiyappa, 21 M. 383; Dabee Ranoot v. Hemmun, 18 C. 231, Peary Mohun v. Annoda Charan, 18 C. 631 and Surendra Mohan v. Sourarini, 3 C. L. J. 339, 10 C. W. N. 535. In Motiram v. Bhivraj, 20 B. 745, it has been held that the time during which a Court is closed for the vacation, is not a holiday within the meaning of this rule. Days on which the office is open and the purchase-money for property bought at a Court-sale could have been paid are office days.

Where the purchaser at a Registrar's sale is out of time, in paying the balance of the purchase-money into Court, the practice of the original side of the Calcutta High Court is that payment of interest follows as a matter of course.—Kanylall v. Shama Churn, 21 C. 566.

Time for Paying Balance of Purchase-money may be Extended with the Consent of the Parties Concerned.—Time can be extended for payment of the balance of the purchase-money with the consent of the parties concerned; Radha Kishan v. Hari Singh, 100 I. C. 800: A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 337. If it be extended without their consent, the case is one of "material irregularity" within the meaning of Or. XXI, r. 90; Subramaniyam v. Vykunda, 43 M. L. J. 477, 69 I. C. 1001: A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 48.

Proviso.—The proviso is new.

86. In default of payment within the period mentioned in the last preceding rule, the deposit may, if the Court thinks fit, after defraying the expenses of the sale, be forfeited to the Government, and the property shall be re-sold, and the defaulting purchaser shall forfeit all claim to the property or to any part of the sum for which it may subsequently be sold. [S. 308.]

Procedure in default of payment.

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule corresponds to section 308, C. P. Code, 1882 with an important alteration.

"May be forfeited to Government."—The words "may, if the Court thinks fit" have been substituted for the word "shall" which occurred in the old section. The above change has been introduced to override the case in 25 M. 535, in which it was held that the provisions of this section as regards forfeiture were imperative. But by the present rule the Court according to the circumstances of each case, can exercise its discretion with regard to forfeiture.

"The committee have altered this rule in order to prevent its being obligatory on the Court to forfeit the deposit in every case. The rule as it stands at present has caused great hardship in certain circumstances, vide the case of Sambasiva Ayyar v. Vydinada Sami (25 M. 535)."—See the Report of the Special Committee.

On default of payment within the period mentioned in r. 85, the Court is not bound to order the property to be re-sold. It has a discretion to do so or not, the expression "may, if the Court thinks fit," being substituted in place of the old word "shall."—Basawan v. Anpurna, A. I. R. 1926 All. 509.

"The defaulting purchaser shall forfeit all claim to the property."—When A and B both apply to purchase a property at an auction sale in a certain proportion agreeing to pay the price also in that proportion and do actually deposit the 25 per cent. of the purchase-money in proportion to their share, but at the time of paying the balance of the purchase-money, A is unable or unwilling to pay and B pays the whole balance amount, but immediately after the sale certificate is issued, A comes forward and claims to purchase his share of the property, payment by B must be decreed under r. 85 to be also on behalf of A, and A is entitled to purchase his share; Bhabataran v. Durgeshnandini, A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 719.

Appeal.—An appeal lay from an order passed upon an application under this rule to make a defaulting purchaser liable for the loss sustained by a re-sale.—Ram Dial v. Ram Das, 1 A. 181; Kali Kishore v. Guru Prasad, 2 C. W. N. 408; Baij Nath Sahai v. Moheep Narain, 16 C. 535; and Rajendra Nath v. Ram Charan, 2 C. W. N. 411. But see Deoki Nandan v. Tapesri Lal, 14 A. 201; and Ilahi Bakhsh v. Baij Nath, 13 A. 569.

Notification on re-sale.

87. Every re-sale of immoveable property, in default of payment of purchase-money within the period, allowed for such payment, shall be made after the issue of a fresh proclamation in the manner and for the period hereinbefore prescribed for the sale. [S. 308.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 309, C. P. Code, 1882, with this modification only that the word "proclamation" has been substituted for the word "notification" which occured in the old section.

Fresh Proclamation.—A fresh proclamation is only necessary where a re-sale takes place in default of payment of full amount of the purchase-money within the time-limit prescribed by r. 85.

This rule does not apply to a case in which the property is put up again and sold forthwith under r 84 for default of payment of 25 per cent deposit.—Rajendra Nath v Ram Charan, 2 C W. N. 411; Vallabhan v Pangunni, 12 M. 454.

88. Where the property sold is a share of undivided immoveable property and two or more persons, of whom one is a co-sharer, respectively bid the same sum for such property or for any lot, the bid shall be deemed to be the bid of the co-sharer. [S. 310.]

Bid of co-sharer to have prefernce.

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—This rule corresponds to section 310, C. P. Code, 1882, with some alterations. The words "respectively bid the same sum for such property or for any lot, the bid shall be deemed to be the bid of the co-sharer," have been substituted for the words "respectively advance the same sum at any bidding at such sale, such bidding shall be deemed to be the bidding of the co-sharer," which occurred in the old section. No other change has been made This rule is similar to sub-rule (8) of rule 77, which relates to sale of moveable property.

Share of Undivided Immoveable Property.—The provisions of s 310, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r. 88) are not applicable in a case where the property sold is not a share of undivided immoveable property, but the rights and interests of a mortgagee in such a share.—Jairam Das v. Beni Prasad, 3 A 15

Co-sharer.—The requirements of this rule are not satisfied by the co sharer preferring his claim to the right of pre-emption before the property is knocked down, and offering to pay a sum equal to that bid by the highest bidder It contemplates a distinct bid by the co-sharer in the ordinary manner of offering bids —Hira v. Unas Ali, 3 A. 827 (2 A 850 followed). See also, Sri Kishen v. Debi Ram, (1888) A. W. N 208

A co-sharer whose bid was not accepted and the sale was confirmed in favour of another bidder has no locus standi under Or. XXI, r. 90, to have the sale set aside —Bisheshar Kuar v. Hari Singh, 5 A. 42.

Where a co-sharer asserted his right of pre-emption in a sale of a share of an undivided immoveable property by offering the same amount as the person preceding him did bid, there was sufficient compliance with the requirements of Or. XXI, r. 88.—Iqbal Hasian v. Ejaz Husain, 50 I. C 654 (2 A. 850; 3 A. 827 1881 A. W. N. 86 referred to).

A title to share in undivided immoveable property sold in execution of a decree which is still defeasible at the date of the sale in execution is not sufficient to support a claim for pre-emption under this rule.—Abdul Ghafur v. Ghulam Husain, 35 A. 296.

Appeal.—Or. XLIII, r 1 provides for no appeal against an order passed under this rule.

A share of an undivided immoveable property was put up for sale in execution and was knocked down to a stranger. Before it was knocked down to him, the decree-holder who was co-sharer of such share, after obtaining permission to bid, bid the same sum as that for which it was knocked down to the stranger claiming the right of pre-emption. The Court confirmed the sale in favour of the decree-holder. Held that an appeal would not lie against the order confirming the sale.—Munuruddin Khan v. Abdool Rahim, 3 A. 374.

No appeal lies from an order refusing to restore an application under this rule which had been dismissed for default in appearance.—Ghaseti Bibi v. Abdul Samad, 29 A. 596

Application to set aside sale on deposit.

89. (1) Where immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree, any person, either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale, may apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in Court—

(a) for payment to the purchaser, a sum equal to five per cent. of the purchase-money, and

(b) for payment to the decree-holder, the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, less any amount which may, since the date of such proclamation of sale, have been received by the decree-holder.

(2) Where a person applies under rule 90 to set aside the sale of his immoveable property, he shall not, unless he withdraws his application, be entitled to make or prosecute an application under this rule.

(3) Nothing in this rule shall relieve the judgment-debtor from any liability he may be under in respect of costs and interest not covered by the proclamation of sale. [S. 310-A.]

COMMENTARY.

Alteration.—This rule corresponds to section 310-A of the old Code, but several additions and alterations have been made in it to meet several conflicting rulings

"Words have been added so as to make it clear that a purchaser acquiring a title before the sale in execution, can claim the benefit of the rule. In other respects the committee consider it advisable to adhere to the wording of the section The proposal that the sale should be set aside on payment of the purchase-money instead of the amount specified in the proclamation is, in our opinion, fraught with danger it would be obviously useless, unless subsequent protection were given to the property, and such protection might lead to collusion, which would be most prejudicial to the decree-holder."—See the Report of the Special Committee.

The omission of the word "under this chapter" which occurred in the old section, has set at rest the diversity of judicial opinion which hitherto existed regarding the applicability of s. 310-A to sales held under mortgage-decrees. The above change seems to have been made to meet the Full Bench case reported in 25 C. 703: 2 C. W. N. 353, in which it was held that the provisions of section 310-A of the old Code were not applicable to sales held in execution of mortgage-decrees. By the omission above referred to by the insertion of rules 4 and 5 in Order XXXIV (which correspond with ss 88 and 89 of the T. P. Act, IV of 1882), in the amended form, and also by the introduction of rules relating to mortgage-decrees, in the said Order XXXIV, the Calcutta Full Bench case has been overridden The conflicting rulings of the several High Courts have been noted below, and it would appear from those rulings that in framing this rule the Legislature has adopted the views expressed by the Allahabad, Bombay and the Madras High Courts.

The words "any person, either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale," have been substituted for the words "any person whose immoveable property has been sold," which occurred in the old section, as the wording of the old section gave rise to several conflicting rulings. The wording of the present rule will not only include the owner of the property sold, but also include any person who holds any sort of interest in the said property by virtue of a title acquired before the sale Thus the present rule includes, a prior private purchaser, donee, mortgagee, a prior auction-purchaser, a mokurraridar, a tenant, a beneficial owner, and benamidar, as in some cases the beneficial owner may be barred by the act and conduct of his benamidar, etc., etc The conflicting rulings are noted below, for the purpose of a clear understanding of the change introduced in this rule.

Clause (a) is similar to cl. (a) of the old section. Clause (b) is also similar to cl (b) of the old section.

Sub-rule (2) corresponds to the proviso to the old section, with some modifications The words "unless he withdraws his application" have been added after the words "he shall not." The above addition has been made for the benefit of the applicant, who under the old section had no right at all to take the benefit of this rule, if he had previously filed an application under s 311, C P. Code 1882. The words "or prosecute" have also been added after the words "to make." The above addition has been made to prevent an applicant to prosecute his application, if in order to evade the provisions of sub-rule (2), he simultaneously files applications under this rule and also under rule 90, or if he first applies under this rule and then applies under rule 90 to set aside the sale.

The period of limitation (30 days), and the Court's order for setting aside the sale, which were mentioned in the old section, have been omitted from this rule and reproduced in sub-rule (2) of rule 92. Notice of application under this rule must be given to the decree-holder and auction-purchaser (Vide the proviso to rule 92). The old section was silent on this point.

Object of Enacting the Present Rule.—The main object of enacting section 310-A of the old Civil Procedure Code was to enable the judgment debtor to prevent his property from being sold below the market value Difficulties were, however, experienced in actual practice, and it was holding even a lesser interest than that of an owner, as for example, a co-heir, a simple mortgagee, a member of the Mitakshara joint family, a lessee, a person in reversion, and so on. Some Courts up-held their right, while others did not. Different views thus prevailed. In Pares Nath v Nabagopal, 2 I. C. 1 5 C W N 821 F B., the words "any person whose immoveable property has been sold" in section 310-A of the old Code were considered sufficiently elastic to admit a wider construction being put on them so as to include "every person who has an interest in the property in question, whether qualified, partial or absolute" The necessity of giving the power of making a deposit to a wider circle and to put a stop to the conflict of decisions was recognized by the Legislature, and the law appeared in the form of rule 89 of the new Code in place of section 310-A of the old Code.

"Any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale."—A judgment-debtor whose immoveable property has been sold, may apply under this rule as "a person owning such property" But if the judgment-debtor has transferred his interest in the property after the Court sale, the question arises whether he or his transferee is entitled to apply for setting aside the sale under this rule The Allahabad High Court, in Isher Das v. Asaf Ali, 44 A 155, has held that in such a case neither the judgment-debtor nor his transferee after the Court-sale is entitled to apply under this rule. In a recent case the same High Court has held that the judgment-debtor was entitled to apply, but not the transferee, Fatima-ul-Hasna v. Baldeo, 48 A. 188 F B 93 I C 24 A I R 1926 All 204 The Bombay High Court, in Pandurang v. Govind, 40 B 557, has held that the judgment-debtor is entitled to apply, but not the subsequent purchaser The Patna High Court followed the Bombay decision in Dhanwanti v. Sheoshankar, 4 Pat L. J 340 The Calcutta High Court, in Saroda v Hemendra, 49 C 454, has held that the subsequent purchaser is not entitled to apply.

The words "owning such property" and "holding an interest therein" should not be read independently of the expression "by virtue of a title acquired before such sale" It has been held by the Bombay High Court in Pandarang Laxman v Govind Dada, 40 B 557 37 I C. 211, that there is no reason to limit the words "by virtue of a title acquired before such sale" to the words "holding an interest therein" so as to read the first clause "owning such property" as if it stood by itself The Madras and the Patna High Courts have taken the same view in Sundaram v Mamsa, 41 M 554 63 I C 973, and Mt. Dhanwanti v. Sheoshankar, 4 Pat L J 340 51 I. C 873. It is clear, therefore, that the applicant under Or XXI, r 89 must be a person who can, even at the date of his application, be proved to be a person, either owning the property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title, and further that, that title must have been a pre-existing title, that is to say, a title acquired before the auction sale The use of the words "owning" and "holding" in the rule indicates a present subsisting ownership or interest in the applicant at the date of the application, Onkar v Dhan Sing, 21 N. L R 102: A. I R 1926 Nag 10: 90 I C 963

Who may Apply.—In execution of a decree against a judgment debtor, his property was sold by auction Prior to the execution sale, he effected a private sale to another person. Subsequently the judgment-debtor applied under this rule to set aside the execution-sale. Held that, notwithstanding the private sale, the judgment-debtor could apply under this rule to set aside the sale.—Magan Lal Mulji v. Doshi Mulji, 25 B. 631 ; Mussammat Dhanwanti v Sheoshankar Lal, 4 Pat. L. J. 340: 51 I. C. 873

J. 282) that the purchaser of a non-transferable occupancy holding is entitled to make a deposit under this rule to have the execution sale set aside The fact that the landlord himself is the auction-purchaser makes no difference; Re Fazoo Mia v. Sultan Ahmed Chowdhury, 31 C. W. N. 1050.

Where the provision of the E. B. and Assam Tenancy (Amendment) Act applies, a permanent under-tenure holder has a locus standi to apply under this rule for setting aside the sale of a taluk in execution of a rent decree.—Sarat Chandra v Matilal, 23 C. W. N 597: 52 I. C. 237.

The purchaser of a share of an occupancy holding transferable by custom can apply—Benodini v. Peary Mohan, 8 C. W. N 55, Kunja Behary v. Sambhu Chandra, 8 C. W. C. 916, it has, however, been held that a mortgagee of a non-transferable occupancy holding cannot apply under this rule when the holding has been sold under a rent decree and purchased by the decree-holder. See also Abdul Aziz v. Tafizuddin, 19 C. W N. 326. The Patna High Court has held that a purchase of a portion of non-transferable occupancy holding cannot apply, 1917 Pat. 167 F B. 19 C. W. N. 176-n.

A purchaser subsequent to attachment and prior to sale can apply — Mulchand v. Govind, 30 B. 575

W. 680: 1923 M. 659

A person whose claim under Or. XXI, r 58 and a suit under Or. XXI, r. 63 have been dismissed, cannot apply under this rule ; Onkar v Dhan Singh, 21 N L R. 102· A. I. R 1926 Nag 10 90 I. C 963.

Persons who claim a title to the mortgaged property adverse to the mortgagee cannot apply.—Ram Singh v. Salig Sing, 28 A. 84: 2 A. L. J. 77. (1905) A. W. N. 193

An interim receiver, appointed under s. 20 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920 after the sale of insolvent's properties, has no power, unless he is expressly authorized to that effect, to apply under this rule to have the sale of the insolvent's properties set aside, as he cannot be said to be "a person owning such property".—Ram Chandra v. Sankara Aiyar, 51 M. L. J. 239. 93 I. C. 271. A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 357.

"A sum equal to five per cent."—This 5 per cent. is intended as a compensation to the purchaser for the trouble and disappointment caused to him.—Trimbak v. Ram Chandra, 23 B. 723. It must be paid even if the decree-holder is the purchaser.—Chundi Charan v. Banke Behary Lal, 26 C. 449, 451-52, Tirumal v. Syed Dastaghiri Miyah, 22 M. 286

"On his depositing."—The sale will be set aside unless the applicant deposits the whole amount mentioned in sub-rule (1) within the prescribed period viz., 30 days from the date of the sale. In Chundi Charan v. Banke Behary, 26 C. 449, F. B. : 3 C. W. N. 283 F. B., it has been held that when there is nothing to show that there was any mistake of the Court by which the judgment-debtor was induced to deposit an insufficient amount, the sale ought not to be set aside (25 C. 609 distinguished). In Muthu Ayyar v. Ramasami Sastrial, 20. M. 158, it has been held that a judgment-debtor is entitled to have the sale set aside under this section, if he deposits 5 per cent. of the purchase-money, including that deducted by the Court for poundage, and fulfils the requirements of clause (b) even though something more on account of poundage was recoverable from him under the head of costs.

When the amount payable by the judgment-debtor under this rule has been calculated by an officer of the Court, and has been deposited, an order setting aside the sale must be made by the Court as a matter of right. Makbool Ahmad v. Bazle Sazhan, 25 C. 609. In Ugrah Lal v. L

Pershad, 18 C. 255, it has been held that when the amount payable by the judgment-debtor has been calculated and settled by an officer of a Court, and when the amount has been paid into Court, an order setting aside a sale must be made as a matter or right, although it was subsequently discovered that the amount was short by a small sum See also Sheik Fakir v. Biraj Mohini, 11 C. W. N 116.

A deposit under this rule must not be conditional.—Dulhin Mathura v. Bansidhar, 16 C. W. N. 904, 15 C. L. J. 83.

The judgment-debtor deposited the decretal amount with the extra percentage under Or. XXI, r 89, but in his application he prayed that it may not be paid to the decree-holder pending disposal of an appeal Subsequently on the objection of the decree-holder, he withdrew the prayer aforesaid. Held, that the object of the deposit was to set aside the sale, and though there was no specific prayer to that effect, the objection to the payment of the decretal amount having been withdrawn, the Court was bound to set aside the sale ; Ram Sivendra Narayan v Awadh Bihary, 4 Pat L T. 295: 71 I. C 332

A new application without any actual deposit is not sufficient compliance with the law.—Mahomed Akbar v. Sukhdeo, 13 C L. J. 467.

Under this rule the essential upon which the action of the Court is to depend is the deposit within 30 days, and not the fact of the application being made within that period —Mathuji v Kondoji, 7 Bom. L. R 263

An application under this rule need not be in writing, but the application whether oral or written must be in time Deposit of money alone is not sufficient. Held, therefore, that a tender by a person who was neither an attorney, nor a Vakil nor a Mukhtear, for the owner of the property sold, does not comply with the provisions of this rule and is consequently invalid.—Sarvi Begum v Haidar Shah, 9 A L J. 12, Parat v Ambalal, 32 I. C. 45 ; Ram Sivendra v Awadh Bihary, 71 I C. 332. But see Thimmarazu Venkata v. Venkatappa, 46 M L. J 119: 1924 M W. N 137, where it was held that the fact that the required deposit was made by the pleader's clerk instead of by the pleader himself does not vitiate the application

Where Deposit is Made Within Thirty Days.—If the Court be closed on or before the last day of the period limited, the judgment-debtor may deposit the amount of the debt into Court on the first day the Court reopens.—Soshee Bhusan v. Gobind Chunder, 18 C 331 ; Peary Mohun v Ananda Churn, 18 C. 631. See also Aravamudu Ayyangar v. Samiyappa Nandan, 21 M. 358, and Sambasiva Chari v Ramasami Reddi, 22 M 179 ; and s. 10 of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897).

Deposit of decretal amount with costs within 30 days—Deposit of 5 per centum of the purchase-money after the rejection of the special appeal Held that the application was barred and the judgment-debtor was not entitled to exclude the period during which the special appeal was pending. —Choudhury Keshry Sahoy v Gaini Roy, 29 C 626 6 C W. N 776

An act of the Court cannot prejudice any party Therefore where on the last day of making a deposit under this rule, the deposit could not be made owing to the presiding officers leaving the Court earlier than usual and the deposit was made the next day ; held that the deposit was valid and in time —Dulhin Mathura Koer v. Bansidhar Singh, 10 I. C. 8.., Gholam v Manindra, 22 I. C. 842.

Extension of Time.—Court has no jurisdiction to extend time prescribed by this rule but extension may be granted with the consent of parties, Rameswar v Sureswar, 39 I C. 664.

Nature of Deposit.—A deposit must be of such a nature as to be at once payable to the parties, and a Court has no power to set aside a sale unless the judgment-debtor has strictly complied with the law. The deposit of Government promissory note is not sufficient.—Rahim Bux v. Nundo Lal, 14 C. 321 See also Musst. Shakoti v. Jotindra Mohun, 1 C W N 132.

Where after deposit under this section the judgment-debtor prayed that the money deposited might be retained in Court pending the hearing of an application under sec 108, C. P. Code, 1882. Held that the sale ought to have been set aside—Hanooman Singh v Luchman, 8 C. W. N. 355

A mere payment of the sale-proceeds into Court is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section Actual receipt of sale-proceeds by decree-holder is necessary to set aside a sale—Trimbak Narayan v. Ram Chandra, 23 B 723

Where properties was sold in separate lots, and the judgment-debtor applied under this rule to set aside the sale of one of the properties by tendering the balance due under the decree after deducting the amounts bid by the decree-holder for some of the properties, and the amount deposited by the other purchaser Held that there was no deposit within the terms of the section —Kripa Nath v Ram Lakshmi 1 C W. N. 703.

" For payment to the decree-holder."—The word " decree-holder " in sub-rule (1) (b) refers to that person alone in satisfaction of whose decree the sale took place It does not refer to the other decree-holders who claim rateable distribution of the sale proceeds under s 73 —Ganesh v Ishi.., 37 B 387. It was held in Harai v. Faizlur, 40 C. 619, that when a judgment-debtor deposits such amount as is sufficient to satisfy the claim of the person in satisfaction of whose decree the sale was ordered, the other decree-holders cannot come in for rateable distribution under s 73 See also Hari Sundari v Sashi Bala, 1 C. W. N. 105 ; Beharilal v. Gopal, 1 C W. N. 695. Followed in Roshanlall v. Ramlall, 30 C. 262; 7 C. W. N 841 As to the proper amount to be deposited. See Karmokar v Krishna, 39 M 429

" Less any amount received by the decree-holder."—It is not necessary that the payment to the decree-holder should be in cash—it is enough if he is any how satisfied as to the whole amount due to him.—Lakshmi Ammal v Sankaran Nair, 24 M L. J. 205; Vedala Lakshminara v. Pa.. Lakshmi, (1912) M. W. N. 756 But a judgment-debtor cannot take advantage of the amount paid by his co-judgment-debtors and deposit the balance, Karunakara v. Krishna, 27 I. C. 952.

" Received " means actual receipt by the decree-holder. A mere payment into court of the sale proceeds does not satisfy the requirements of this rule.—Trimak v. Ram Chandra, 23 B. 723. (followed in Teta Ba..

v. Chhoturam, 25 Bom. L R. 446: 73 I. C 454; Karunakara v. Krishna, 28 M. L. J. 262; 39 M. 429; 73 I. C .454; A. I. R 1923 Bom. 299.

Sub-rule (2). "He shall not be entitled to make or prosecute an application."—In a case where, after an application to set aside a sale was made by the judgment-debtor under this rule another application was made under r. 90, the applicant was not entitled to have the benefit of the former section —Rajendranath v. Nilratan, 23 C. 958. But the Court should in such a case put the judgment-debtor to his election whether he would withdraw the application under r. 90, and if he refuses to do so, it should dismiss the application made under this rule; Sarvi Begam v. Ram Chandra, 47 A. 850· 88 I C 500: A I. R. 1925 All. 778. But the provisions of this sub-rule do not apply where an application, though purporting to be made under r. 90, is really one under s 47; Harihar v Rama Pandu, 33 B 698. 4 I C. 253.

After the rejection of an application under this rule judgment-debtors, other than the applicant, made an application under rule 90. Held, that the present application was not barred by sub-rule (2).—Ashruf Ali v. Net Lal, 23 C 682 See also Sital v. Nand Lal, 13 C W N. 591

Where in an application to set aside a sale there are joint prayers under rules 89 and 90 without any actual deposit of purchase-money, such an application cannot be entertained under sub-rule (2), rule 90 —Narayan v. Rasul Khan, 23 B 531 (535).

A judgment-debtor having applied under this section to set aside an execution-sale, his application was rejected and the sale was confirmed under Or. XXI, r. 92 Subsequently he brought a suit to set aside the sale. Held that the suit was barred by sub rule (3) of rule 92 —Damodar Bhaushet v Vinayak Trimbak, 26 B 40.

A judgment-debtor who makes an application under Or. XXI, r. 90, which is dismissed for default, is thereby disqualified from subsequently applying for getting back his property under r 89 —Murlidhar v Baldeo, 20 O. C. 329.

Necessary Parties.—It is clear from the provisions of the proviso to r. 92, sub-rule (2), that both the decree-holder and the auction purchaser are necessary parties to an application under this rule; Musst. Bibi v Parasnath, 2 Pat 800 75 I. C 130· A. I. R 1923 Pat. 37

Notice.—What is necessary is that notice should be given to decree-holder and auction-purchaser and rule 92 does not require them to be formally made parties Notice may be issued after 30 days, but it is the duty of the party to apply for issue of notice and Court is not bound to issue notice without application. Bibi Zainal v Paras Nath, 71 I. C. 557; Raj Chandra v Kali Kanta A I R 1923 Cal 394 See, Or XXI, r 92.

Confirmation of Sale.—Confirmation of sale under r 92 is no bar to the applicability of this rule, and a sale may be set aside even after such confirmation —Pita v Chunilal, 31 B. 207, 217

Applicability of this Section to Sales under Rent Act.—This rule does not apply to the sale of a tenure or holding sold in execution of a decree for its own arrears, inasmuch as section 51 of the B T Amendment Act

(I of 1907, B C) has expressly laid down that this rule would not apply to such sales.—Asiruddi v Mokhodamoyee, 12 C. W. N. 434: 32 C 58 But this case does not apply to East Bengal and Assam as the Amending Act of that province (Act I of 1908), has not made this rule inapplicable to that province so the rulings under the old Code, in which it has been held that section 310 A of the C P Code, 1882, applies to the sale of a tenure or holding in execution of a decree for its own arrears are still good law, so far as that province is concerned See Ali Miah v. Ramir 13 C W N 224

This section applies to the sale of the tenure in execution of a decree for its own arrears An auction-purchaser is entitled to a notice before an order is made under this section —Janardhan v. Kali Kristo, 23 C 3 and 396-note Followed in Bunshidhar v Kedar Nath, 1 C. W N. 111 See also Nitya Nanda v Hira Lal, 5 C W. N 63 (p. 64, col. 2)

This section does not apply to sales under Act X of 1859, as the Code of Civil Procedure applies up to the sale and does not apply after it—Harish Chandra v Ananta Charan, 2 C. W. N 127.

Rule If Applies to Sales on the Original Side of the High Court under Mortgage Decree.—This rule applies to sales held in execution of mortgage decrees on the Original Side of the High Court —Virjaban Das v Bissessuar Lal, 48 C 69 24 C W N. 1032 But see contra, in Surendra v Gurupada 24 C W. N 536, where it has been held that though this rule applies to sales under mortgage decrees in mofussil, it does not apply to such sales held on the Original Side of the High Court Appeal Against Order under this Rule.—Under the old Code, an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale passed on an application under s 310-A, was not appealable because it was not included under s 588 (Or XLIII, r 1) in the list of appealable orders It was however appealable as a decree, if the question as to whether the sale should be set aside or not arose " between the parties to the suit or their representatives " in the course of the execution proceedings and as such came within the purview of s 47 —Pita v Chunnilal, 31 B 207; Maganlal v. Mulji, 25 B 631, Murlidhar v Anandaram, 25 B 418. 3 Bom. L. R 100; Pandurang Govind v. Krishnabai, 1 Bom L R. 74; Phul Chand v. Nurshing, 28 C 73. Followed in Imtiazi Begam v Dhuman Begum, 29 A. 275; Maruthi v Rajagopala, 17 M L J 291, Harihar v. Rama Pandu, 33 B. 698 But under the present Code, and order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale (under r 92) with reference to an application under this rule (r 89) is appealable as an order being included in the list of appealable orders given in Or XLIII, r 1 An auction-purchaser also can now appeal from an order under this rule, Kachu v Trimbak, 44 B. 472; Gadigappa v. Shidappa 48 B 638 88 I. C 155 A I R 1921 Bom. 405.

The true nature of the order must be examined before and the character of the parties affected by it must be ascertained before deciding whether the order is one under s 47.—Mahomed Akbar v. Sukhdeo, 13 C. L J 47

An order on an application to set aside a sale under this rule does not come within the definition of " decree " in sec. 2.—Ismuddi v Pran, 17 C. W. N. 814.

Revision.—Where a Court refuses to entertain an application under Or. XXI, r. 89, on the ground that the petitioner has no locus standi, it is a case where the Court fails to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law within the meaning of s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, and so the High Court will interfere in revision in such a case; Sundaram v. Mausa, 44 M. 554: 40 M. L. J. 497: 63 I. C. 937 F. B; Dhanwanti v. Sheoshankar, 4 Pat. L. J. 340: 51 I. C. 873, Aulad Ali v. Abdul, 2 Pat. 715: A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 490: 74 I. C. 102. But it has been held by the Allahabad High Court, in Yad Ram v. Sundar Singh, 45 A. 425: A. I. R. 1923 All 392 F. B: 74 I. C. 778, that no revision lies in such a case.

Dismissal of Application for Default in Appearance.—No appeal lies where an application under this rule is dismissed for default in appearance and the Court refuses to restore it to file.—Ghasiti Bibi v. Abdul Samad, 29 A. 596.

Date of Sale.—The "date of the sale" is the date on which the sale takes place and the highest bid is accepted and the deposit paid, and not the date when the Court confirms the sale and directs the remainder of the purchase-money to be collected, Vana v. Ratilal, 28 Bom. L. R. 510: 95 I. C. 549: A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 335.

Limitation.—Under Art. 166, Sch. I of the Limitation Act, 1908, an application under this rule to set aside the sale, must be made within 30 days from the date of the sale. But where the final bid remains unaccepted by the officer conducting the sale for some days, this period of limitation does not begin to run till the acceptance of the bid.—Munshilal v. Ram Naraint, 35 A. 65.

A judgment-debtor may obtain reversal of sale by deposit of money in Court but the Limitation Act provides that such deposit must be within 30 days of the sale. The Court has no jurisdiction except under the provisions of the Limitation Act to extend the time nor has the Court jurisdiction to set aside a sale by allowing the judgment-debtor to deposit the decretal amount after the period of limitation has expired. The Court can only give time with the consent of the parties.—Chaudhry Rameshwar v. Chaudhry Sureshwar, 2 Pat. L. J. 161.

It is not enough to make the application within 30 days; Mahomed Akbar v. Sukhdeo, 13 C. L. J. 467; Munna Lal v. Radha Kishan, 37 A. 591: 30 I. C. 186. Both the application and the deposit must be made within 30 days from the date of the sale. A sale in execution cannot be set aside under Or. XXI, r. 89 without an application (oral or written) within 30 days from the date of sale.—Venkata Narasimma v. Lakshmi Narasimham, 32 I. C. 783.

Applicability of this Rule to Sales under Mortgage-decrees.—It was held by the Calcutta High Court that s. 310-A did not apply to a sale of mortgaged property under a decree made in accordance with the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882).—Kedar Nath v. Kally Churn, 25 C. 703 F. B: 2 C. W. N. 353 F. B (23 C. 682 overruled). This Full Bench decision was explained in Dakshina Mohun v. Saimati Basumati, 4 C. W. N. 174, where it was held that section 104 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) is an enabling section, and the rules made by the High Court (Circular Order No. 13, dated 27th April 1882), under section 104 of the T P Act, (IV of 1882), did not limit the applicability of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code as regards sales held in execution of mortgage-decrees; and distinguished in Shyam Kishen v. Sunder Koer, 31 C. 373 The Allahabad, Bombay and the Madras High Courts held, on the other hand, that this rule applies where a sale of immoveable property has taken place under a mortgage-decree —Raja Ram v. Chuni Lal, 19 A. 205; Srinivasa Ayyangar v. Ayyathorai Pillai, 21 M. 416; Tirumal Rao v. Syed Dastaghiri, 22 M. 286, Krishnaji v. Mahadev, 25 B. 104; Mallikarjunadu Setti v Lingamurti, 25 M 244 F. B.

The Calcutta decisions are no longer law. The transfer, into Or XXXIV of the present Code, of the sections of the Transfer of the Property Act relating to decrees in mortgage suits, makes it clear that rule 89 applies to sales under mortgage decrees also A mortgagor whose immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property passed under Or. XXXIV, r. 5, may therefore apply under this rule to set aside the sale; Virjiban Das v. Biseswar Lal, 48 C 69. 60 I. C 406

Order IX does not apply to proceedings under this rule.—An application to set aside a sale under this rule is a proceeding in execution and not an original proceeding, and hence the provisions of Or. IX do not apply to it —Bhagwan v Dattatraya, 50 B 457; 96 I. C. 411. A. I. R 1926 Bom 377.

Application to set aside sale on ground of irregularity or fraud.

90. (1) Where any immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree, the decree-holder, or any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets, or whose interests are affected by the sale, may apply to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground of a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting it:

Provided that no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity or fraud unless upon the facts proved, the Court is satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity or fraud. [S. 311.]

COMMENTARY.

This rule corresponds to section 311, C P. Code, 1882, with some important additions and alterations S 311 ran thus:—"The decree-holder, or any person whose immoveable property has been sold under this Chapter, may apply to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground of a material irregularity in publishing or conducting it; but no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity."

"The Committee have struck out the provision as to irregularity in attaching the property, as such irregularity obviously cannot affect the price. They have introduced the words 'rateable distribution of assets' to clear up a doubt which has been the subject of discussion in several cases. They have altered the language of the proviso in order to meet the doubts which have been raised as to the evidence upon which the Court can act (Tasadduk Rasul Khan v. Ahmad Husain, 21 C 66)."—Report of the Special Committee.

Alterations in the Rule.—(1) The words "Any person entitled to share in a rate whose immoveable property has been sold" in the old Code, were the subject of discussion in several cases and the High Courts were not unanimous in the interpretation of these words, as will appear from the several conflicting rulings quoted below. The Legislature, in order to set at rest the conflicting rulings, has framed the present rule to clear up the doubts which hitherto existed. The present rule is much more comprehensive than the old section. The words "or any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets" have been inserted in the present rule adopting the principles laid down in 10 M. 57; 16 B. 91; 15 A 318 and 29 C. 548 The rulings in which contrary views have been expressed have been overridden by the present rule

(2) "Any person whose interests are affected by the sale."—The words "whose interests are affected by the sale" have been added to the present rule in order to render the scope of the present rule wider than that of the old section The wording of the old section was not clear enough to include the cases of persons whose interests were affected by the sale and hence there was diversity of judicial opinion on the point, as will appear from the several rulings noted below The scope of the present rule has been enlarged by the addition of the above words. But persons whose interests are not affected by the sale cannot apply under this rule to set it aside A person claiming a title adverse to that of the judgment-debtor or by title paramount to the judgment-debtor is not within the meaning of these words, inasmuch as his title to the property is not affected by the sale whether the sale is regular, or irregular. The above change has been introduced in accordance with the view expressed in 15 C. 488, F B and 16 M 476.

(3) "Fraud in publishing or conducting the sale."—The words "or fraud" have been added after the word "irregularity" "We think that the existing law, as contained in s 311 of the present Code, is defective, the omission in the section to refer to fraud as a ground for setting aside a sale having led some Courts to hold that an order on an application setting up fraud as a ground for relief is, unlike an order made on an application under section 311, a decree open to second appeal. This result which often involves a considerable prolongation of these proceedings is in our opinion undesirable. We think that applications for the setting aside of sales should, so far as the procedure applicable to them is concerned, stand on the same footing whether they are based on the ground of irregularity or on the ground of fraud"—Report of the Select Committee

Another important change made in the present law is the insertion of the word "fraud." Under the old Code it was held by all the High Courts that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of "fraud" in publishing or conducting it did not fall within section 311 but such application falls within s 244 (s 47) of the C P Code, 1882, and the period of limitation in such cases was 3 years and not 30 days. But under the present Code, all applications to set aside a sale whether on the ground of irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting it, are to be determined under this rule. The object of the change has been clearly explained in the report of the Select Committee quoted above. The effect of the change is that the period of limitation for such an application has been shortened, and the right of second appeal has been curtailed. Under the old law an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud of any kind fell within s. 244, C P Code, 1882 (s 47), and hence the period of limitation was three years, and there was a second appeal. (Vide 26 C. 530; 3 C W. N 403, 31 C. 385 and 6 C L J. 102) Under the present rule, however, fraud in publishing or conducting the sale, has been excluded from the operation of s 47 But where the sale is vitiated by any other kind of fraud (except the fraud in publishing or conducting the sale), the case must fall within s 47, as before It is only the particular kind of fraud that has been excluded from the operation of s. 47. There are and may be innumerable and inconceivable kinds of fraud and it is impossible to give any exact definition of the word

Again under the present law, an application to set aside a sale, may be made either on the ground of irregularity or on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting it But irregularity in attaching the property is no longer any ground for setting aside a sale, as will appear from the Report of the Special Committee, quoted above. The words "publishing or conducting" refer respectively to s 287, C P. Code, 1882 (r. 66), and to the action of the officer by whom the sale is held (32 B 572)

(4) "Unless upon the facts proved, the Court is satisfied"—The language of the proviso has been altered in order to meet the doubts which have been raised as to the evidence upon which the Court can act In the proviso, the words "unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied" have been substituted for the words "unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court" The above alteration has been made adopting the principle laid down in 21 C 66 P. C., where it has been held that in an application to set aside a sale it is necessary for the applicant to show not only that there has been a material irregularity, but also that substantial injury has been sustained in consequence of such material irregularity, and in the absence of evidence it is not to be presumed that the irregularity was the cause of the substantial injury

In the Full Bench case of Lala Mobarak Lal v. Secretary of State, 11 C 200, and in 7 C. 466, 3 C. 542, 9 C 656, 20 C. 590, 24 C 295, 30 C. I 6 C. W N 688, 6 C W. N 836, 20 M 159, it was held that where property has been sold at an inadequate price and if it is also proved that there has been a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, the fair inference to draw in the case is that the irregularity was the cause of the inadequacy of the price, until proof is given to the contrary In order to meet these conflicting rulings, the language of the proviso has been altered and under the present law it must be satisfactorily proved that irregularity was the cause of the substantial injury. No inference can now be drawn that irregularity was the cause of the substantial injury The rulings in which a view contrary to the present law were expressed have been overridden by the present law. The word "irregularity" does not include "illegality"; see 12 A. 96, 32 C. 1101, 9 C. L J 27, 16 C W. N. 193, 20 A. 412, P. C., 2 C. W. N. 550.

Scope of the Rule.—Under this rule a sale can be set aside only (1) if there is a material irregularity or fraud, (2) if the material irregularity or fraud is in respect of publishing or conducting the sale, (3) if the applicant sustains substantial injury, (4) if such injury is caused by such material irregularity or fraud and antecedent fraud or irregularity does not properly come within the purview of the rule except for collateral purposes. Suppression of processes and inadequacy of price are quite enough to bring the cases within the rule; Kusam Kumari v Kutiswan, 93 I. C 870: A. I. R. 1926 Cal 577.

Who may Apply under this Rule.—(1) " Decree-holder or any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets "—The term " decree-holder " in this rule is not limited to the decree-holder who instituted the execution proceedings, but may include a decree-holder who is entitled to come in and share in the proceeds under section 73.—Pragji Kala v Assa Jalal, 35 I. C. 530, Lakshmi v. Kuthenni, 10 M 57, Chakrapani v Dhanji, 24 M. 311; Bijoy Singh v. Hukum Chand, 29 C 548 See also, Ajudhia Prasad v. Nand Lal, 15 A 318, Athappa Chetti v Rama Krishna, 21 M. 51 See also, Chattrapat Singh v Jadukul Prasad, 20 C. 673; and Sarabji Edulji v. Gobind Ramji, 16 B. 91. The two latter cases have been dissented from in Matungini Dassi v. Monmotho Nath, 4 C. W. N. 542.

The expression " rateable distribution " in Or. XXI, r. 90, is not wide enough to cover the distribution of dividends under the Prov. Insolvency Act. That rule is a rule framed under the C P. Code and it has application only to rateable distribution under s. 73, C P Code, and has no application to distribution of dividend under the Prov. Insolvency Act — Sullemanji v Pragji Kala, 39 I C 932: 10 S L R. 189

A person whose application for execution has been dismissed for default is entitled to a share in a rateable distribution of the assets and as such can apply under this rule.—Bymokesh v. Jatindra, 18 C. W N 1311.

An application by a [illegible] e a sale under this rule is maintainable, thou [illegible] r judgment-debtors have proved infructuous, [illegible] 93 I C 870: A. I. R. 1926 Cal 820, Jadoonath v. Aswini, 16 C L J. 98 16 I C 974.

(2) " Any person whose interests are affected by this sale "—The expression " any person whose interests are affected by the sale " has been substituted for the expression " any person whose immoveable property has been sold," which occurred in the old section 311. In the Full Bench case of Asmutunnissa v Ashruff Ali, 15 C 488 F. B , this expression was held to mean " any person whose interests are affected by the sale." and the above change in wording has been introduced in the present rule in accordance with the view expressed in 15 C 588 In Asmutunnissa Begum v. Ashruf Ali, 15 C 488 F B it was held that a person, who claims to be a purchaser from a judgment-debtor prior to the attachment, is not entitled to come in under rule 90 and object to the sale of the judgment-debtor's property, because the sale being prior to the attachment his interest cannot be legally affected by the sale This Full Bench Case has been followed in Ram Chandra v Rukhma Bai, 23 B 450 and dissented from by Mahomood, J , in Sheo Prasad v Hira Lal, 12 A 410, following 14 C 210. In Matungini Dassi v Monmotha Nath 4 C W. N. 542, it has been held that an attaching creditor is not a " person whose immoveable property is sold," nor does he come within the words "the decree-holder" But in the case of Dhirendra v. Kamini, 29 C W N 899, it has been held that attaching creditor who has attached the property in execution of his decree is a person "whose interests are affected by the sale" and can apply under this rule. A distinction, however, has been made between the person attaching the property in execution of his decree and the person attaching the same before judgment. A plaintiff attaching the property before judgment has no locus standi to apply under the rule Jogendra v Manmotha, 16 C. L J. 566: 17 C. W. N 80, Badiar v Sarada, 42 C L. J.37 89 I. C. 688: A. I R 1925 Cal. 1103 The term "the decree-holder" in s. 311 means the decree-holder who brings the property to sale and not any decree-holder (15 C 488 F. B referred to) In Ibhaya Dasi v Pudmo Lochun, 22 C. 892, it has been held that a purchaser of a tenure prior to attachment from a judgment-debtor whose interest in the tenure has been sold in execution of a decree for its own arrears of rent is entitled to apply under rule 90, to set aside the sale (15 C 488 distinguished). An unregistered transferee of a portion of occupancy holding before decree can apply to set aside a sale held in execution of a decree obtained against the recorded tenant, as a person whose immoveable property has been sold within the meaning of Or. XXI, r 90 —Azgar Ali v Asaboddin Kazi, 9 C. W. N. 134 An auction-purchaser of the interests of an unregistered transferee of an occupancy holding as well as the unregistered trasnferee himself may apply under this rule to set aside a sale —Haradhan v. Girish Chadara, 13 C W. N 98 (9 C W. N 134, 10 C W. N. 240, followed) A person to whom a transferable occupancy holding was mortgaged before its sale in execution of a rent decree, may apply to set aside a sale.—Nissa Bibi v. Radha Kishore, 11 C W N 312 (9 C. W. N. 134 followed). But a person who claims to have purchased the holding from the tenant, cannot apply as the representative of the judgment-debtor, to set aside a sale, if the holding be not transferable by custom or usage.—Prosunno Kumar v. Bamacharn, 13 C W N 652 (11 C W N. 312 followed).

The judgment-debtor sold his properties to another before the date of the execution sale But at the time of the execution sale the properties were sold as belonging to him Held that the judgment-debtor was a person whose interests were "affected by the sale" within the meaning of this rule.—Mahomed Mohideen v. Ramanadhan, 22 L. W. 872: 92 I. C 597 A. I. R 1926 Mad 217

The words in r 90 "whose interests are affected by the sale" refer to existing interests in the property sold The phrase cannot be extended to the claims of creditors, for that would involve (1) proof of claim in the execution proceedings and (2) a construction which would make the words "the decree-holder or any person entitled to a share in a rateable distribution of assets" redundant —Pragjilala v. Jalal, 35 I. C. 530. But see Abdul Aziz v Tafazuddin, 19 C W. N 326.

It was held under the old Code that an auction-purchaser was not entitled to apply under s 311 to set aside a sale held in execution of a decree, as he was not "a person whose immoveable property was sold within the meaning of that section"—Brij Mohan v. Rai Uma Nath, 20 C 8 P. C. Followed in Ram Narain v. Dwarka Nath, 4 C. W. N 13, referred to in Khetter Nath v Tazuddin Ali, 21 C. 682. The Madras

High Court has held that an auction-purchaser is entitled to apply under this rule, because his interests are affected by the sale; Gopalakrishnayya v. Sanjeeva, 38 M. L. J. 228: 55 I. C. 333. The Patna High Court has held that an auction-purchaser is not entitled to apply under this rule, because " interests affected by the sale " mean interests in the property existing before the sale; Khetro Mohon v. Sheikh, 3 Pat. L. J. 516: 46 I. C. 614; Kartik v. Nagendra, 74 I. C. 760: A. I. R. 1924 Pat. 349. The Allahabad High Court has taken a different view from the Patna decisions and has held that an auction-purchaser is entitled to apply under this rule on the ground that the word " interests " is a term which covers " every sort of interests recognized by law, such as, in the case of an auction-purchaser, the liability to pay the money, liability to complete and take a transfer of the property, and, from his own point of view, the necessity of finding the necessary funds, and also the necessity of carrying through to fruition the provisional contract in which he has entered "; Ravidnandan v. Jagannath, 47 A. 479: 87 I. C. 278: A. I. R. 1925 All. 459.

Where, in execution of a decree obtained against a Hindu widow, certain properties were sold, and the presumptive reversioner sought to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity in the proclamation and the conduct of sale, held that he is a person " whose interests are affected by the sale " within the meaning of this rule, and so the application is maintainable; Adanamoli Chetti v. Chinnaswami, (1926) M. W. N. 631: 97 I. C. 574: A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 959. A reversioner to a Hindu widow's estate is entitled to apply under Or. XXI, r. 90, to set aside a sale of immoveable property.—Brijkishore v. Pratap Narain, 4 Pat. L. J. 360: 51 I. C. 350.

A person alleging himself to be the undivided brother, and, as such, legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, applied to have a sale of certain joint family property, which had taken place in execution of the decree set aside. Held that the applicant's proper remedy was a regular suit, and not a proceeding under this section.—Subbarayodu v. Pedda, 16 M. 476.

Where immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree against the ostensible owner as his property, a person claiming to be the beneficial owner is entitled to come in under this rule and object to the sale.—Abdul Gani v. Dunne, 20 C. 418 (15 C. 488 followed). See also, Timmanna Banta v. Mahabata Khatta, 19 M. 167.

Where immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree against the ostensible owner, the real owner cannot apply under this rule.—Hardwari v. Salamatullah, 38 A. 358.

A person claiming to be a co-sharer in certain undivided property, a share of which had been sold in execution of a decree, objected to the confirmation of the sale in favour of the person recorded as the auction-purchaser, and prayed that it might be confirmed in his favour with reference to the provisions of s. 310, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 88). Held that he had no locus standi to make an application under this rule.—Bukhtawar Kuar v. Hari Singh, 5 A. 42. But where a property is sold in execution of a rent decree obtained in a suit framed under s. 148 A of the B. T. Act by some co-sharer landlords, the other co-sharers may apply under the rule —Khagendra v Jatindra, 23 C. W. N. 619: 50 I. C. 329.

An objection made by one whose property was attached and sold in execution of a money-decree for the performance of which he had become a surety, that he was no party to the decree and that his property was not liable to be attached and sold, and therefore the sale was invalid, cannot be entertained under this section.—Hub Lal v. Kanhia Lal, 7 A 363

A mortgagee after obtaining a foreclosure decree under section 86 of the T P Act (IV of 1882), is entitled to apply under this section to set aside a sale on the ground of irregularity.—Rakhal Chunder v. Dwarka Nath, 13 C 346 But see Bhugabati Churn v. Biseshwar, 8 C. 367. A simple mortgagee of property sold in execution of a rent decree is competent to apply under this section —Safar Ali v. Raj Mohun, 1 C L J 454

A mortgagee purchaser in execution of a mortgage decree of an entire non-transferable occupancy holding is a person " whose interests are affected by the sale," and as such is competent to apply for setting aside a subsequent execution sale held in execution of a rent-decree —Sailabala v Nitya Gopal, 31 I C 859, 22 C W N 143.

A person claiming adversely to judgment-debtor cannot apply, Maung Kum v Ma Nan, 1 Bur L J 234 70 I C. 900

Strangers can Not Challenge Sale on the ground of Irregularity.—It is not open to third parties to raise the question of irregularity in the sale in execution of a decree. The only person who can raise the question is either the decree-holder or a person whose interest is affected by the sale, and these persons can only raise the question under the provisions of Or XXI, r 90; Kunjo Lal v Idurah, 97 I. C. 757

What Does and what does not amount to Material Irregularity :—

(a) Absence of Attachment.—A regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple money-decrees, and where there has been no such attachment, any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable, but de facto void.—Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath, 5 A. 86. See also, Fida Husain, v. Kutub Husain, 7 A. 39, Ram Chand v Pitam Mal, 10 A 506 (540) and Luchmeeput v. Lekraj Ray, 8 W. R 415. It was held by the Calcutta High Court in Panchanan v Kunja, 42 I C. 259, that the Court had no jurisdiction to sell property which had not been duly attached and that omission to attach rendered the sale void, ipso facto But see Kishory Mohun v. Mahomed Mujaffar, 18 C. 188, where it has been held that after a sale has been confirmed and sale certificate granted to the purchaser, the sale is not to be considered as nullity, merely by reason of the absence of any attachment (8 W R 9 followed, 5 A 86 dissented from) Followed in Hari Charan v Chandra Kumar 31 C 787 In Sheo Dhyan v. Bholanath, 21 A 311 it has been held that the absence of an attachment, prior to the sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree, amounts to no more than a material irregularity, but is not sufficient, unless substantial injury is caused thereby to vitiate the sale The Patna High Court, in Raja Hari v. Bhikari, 2 Pat. 207· A. I. R 1923 Pat. 45, took the same view as the Calcutta High Court took in Kishory v. Mahomed, 18 C. 188, though in the Patna case the application to set aside the sale was made [illegible]

the confirmation of sale. The Rangoon High Court has held that though the absence of attachment is an irregularity, it does not render the sale absolutely void, but only voidable; Ma Pwa v. Mahomed, 1 R. 533: 77 I. C. 368: A. I. R. 1924 Rang. 124. See also, Shankar v. Manik Rao, 68 I. C. 643; Taruknath v. Syamacharan, 36 I. C. 292; Panaru v. Buldeo, 21 I. C. 46.

The omission to cause an attachment to be made in execution of a decree, for the realization of a mortgage-debt does not affect the validity of a sale of the mortgaged property in execution of such a decree.—Tincouri Debya v. Shib Chandra, 21 C. 639; Muniappa v. Subramania, 18, M. 437.

Where there was a subsisting attachment which was followed by an order for sale made in the life-time of the judgment-debtor, the decree-holder was entitled to proceed with the sale and realize his decree.—Peary Lal v. Anukul Chandra, 11 C. W. N. 163: 5 C. L. J. 80.

(b) Irregular Attachment.—Under the present law irregularity in attaching the property is no ground for setting aside the sale.—See the Report of the Special Committee.

(c) Omission to Issue Notice.—Omission to give notice to the party against whom execution is proceeding as provided by Or. XXI, r. 22 invalidates a sale in execution of the decree.—Ramessuri Dasee v. Doorgadas, 6 C. 103: 7 C. L. R. 85; Imamunnissa Bibi v. Liakat Husain, 3 A. 424; Vuppu Sitaramayya v. Gopala Krishnamma, 43 M. 57: 37 M. L. J. 216: 53 I. C. 257; Sahdeo Pandey v. Ghasiram, 21 C. 19. See also, GopalChunder v. Gunamani, 20 C. 370, and Erava v. Sidramappa, 21 B. 424. But see Paresh Ram v. Balmukund, 32 B. 572; and Ramjas v. Sheo Prasad, 28 A. 193.

The mere absence of a notice to a judgment-debtor of the intended sale of his property is not a material irregularity in publishing the sale, sufficient to justify by itself the setting aside of the sale.—Mahpal Bahadur v. Rambahadur, 52 I. C. 16.

Omission to issue notice under Or. XXI, r. 66, is an irregularity.—Jagannath v. Daud, 75 I. C. 103: 4 Lah. 243.

Omission to issue notice under Or. XXI, r. 22 renders the sale void but irregularity in service of notice is only an irregularity.—Babu Das v. Mir Mahomed, 61 I. C. 822. But where every process prescribed by the legislature had been suppressed, the case comes within the provisions of s. 47, C. P. Code. An omission to serve a notice under Or. XXI, r. 22 is by itself sufficient to render the sale void for want of jurisdiction, for the notice is the very foundation of jurisdiction.—Ram Kinker v. Sthitha Ram, 27 C. L. J. 528.

The Court has discretion to issue process in execution without issuing notice. See Or. XXI, r. 22, sub-rule (2).

(d) Omission to State in the Sale Proclamation the Amount of Rent or Revenue Payable in respect of the Property to be Sold.—Omission to state in the sale-proclamation the amount of rent payable in respect of a tenure is not a material irregularity within the meaning of this section.—Mahendra Coomar v. Heera Mohun, 7 C. 723.

Where a revenue-paying land is advertised for sale, non-statement of the revenue assessed upon it, as required by the provisions of Or. XXI, rr. 68, 70 is an irregularity; but a sale cannot be set aside on account of such irregularity without proof of substantial damage.—Macnaghten v. Mahabir pershad, 9 C 656, P C : 11 C. L. R. 494 (reversing 9 C L R. 134)

Although inadequacy of price is no ground for refusing to confirm a sale yet any error in the sale notification in specifying the amount of Government revenue of the property sold is an irregularity, for which, on proof of substantial injury, a sale is liable to be set aside —Giridhari Singh v Hurdeo Narain, 20 W. R 44 P C L. R. 3 I. A. 230 (affirming 19 W. R 227) See also, Madarsah v Palaniappa, 23 M. 628; Bali Ram v. Seth Narasindas, 75 I. C 546 P. C . A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 93

(e) Other Errors, Omissions and Mis-statements in the Sale Proclamation.—An omission to state in the sale-proclamation the precise amount of claims received from other decree-holders, subsequently to the order directing the sale, can scarcely be called an irregularity at all.—Muhammad Ali v Mahabir Prasad, 35 I C 411.

The mistake in the dimensions of the property as stated in the sale-proclamation is a material irregularity, but this by itself is not sufficient to set aside the sale It must be held further that there has been substantial injury to the judgment-debtor by reason of this irregularity; Kishandas v Narain Dutt, 96 I C 196: A I R. 1926 Lah. 587.

It is not for every omission that a sale is liable to be set aside. To render a sale liable to be set aside, it must be shown that the omission was a material one.—Promotha v Bejoy Madhab, 53 I. C. 148

In a sale of immoveable property the sale-proclamation notified that the decree-holder held two charges on the property, aggregating about Rs. 1,000 There was, in fact, one charge only amounting to Rs 800 Held that the error in the sale-proclamation amounted to such an irregularity in publishing the sale as must have materially affected the price, and that the sale must therefore be set aside —Kanji Mal v. Sado, 8 A. 116

A misdescription of property in the sale-proclamation brings a case for setting aside a sale held under the Public Demands Recovery Act within the rule laid down in 14 C. 9 —Ram Taruk v. Mosahebar Khan, 6 C W N 246 See also Ram Taruk v. Dilwar Ali, 5 C. W. N. 521, F B

The omission in a sale-proclamation to mention particulars as to the numbers, value, etc , of Government Promissory notes under attachment for sale, is not such an irregularity as would vitiate the sale.—Luchmeeput v. Lekraj Roy, 8 W. R 415

(f) Mis-statement of the Value of the Property in the Sale-proclamation.—The absence from the sale-proclamation of a valuation of the property to be sold, if it had not a different effect on the mind of intending or possible bidders, is not a material irregularity.—Mohammand Ali v Mohabir Prasad, 35 I. C 411.

A mis-statement of the approximate value of the property in a sale-proclamation is a material irregularity which renders a sale liable to be set aside.—Paresh Nath v. Hari Charan, 52 I. C. 23.

The exact value of the property to be sold must be stated in the sale-proclamation. An under-statement of the value of property in the sale-proclamation is a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. —Saadatmand Khan v. Phul Kuar, 20 A. 412, P. C.: 2 C. W. N. 550, P. C. Relied upon in Raja Ramessur Prosad v. Rai Sham Krissen, 8 C. W. N. 257. Distinguished in Kashi Pershad v. Jamuna Pershad, 31 C. 922: 8 C. W. N. 264. Followed in Siva Sami Naicker v. Ratnasami Naicker, 23 M. 568; and Madarsha Maracayar v. Palaniappa Chetti, 23 M. 628. (See also, Balram v. Seth Narsing Das, 45 M. L. J. 403: 75 I. C. 546: A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 93) The absence of specification in the sale-proclamation of the incumbrances to which the property advertised for sale is subject, coupled with the mis-statement of its value, amounts to material irregularity within the meaning of this section.—Motilal v. Bhawani Kumari, 6 C. W. N. 836 (2 C. W. N. 550. 20 A. 412 relied on). The statement of the value of property which proves to be inadequate is an irregulraity, but not a material irregualrity.—Abdul Kashem v. Benode Lal, 12 C. W. N. 757.

It is essential for a judgment-debtor, in order to succeed in an application under this rule to show that the inadequacy of the prices stated in the sale-proclamation was caused in consequence of the irregularity. It is not an irregularity to have stated two separate valuations in the proclamation, the decree-holder's valuation and the judgment-debtor's valuation.—Nand Kishwar v. Kedar Nath, 40 I. C. 849 (2 Pat. L. J. 180 distinguished).

A sale is liable to be set aside on the ground of material irregularity when the price realised is very inadequate and the sale-proclamation understated the value of the property and omitted to state the amount due under a mortgage thereon.—Mahendra Nath v. Bipin Behary, 33 I. C. 946.

In ascertaining the value of the property, only the rents realizable from the tenants and not the abwabs that used to be realized from them should be taken into account.—Shosi Bhushan v. Ahmed Hossein, 7 C. W. N. 439.

Gross under-valuation of the property in sale-proclamaiton coupled with insufficient description and insufficient proclamation of the property constitute material irregularity which vitiates sale.—Chatterpat Singh v. Surendra Nath, 1918 Pat. 33. 44 I. C. 412.

(g) Omission to Make an Order Absolute.—An omission to make an order absolute for sale under section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) is not a material irregularity for setting aside a sale held in execution of a mortgage-decree.—Phul Chand v. Nursingh Pershad, 28 C. 73 (18 C. 139 and 22 C. 931 referred to).

A sale held in contravention of s. 99 of the T. P. Act (IV of 1882) is not a nullity, but an irregular and voidable sale. It can be avoided under s. 244, C. P. Code, 1882 (s. 47), before or after confirmation. But if the application is made after confirmation, the applicant must prove that owing to fraud or other reasons he was kept in ignorance of the sale.—Ashutosh v Behary Lal, 11 C. W. N. 1011 F. B.: 6. C. L. J 320. See also, Muthu v. Karuppan, 30 M. 313: 17 M. L. J. 161 and Venkayya v. Surayya, 30 M. 362: 17 M. L. J. 325.

(h) Omission to Beat Drum.—Omission to have a drum beaten as required by Or. XXI, rr. 54 and 57, was held to be a material irregularity so as to render a sale held in execution of a decree liable to be set aside— Trimbak Ranji v. Nana, 10 B 504; Nan Lal v. Tola Ram, 67 I. C 752, Gopi Chand v. Benani, 1 Lah. L J. 197.

(i) Postponement of Sale and Issue of Fresh Proclamation.—Where a sale is postponed, whether definitely or to a fixed date, it is necessary in the absence of an express arrangement between all the parties, that a fresh proclamation should be made, giving notice of the day to which the sale has been postponed, Omission to do so is a material irregularity; Gopee Nath v Roy Luchmeeput, 3 C. 542; 1 C. L. R 349; unless the proclamation has been waived; Bipin v Jatindra, 37 C. 897: 6 I. C 817

Where there is a series of short postponements less than seven days which taken together in the aggregate, amount to more than seven days a fresh proclamation of sale is necessary.—Jamini Mohan v. Charles Kumar, 6 C W N. 44

The property of a judgment-debtor was advertised for sale on a certain day. The proclamation set out particulars of the property, but subsequent to such proclamation a portion of the property was released to a third party Notwithstanding this fact no fresh proclamation was made, and the sale took place on the day originally fixed Held that the omission to issue a fresh proclamation was a material irregularity.—Shib Prokash v Sardar Dayal, 3 C. 544 2 C L. R 260.

When a sale does not take place on the day fixed, an indefinite postponement cannot be regarded as an adjournment from day to day, and a fresh notice should fix another date for the sale; and where, in consequence of an indefinite postponement, as estate has been purchased at an inadequate price and specially by the judgment-creditor, the irregularity is one that has occasioned substantial injury, and justifies a setting aside of the sale —Jhoomuck Chowdhury v. Radha Pershad, 25 W. R. 32

When the sale is postponed sine die, the omission to issue fresh proclamation is a material irregularity; Kirpal v. Kedarnath, 41 I. C. 6

An execution-sale which had been fixed for a certain date was put off to the corresponding day in the following month, on the application of the judgment-debtor, who consented that he would not object to any irregularities affecting the sale. A notification was also issued and was proclaimed only in a public place, After the sale, the judgment-debtor contended that he was entitled to have a fresh proclamation issued on the spot where the properties were situated. Held that he could not now object to it —Het Narain v Gossain Luchmee Narain, 23 W. R 2

Where a sale was at first proclaimed for a certain date, but was twice postponed on the application of the judgment-debtor, who consented to waive the making of a fresh proclamation: Held that a waiver by the judgment-debtor of a fresh proclamation does not necessarily prevent another attaching decree-holder from objecting to the sale on the g of irregularity. Refusal by the Court to issue a fresh proclamation, if applied for would constitute a ground on which the irregularity of the sale might be impeached.—Chakrapani v. Dhanji Sethu, 24 M. 311.

(j) Effect of Irregularity in Publishing or Conducting Sale.—The words "publishing or conducting" the sale explained, see 32 B. 572: 10 Bom L. R. 752.

Where property not covered by the decree has been proclaimed and sold, the case is one of "material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale" within the meaning of this rule.—Imtiazunnissa v. Chuttan Lal, 84 I. C. 746: A. I. R. 1925 All. 236. But see Gangaram v. Ram Prasad, 23 A. L. J 588: 88 I. C 393. A I. R. 1925 All. 551. So also is an irregular preparation of the proclamation of sale; Jagannath v Daud, 4 L. 243: 75 I. C. 103: A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 592.

The expression "conducting the sale" refers only to the action of the officer who makes the sale. Anything done antecedent to the order of sale has nothing to do with conducting the sale; Ramchaibar v. Bechu, 7 A. 641, 645.

The omission to affix sale-proclamation on a conspicuous part of the Court house, is a material irregularity which vitiates sale.—Laxmi v. Purnabai, 48 I. C 411.

When distinct properties are proclaimed for sale in one execution, the omission to affix a copy of the proclamation in each of such properties amounts to an irregularity in the publication of the sale.—Tripura Sundari v. Durga Charan, 11 C. 74. Followed in Abdul Kashem v. Benode Lal, 12 C. W. N. 757. See, however, De Penha v. Jalbhoy Ardeshir, 12 B. 868, where it has been held that a mere breaking up of a property into a number of lots as a means of obtaining a better aggregate price, does not necessarily make it several properties for the purposes of a proclamation of attachment or sale See also, Sami Pillai v. Krishna Sami, 21 M. 417.

Under Or. XXI, rr 54 and 67, it is necessary that a copy of the sale-proclamation should be affixed to some conspicuous place of the property attached; and the omission to do so is a material irregularity within the meaning of this rule.—Kalytara v. Ram Coomar, 7 C. 466: 9 C. L. R. 114.

Where a sale proclamation as framed by the court was not published, held that the sale was a nullity.—Jaya Ram v Vrindhagir, 59 I C. 167. 44 M. 35.

A sale of revenue-paying land is not ipso facto void by reason of a copy of the sale-proclamation not having been fixed up in the Collector's office as required by section 289, C P Code, 1882 (Or XXI r 67) An omission to fix up such notice is an irregularity, the remedy for which can only be by an application under this section.—Nana Kumar v Golam Chunder, 18 C 422, F. B

Where it appeared that the Court had accepted the report of the Nazir and the Court peon as evidence of the publication of the sale-proclamation and had refused to allow the judgment-debtor to give evidence of its insufficiency. Held that court was bound to hear the evidence tendered by the judgment-debtor.—Mohunt Megh Lall v. Shib Pershad, 7 C. 34 8 C. L. R. 369.

Upon an application to set aside a sale, on the ground of material irregularity, it appeared that the sale notification had not been fixed up in the Collector's office as required by s 289, C. P. Code 1882 (Or XXI, r. 67), and that the sale took place on and not after the 30th day from the publication of notice; but it also appeared that the applicant had himself been present at the sale, and had purchased the property and it was not shown that any substantial injury had resulted from the irregularities Held that there was no ground for setting aside the sale —Bandy Ali v. Madhub Chunder, 8 C. 932.

(k) Sale of Immoveable Property in Execution Before Expiry of Days.—It is a material irregularity for the proclamation to be published less than 30 days prior to a sale in execution of a decree, and where damage has resulted the sale may be set aside.—Abdul Nassia v. Dool Dass, 11 C L R 303, Megh Lall v. Shib Pershad, 7 C. 34: 8 C. L. R. 369. Contra in Ram Chunder v Kamta Prasad, 4 A. 300; Venkata v Sama, 14 M 227, Luxminarain v Purna Bai, 48 I. C 611.

Holding a sale of immoveable property before the expiration of 30 days from the date of fixing up the copy of proclamation under r. 68, is an irregularity in publishing a sale, and is something more than a material irregularity in publishing a sale to which this refers —Bakshinand v. Malak Chand, 7 A 289; Jasoda v. Mathura, 9 A. 511; Sadhu Saram v Panchdeo, 14 C 1, Ganga Prasad v Jaglat, 11 A 33; Basharutulla v Uma Churn, 16 C 791; Tasadduk v Ahmad Husain, 21 C. 66, P. C; Raja Wazir v. Bhikari Ram, 2 Pat 207· 68 I C. 363: A. I R. 1923 Pat. 45

An application made on the day of sale by the judgment-debtor, that a part only of his property may be sold instead of the entirety, cannot be considered such a "consent," as, by virtue of Or. XXI, r. 68, would do away with the necessity of a proclamation for sale being issued thirty days before the day fixed for sale —Harbuns Sahai v. Bhairo Pershad, 5 C 259. 4 C. L. R 23, and Bhekraj Kooeri v. Gendh Lall, 5 C. 873

As to the effect of misrepresentation by the auctioneer while conducting the sale, see Mohomed Kala Mea v Harperink, 13 C. W. N 219 9 C L J 165, P C 36 C 323

(l) Effect of Omission to Hold Sales at the Stated Time and Place.—A sale by public auction in execution of a decree which is conducted at a time and place other than those properly notified, is not a sale at all within the meaning of the C P Code. The time to be notified for a sale must be the time of the commencement of the sale, in order that all intending purchasers may be enabled to be present during the whole of the proceedings —Chedami Lal v. Amir Beg, 7 A. 676; Khodeja Bibi v. Ram Narain, 12 W R 511, Pokhraj Singh v. Gossain Munraj Pooree, 12 W. R. 281

A property advertised for sale under r 66 was sold on the day fixed but at an earlier hour than that stated in the proclamation. Held that there had been no sale within th time and place of sale and the holding of sale at such time and place, being conditions precedent to the sale being a sale under the Code.—Basharatulla v. Uma Churn, 16 C. 794.

Where a sale is adjourned under s. 291, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 69), it is necessary to mention the hour of sale and its non-specification is a material irregularity within the meaning of this rule.—Bhikari Mina v. Rani Surjamoni, 6 C. W. N. 48. See also, Mahabir Pershad v. Dhanukdhari, 31 C. 815 (818) 8 C W. N. 686 Affirmed in 34 C. 709, P. C.: 11 C. W. N. 739.

Where a sale was held neither on the day originally advertised nor on the day to which it had been adjourned but on a third day, held, it was a material irregularity in the conduct of sale.—Hari Sadhon v Shiv Gopal, 35 C. L. J. 140.

Where property was sold at an inadequate price owing to the hour of sale not being fixed as required by r. 69,—held that there had been a material irregularity causing substantial injury to the judgment-debtor —Surnomoyee v. Dakhina Ranjan, 24 C. 291. Followed in Jamini Mohan v. Chandra Kumar, 6 C. W. N. 44

It is the practice of the Courts under the rules of the High Court, to place all properties intended for sale on a list and to proceed with the sales from day to day, commencing on an appointed day. As each property is taken up in its turn, an adjournment of the sale of a particular property, which is the consequence of such procedure, is not an adjournment within the meaning of section 291, C P Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r. 69).—Lal Mohun v. Nunu Mohamed, 17 C 152

Where a sale is held at a place different from that specified in the proclamation, the case is not merely one of material irregularity but the sale is void altogether, Jayrama v Vridhagiri, 44 M 35 59 I. C 167.

(m) Effect of Purchase by Decree-holder Without Permission under Order XXI, Rule 72.—A sale at which the decree holder himself, or some other person for him, without the permission of the Court first obtained, becomes the purchaser, is not ipso facto void, it is a good sale unless and until set aside by the Court under the provisions of s 292, C. P Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r 73)—Javherbai v Haribhai, 5 B 575, followed in Chintamanrav v Vithabai, 11 B 588 See also In the matter of Veerapah Chetty, 6 B. L R Ap 37 11 W R 405 But in Rukhinee Bullabh v. Brojo Nath, 5 C 308, it has been held that a decree-holder is absolutely bound to have express permission from the Court before he can purchase the property; and whether this objection is taken and pressed or otherwise, a sale to him is invalid

When liberty is given to a decree holder to bid at the sale of the judgment-debtor's property, he is bound to exercise the most unscrupulous fairness in purchasing the property, and if he or his agent dissuades others from purchasing at the sale, that of itself is a sufficient ground why the purchase should be set aside —Roopendranath v Brojendra Nath, 7 C. 316: 9 C L R 263 Disapproved in Mahomed Mira Ravuthar v. Savarasi Vijaya, 23 M 227, P C 4 C W N 228 P C, where it has been held that any dissuasion by a bidder at a judicial sale of other persons from bidding does not of itself amount to a charge of fraud and will not invalidate the sale.

Under the terms of s 294 C P Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 72), it is discretionary with the High Court to set aside a sale at which a decree-holder had bid and purchased without permission of the Court; and in dealing with such a case, the Court, although considering the matter as an irregularity in the conduct of the sale, will not interfere with the sale, unless, it can be shown that the judgment-debtor has suffered some substantial injury arising from such irregularity.—Mathura Das v. Nathu Lall, 11 C. 731.

A mortgagee decree-holder was refused leave to bid at the sale in execution of his mortgage decree, but notwithstanding such refusal, he purchased the property in the name of a third person. Possession under the sale was opposed, and the decree-holder as purchaser brought a suit for possession. Held that the plaintiff had been guilty of an abuse of the process of the Court in bidding at the sale and buying the property benami, and that the sale, therefore, ought not to be enforced.—Mahomed Gazee v. Ram Lall, 10 C 757.

A purchase by the son of a decree-holder, undivided in interest from his father, is a purchase by the decree-holder within the meaning of section 294, C P Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r 72), and is absolutely void if the purchase were made with funds which were joint-property of the father and son.—Narayan Deshpande v Anant Deshpande, 5 B. 130.

An assignee of decree under an oral agreement has no locus standi to apply for execution of the decree, and it is not necessary for him to obtain leave to bid at the sale in execution of a decree. Therefore purchase by such an assignee without leave under s. 294, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r 72) is not a material irregularity within the meaning of this section —Dakhina Mohan v Srimati Basumati, 4 C. W. N. 471.

A person declared to be the purchaser of property put up for sale did not, as required by Or XXI, r 84, pay a deposit of 25 per cent, immediately after such declaration, but on a date subsequent to the date on which the property was put up for sale Held that there was no sale at all of the property —Intiazam Ali v. Narain Singh, 5 A. 316; Amir Begam v Bank of Upper India, 30, A. 273 · 5 A. L. J. 336; Ahmad Baksh v. Lalta Prasad, 28 A 238

(n) Default in Making the Deposit of 25 per cent. under Order XXI, Rule 84.—When a deposit is not duly made, the sale is liable to be set aside, but when a question arises as to whether a deposit was duly made or not, the Court is bound to inquire into and decide the question—Kuppayyan v Ramasami Ayyan, 6 M 197.

At a sale in execution the property was knocked down to a bidder at Rs 260, and on account of his inability to make a deposit, the property was re-sold for Rs. 50 Held that the judgment-debtor has sustained such substantial injury as would justify the Court in setting aside the sale, notwithstanding that the judgment-debtor might have recovered the deficiency of the price under section 293, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r. 71) —Bepin Chunder v Puresh Nath, 9 C. 98: 12 C. L. R. 316.

Failure of the auction-purchaser to make, and of the officer conducting the sale to receive, the deposit of 25 per cent, as required by Or. XXI, r. 84, constitutes a material irregularity in conducting the sale.—Bhim Singh v. Sarwan Singh, 16 C. 33 (5 A. 316 dissented from). In Venkata v. Sama, 14 M. 217, it has been held that any delay in making the deposit required by section 306, is not more than a mere irregularity and does not vitiate the sale.

(o) Effect of mere Inadequacy of Price.—Inadequacy of price is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a sale, unless it be the effect of an irregularity in the sale-proceedings.—Reet Bhunjun v. Mitturjeet, 6 W. R. Mis. 31: Nuddea Kishore v. Bungshee Mohun, 17 W. R. 210; Hubeedool Doss v. Allender, 14 W. R. 44; Ahmoddy v. Chunder Nath, 24 W. R. 227; Khodeja Bibee v. Johad Roheem, 14 W. R. 320.

An execution sale cannot be set aside on the ground of material irregularity under Or. XXI, r. 90, if there is nothing to warrant the necessary or at least reasonable inference that the inadequacy of the price was the result of the irregularity.—Tamuddi Bepari v. Lakpat Bepari, 45 I. C. 212.

The sale of immoveable property to the highest bidder for a price which subsequently appears to be too low, is not a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, and a sale cannot be set aside on that ground.—Lakhmi v. Krishnabhat, 8 B. 424.

Although inadequacy of price is no ground for refusing to confirm a sale, yet an error in the same notification, in specifying the amount of the Government revenue of the property sold, is an irregularity for which, on proof of substantial injury, a sale is liable to be set aside.—Girdhari Singh v. Hurdeo Narain, 26 W. R. 44, P. C.; L. R. 3 I. A. 230 (affirming 19 W. R. 227).

Where a material irregularity is proved and it is also shown that the price realized was much below the true value, it may ordinarily be inferred that low price was in consequence of irregularity.—Venkata Subbarayya v. Zemindar of Kareetnagar, 20 M. 159.

(p) Proof of Material Irregularity and Substantial Injury.—*If it is proved that the price obtained for property sold is greatly inadequate, and if it is also proved that there has been a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, the Court will presume that the irregularity was the cause of the inadequacy of price, until proof is given to the contrary.—Kalytara v. Ram Coomar, 7 C. 166: 9 C. L. R. 114 (3 C. 542 approved). In Gur Baksh Lall v. Jawahir Singh, 20 C. 599, it has been held that the relative cause and effect between a proved material irregularity and inadequacy of price may either be established by direct evidence, or be inferred, when such inference is reasonable from the nature of irregularity and the extent of inadequacy of price (9 C. 656, and 11 C. 292 referred to). Followed in Sheo Ratan v. Net Lal, 6 C. W. N. 688: 30 C. 1 and in Moti Lal v. Bhawani Kumari, 6 C. W. N. 836. In Surnomoyee v. Dakhina Ranjan, 24 C. 291, it has been held that where there has been material irregularity causing substantial injury to the debtor it is sufficient under s. 311, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 90), if the evidence, though not "direct evidence" shows that the injury was a necessary result of the irregularity complained of (21 C. 66, P. C. explained) In Venkata Subbaraya v Zemindar of Karvetinagar, 20 M. 159, it has been held that where a material irregularity is proved, and it is also proved that the price realized is inadequate, it may ordinarily be inferred that the low price was a consequence of the irregularity even though the manner in which the irregularity produced the low price be not definity made out. In Gopee Nath Dobey v. Roy Luchmeeput, 8 C. 542, it has been held that where property has been sold at an inadequate price, the fair inference to draw in the case is that the inadequacy of the price was the result of the irregularity. In Lala Mobaruk Lal v. The Secretary of State, 11 C. 200, F. B it has been held that no positive rule can be laid down, permitting an inference to be drawn in all cases, that the inadequacy of the price is due to the irregularity of the sale proceedings. But in the following cases it has been held that in an application under s 311, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 90), to set aside a sale in execution of a decree, it is necessary for the applicant to show not only that there has been a material irregularity, but also that substantial injury had been sustained in consequence of such material irregularity; and in the absence of evidence it is not to be presumed from the proved existence of irregularity and injury that the latter occurred by reason of the former —Tasadduk Rasul v Ahmed Husain, 21 C. 66 P. C, Satish Chunder v Thomas, 11 C 658 (9 C. 656; 11 C. 200, discussed), Bonomali v Woomesh Chunder, 7 C 730 ; 9 C. L. R 311 (8 C. 542 considered) ; Jagan Nath v. Mokund Prasad, 18 A. 37 (21 C. 66 referred to) ; Shirin Begum v Agha Ali, 18 A 141 (12 M. 19, 24 C 66 referred to) ; Arunachellam v. Arunachellam, 12 M. 19 , Macnaghten v. Mahabir Pershad, 9 C 656, P C 11 C. L R 494, P. C. (reversing 9 C L. R. 134) ; Harbans Lal v Kundan Lal, 21 A. 140. See also Mahabir Pershad v Dhanukdhari, 31 C. 815 8 C. W. N. 686. Even under the old Code, that is under section 256 of Act VIII of 1859, which corresponded with s 311, C P. Code, 1882 (Or XXI, r 90), it was held that where material irregularity had occurred as from non-issue of sale-proclamation, the party applying to set aside a sale on that ground was bound to prove that he had sustained substantial injury thereby. See, Joytara v. Mahomed Hussain, 2 W R Mis 2, Nilmonee v. Ram Churn, 2 W. R. Mis. 45, Abdool Mahomed v. Shib Doolaree, 11 W. R 114 ; Leak Ram v. Mohesh Doss, 12 W R 488 ; Nujmooddeem Ahmed v. Abdool Azeez, 15 W. R 95 , Chunder Shekhur v. Jadub Chunder, 19 W. R. 78 ; Sammul Singh v Makhan Pandey, 2 N. W. P. 143 ; and Sheo Prokash v. Hurdai Narain 22 W R 550 The leading case on the point is the Privy Council case of Tasaduk Rasul v Ahmed Hussain, 21 C 66 P. C.

The failure to give a direction for advertisement of the sale in the gazette does not amount to material irregularity in the conduct of the sale within Or. XXI, r. 90 A judgment-debtor applying to set aside a sale must show not only that there has been material irregularity in the conduct of the sale but also that such irregularity has resulted in substantial injury to him.—Gopi Chand v. Benarasi Das, 53 I. C. 791

(q) Omission to Make the Legal Representatives of a Deceased Judgment-debtor or Decree-holder Parties to the Sale-proceedings.— Where subsequent to the attachment of immoveable property in execution of a money-decree, the judgment-debtor died, and the property was then sold without making the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor parties to the sale-proceedings —Held, that the sale was regular and valid notwithstanding such omission.—Sheo Prasad v. Hira Lal, 12 A. 440, F. B. (6 M. 180 dissented from). See also Net Lall v. Kareem Bux, 23 C. 686 ; Aba v. Dhondu Rai, 19 B. 276 ; and Erava v. Sidramappa, 21 B. 424. (This case has been reversed in 25 B. 337 P. C. : 5 C. W. N. 10 P. C.) ; Abdur Rahaman v. Shankar Dat, 17 A. 162 ; Stowell v. Ajudhia Nath, 6 A. 255 ; Dulari v. Mohan Singh, 3 A. 759, and Janardan v. Ram Chandra, 26 B. 317 But see Ramasami Ayyangar v. Bhagirath, 6 M. 180 ; Krishnayya v Unissa Begum, 15 M. 399 ; and Groves v. Administrator-General of Madras, 22 M. 119. It would thus appear that all the other three High Courts differ from the Madras High Court on this point. In Jagadis v. Bamasundari, 23 C. W N. 608, this omission to bring the legal representative on record was held to be a mere irregularity which might lay the sale open to attack

As to the effect of omission to make the legal representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor or decree-holder parties to the sale proceedings.—See notes under section 50.

Where subsequent to a decree and prior to sale the judgment-debtor was declared insane under Act XXXV of 1858, and an application was made to set aside the sale. Held that these facts only amounted to a material irregularity within Or XXI, r 90, and that substantial injury must be proved —Narayana Kothan v Kaliana Sundaram, 19 M. 219.

Non-representation of Minor.—An application to set aside a sale on the ground that there was no guardian ad litem of a minor in the execution proceedings comes under this rule and the alleged defect is a mere irregularity.—Fani Bhusan v. Surendra, 35 C. L. J. 9: 64 I C. 25.

(r) Effect of Sale After the Order of Postponement.—When a Court executing a decree passes an order postponing a sale, but the sale takes place before such order reaches the officer conducting the sale: Held that the defect in the sale amounted to an illegality and not merely an irregularity within the meaning of this section.—Sant Lal v. Umrounissa, 12 A. 96 (4 A. 701, and 11 A. 33 referred to). See also, Maijha Singh v. Jhow Lal, 6 N. W. P. 354 ; Mainjan v. Man Singh, 2 A. 686 ; and Nonidh Singh v. Sohun Koor, 4 N. W. P. 135. See, however, Bissesswari v. Hurro Sundar, 1 C. W. N. 226, where it has been held that if a property is sold before the order of an Appellate Court under s 545, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XLI, r. 5), staying execution of decree, is communicated to the Court holding the sale, such a sale is not void and cannot be treated as a nullity (4 N. W. P. 398, 6 N. W. P. 354, and 2 A. 686 distinguished).

Where a sale in execution took place under an order obtained notwithstanding a consent, on the part of the decree-holder's pleader, to a petition by the judgment-debtor for postponement, the petition of postponement having been by mistake filed in the wrong Court. Held that the judgment-debtor was entitled to have the sale set aside.—Ganga Pershad v. Gopal Singh, 11 C. 136 P. C.

A sale held inspite of an issue of an injunction to stay the sale is invalid and ought to be set aside.—Ramanathan v. Arunachellam 22 I. C. 99: 38 M. 766.

(s) Effect of Sale After Attachment under Order XXI, Rule 53.—Where a Court in which an application for execution was pending received an order from another Court under s. 273, C. P. Code, 1882 (r. 53) attaching the decree and returned the order with an intimation that i not contain information as to the amount of the decree and subsequ held the sale. Held that the sale was invalid and was accordingl aside ; that it was not a mere irregularity as the Court had no jurisdi to hold the sale.—Manik Lal v. Bonomali, 32 C. 1104 : 3 C L J. 10 C W N. 193.

Fraud in Publishing or Conducting Sale.—The present Code altered the law in an important aspect in as much as an application l on fraud in publishing or conducting a sale comes within the purvie Or. XXI, r 90 and not under s 47.—Sheo Prosad Singh v. Mussam. Premna Kuar, 40 A 122 15 A L. J 920: 43 I. C. 522.

The words " or fraud " have been added in the new Code after the " irregularity " The effect of adding the words " or fraud " into the sent rule is to transfer applications setting up fraud in publishing or cond ing the sale from s 47 to the present rule The result is that no se appeal will now lie from an order made on such application, whether order be one setting aside the sale of refusing to set aside the sale, fo order has no longer the force of a decree, not being one under s 47 but under r. 92, and only one appeal lies from an order made under r. 92 XLIII, r. 1 (j) and s. 104, sub-section (2)].—Sheo Prasad v. Pr Kunwar, 40 A 122 43 I C 522, Jagannath v Daud, 4 L. 213: I C. 103 A I R 1923 Lah 392 , Maula Bux v. Raghubar, 3 Pat J 645 48 I C 560 In the absence of the words " or fraud " u the old Code, it was held by all the High Courts that an application t aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting it, fell w the purview of s 244 (now s. 47) The result was that under the Code a second appeal lay from an order made on such application, bec an order made under s. 47 has the force of a decree, and all decree open second appeal, subject to the provisions of ss. 100-102 ; Nemai C v. Denonath, 2 C W N 691 ; Bhuban v. Nundalal, 26 C 324. It se therefore, that the object of the Legislature, in requiring applicatio set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the to be made under the present rule instead of under s. 47, is to exclude right of second appeal with a view to bring proceedings on such applica to a speedy termination

The question as to how far an innocent purchaser for value wit notice of fraud, irregularities or infirmities in the proceedings or d would be affected, has been elaborately discussed by Mookerjee J. in case of Bireswar v Panch Cowri, 37 C L. J. 145, where it has been that judicial sales fraudulently procured will not give a good title to a chaser even in a case in which he may not be guilty of fraud. See Mahabir Ram v Ram Bahadur, 72 I. C. 625.

When circumstances affecting the validity of an execution sale l been brought about by the fraud of one of the parties to the suit, and rise to a question between those parties such as, apart from fraud, w be within the provisions of s 244, C. P. Code, 1882 (s 47) a suit will lie to impeach the validity of the sale on the ground of such fraud —U dra Narain v Gopal Mondul, 17 C. 769, F. B. (11 C. 376, 5 M. 217, 113, and 9 B. 469, approved ; 11 C. 679 dissented from in part). Fell certified but nevertheless he proceeded with execution, applied for and obtained leave to bid at the Court sale, and himself purchased the property. The judgment-debtor applied to set aside the sale. Held that the ... prove the adjustment and to have the sale ... 21 M. 356.

The purchase of a property at an execution-sale by the decree-holder in the name of another person, at a price less than that at which the decree-holder obtained permission to bid for the said property, constitutes fraud which would vitiate the sale.—Srimati Sarat Kumari v. Nemai Charan, 5 C W N. 265 (10 C 757 referred to).

In a suit to set aside a sale in execution of decree, it appeared that the property was purchased by the decree holder's pleader himself, although he obtained permission of the Court to bid for his client, and that he acted in an underhand manner towards his client. Held that the transaction was tainted with fraud and that the sale must be set aside.—Subbarayudu v. Kotayya, 15 M. 389.

What Amounts to Waiver of Irregularity by the Judgment-debtor.—An application by a judgment-debtor for an adjournment of the sale without issue of fresh proclamation and beat of drum, does not amount to a waiver preventing him to apply to set aside the sale held on the day adjourned on the ground that proclamation of sale was not served on each of the properties and consequently the sale fetched a low value—Preo Lal v. Radhika Prosad, 6 C W N. 42. Distinguished in Raja Thakur Barham v. Anant Ram, 2 C L J. 584.

Failure to publish the sale-proclamation is not an illegality vitiating the sale, but only an irregularity which can be waived by the judgment-debtor; Nripati v. Jatindra, 91 I C 407· A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 577.

The fact that the judgment-debtor consents that the sale should be held without the issue of a fresh proclamation does not indicate that he waives the non-specification of the hour of the day to which the sale is adjourned, inasmuch as he has no control over the form of the order of the Court.—Bhikari Misra v Rani Surjamoni, 6 C. W. N. 48 (24 C. 291 referred to)

A judgment-debtor got an execution sale postponed on undertaking that he would not raise any objection on the ground of illegality or irregularity. After the sale took place on the postponed date he applied to set it aside on the ground of an illegality of which he was not cognizant at the time he gave the undertaking Held that he was estopped from impeaching the sale.—Lakhsmi Prasanna v. Rajindar Poddar, 47 I. C. 831.

The fact that a judgment-debtor, who petitions to have the sale in execution of the decree against him set aside, on the ground of fraud and irregularity, has, in a petition made previous to the sale, asking for its adjournment, made no mention of the irregularities relied on, does not create an estoppel.—Mahatap Deo v. Leelanund Singh, 7 C. 613: 9 C. L. R. 398, followed in Raman v. Kunhayan 17 M. 301. See, however, Girdhari Singh v Hurdeo Narain, 26 W. R. 41, P. C.: L. R. 3 I. A. 230 (affirming 19 W R. 227) Followed in Raja Thakur Barham v. Anant Ram, 2 C L. J 584.

Where a sale was at first proclaimed for a certain date but was twice postponed on the application of the judgment-debtor who consented to waive the making of a fresh proclamation. Held that a waiver by a judgment-debtor of a fresh proclamation after sale has been adjourned, does not necessarily prevent another attaching-creditor from objecting to a sale so held on that ground.—Chakrapani Chettiar v Dhanji Setta, 24 M. 311.

For the meaning of the word "waiver" and its effect, see 11 C. W. N. 848. 6 C L J 62, 34 C 275. 5 C. L. J. 148; and 6 C. L. J. 111, noted under s. 11.

Equitable Estoppel—Agreement Not to Challenge Validity of Sale.—In an application under this section the judgment-debtor got time on condition of his paying up the decretal amount within a certain time and then he failed to pay the amount Held that the judgment-debtor was bound by the agreement and that he was estopped from contesting the legality of the sale.—Uttam Chandra v Khetra Nath, 29 C. 557 (8 C. 455 followed). Followed in Harak Singh v. Saheb Singh, 6 C. L. J. 176. Where time had previously been repeatedly granted by the decree-holder for compromise, and on the final date to which payment was adjourned, the judgment-debtor prayed for further time and the decree-holder demanded it as a condition precedent to the grant of further time that the judgment-debtor should definitely agree that, upon his failure to pay the money on the date to be fixed, his right to challenge the validity of the sale should finally cease, and such an arrangement was definitely sanctioned by the Court with consent of all the parties Held that the Court had no jurisdiction subsequently to vary the terms of the final agreement at the instance of the judgment-debtor, in spite of the protest of the decree-holder (6 C. L. J. 176: 29 C. 577 referred to) Held, further, that an appeal need not be preferred against every interlocutory order in an execution proceeding (18 C. 461 followed) —Chandrabala v. Probodh Chandra, 36 C. 422: 9 C. L J. 251.

A judgment-debtor who might have raised objection to a sale, but who has refrained from doing so, and who might have appealed against the order for sale, has no right, after the sale has been carried out, to prefer an objection that the property sold was not legally saleable.—Umed v. Jasram, 29 A 612 4 A. L. J 519 (26 C. 727, 7. A. 641 followed).

Sale of Property in Separate Lots though Advertised to be Sold in a Lump, and Vice Versa.—It is entirely within the discretion of the Court to direct that a property should be sold in portions, even though it had been attached or proclaimed as an entirety; and that the sale of the whole estate against the will of the judgment-debtor, when the sale of a portion would suffice, was an irregularity which caused material injury to the judgment-debtor.—Abdool Hye v. Macrae, 23 W. R. 1.

When property is advertised to be sold in separate lots, and is afterwards sold in a lump, this is an irregularity; but the person who wishes to set aside the sale on the ground of such irregularity, must show affirmatively that substantial damage has been sustained by him on account of such irregularity.—Roy Nandipat v. Urquhart, 4 B. L. R. A. C. 181; 13 W. R. 209 (reversing 12 W. R. 492).

Combination amoung Bidders Not to Bid Against Each Other, When amounts to Fraud.—Combination among certain purchasers not to bid against each other does not constitute any fraud or impropriety such as would have the effect of vitiating the sale.—Hari Balkrishna v. Nara Moreshvar, 18 B. 342; Doorga Singh v. Sheo Prasad, 16 C. 194; Mohamed Mira Ravuther v. Savvasi Vijaya, 23 M. 227 P. C; Satis Chunder v. Porter 9 C. L. J. 244, 36 C. 226; Gobind Chunder v. Shyam Lal, 1 C. L. J. 85. See, however, Ambika Prasad v. Sitaram, 6 C. L. J. 111. Dissented from in Jyoti Prokash v. Jhoo mull, 36 C. 134: 13 C. W. N. 87.

Application to Set Aside Sale for Arrears of Rent.—The procedure to be followed upon the sale of an under-tenure is now that prescribed by the Civil Procedure Code. S. 311, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 90), does not apply only to sales made under Chapter XIX of the C. P. Code, 1882 and the sale of an under-tenure may be set aside upon any of the grounds mentioned in that section.—Azizoonnessa Khatoon v. Gora Chand, 7 C. 163: 8 C. L. R. 198.

A transferee of a permanent transferable tenure, who has not given notice of the transfer to the landlord, cannot bring a suit to set aside the sale of the tenure in execution of a rent decree against the former tenant; his proper course is to satisfy the rent-decree, or to apply under this section, and to appeal against the order rejecting his application to set aside the sale.—Panye Chunder v. Hur Chunder, 10 C. 496.

If a judgment-debtor has made an application under this rule he is competent to apply under s. 174 of the B. T. Act, if he withdraws his former application.—Sital Rai v. Nanda Lal, 13 C. W. N. 591.

A civil suit lies for setting aside a sale held in enforcement of a certificate issued under the Public Demands Recovery Act (VII of 1880, B. C.) on the ground that the sale was vitiated by material irregularity leading to substantial injury.—Ram Tarak v. Dilwar Ali, 5 C. W. N. 521, F. B. (14 C. 1, and 23 C. 641, overruled, and 14 C. 9, referred to).

A decree-holder, for rent of a fractional share, stands in the position of ordinary creditors having no lien on the tenure, and is only entitled to sell the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor; and consequently a sale of a portion of a tenure under such a rent-decree is a good sale, and cannot be set aside.—Mohendro Coomer v. Heeramohun, 7. C. 723. See also, Kedar Nath v. Ardha Chandra, 5 C. W. N. 763, where it has been held that a rent-decree by a co-sharer landlord is not a decree under the Bengal Tenancy Act, VIII of 1885.

Necessary Parties to an Application under this Rule.—The decree-holder is a necessary party to an application under this rule. Hence where a judgment-debtor applied under this rule to have a sale in execution of a decree against him set aside, and made no attempt to implead the decree-holder until long after limitation had expired. Held that the application must be dismissed.—Ili Gauhar Khan v. Bansidhar, 15 A. 407. But under the old Code, there was a conflict of opinion whether he was a necessary party to an application for setting aside a sale under s. 311. Karamat Khan v. Mir Ali, 11 A. W. N. 121; Surendra Mohini v. Amarendra, 39 C. 647: 14 I. C. 67; Menajuddi v. Toam Mandal, 39 C. 381: 15

I. C. 176. Under the present Code he is a necessary party ; see the proviso to sub-rule (2), r. 92.

A beneficial owner is not a necessary party to a proceeding for setting aside an execution sale. It is competent to the Court to set aside the sale finally and conclusively as against the beneficial owner, although his benamidar only, and not he, is made a party to the proceedings.—Baroda Kanta v. Chunder Kant, 29 C. 682; 6 C. W. N. 706.

Under Or. XXI, r. 90, the auction-purchaser is a necessary party to a proceeding for setting aside an auction-sale.—Ajijuddin Ahmed v. Khoda Bux, 50 I. C. 5.

It is sufficient that the auction-purchaser is named in the body of the petition and notice is given to him after the application had become time barred.—Samitra v. Damri, 62 I. C. 61. The language of this rule, however, does not justify such a strict construction, see Abdur Rahaman v. Har Narain, 68 I. C. 238, where it has been held that though some of the decree-holders were not made parties, the service of notice upon them even after the period of limitation is a sufficient compliance with the rule. A transferee from an auction-purchaser is a necessary party if the proceedings are commenced after the transfer.—Menajuddin v. Joan, 39 C. 581 ; but see Ghaffar v. Lal Ram, 25 I. C. 907, where it has been held that it is not necessary, for a judgment-debtor filing an application under this rule to set out any formal array of parties

Sale on Holiday.—A sale in execution of decree is illegal, if made on a holiday, whether it is a fixed holiday or only a day on which the Courts are closed by order of the High Court.—Haro Jemadar v. Jadub Chunder, 8 W. R. Mis 24. But see Bisram Mahton v Sahibunnissa, 3 A 333, where it has been held that sale of immoveable property by an amin on a close holiday is not illegal, nor is it an irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.

Sale After Satisfaction of the Decree.—An order for sale and a sale under such order are ultra vires and nullities if the decree which is ordered to be executed has been satisfied by payment into Court of the decretal money before the order is made.—Chuni v Lala Ram, 16 A. 5.

An order for sale and a sale under such order are ultra vires and nullities when, in fact, there was no jurisdiction in the Court to make the order.—Balwant Rao v Mahammad Husain, 15 A 324

Limitation for an Application to Set Aside a Sale.—Under Art. 166 of the Limitation Act, 1908, an application to set aside a sale under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of the sale But where the irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale has, by the fraud of the decree-holder or any other party to the sale, been kept concealed from the judgment-debtor, he is entitled to apply under this rule whether the sale has been confirmed or not and the time for making the application is to be reckoned from the time when the fraud first became known to him.—Mohendra Narain v. Gopal, 17 C. 769; Golam Ahad v. Judhistir, 30 C. 142; Hira Lal v. Chaudhury, 26 C 539, 542; Bhusan v Profulla, 18 C. 119: 60 I. C. 801.

When an application is made for setting aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity in publishing or conducting it, and consequent substantial loss, it is not open to the judgment-debtor to rely on some other ground for the same purpose; Harbans Lal v. Kundan Lal, 21 A 140; but he can by way of additional particulars point out by a further application, which may be made after more than 30 days, that certain heavy incumbrances which did not exist had been notified in the sale proclamation, Ram Saran v. Girdhari, 48 A. 286: 92 I. C. 567: A. I. R 1926 All. 305.

As has already been stated in the commentary to this rule, the application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting it, was under the old code, to be made under s. 244 (now s 47) and the period of limitation for such an application was 3 years from the date of the sale. Such application under the present Code must be made under r. 90 and the period of limitation is 30 days from the date of the sale.

Application to Set Aside a Sale on Other Grounds.—Where a judgment-debtor applies to have the sale set aside not only on the ground of material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale but also on the ground that no notice of the application for attachment and sale was given as required by Or XXI, r 22, the case falls within s. 47, and hence there is second appeal; Rajagopala v. Ramanujachariar, 47 M. 288: 80 I. C. 92 · A. I R. 1924 Mad 431 F. B. The question whether there was suppression of sale processes, can only be raised under s. 47, and therefore a second appeal lies; Rasaraja v Prasanna, 40 C. 45; Rampada v. Kanai, 44 C. L. J. 167: A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 1219. Where the decree-holder is the auction-purchaser, and when an application is made to set aside the sale on any ground other than that covered by this rule, and there is no application under r. 89, the case falls within s. 47 and is subject to second appeal; Superior Bank Ltd v. Budh Singh, 22 A. A judgment-debtor cannot have a Court-sale set aside on the ground of fraud in the absence of proof that the auction-purchaser was a party to the fraud, and that the fraud came to the judgment-debtor's knowledge subsequent to the confirmation of the sale.—Abbubakar Saheb v. Mohidin Shaheb, 20 M 10 When a judgment-debtor makes an application to set aside a sale under this section after the expiry of the prescribed period of limitation, he must bring his case within section 18 of the Limitation Act; to enable him to do this, it is not enough for him to show that the execution proceedings were irregular and fraudulent; he must carry the fraud further and show that the existence of his right to set aside a sale has been kept concealed from his knowledge by the fraud of the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser; Kailash v. Bissonath, 1 C. W. N. Cl.; Nabin v Bipin, A. I. R 1926 Cal 229. See also, Luchmiput v Mussammat Mandil Koer, 3 C. W N. 333, when it has been further held that if the proceedings be regarded as taken under section 244, C. P. Code, 1882 (s 47), the judgment-debtor need not make his application within 30 days, the limitation for such application being 3 years from the date when the right to make such application accrued. In Bhubon Mohun v. Nunda Lal, 26 C. 324: 3 C. W. N. 390, in Nimai Chand v. Deno Nath, 2 C. W. N. 691, in Lalman Das v. Jagannath, 22 A. 376, and in Srimati Sarat Kumari v. Nimai Charan, 5 C. W. N. 265, it has been held that the period of limitation for an application to set aside a sale under section 244, C. P. Code, 1882 (s. 47) on the ground of fraud is three years

An application under this rule on behalf of a minor judgment-debtor, was rejected on the ground that the applicant did not legally represent the minor, and the sale was confirmed. From this order the judgment-debtor appealed. Held that, assuming that the first application to have been rightly rejected, the second which was made by a duly authorized guardian was not barred under the provisions of section 7 of the Limitation Act.—Baldeo Singh v. Krishen Lal, 9 A. 411 (1 C. 226 referred to)

Where a decree had been made against the judgment-debtor, and after his death application for execution was made against a person as heir, who was, in fact, not the heir and without notices to the proper heirs the property was sold; Held that such a sale can only be set aside in the regular way by proceedings under this section or by a regular suit within a year of the confirmation of the sale as provided by Art. 12 (a) of the Limitation Act.—Malkarjun Bin v. Narhari Bin, 5 C. W. N 10 P C. · 25 B 337, P. C. (reversing 21 B. 424). Explained in Golam Ahmad v. Judhistir 30 C. 142· 7 C. W. Purchase by the decree-holder benami at a price less than that at which the decree-holder got permission to bid for would vitiate the sale; and an application to set aside such a sale comes under s. 244. C P Code, 1882 (s. 47), and is therefore governed by Art 181 of the Limitation Act — Srimati Sarat Kumari v Nimai Charan, 5 C. W. 265

Effect of decision on matters falling under this rule.—A decision on questions arising out of an application for setting aside a sale under this rule is conclusive and a separate suit will not lie: nor can a sale be impeached by way of defence without setting aside the sale under this rule Jhara v. Amritman 38 I. C. 47.

Appeal.—Under Or .XLIII. r 1 cl. (j), an appeal lies from an order under this rule, and r. 92 setting aside or refusing to set aside the sale. But no second appeal lies from the order of the first appeallate Court — Santendra v. Charu, 45 C. L J 557· A I R 1926 Cal 657: Mahadeo v. Dhobi, 2 Pat 916· 74 I. An appeal lies from an order dismissing an application under this rule for default; Kali Kanta v. Shyam Lal, 25 C. L J 163· 38 I C 593.

Revision.—No revision lies from an order dismissing an application under this rule for default; Narendra v. Rakhaldas, 41 C. L. J. 286: 79 I. C. 851 A. I. R. 1925 Cal 510. But where the lower Appellate Court misreads a ruling of the Court, and on its basis refuses to entertain an application of a party which it had jurisdiction to entertain, it acts with material irregularity, and revision lies; Ram Saran v. Girdhari, 48 A. 288 92 I. 91. The purchaser at any such sale in execution of a decree may apply to the Court to set aside the sale, on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold. [S.313.]

Application by purchaser to set aside sale on ground of judgment-debtor having no saleable interest.

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule corresponds to section 313, C P. Code, 1882, with some alterations and omissions.

The word " in execution of a decree " have been added after the words " any such sale," the words " the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold," have been substituted for the words " the person whose property purported to be sold had no saleable interest therein," which occurred in the old Code; and the lines " and the Court may make such order as it thinks fit. Provided that no order to set aside a sale shall be made, unless the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder have had opportunity of being heard against such order," which occurred in the old section, have been omitted from this rule, and reproduced in the next rule (r 92) with some modifications.

Scope of the Rule.—The purchaser at an execution sale is entitled under this rule to seek relief, if the judgment-debtor had no " saleable interest " in the property sold.—This rule does not apply where he seeks relief on the ground that he was induced to buy the property for more than its real worth owing to misrepresentation or concealment in the sale notification —Durga Sundari v. Gobinda, 10 C. 368: Brijmohan v. Rai Umrnath, 20 C 8 19 I. A 154; Sheo-Gobinda v. Dhanukdhari, 19 C. W N 1291 In such a case he can seek his remedy by a regular suit. But when the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold, the auction purchaser's only remedy is to apply under this rule; S. C. Singh v. S. A. O Chetty, 52 I. C. 174.

Want of Saleable Interest.—The words " no saleable interest " mean " nothing to sell," and are not intended to confine the cases in which a purchaser shall be entitled to receive back his purchase-money to the in which the judgment-debtor though having an interest, such interest, is by prohibition of law or for some other reason, unsaleable.—Munna Singh v. Gajadhar, 5 A. 577, F. B.

This rule contemplates that either the judgment-debtor had no interest at all, or that the interest was not one he could sell, and the fact that the property is subject to a mortgage, and may fetch little or nothing if sold, does not affect the question.—Sant Lal v Ramji Das, 9 A. 197 (8 C. L. R. 468 distinguished). See also, Protap Chander v. Panioty, 9 C. 506; 12 C. L. R. 488. In Durga Sundari v. Gobinda Chandra, 10 C. 268, it has been held that the meaning of this rule is, that when a purchaser buys a property which turns out to have no existence at all, or to be of no saleable value whatever, the Court may set it aside. A misrepresentation or concealment in the sale notification which induces a purchaser to buy a property for much more than it is really worth is no ground for setting aside a sale under this rule. In Ram Coomar v. Sushee Bhushan, 2 C. 626, it has been held that this rule only applies to cases in which the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest in the property sold. It does not apply to cases where the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest in a portion of the property. See also, Sonaram v. Mohiram 28 C. 235 (17 M. 228 followed). But in Naharmul Marwari v. Sadut Ali, 8 C. L. R. 168, it has been held that if, as a fact, the property sold was covered by the mortgage, there was no saleable interest in the judgment-debtor at the time of the sale, inasmuch as under that sale the purchaser would be unable to get the particular property purchased by him

This rule does not apply when the title of the judgment-debtor to part only of the property sold is defective. It applies only to a case where the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property at all.—Muhammad Rahamatulla v. Bachcho, 27 A 537 2 A. L J. 244. (1950) A. W. N. 99 (23 A 355 followed)

If a party purchases at a sale with full knowledge of the true state of things and knowing that the title offered is defective, a claim to be relieved from the consequence of his purchase cannot be listened to —Sumer Chand v Wahid Husain, 3 A L. J. 819. (1906) A. W N 310

An auction-purchaser has no right to apply under this rule to set aside a sale held in execution of a decree on the ground of deficiency in the area of the land sold —Brij Mohan v Ram Uma Nath, 20 C. 8 P. C (followed in Ram Narain v. Dwarka Nath, 27 C. 264: 4 C. W N 13) or on the ground that the title of the judgment-debtor is defective.—Khetra v. Sk. Dilwa, 46 I. C 614, if he has been misled by any fraud or omission of the decree-holder he may sue him for damages, ibid; but see Seo-Gobind v. Dhanukdhari, 19 C W. N 1291, where it has been held that in case of fraud the execution purchaser has the right to have the sale set aside (20 C 8 P. C. followed).

An auction-purchaser at an execution sale is not entitled to compensation on account of any deficiency in area of the land purchased, unless he can prove that he has sustained loss by the misdescription, but is entitled to abatement of rent for such deficiency.—Dayal Krishna v Amrit Lal, 29 C. 370 (1 C. W. N. 106 distinguished, 18 A 322 dissented from). Where the misdescription of property in the sale notification does not go to the essence of the contract, the remedy which a purchaser can claim is compensation and not annulment of the sale.—Administrator-Genera Bengal v. Aghore Nath, 29 C. 420; 6 C. W. N. 873.

A Hindu died leaving two widows, one of whom, under authority f her husband, adopted a son. Subsequently, the widows executed a m gage-bond to liquidate the debts of their husband, and the mortgagee a obtaining a decree upon the mortgage, brought to sale the mortgaged | perties which were purchased by a third party. On an application by auction-purchaser to set aside the sale on the ground that the judgm debtors had no saleable interest in the property, as it had, upon the ac tion, vested in the adopted son. Held that as one of the widows was nc party to the adoption, it could not be said that the judgment-debtors had saleable interest in the property.—Faizuddin Ali v. Tincowrie Saha, C 565

Misdescription of the name and of the rent of the talook sold is nc sufficient ground for setting aside a sale under this rule.—Kali Kish v Guru Prasad, 25 C. 99.

Where default has been made in the payment of Government Reve for which the property is liable to be sold, the ownership of the prope nevertheless remains in the person who has made the default and until sale for arrears of revenue actually takes place, the property is liable to sold in execution of decree and the purchaser at the execution sale purch ing the right to receive any surplus sale proceeds.—Hari Charan v. H Das, 1 C. L. J 506.

A judgment-debtor who might have raised the objection in execut but refrained from doing so, and who could have also appealed against order for sale, is estopped raising the objection that the property s was not legally saleable, after the sale has been carried out.—Umed Jas Ram, 29 A. 591 (7 A 641 · 26 C 727 followed).

Separate Suit for Refund of Purchase-money.—See notes under XXI, rule 93.

Compensation for Loss of Part of Property Bought at a Court-sale. Every man buys at an execution sale with his eyes open, and the gene principle is that an auction-purchaser cannot attack his own purch except on the ground that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interc Khetro Mohun v. Dilwar, 3 Pat. L. J 516: 46 I. C. 614; Kedar Nath Jagarnath, 1 Pat. L. R. 73. 74 I. C. 184. This rule furnishes a statute exception to the doctrine of Caveat Emptor, Ram Kumar v. Ram Gour, C. 67 But apart from the case provided for by this rule and ap-rt frc fraud, a purchaser at an auction-sale must abide by his bargain; Abinash Bhuban, 25 C. W. N 756; Sabapathi v. Thandabharoya, 43 M. 309; I. C. 515.

Limitation.—The period of limitation for an application to set aside sale under this rule is 30 days under Art. 166 of the Limitation Act IX 1908. Under the Limitation Act, 1877 (Art. 172), the period of limitst. was 60 days, but Art. 172 has been repealed by the present Limitation A (IX of 1908).

" The committee think that in the matter of limitation an applicati under s 313 (C P. Code, 1882), should be brought into line with an app cation under s. 312 (C. P. Code, 1882), and they therefore propose to repeal Art. 172 and to amend Art. 166 so as to include applications under s. 313."—See Notes on Clauses to the Limitation Act.

On the question of limitation for suits for refund of purchase-money see notes under rule 92.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order setting aside, or refusing to set aside, a sale made under this rule and r. 92 [Or. XLIII, r. 1 cl. (j).]

Sale when to become absolute or be set aside.

92. (1) Where no application is made under rule 89, rule 90 or rule 91, or where such application is made and disallowed, the Court shall make an order confirming the sale, and thereupon the sale shall become absolute. [Ss. 312 & 314.]

(2) Where such application is made and allowed and where in the case of an application under rule 89, the deposit required by that rule is made within thirty days from the date of sale, the Court shall make an order setting aside the sale: [S. 312 and S. 310-A, Para. 2.]

Provided that no order shall be made unless notice of the application has been given to all persons affected thereby. [S. 313, last Para.]

(3) No suit to set aside an order made under this rule shall be brought by any person against whom such order is made. [S. 312.]

COMMENTARY.

Alterations.—This rule embodies in a concise and amended form the provisions contained in section 312 and 314 and in the second para of section 310-A regarding the period of limitation for an application, and also the provisions contained in the last part of s. 313 of the C. P. Code, 1882.

"The committee think it proper to retain the provisions of the Code which make it necessary for the Court to confirm the sale in each case." —Report of the Special Committee.

Sub-rule (1) corresponds to para 1 of s. 312 and to s. 314 of the old Code with some omissions and alterations. The words "the Court shall make an order confirming the sale" have been substituted for the words, "the Court shall make an order confirming the sale as regards parties to the suit and the purchaser" which occurred in the last part of para. 1 of s. 312. The words "as regards parties to the suit and the purchaser" have been omitted in view of the enlargement of the scope of rule 90, which now includes all persons whose interests are affected by the sale. The words "thereupon the sale shall become absolute" have been substituted for the words contained in s 314 of the old Code, which ran as follows:

No sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree shall become absolute, until it has been confirmed by the Court."

Sub-rule (2) corresponds to para. 2 of s. 312 and para. 2 of s. 310-A of the old Code with some modifications.

The proviso to sub-rule (2) corresponds to the last part of s. 313 of the old Code with this modification that the notice of application to set aside a sale under any provisions of rule 89, rule 90 or rule 91 is to be given to all persons affected by the sale, and not to the judgment-debtor and decree-holder only

Sub-rule (3) corresponds to last para. of section 312, C. P. Code, 1882, with the omission of the words "on the ground of such irregularity," which occurred in the old section after the words "no suit to set aside." The effect of the omission is, that no suit to set aside an execution sale is now maintainable on any of the grounds specified in rules 89, 90 and 91 Therefore, a suit on the ground of irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale is barred by sub-rule (3). But a suit to set aside a sale on any grounds other than those specifically mentioned in the above rules is not barred by this rule. For instance, a suit to set aside a sale on the ground of want of jurisdiction in trying the original suit, or in selling the property, or that the decree in execution of which the sale took place was obtained by fraud, or that there was fraud in the execution proceedings prior to the publication of the sale, or that the judgment-debtor had no title to the property, etc., etc.

The expression "publishing or conducting the sale" in rule 90 refers respectively to rule 66 and to the action of the officers of the Court by whom the sale is conducted (32 B. 572), it does not refer to any irregularity or fraud in the execution proceeding prior to publication or conducting the sale

Rules 89, 90 and 91 refer to sales in execution of a valid and subsisting decree. Therefore sales in execution of such decrees are only voidable and not ab initio void. But sales are ab initio void where they are held in execution of decrees which are ab initio void on the ground of fraud or want of jurisdiction.

Effect of Objection being Allowed.—In a sale of immoveable property, the sale proclamation notified that the decree-holder held two charges on the property aggregating about Rs. 1,000. Held that the error in the sale proclamation amounted to an irregularity in publishing the sale, and that the sale must, therefore, be set aside on the ground of the material irregularity in publishing and conducting it —Kanji Mal v. Sailo, 8 A. 116

Where a sale in execution of a decree has taken place pending an appeal, and the decree has subsequently been reversed, the Court executing the decree cannot, after such reversal, grant confirmation of the sale—Mull Chand v. Mukta Prosad, 10 A 83 (2 B. 540 referred to).

Confirmation of Sale.—The Court is bound to confirm the sale in the absence of an order setting aside the sale made upon application to that effect ; Birj Mohan v. Umanath, 20 C. 8 P. C. ; Dharam Chand v. Bhisan Krishna, 54 I. C. 929 , or in the event of no application under rr. 89 90 and 91 being made ; Umesh v. Shib Narain, 31 C. 1011· 9 C. W. N

193 It has been held in Anatullah v. Sashi Bhusan, 24 C. W. N. 73 that this rule does not effect the power of the Court to refuse to confirm the sale, or make it compulsory to confirm the sale when the Court finds that the sale was held under a decree which did not authorize it. A purchaser at a Court-sale has no absolute right to have the sale confirmed where there is an irregularity in the publication or the conduct of it although he is in no manner responsible for the irregularity ; Raja of Kalahasti v. Maharaja of Venkatagiri, 38 M. 387 · 25 M. L. J. 198 · 21 I. C. 389. Where an application under r 90 is dismissed for default, it amounts to a confirmation of the sale under this rule , Narendra v. Rakhal, 79 I. C. 351: 8 Pat. 947. Under s. 314, C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r 92) the Civil Court cannot upon or without application, refuse to confirm a sale on the ground that the price bid is too low —Lakshimi v. Krishnabhat, 8 B 424

After the confirmation of a sale, a Court has no power to set aside a sale by a summary order, on the ground that the right to apply for execution under which the sale had taken place was barred —Mahomed Hossain v. Kokil Singh, 7 C. 91 · 9 C. L R. 53.

If no objection to the sale is made within the time allowed by Art. 166 of the Limitation Act, i e., within 30 days from the date of the sale, the sale should be confirmed.—Mohendro Narain v. Gopal Mondul, 17 C. 769 F B (780) ; Haji v. Atharaman, 7 M. 512.

Where the sale proclamation was not issued in the prescribed form, and did not state the extent of the property and the revenue assessed on it, and in consequence there was substantial injury to the applicants, the sale should not be confirmed.—Athappa Chetti v Rama Krishna, 21 M 51

When, after the date of sale but before the date of its confirmation, the decree in execution of which the sale took place is set aside, the sale falls to the ground, and the sale cannot be confirmed, as the decree is not subsisting on that date.—Daya Moyee v. Sarat Chandra, 25 C. 175 1 C W. N. 656. Where a decree is admitted by the decree-holder to be satisfied, it ceases to exist as a decree capable of execution, and the Court's powers in execution also cease, and confirmation of the sale which is a proceeding in execution cannot be ordered , Nilkanth v Yeshwant, 18 N L. R. 134: 65 I. C. 331.

Sub-rule (2).—If Deposit is Made Within 30 Days.—The Court has no power to entertain an application for setting aside a sale unless the deposit is made within 30 days from the date of the sale, because the requirements of sub-rule (2) are mandatory and not directory ; Vennisami v. Periyaswami, 19 M. L. T. 192 (1916) 1 M. W N. 179: 33 I. C. 996 See notes under Or. XXI, r 89.

Proviso.—Before Setting Aside a Sale, Notice to be Given to All Persons Affected.—Under s 313 (para. 2) of the old Act, notice on the judgment-debtor of the decree-holder only was necessary but the proviso to this rule requires that the notice is to be given to all persons affected by the sale. See Surendra Mohun v. Amaresh, 39 C 687 , Bibi Sharifan v. Mahomed, 13 C. L. J. 535 ; Menajuddi v. Toam Mandal, 39 C. 881. An order setting aside an execution sale without giving proper notice to the persons affected thereby, as required by the proviso, is without jurisdiction and amounts to no order ; Gossain v. Jalpadat, 62 I. C. 113 ; Sundararaja v Asiri Naidu, 32 I. C. 891. The duty of moving the court to issue notices lies upon the applicant and on default the court may dismiss the application ; Mt Bibi Zaniab v. Paras Nath, 4 Pat. L. T. 491: 1 Pat L. R. 361

It is an elementary principle of law that no order should be made against a man's interest without giving him an opportunity of being heard —Ganeswar Singh v Ganesh Das, 33 C. 1178, P. C. · 4 C. L. J. 157 10 C. W. N. 969.

In the event of the death of the judgment-debtor, notice must issue to his representative—Bala Kadar v Gulam Mohidin, 7 B 424

Where after filing an application to set aside an execution sale, the auction purchaser dies and no notice goes to his legal representatives, the order setting aside the sale is invalid, Ramnand v. Bajit Jha, 75 I. C. 863

Sub-rule (3).—No Suit will Lie to Set Aside an Order under this Rule.—Sub-rule (3) means that a person against whom an order under this rule is made cannot bring a separate suit for setting aside the order His only remedy is by way of appeal under Or XLIII, r. 1, cl. (j).

An order under this rule may be either (1) an order confirming the sale, or (2) an order setting aside the sale. Again an order confirming the sale may be made either (a) where no application is made at all to set aside the sale, or (b) where an application is made and disallowed. In either case no suit will lie to set aside an order confirming the sale.—Bhim Singh v Sarwan Singh, 16 C. 33 ; Damodar v. Vinayak, 26 B. 40 ; Gajrajmati v. Akbar Hossain, 29 A. 196. 34 I. A. 37 ; Brahmacyya v. Appayya, 44 M. 351: 62 I. C. 208 ; Agha Hossain v. Quasim Ali, 23 A. L J 946 A. I. R 1923 All. 35 89 I. C. 1018. Similarly no suit will lie to set aside an order setting aside a sale made on an application under rules 89, 90 and 91 ; Shib Singh v Mukat Singh, 18 A. 437.

Suit to Set Aside an Execution Sale When Not Barred.—Sub-rule (3) is no bar to any suit except the suits mentioned above. It does not bar a suit by a plaintiff for a declaration that the auction-sale was void on the allegation that by reason of collusion and fraud not only of the decree holder and the auction-purchaser but of certain other persons also—Bhagwandas v Suraj Prasad, 22 A. L. J. 1060 ; nor does it bar a suit by a person whose claim to the property attached and sold as the property of the insolvent, has been disallowed ; Harnam v. Ganpat, 5 L. L. J. 9: 73 I. C. 367.

R 1926 Cal. 773, where it has been held that an order dismissing an application to set aside a sale merely on default of appearance of the parties, cannot be regarded as in any way confirming the sale, and as such is not appealable under Or. The period of limitation for a suit to set aside an execution sale is one year, when the case does not come under s. 244, C. P. Step in Aid of Execution.—An application by a decree-holder who has purchased the property in execution of his own decree for confirmation of sale, is not an application to take some steps in aid of the execution within the meaning of Art. 182, of the Limitation Act.—Umesh Chandra v. Shib Narain, 9 C. W N 193 31 C. 1011.

An application by the decree-holder for the rejection of a petition of a judgment-debtor objecting to the sale, and for confirmation of sale is a step in aid of execution —Gobind Pershad v. Rung Lal, 21 C. 23 (5 A 576 followed) But the confirmation of the sale in execution of the decree by the Court of its own motion without any petition of the decree-holder is not an application to take some steps in aid of execution within the meaning of Art 179 (4) of the Limitation Act, 1877; Mohendro Chandra v. Mohendro Nath, 10 C. R. 224, it has been held that where sale was confirmed after objection by the judgment-debtor, and the sale proceeds received by the creditor, that was a proceeding sufficient to keep the decree alive. But in Chowdhry Sheik Wahed Ali v. Mullick Enayet Hossein, 12 B L. R 500: 20 W. R. 156 In Mullick Enayet Hossein v Wahed Ali, 13 W R. 315, it has been held that where the decree-holder takes no step whatever to cause an execution sale to be confirmed, the confirmation of the sale by the Court cannot be regarded as a proceeding on his part towards enforcing the decree.

Return of purchase-money in certain cases.

93. Where a sale of immoveable property is set aside under rule 92, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of his purchase-money, with or without interest as the Court may direct, against any person to whom it has been paid. [S. 315.]

COMMENTARY.

This corresponds to s. 315, C. P Code, 1882, with some alterations and omissions.

The words "or when it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which purported to be sold, and the purchaser is, for that reason, deprived of it," which occurred in the latter part of the first para. of s. 315 have been omitted. The reason for the omission seems to be that those words were the subject of discussion in several cases (5 A. 577, 22 B. 783, 5 C. W. N. 240, 7 C. W. N. 105, and 10 C. W. N. 274), and in those cases it was held that a purchaser at an execution sale was not limited to the special procedure in the execution department mentioned in s. 315 of the old Code, but he was entitled to maintain a separate suit for recovery of his purchase-money. But before a suit can be maintained the two events must occur: (1) It must be found in some other proceedings that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest; (2) and the purchaser must be deprived of the property. In the cases quoted above it was held that s. 315 of the old Code is only an enabling section and not prohibitive of an independent action in a Civil Court. In 5 C. W. N. 240 and 7 C. W. N. 105, it was held that s. 315 does not contain any provision barring a Civil suit, such as to be found in ss. 47 and 312 and Or. XXI, 92 of the Code. In the present rule also there is no express provision prohibiting a separate suit for refund of purchase-money. Therefore under the present rule a separate suit for refund of purchase-money is also maintainable.

The last para. of s. 315, which ran as follows: "The repayment of the said purchase-money and of the interest (if any) allowed by the Court may be enforced against such person under the rules provided by this Code for the execution of a decree for money" has been omitted as unnecessary in view of s. 36 of the present Code read with r. 30 of Or. XXI.

"The Committee have added words at the commencement of the clause in substitution of the last para. of the section, which thus becomes unnecessary"—Report of the Special Committee

Scope of the Rule.—We have seen that under r. 91 the auction-purchaser is competent to apply for setting aside an auction sale on the ground of the judgment-debtor's having no saleable interest in the property sold. This rule entitles him to apply for a refund of the purchase-money on the same ground. But if the judgment-debtor had some saleable interest in the property however small, no refund can be made under this rule.—Kunhamed v Chattu, 9 M. 437; Muhammad v. Bachho, 27 A. 537.

When a Purchaser is Entitled to a Refund of his Purchase-money.—When a sale of immoveable property is set aside, the purchaser is entitled to recover back his purchase-money. If the Court reversing the sale omit to make such order, the purchaser can sue to recover the money from the person who has received it. The suit is not barred by s 244, C. P. Code, 1882 (s. 47).—Jotindra Mohan v. Mahomed Basir, 22 C. 832 (5 C. W. N. 240 referred to). See also, Greesh Chunder v. Lookhooda Moyee, 1 W R 55; and Doolhin Hur Nath v Baijo Oojha, 2 Agra 50.

Where the judgment-debtor is found to have no interest in the land sold, the purchaser is entitled to a refund of the money paid to the decree-holder.—Munhi Moidin v. Tarayil Moidin, 8 M. 101. See also, Tirumalaiswami v. Subramanian, 40 M. 1009: 45 I. C. 109.

Where a Court-sale in execution of decree is not vitiated by fraud, the only extent to which the purchaser can claim relief is that indicated by this rule. The effect of rr. 91, 93 and 94 is that the right, title an interest of the judgment-debtor passes to the purchaser at a Court-sal subject however to the condition that the purchaser may recover ba his purchase-money when he finds that the judgment-debtor has no sal able interest at all. When the judgment-debtor has a saleable interes however small the purchaser at an execution sale purchases at his ow risk, and there being no warranty that the property will answer to th description given of it, the purchaser is entitled to no relief, if the pro perty does not correspond to the description —Sundara Gopalan v. Venkat Varada, 17 M. 228; followed in Sonaram Dass v. Mohiram Dass, 23 C. 235. See also, Dorab Ally v. Abdool Aziz, 3 C. 806, P. C.; 2 C. L. R. 529, P. C. (reversing and remanding, 1 C. 55: 24 W. R. 372) For th decision of the High Court on remand, see, 6 C. 356

An auction-purchaser who has deposited his money in Court can, if h finds that no interest in the property has passed to him, only apply und Or. XXI, r. 93 before confirmation. Difference between the old and th new law pointed out —Subbu Reddi v. Ponnambala Reddi, (1918) M. W. N. 655.

A purchaser at a Court-sale who was afterwards deprived of th property by a person claiming a title paramount, has a right to recov his money by an application under this rule, but has no right to recov it by a regular suit.— Ram Dayal v. Rampal Singh, 22 O. C. 42: 51 I. C. 95.

To entitle a purchaser, under this rule, to a refund of the purchas money, it is not necessary that a Court should have decided in other pr ceedings that the judgment-debtor hod no saleable interest in the proper sold, or that the purchaser should have obtained actual possession, an have been deprived thereof —Siva Rama v. Rama, 8 M. 99

This rule empowers the auction-purchaser to require re-payment, bu does not impose upon the decree-holder the duty of tendering the mone as soon as the sale is set aside. The decree-holder is not bound to d anything, except pay on demand. The judgment-debtor's action in gettin the sale set aside does not therefore injure the decree-holder, until he compelled to refund the purchase-money to the purchaser, and until then he has no right to call upon the judgment-debtor to pay his debt a secon time —Ramineedi Venkata v. Ayyanna, 30 M. 209: 17 M. 194

An auction-purchaser sued the decree-holder for interest on the pu chase-money and expenses of the sale, the purchase-money having bee returned to him under the order of the Court executing the decree withou interest and less such expenses. Held that the suit was maintainable.— Raghubar Dyal v. The Bank of Upper India, 5 A. 364.

A decree-holder fraudulently caused the sale of certain property belong ing to a minor. The minor brought a suit against the auction-purchase and obtained a decree for possession. The auction-purchaser sued th decree-holder to recover his purchase-money and the costs incurred b him in defending the suit brought by the minor. Held that he, bei innocent of the fraud, and having purchased in the bona fide belief th the property of the minor was saleable, was entitled to recover the pu chase-money.—Makundi Lall v. Kaunsila, 1 A. 568 (6 N. W. P. 169 distinguished).

At the Registrar's sale, the auction-purchaser was allowed to apply to set aside the sale on the ground of material mis-description of the property and to get a refund of his purchase-money.—Aghore Nath v. Administrator-General of Bengal, 80 C. 468 (5 C. W. N. 593 referred to). The purchaser was allowed to rescind the sale and to a refund of his purchase-money on the ground of deficiency in area.—Bank of Bengal v. Akhoy Kumar, 6 C. W. N. 865.

A purchaser at a Court-sale which had been subsequently set aside obtaining an order for refund of the purchase-money, can execute the order as if it were a decree.—Venkataramanamurthi v. Sundara Ramiah, 23 M. L. T. 355: 47 I. C. 630.

Suit for Refund of Purchase-money, Where No Saleable Interest.—There is a conflict of authorities on the question whether under this rule the auction-purchaser is competent to bring a separate suit for refund of the purchase-money (where the judgment-debtor is found to have no saleable interest in the property) in addition to the remedy he has under this rule to apply for a refund.
